Mr. Groff and his wife attend the Presbyterian church and are active workers in the promotion of the best interests of this region. Although not an office seeker he is an earnest supporter of the republican party whose principles of protection and centralization of authority he heartily indorses Being a man of thorough honesty and genial spirit, he enjoys the respect and good-will of all who know him. Mrs. Groff secured fine advantages of education in the public schools and also received excellent training in music, an art in which she is quite proficient. She has proved an inspiring helpmate to her husband and their home is a center where friends may always be assured a cordial greeting.

THOMAS A. BRASFIELD, who has been closely identified with the development and improvement of eastern Oregon for more than a half century, devoted his attention to the pursuits of farming and sheep-raising throughout his active business career with great success and is now living practically retired at Baker. He owns six hundred and forty acres of improved land in Gilliam county and a tract of one hundred and sixty acres about six miles from Durkee. His birth occurred in Randolph county, Missouri, on the 3d of April, 1831, his parents being Dennis M. T. and Clarica (Williams) Brasfield, who were born in Tennessee and came of German and Welsh ancestors. Dennis M. T. Brasfield followed the pursuits of farming and stock raising throughout his active business career. Mr. Brasfield of this review has one surviving sister, who is eighty-six years of age and makes her home in California.

Thomas A. Brasfield acquired a district-school education and remained with his parents in Missouri until nineteen years of age. In the spring of 1850 he traveled overland across the plains, spending about one month in Salt Lake City, Utah, and then journeying on to Eldorado county, California, where he arrived on the 14th of October, 1850. He took up his abode at what was then commonly known as Kelsey's dry diggings, and engaged in placer mining during the following winter. In the spring he made his way to Sacramento, California, and there spent seven months. In the spring of 1852 he began farming and gardening, following those pursuits with excellent success. On the 3d of March, 1853, he began his homeward journey, returning to Missouri by water via the Nicaragua route and the Mississippi river. On his trip to California and back he had been accompanied by his brother Alexander. His brother John became ill with typhoid fever the day following his return and died nineteen days later. His mother also fell a victim to that dread disease. In the spring of 1861 he again crossed the plains and, settling in Oregon, located on the present site of Echo, which was known in earlier days as old Fort Henrietta. There he engaged in farming and stock-raising. The winter of 1861-62 was a very severe one and from sixty-five to seventy-five per cent of the cattle perished during its course. Mr. Brasfield also conducted a roadhouse or station for the accommodation of the traveling public at what was called The Crossing, en route from Echo to Walla Walla. He took up his abode there in July, 1867, but a year later removed to Scio, Linn county, where he remained for five years. On the expiration of that period he went to Weston and was there engaged in sheep-raising for eighteen years. During the following fourteen years he made his home in Gilliam county, devoting his time and energies to the sheep business with excellent results. In the spring of 1900 he came to Baker county, where he has since been engaged in farming and sheep raising to some extent, though now living practically retired at Baker. During his forty years' experience as a sheep raiser he has enjoyed gratifying success and has found it most profitable to run about fifteen hundred head of ewes in one band, often having as many as seven thousand head of sheep at one time, while at present he runs about six thousand head. He has learned that a good sheep for mutton of coarse grade is the most profitable and has raised all kinds of coarse-grade sheep, making a specialty of Southdown, Shropshire and Lincoln. These grades of sheep are all excellent for mutton and also good wool producers. Mr. Brasfield has found the fine-wool sheep more delicate and more difficult to raise than mutton sheep. It is his conviction that when a sheep's mouth begins to break the animal should be disposed of, as it can no longer be kept with profit. He has always endeavored to winter his sheep with about three months' feed, preferably good alfalfa, for which he pays from five to six dollars a ton in the stack. He has generally purchased enough hay to supply the need of a long winter and has thus always had plenty of feed even when the cold season was unusually lengthy. He owns six hundred and forty acres of wheat land in Gilliam county and also has a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of good farming land about six miles from Durkee, in Baker county. Mr. Brasfield likewise owns his residence in Baker and has practically retired from active work, spending the evening of life in well earned rest, in the congenial companionship of his wife and younger grandchildren. His sons also reside in the same locality.

THOMAS A. BRADFIELD

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

On the 16th of March, 1860, Mr. Brasfield was united in marriage to Miss Matilda C. Williams, her father being Aaron Williams of Schuyler county, Missouri, who was engaged in the hotel business at Kirksville, that state. Their wedding was celebrated in Schuyler county, Missouri, and seven children were born unto them. John Silas, who is now fifty-seven years of age, married Miss Sivila Hale, of Rye Valley, Oregon, by whom he has three children. Anna Isabel, fifty-four years of age, has been twice married, her first husband being Albert O'Hara. Following his demise she gave her hand in marriage to A. M. Tegarden, of Spokane, Washington. James McClellan, who is now fifty-one years old, is engaged in the sheep business in Baker county, Oregon. Aaron Brasfield and his wife are both deceased. Their three children have been reared by our subject and his wife. Mary, now forty-six years of age, is the wife of William A. Baker and resides in Baker, Oregon. William, who is living in Eugene at the age of forty-four years, married Miss Gussie Drake. George W., forty-one years of age, wedded Miss Frankie A. Puffer, who passed away leaving two small children who are also being reared by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brasfield. The three children of Aaron Brasfield, deceased, are as follows: Robert A., born in January, 1893, who attended school in Baker for about five years and is now in Idaho; Raymond, who was born in February, 1894, attended school for about six years and is now a resident of Idaho; and Edith M., who was born on the 23d of October, 1898, and is still attending school. The children of George W. Brasfield are as follows: George Wilbur, who was born on the 31st of March, 1905, and has attended school for one term; and Raymond Langdon, whose birth occurred on the 26th of March, 1907.

Thomas A. Brasfield gives his political allegiance to the socialist party. He served as sheriff of Wasco county, Oregon, for one term, during the years 1863 and 1864, at which time that county embraced all of eastern Oregon. Since 1856, or for a period of fifty-six years, he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and has exemplified its teachings in his daily life. He has now passed the eighty-first milestone on life's journey and may well look back with satisfaction upon an active, useful and honorable career.

GEORGE VANDECOEVERING. The operation of fifty-one acres of fertile land a mile and a quarter southwest of Roy, Oregon, successfully engages the attention of George Vandecoevering, who has been a resident of Washington county for thirty-six years. He was born in Wisconsin, in 1858, and is a son of John and Mary Vandecoevering, who were born and reared in Holland. They emigrated to the United States in 1855, first locating in New York but subsequently became residents of Wisconsin. There the father engaged in farming until 1876 when with his wife and family he again started westward, Oregon being their destination. Upon their arrival here they settled in Washington county, where the father acquired a tract of government land that he operated until his death in July, 1911, at the venerable age of eighty-two years. He is survived by his wife, who has passed the eighty-fourth milestone on life's journey, but is still quite active. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Vandecoevering there were born twelve children, four of whom are living and reside in Washington county. In order of birth they are as follows: Josephine, the wife of Jacob Vanloo; Hannah, who married Antone Kierger; George, our subject, and Peter.

The first eighteen years of his life George Vandecoevering spent in his native state, to whose common schools he is indebted for such educational advantages as he was afforded. His early years were very similar in every respect to those of other lads who were reared in the rural districts at that period, his advantages and amusements being somewhat simpler in their nature than those afforded the youth of today, while his duties and responsibilities were greater. Reared on a farm naturally his energies from his earliest childhood were directed along agricultural lines, while lessons of the value of thrift and industry were inculcated in his youthful mind. He accompanied his parents on their removal across the plains, and most vividly impressed on his mind are the hardships and privations as well as dangers encountered on that long, tiresome journey to the new home. For three years after their arrival here his energies were devoted to assisting his family establish a home and wrest a living from the fields. They met practically the same conditions, encountering and conquering problems very similar to those that confronted all of the pioneers in this section during those early days. Discouragements and misfortunes innumerable were theirs but ultimately they won, the successes that followed so overshadowing the earlier troubles that they were almost forgotten. At the age of twenty-one George Vandecoevering left the parental roof to begin for himself. During the succeeding ten years he worked as a farm hand in this county, saving in that time sufficient money to enable him to engage in ranching for himself. He cultivated rented land until 1900, when he purchased his present place, which is located a mile and a quarter southwest of Roy. Since locating here two years ago he has succeeded in making quite extensive improvements in his ranch, which is under high cultivation. Mr. Vandecoevering is a very capable agriculturist, whose practical views, thrift and enterprise are manifested in the appearance of his homestead. He takes great pride in his property, keeping his buildings and fences in a good state of repair and giving the grounds about his residence and his fields careful attention and supervision. A great believer in intensive rather than extensive farming, in the tilling of his land and the care of his crops he uses the discretion and care that result in the maximum returns from each acre. His efforts are being rewarded in a most gratifying manner and everything about his homestead is suggestive of success and prosperity.

Mr. Vandecoevering's plans for a home of his own had their culmination in his marriage on the 8th of September, 1891, to Miss Nellie Smith, who was born in Wisconsin, on April 3, 1873. Mrs. Vandecoevering is a daughter of John and Henrietta (Vandolman) Smith, natives of Holland, who emigrated to the United States in 1851. They located in Wisconsin, continuing to reside there until 1875 when they removed to Nebraska. After spending eleven years in the latter state they again started westward, ultimately locating in Washington county, this state. Here they spent their latter years, the father passing away in 1900 and the mother in July, 1908. Their family numbered eleven, as follows: Jacob, who is living in Linn county; Hattie, who is a resident of Baker City, Oregon; Peter, who makes his home in Nebraska; Dinah, John, Mary and William, all of whom are living in Washington county; Nellie, now Mrs. Vandecoevering; and Annie, Henry and Minnie, also residents of this county. Mr. and Mrs. Vandecoevering are the parents of ten children, all of whom are still at home: Theodore, who was born on June 20, 1892; Martin, born on March 10, 1894; Henry, whose birth occurred on the 5th of June, 1896; Herman, whose natal day was August 10, 1898; Peter, born on August 15, 1900; Minnie, whose birth occurred on the 18th of December, 1903; Theresa, who died at the age of three years; Walter, born on December 22, 1907; Grace, born on the 26th of February, 1909; and Louisa, who was born on July 30, 1911.

The religious views of the family are manifested through their affiliation with the Roman Catholic church and in politics Mr. Vandecoevering is a democrat. He has never taken an active interest in local matters of a governmental nature, although he meets the requirements of good citizenship by casting a ballot on election day. Mr. Vandecoevering is one of the capable citizens of the county, whose efforts have been directed along lines in the promotion of his personal interests that have been identical with the development of the community at large.

A. D. MORRISON, M. D., is the only physician of Carlton and the worth of his professional service is widely acknowledged. He has been a close and discriminating student of his profession, keeping in touch with the progress and trend of the times and utilizing the latest improved methods for the benefit of his patients. He also established the Carlton Hospital which he is now conducting and it is a liberally patronized institution.

Dr. Morrison was born in New Jersey in 1872, a son of Hugh D. and Mary (Sample) Morrison, both of whom are of Scotch-Irish descent although born and reared in the north of Ireland and married in that country. They came to America in 1864, settling in New York, where they lived for nine years, after which they removed to New Jersey where they resided for two years. On the expiration of that period they went to Canada, spending four years in Toronto, and later were for two years residents of Michigan. At the opening of Dakota in 1882 Hugh D. Morrison took his family to that state where he engaged in farming on an extensive scale, having about six or seven hundred acres planted to wheat. In 1888 he arrived in Olympia, Washington, where he remained for a short time, removing to Linn county, Oregon, in 1889. There he engaged in farming until 1905, when he went to Sunnyside, Washington, where he still makes his home, now living retired at the age of seventy-seven years. In 1911 he was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife who passed away on the 1st of October. In their family were eight children of whom six still survive: Mrs. Bartlett, of Hill, New Hampshire; Mrs. Lena Anderson, now living in Vancouver, Washington; A. D.; Samuel, a resident of Sunnyside, Washington; Mrs. Sarah Matherson, of Sunnyside; and William, who is a druggist of Portland.

Dr. Morrison accompanied his parents on their various removals, coming with the family to the northwest in his youthful days. When sixteen years of age he entered the drug business at Corvallis, Oregon, devoting three years to that work. Believing that his opportunities would be better if he had a broader education as a foundation for success he became a student in the Agricultural College of Corvallis and graduated from that institution in 1895 with the degree of B. S. He then again became connected with the drug business of that city in which he continued until 1898. He was then married and took up the study of medicine, attending the College of Physicians and Surgeons in San Francisco, being graduated therefrom with the class of 1901. He then came to Oregon and began practice at Pineville, where he remained for a year, removing thence to Carlton where he has since been located. He is the only physician of the town and in 1905 he opened the first hospital in Yamhill county, known as the Carlton Hospital. At the present time he is attending physician thereto and is also physician to the Carlton Coast Railroad and the Carlton Lumber Company, Consolidated. He holds to high ideals in his practice, is most careful in diagnosis and conscientious in all of his work, and as the years have passed his increasing experience and study have splendidly qualified him for the onerous and responsible duties which devolve upon him in following his profession.

Dr. Morrison was married in 1898 to Miss Alberta Linnville, who was born in Polk county, Oregon, and is a daughter of Willard S. Linnville. Her father's birth occurred near Independence, Polk county, Oregon, May 19, 1849, his parents being Harrison and Nancy (Bounds) Linnville, the former a native of Campbell county, Tennessee, and the latter of Missouri. They were married in her native state and there resided until 1846, when they crossed the plains to Oregon, first settling at Parker, where Harrison Linnville took up a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres. Upon that place his wife died in 1855. He continued to occupy and cultivate the farm until 1864, when he sold the property and turned his attention to the sawmill business. He afterward conducted a general mercantile store for a few years and also operated a hotel at Buena Vista, Oregon. In 1873 he was appointed United States Indian agent for the Snake and Pinte tribes and after retiring from that position he made his home with his son Willard until his death in December, 1893. He had been married a second time in 1858, when Mrs. Clara L. Frederick, a native of Ohio, became his wife. Of the nine children of his first marriage three are yet living: Mrs. Mary E. Davidson, a resident of Parker, Oregon; Mrs. O. J. Richardson, of Buena Vista, Oregon; and Willard S. There were two children of the second marriage: Mrs. Viola Abel, now of Portland; and J. A. Linnville, who is in business at Colon, Panama. By her first marriage Mrs. Clara Linnville had five children of whom three survive: Mrs. M. J. Casper, of Dallas, Oregon; J. W., of Benson, Arizona; and Mrs. J. E. Connor, of Santa Rosa, California. In his political views Harrison Linnville was a stalwart republican and became prominently connected with public affairs in this state at an early day, serving as the first county judge of Polk county and also being elected to the provincial legislature in 1848. He likewise held a number of minor offices and exercised his official prerogatives in support of many progressive movements. His religious faith was that of the Christian church.

His son Willard S. Linnville, father of Mrs. Morrison, received an academic education and after completing his course at the age of nineteen years, engaged in teaching school for a short time. Later he followed bookkeeping until 1910, when he opened a real-estate office in Carlton and is still engaged in that business. He, too, is a republican and has been in the government employ in a clerical capacity for six years. He holds membership with the Maccabees at Corvallis and he and his family are members of the Christian church. He was married January 8, 1871, to Miss Hannah C. Nash, whose birth occurred in Putnam county, Missouri, in 1852, a daughter of Daniel S. and Susanna (Malone) Nash, who came to Oregon overland, crossing the plains with ox teams in 1864. They first settled in Yamhill county but afterward removed to Buena Vista, Oregon, taking up their abode on a farm where they lived until 1882. The father then retired and was a resident of McMinnville until his death in 1901. The mother passed away in 1882 and Mr. Nash was afterward married in 1885 and is yet survived by his second wife. They had no children but by his first marriage he had seven children of whom four are living: Mrs. Margaret McLean, of University, Oregon; Jacob, also of that place; Mrs. Mary Rathburn, of Portland; and Mrs. Eunice Bonine, of Woodburn, Oregon. The other member of the family to reach adult age was Mrs. Linnville, who died in 1884. She had become the mother of five children of whom three yet survive: Mildred, who is a graduate of the Agricultural College and is now the wife of W. L. Patterson, of Baker City, Oregon; Alberta, who was graduated from the Agricultural College of Corvallis and is the wife of Dr. Morrison; and Ethel, the wife of W. H. Week, a nurseryman of Salem, Ohio. She had the same educational privileges as her sisters.

Dr. and Mrs. Morrison have become the parents of a daughter, Catherine M., who was born November 6, 1905. Mrs. Morrison holds membership in the Christian church and Dr. Morrison belongs to the Odd Fellows lodge of Carlton, and La Fayette Lodge, No. 3, F. & A. M., of Yamhill, of which he has filled some of the chairs. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he is recognized as one of its local leaders, doing all in his power to promote its growth and insure its success. His fellow townsmen, appreciative of his worth in this connection, elected him to the office of mayor for the term of 1904-05. He gave to the city a practical and businesslike administration, introducing many needed improvements and progressive measures. Both he and his wife are widely known socially and theirs is an attractive home whose hospitality is greatly enjoyed by their many friends.

REBER G. ALLEN, who has been discharging the duties of postmaster in Silverton for more than a year, is a native of this place and was born on the 28th of February, 1882. He is a son of T. D. and Geneva (Wolford) Allen, likewise natives of Silverton, where the father is now living retired. In the paternal line, Reber G. Allen is of Scotch and English extraction, while his maternal great-grandparents were natives of Germany, although they lived in France. The parents of T. D. Allen migrated to Oregon from Illinois in 1848, settling in Silverton, where the father passed away but the mother is still living. Their family numbered five, as follows: T. D., the father of our subject; Rodrick D., who is county clerk of Marion county; Allie, the wife of L. F. Mascher, of Silverton; Adele, the wife of T. W. McGrath, of Silverton and Harvey, who is deceased. The maternal grandparents removed from Ohio to Oregon in 1853.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Allen were married in 1880 and are the parents of six children, those beside our subject being as follows: La Clay, who is living at home with his people; Floyd W., a machinist, also at home; Wynola, the wife of M. V. Ottaway, of Silverton; and Dewey and Fay, both of whom are still in school.

Reared at home, Reber G. Allen, who is the eldest of the six children born unto his parents, was educated in the public schools. At the age of nineteen years he started out to earn his own living as an employe of the government, and for eight years thereafter was a rural mail carrier out of Silverton. At the end of that time he resigned his position and engaged as a clerk in a local hardware store, serving in this capacity for a year. He withdrew from this position to assume the duties of postmaster, to which office he had been appointed in February, 1911, by President Taft. Although he has been discharging the duties of this office for only a little more than a year, he has proven highly efficient and entirely satisfactory and is held in high favor among the business men of the town.

Mr. Allen is not married and continues to make his home with his people. Fraternally he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World, while in politics he is a republican. He is a young man of pleasing personality, high principles and strict integrity and among those who know him are many friends from childhood days, which in itself is a telling tribute to his character.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM A. COX is one of the founders of Florence, having owned the property and platted the site upon which that town later has grown to be one of the thriving and important commercial cities in Lane county, this state. He was born in Nova Scotia in 1832 and is the son of Joseph and Mary (Bigelow) Cox. Both of his parents were natives of England but at an early day emigrated from that country to America, where they established their home in Boston, Massachusetts, and from that city later removed to Nova Scotia, settling in Kings county, where the father purchased the property said to have been the home of Evangeline, the heroine of Longfellow's famous poem. Longfellow's mother was a Bigelow and Captain Cox is therefore a kin of his on the maternal side. He was by trade and occupation a shipbuilder and in addition to his shipbuilding business was also the owner of farm property which he purchased upon his removal to Nova Scotia. Captain Cox is one of ten children born unto his parents, the others being: Ebenezer, who resides in Nova Scotia; Mary Eliza, deceased; Nancy, the wife of Joseph Woodworth, of New Brunswick; Abraham B. and Isaac, both residents of Nova Scotia; Rev. Jacob, a Congregational minister residing in New Brunswick; Joseph, of Winnipeg, Canada; Daniel, of Connecticut; and Samuel, deceased.

Captain William A. Cox was reared in his father's home and educated in the public schools of Nova Scotia, and during the early years of his life he was engaged in work upon his father's farm and in the shipyards. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-one years of age and at that time he became one of the paid employes of his father and was engaged in work in shipbuilding. He remained for one year in that occupation and then removed to Boston, where he spent one year in employment in the shipyards, after which he returned to Nova Scotia and engaged in the lumber business, where he established the first lumberyard at Cawning. Having been successful in his lumber venture he was enabled to establish himself in the shipbuilding business and for some time was engaged in building, buying and selling seafaring vessels and operating boats of his own in merchandise and passenger lines. To him belongs the distinction of having owned the first steamboat on the Bay of Fundy. He was also the owner of two large merchantmen and a large lumber and sawmill and shipyard, and in addition to the above described property he added and operated a large and successful merchandising house at Wolfville, Nova Scotia. Captain Cox was connected with the shipping commission business between Philadelphia and the West Indian islands from 1854 to 1861, with headquarters in Philadelphia, and during the time he was in the shipping business he had at one time as high as twelve cargoes afloat. In 1875 he removed to San Francisco where he remained for one year, and while there was identified with shipping interests. After spending one year in that city he removed to Smith river, California, and there purchased four hundred acres of land and at that time he brought the first ship up that river. After settling on Smith river he continued his residence there for two years and then removed to Coos county, where he settled on the Coquille river and for two years immediately following he was engaged in the salmon-fishing industry. He then started the first jetty in the mouth of that river. At the end of his two years' residence on the Coquille river he built a small craft for his personal use and moved to Florence, where he maintained his residence for a short time and later removed to Acme and there homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of land upon which he lived for the twenty years following, during which time he was also the owner of a large stock ranch located on the coast of Lane county six miles north of the mouth of the Siuslaw river. After spending twenty years of his active and industrious life upon his one hundred and twenty acre ranch near Acme he removed to Florence and at that time laid the foundation for the building of the future city which has come to be one of the enterprising commercial centers of this part of the state of Oregon. In addition to his holdings of real estate in Florence he is also the half owner of the Chicago addition to Florence, a portion only of which has been disposed of since platting this addition to the town. He is the founder of Acme and Mrs. Cox named the town. He platted the town and still owns most of the land and also owns and operates a thirteen hundred acre stock ranch upon which he is specializing in the breeding of pure-blooded sheep and cattle. He has the distinction of having purchased for the use and pleasure of his family the first organ ever shipped into the town of Florence.

Captain Cox was twice married, his first marriage having occurred on December 21, 1855, when Miss Elmira S. Tolman, a daughter of William and Jane (Sale) Tolman, became his wife. She was a granddaughter of a colonel in the Revolutionary war and was one of four children born unto her parents, all natives of Boston and all now deceased. Unto this union were born several children. William and Frank, the eldest, were drowned at the mouth of the Siuslaw river in 1880, at the time when Captain Cox brought his ship into the port at Florence and delivered it to his sons who were to sail as super-cargo to San Francisco. In compliance with their father's request they manned the vessel and after reaching the open sea the ship was lost with all on board, the first night out on its way to San Francisco it is supposed as the ship was found water-logged outside the bay. Lily M., the eldest daughter, married O. W. Hurd, a well known and prominent sawmill man of Florence. They have three children: Marguerite, at home; Roscoe, attending the University at Eugene; and Hester, a high school student at Florence. Charles F. Cox who is a resident of Acme, Oregon. The mother of these children passed from this life in the year 1870 and in the following year Captain Cox chose as his second partner in life Miss Charlotte Jane Phipps, to whom he was united in wedlock in 1871. Mrs. Cox is a daughter of William F. and Hannah (Sanders) Phipps, both of whom were natives of New Brunswick and in whose family were seven children, namely: Perseus A. and Azor J., both deceased; Mrs. Cox; and Mary M., William F., George E. and Sarah H., all of whom have passed away. Mrs. Cox is a lineal descendant of Sir William Phipps.

CAPTAIN AND MRS. W. A. COX

Captain Cox is a loyal member of the republican party but has not allowed his name to be used as a candidate for any political office. Fraternally he is associated in membership with the Masonic fraternity and his wife is a member of the Eastern Star, and matron of the Vesta Chapter, O. E. S., of Florence, and they belong to the Congregational and Episcopal church respectively. Captain Cox is one of the best known men in Lane county, where his extensive business operations have brought him into contact with the leading financial institutions of that part of the state. His holdings in real estate place him among the largest landed proprietors of Oregon and through all of the years of his business career he has been regarded as one of the most successful and enterprising citizens of the Pacific slope country. His well known integrity in all business matters has secured the unquestioned confidence of not only his intimate friends but the public at large and his name can always be counted upon in connection with the larger business enterprises of the rapidly developing commonwealth of Oregon.

JAMES EDWARD HIGGINS, a prominent and leading resident of Astoria, is a member of the firm conducting business under the name of Ross, Higgins & Company and is likewise identified with financial interests as the cashier of the Astoria National Bank, having held that position for a period of eighteen years. His birth occurred in Halifax, Nova Scotia, on the 29th of March, 1849, his parents being William J. and Rachel (Strong) Higgins, who were born, reared and married in Kings county, Nova Scotia. The father, who conducted a mercantile establishment during the greater part of his life, passed away about 1905, when eighty-three years of age. The demise of his wife occurred three years later when she had attained the age of eighty one. Unto them were born eight children, namely: James Edward, of this review; Susan who passed away at the age of seven years; Jessie, the wife of Albert Coldwell, of Wolfville, Nova Scotia, who is an ex college professor and is now serving in the capacity of town clerk; Thomas F., who is a resident of Portland; Minnie, the wife of George F. Baldwin, who is serving as comptroller at Vancouver, British Columbia; Laula who resides with her sister at Vancouver; William J., a merchant of Vancouver, Washington; and Charles R., a sketch of whom appears on another page of this work.

James Edward Higgins entered the Wolfville Academy of Nova Scotia when a youth of eighteen and at the same time began working in his father's mercantile establishment, being employed therein until twenty one years of age. At that time he went to Halifax and secured a position as clerk with a mercantile concern, acting in that capacity for three years. On the expiration of that period he went to Boston, Massachusetts, and was there employed as clerk for a similar period. Returning to Wolfville, Nova Scotia, he became associated in business with his father and remained with him for five years. Coming to Oregon he settled at Astoria, where he was employed as bookkeeper by the firm of Badollet & Company for five years. He was then appointed a special deputy in the custom service, under Cleveland's administration, holding that position four and a half years. Subsequently he embarked in business in partnership with J. T. Ross, E. Z. Ferguson and H. C. Thompson, under the firm style of Ross, Higgins & Company and has since remained an active factor in the control of that concern. In January, 1897, he became cashier of the Astoria National Bank and for the past eighteen years has ably discharged the duties devolving upon him in that connection.

On the 29th of November, 1878, Mr Higgins was united in marriage to Miss Isabelle J. Fraser, a native of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and a daughter of James Fraser, who was born, reared and married in Scotland. He and his wife emigrated to America shortly after their marriage, settling at Halifax, Nova Scotia, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mrs. Fraser died in middle age, leaving a family of five children, as follows: Margaret, who is a resident of Boston, Massachusetts; Mrs. Higgins, deceased, living at Lunenburg, Nova Scotia; Minnie, of Portland, Oregon; and James William, of Nova Scotia. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Higgins were born five children: Margaret M., who is a high school graduate, completed a course in Stanford University of California and also studied music; Herbert A., who was born in November, 1879, passed away at the age of fifteen years; Minnie died when a little maiden of seven years; Edward A., a graduate of Portland Academy, is now employed by the firm of Ross, Higgins & Company, of Astoria, in which he is a stock bolder. Winifred, whose natal year was 1885, is a high school graduate, pursued a course of study in the Annie Wright Seminary of Tacoma, Washington, and likewise attended Stanford University of California. She also has an excellent musical education. Her husband is Lieutenant Richard Pork, located at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Higgins gives his political allegiance to the Democratic party and has served on the school board of Astoria for a period of twelve years. He is now acting as treasurer of the city of Warrenton. Fraternally he is identified with Seaside Lodge, A. O. U. W., at Astoria, while his religious faith is that of the Baptist church. His interest in matters of public concern is deep and sincere and his influence is always found on the side of progress and improvement, while to many measures for the public good he has been a most generous contributor. Throughout his business career he has endeavored to make all his acts and commercial moves the result of definite consideration and sound judgment. There have never been any great ventures or risks in his business career, but by honest, slow-going, dependable methods he has made steady progress, his course at all times being characterized by energy and good system.

JOHN CALDWELL. A well improved farm of one hundred acres in Washington county, five miles north of Banks, pays tribute to the industry and good business judgment of John Caldwell. The success he has attained is due to his unremitting efforts to establish a home, backed by the worthy ambition to perform his part in the development of a section in which he is deeply interested. He was born at Battle Creek, Michigan, in August, 1866, a son of John and Bridget (Quinn) Caldwell, both of whom are natives of Ireland. The father emigrated to America in 1861 and the mother came to this country with her parents in her childhood. She was married to Mr. Caldwell in New York state and a short time afterwards they moved to Battle Creek, Michigan, where they lived for ten years. At the end of the time named they went to Eaton county, Michigan, and Mr. Caldwell is now the owner of a productive farm near Grand Ledge. In their family were the following children: John, of this review; James J., of Eaton county, Michigan; Fred, of Buxton, Oregon; Mary, who married William Dunn, of Woodhall, Michigan; George and Charles, both of whom reside at Lansing, Michigan; Peter who came to Oregon and died in this state at the age of twenty-two; Frank, Joseph, Emily and Jewel all of whom died in Michigan after arriving at maturity, and two others who died in infancy.

John Caldwell received his preliminary education in the public schools of his native state and continued with his parents until twenty-one years of age. He then entered upon his business experience by associating with a brother in the purchase of forty acres of timber land. They took up their residence on the place and cleared away the timber which was sawed for the market. At the close of six years Mr. Caldwell disposed of his interest in the property and came west, working for wages in Washington county, Oregon, for three years. Having acquired the necessary capital, he purchased fifty acres in a good locality and managed his affairs to such excellent advantage that he is now the owner of one hundred acres, most of which is under cultivation. He has made many improvements on his farm which add greatly to its appearance and value. Being a man of energy and perseverance, he has never yielded to discouragement and obstacles have only served to spur him to renewed activity.

In January, 1899, Mr. Caldwell was married to Miss Lena Thomas, who was born in Washington county, Oregon, a daughter of Riley Thomas. The father was born in Illinois and the mother in Washington county. They were married in Oregon and are now living in this state, being the parents of nine children, namely: Otis, deceased; Bertha; Lena, now Mrs. John Caldwell; Minnie; Claude, also deceased; Jessie; Ethel; Lloyd; and Lottie. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell are the parents of four children: John, who was born June 20, 1900; Fred, born in 1903; Bessie, born in November, 1905; and Earl, born September 1, 1908.

Mr. Caldwell is not a member of any religious or fraternal organization but as a patriotic and public-spirited citizen he takes an active interest in politics and is a sincere advocate of the principles of the republican party. He has been very industrious ever since his boyhood and the neat appearance of his farm indicates that he is a man of good taste and one who takes true pride in his work. He feels the quickening influence of the twentieth century and responds by enhancing the beauty and value of his surroundings. It is men of this character who become the leaders and are largely responsible for the progress which may be witnessed in all parts of the country.

OLIN WAYNE LOVE, who for the past three years has been engaged in the real-estate business in Woodburn with his brother, Louis D. Love, was born in Burlington, Michigan, on March 16, 1886, and is a son of George W. and Hannah M. (Lewis) Love. The father was a native of Michigan, but his parents were born and reared in Bridgeport, New York, whence they removed to Michigan during the pioneer days. George W. Love was the youngest member of a family of four, the others being as follows: Homer and Albert, both of whom are deceased; and Hattie, who was the wife of Charles Frye, and passed away leaving two children, Louis and Lottie. The maternal grandparents of Olin Wayne Love were also natives of the Empire state and their family numbered six, as follows: Benjamin, who lives in Michigan; James, a resident of Burlington, Michigan, and the father of one child, Louise; Robert, of Athens, Michigan, who has two children, Harry and Flora; Villie, the deceased wife of Benjamin Hines, by whom she had three children, Frank, Hope and Winnie; Hannah M., the mother of our subject; and Leslie, who is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. George W. Love were married in Michigan in 1874, and to them were born five children. Charles G., who is living in Lansing, Michigan, was born in that state in April, 1876. He is married and has two children, Everette and George. Ralph, the next in order of birth, is also a native of Michigan, his birth having occurred on August 21, 1878, but he now lives in Woodburn. Ruth C., who was born in the 30th of January, 1880, became the wife of Millard A. Seitz, an attorney of Portland, Oregon, and they have one son, William L., whose natal day was the 8th of January, 1907. Louis D., who was born on the 13th of June, 1883, married Miss Molly E. White, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and they have one child, Lazetta Ruth.

The youngest child, Olin Wayne Love, was reared in the state of his birth, and there he pursued his education in the common schools until he had attained the age of thirteen years. He then laid aside his textbooks and apprenticed himself to the cigar maker's trade, which he followed in twenty-six different states. He subsequently located in Elkhart, Indiana, engaging in business there until 1908. In February of that year he disposed of his establishment and joined his father, who had previously purchased a ranch of fifty acres near Woodburn. Soon thereafter he went to Spokane, Washington, where he followed the cigar business for a year, but at the end of that time he returned to Woodburn and together with his brother Louis D. opened a real-estate office. Although they have been engaged in this business for only a brief period, they have become very well established and have every reason to feel most sanguine regarding its future success.

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Love chose Miss Mabel E. Gaulet of Woodburn, the only daughter and oldest child of Dr. W. H. Gaulet, who has two sons, W. H., Jr., and Glen. Mr. and Mrs. Love are the parents of a daughter, Alvis Ruth, whose natal day was the 14th of October, 1911.

Mr. and Mrs. Love attend the Methodist Episcopal church and in politics he is independent, casting his ballot for such men as he deems best qualified for the office. He is one of the highly esteemed and enterprising young business men of the town, who is meeting with success in the development of his interests because of his close application and energetic methods.

ALMUS M. ARNOLD owns a pleasant home just outside the limits of Myrtle Point, Oregon, set in the midst of thirty acres of well improved land, and is carrying on an extensive and carefully managed dairy business. He was born in Tennessee, August 4, 1844, and is a son of William A. and Annie (Alford) Arnold, both natives of that state. Mr. Arnold's parents died when he was three years of age and he was the only child born to their union. He is practically a self made man. He went to school for a short time in Tennessee but was obliged to earn his own livelihood when he was fourteen years of age. He learned the carpenter's trade and worked at this until the Civil war broke out when he enlisted in the First Confederate Volunteer Cavalry and served for two years and nine months, being mustered out with honorable discharge, November 16, 1865. After the close of hostilities he returned home and went to school for one year, at the end of which time he worked in a general merchandise store for one year and then went to Missouri, where he followed farming as a monthly laborer. He next went to Texas and engaged in the cattle business for a short time. He went to Colorado and New Mexico and followed the same line of occupation in those states. He came to this state from Colorado in 1881 and resumed his stock business, carrying on an extensive enterprise along this line for two years. He then went to Washington and settled on the Columbia river, where he established himself in the same business, but was unsuccessful, owing to the cold winters. His stock was frozen and he was obliged to give up his enterprise. In 1889 he returned to Oregon, settling in Baker City, and for two years was prominent in the cattle-raising business. He sold out eventually and came to Coos county, settled near Rural and followed general farming upon one hundred and sixty acres of land which he had purchased. He brought this property to a high state of development and was active in the cultivation of the soil for fifteen years. He cleared his land, built suitable barns and outbuildings, fenced his property and also drained it and was the owner of one of the attractive farms in the county. He eventually sold out and came to Myrtle Point where he bought twenty-two acres and farmed upon this property until 1910. In that year he moved to his present home just outside the town limits of Myrtle Point and is now engaged in carrying on a large and constantly increasing dairy business upon thirty acres of improved land. His enterprise is one of the largest of this kind in Coos county. The buildings are kept in a sanitary condition and are equipped with modern machinery. Its value has increased about twofold and it is now worth ten thousand dollars.

January 15, 1881, Mr. Arnold was united in marriage in Pueblo, Colorado, to Miss Catherine Dolan, a native of England but of Irish ancestry. She is a daughter of James and Annie (McDermott) Dolan who were both born in Ireland. Mrs. Arnold is one of twelve children born to her parents, only three of whom are still living, the other two being Michael, who lives in Pueblo, Colorado, and Thomas, also of Pueblo, Colorado. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold have ten children, namely: Annie, the wife of Reuben Heortly, of Washington, and the mother of four children; Eva, who married Albert Carver, of Coquille, by whom she has two sons, William P., a resident of Santa Ana, California; Mary E., who married Otto Prey, of Coquille, Oregon, and is the mother of one child; Elizabeth, making her home at Salt Lake City, Utah; Nellie, John T. and Richard A. Q., who reside with their parents; and Daniel R. and Frances N., who are at home and pursuing their education. In his political affiliations Mr. Arnold is a consistent democrat and while he has never sought public office he has done effective work as road supervisor. He is one of the enterprising citizens of Coos county and is engaged in a representative industry. By intelligent labor and careful management he has brought his dairy to a point of success where it may be regarded as an influence upon the growth of the industry in this section of the state.

SOLOMON TAYLOR is a retired business man having his residence in Prairie City, Grant county, Oregon. His birth occurred in Logan county, Ohio, on the 12th of January, 1841, his parents being John and Margaret (McIlvain) Taylor, the former a native of Vermont and the latter of Logan county, Ohio. They were married in Logan county and there spent the remainder of their lives, the mother passing away in 1854. The father died one year later, passing away while absent from home attending to business interests of a personal nature in connection with property he owned in Greenbrier county, West Virginia.

Thus, at the early age of fourteen, Solomon Taylor found himself an orphan, compelled by dire necessity to make his own way in the world. He was fortunate enough to secure work as a farm laborer near his boyhood home and he thus spent the first year after his father's death on the farm of John May. During the next two years he was employed on the farm of a Mr. Stewart and for the succeeding three years he worked for the Miller brothers, all old neighbors of his father. On the 11th of August, 1862, he enlisted for service in the Civil war as a member of Company I, Ninety-sixth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. His regiment was at once sent to the front and Mr. Taylor was taken prisoner during the battle of Sabine Crossroads, April 8, 1863. He was taken to Tyler, Texas, where he remained for six months in the Confederate prison at Camp Ford. On October 23, 1863, he was exchanged and removed to New Orleans, reaching that city by transport down the Mississippi river. On arriving there he was granted a thirty days' furlough and improved the opportunity thus offered him in rest and recuperation from the hardships of prison life. During this period he returned to his home in Ohio, where he was married, and at the expiration of thirty days he was ordered to report to his regiment at the mouth of White river in Arkansas. Rejoining his regiment, he continued in the service until the close of the war, at which time he obtained an honorable discharge and at once returned to his wife and home in Logan county, Ohio. There he engaged in farming for a period of five years. He then removed to Toledo, Ohio, where he followed carpentering and building for ten consecutive years. In the spring of 1880 he removed to Denver, Colorado, where he obtained employment as carpenter in the service of the Denver & Rio Grande Railway Company. He remained at that place but one year and in the spring of 1881 removed to Oregon, locating in John Day valley, Grant county, where he was engaged in farming for several years. In 1893 he purchased a half interest in the Prairie City Mills and three years later purchased his partner's interest, thus acquiring title to the entire property. This he operated for ten years in connection with his home farm of two hundred and eighty acres and also one hundred and sixty acres which was part of the mill property. In 1903 he sold the mill property and returned to his home farm, where he remained for one year, after which he removed to Prairie City. In 1904 he took over the mercantile establishment of R. D. Williams, conducting the same until 1911, when he sold the business to Daly Brothers.

Mr. Taylor has been twice married. In October, 1864, he wedded Miss Jennie McPherson, by whom he had one child, Jennie B., who still lives at home. The wife and mother passed away in May, 1872, and in October, 1876, Mr. Taylor married Mrs. Margaret (Trask) Ryer.

In his political affiliation Mr. Taylor is a democrat and he has served as a member of the board of county commissioners for six years. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife also belongs. Mr. Taylor is one of the well known and influential citizens of Grant county. Starting out in life in the midst of great hardships and suffering at an early age the loss of both his parents, he has nevertheless surmounted the difficulties which confronted him in youth and looks back upon a history of patriotic devotion to his country and a successful business career. He is now living a retired life in Prairie City, where he enjoys a merited and well earned rest.

WALTER W. RUSSELL is one of the energetic and successful young agriculturists of Yamhill county, where he has been residing for the past twelve years. He was born in South Dakota on the 3d of February 1881, and is a son of William S. and Sarah J. (Morket) Russell, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Iowa. In his early manhood William S. Russell left his native state and removed to Iowa, where for five years he engaged in farming. There he met the lady who subsequently became his wife and soon thereafter he and his bride removed to South Dakota, where the father filed on a homestead. To the further improvement and cultivation of his farm, Mr. Russell devoted his entire time and energies for twenty-seven years. At the expiration of that period he disposed of his property, and together with his wife and family came to Oregon, where they have ever since resided. At the present time they are living in McMinnville, the father having attained the age of sixty-six years and the mother sixty. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Russell numbers eleven, as follows: Melvin, who is living in Watertown, South Dakota; Jasper, whose home is in St. Paul, Minnesota; Charles, who lives in McMinnville; Fanny,

SOLOMON TAYLOR

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

the wife of J. Ottinger, of Sheridan, Oregon; Victor, who is also a resident of Sheridan; Walter W., who is our subject; Chester and Pearl, both of whom are at home; Bessie, who is a teacher in the schools of McMinnville; and Ethel and Millie, who are attending high school in McMinnville.

Walter W. Russell was a youth of eighteen years when he removed from his native state to Oregon. In the acquirement of his education he attended the common schools of South Dakota, during which time he also assisted his father with the work of the farm. When he attained his majority he left the parental roof and entered upon an independent career, his energies being devoted to agricultural pursuits, in accordance with his early training. He is an ambitious and energetic young man who always follows out a well conceived plan of action in whatever he undertakes, and concentrates upon it all his powers. His efforts are meeting with success, owing to his enterprise and the intelligent direction of his activities, and he is now engaged in the operation of a ranch of three hundred and fifty acres, located eight miles southwest of McMinnville.

In 1905 Mr. Russell was united in marriage to Miss Mary Duerst, a daughter of Balthasar and Anna Duerst, and they have become the parents of two children: Ruby, who was born on the 15th of November, 1906; and Raymond, whose birth occurred on August 31, 1910.

The fraternal connections of Mr. Russell are confined to his membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, his local identification with the order being through the lodge at McMinnville. He is a republican, but never having sought political preferment does not actively participate in governmental affairs, preferring to concentrate his energies upon the development of his personal interests, in which he is meeting with a gratifying measure of success.

JAMES H. NICHOLS was born in Lima, LaGrange county, Indiana, on the 12th day of July, 1883, his parents being Drusus B. and Jane Louise (Shipman) Nichols. Drusus B. Nichols was born in English Prairie, Indiana, in 1859, and the mother in Lima, in that state. Drusus B. Nichols, the father of the subject of this sketch, was the grandson of Samuel Burnell, one of the pioneer bankers of northern Indiana, and the organizer of the Indiana National Bank in 1859. Drusus B. Nichols was for a number of years the owner of a merchandising establishment in Lima, Indiana, and later engaged in the same business in Chicago, Illinois, where he died in 1890. Mrs. Nichols survives her husband and makes her home with our subject in Baker, Oregon. She is the mother of three children, as follows: James H., of this review; Drusus H., who lives in Chicago; and Marian Williams, the wife of Charles H. Evenson, of St. Paul, Minnesota.

James H. Nichols was educated in the public schools of Lima, Indiana, and also in the Howe Military School of the same place. After his graduation from high school he entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where he spent the first year in the academic department. The following year he entered the law department of the same institution from which he was graduated in the class of 1905. Upon his graduation Mr. Nichols came west in search of a location and selected Baker City, where he at once opened an office for the practice of law. In 1906 he entered the offices of Hart & Smith. Shortly after this, the senior member of the firm, Mr. Smith, was elected to the circuit bench, and the firm became Hart & Nichols. In 1911 the firm of Hart & Nichols dissolved and Mr. Nichols opened his present offices for the practice of law in the Citizens National Bank building. He was appointed city auditor of Baker City in 1908 and was elected for a two year term to succeed himself in 1909.

In politics Mr. Nichols is a democrat and during his early years as a student he was elected president of the University of Michigan Democratic Club in the campaign of 1904. He is a member of the Masonic blue lodge, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Fraternal Order of Eagles. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Protestant Episcopal church. Mr. Nichols has already attained a place of high standing among the members of the bar, notwithstanding the fact that he is a comparatively young man and he enjoys an extensive and substantial clientage. He is interested in all of the social issues of his adopted city and can always be relied upon to bring his influence to bear toward the advancement of any enterprise favoring the improvement of his county and state.

ANDREW ANDERSON, a citizen of Hammond, has been a resident of the United States for over thirty years. He was born in Sweden, on the 30th of September, 1859, being a son of Andrew and Sophia Anderson. The parents are now both deceased, the mother having passed away in the early '90s and the father some six months later. To them were born three sons: Alfred and Oscar, who have remained in the old country, and Andrew, our subject.

The first twenty-two years of his life Andrew Anderson spent in Sweden where he obtained a common school education. Feeling much dissatisfied with conditions for advancement as he found them in his native land, in 1881 he determined to come to America. He first located in Michigan where he remained for eighteen months, then moved to Portland. Upon his arrival there he obtained work in the government employ on the Cascade locks in the Columbia river, forty-five miles east of Portland. In 1883 he was transferred to Fort Stevens, where he has ever since been employed in government service. The fifty-acre energetic Mr. Anderson has acquired a very nice residence in Hammond, besides which he owns some vacant lots there and also property in Portland.

Mr. Anderson completed his plans for a home by his marriage, in 1887, to Miss Matilda Anderson, also a native of Sweden, who she emigrated to the United States in 1891, first locating in Astoria, but later coming to Hammond, where she was residing at the time of her marriage. Mrs. Anderson is a daughter of Andrew and Christina (Matson) Jacobson, who were born in Sweden and there the mother passed away in 1891, but the father still survives at the age of about eighty-eight years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson numbered nine, as follows: Emma, who passed away in the old country at the age of forty-seven; John, who died in America; Peter, who is a resident of Michigan; Edward, who was living in Astoria at the time of his death, at the age of thirty-seven years; Olaf, who is a resident of Sweden; Sophia, who died in her native land; Matilda, now Mrs. Anderson; Wilhelm, who is a resident of Astoria; and Charley, who is married and living in the old country.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are the parents of five children: Winnie, who was born on the 23d of January, 1896, now in high school; Ruth, whose birth occurred on the 13th of October, 1898; Edward, born on the 25th of July, 1900; Elsie, born on the 12th of June, 1903; and Wilhelm, whose birth occurred on the 5th of August, 1905.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and their family affiliate with the Lutheran church, and fraternally he is identified with the Improved Order of Red Men and the Maccabees, his membership in both of these organizations being held in Hammond. Ever since he was granted the right of suffrage through naturalization Mr. Anderson has cast his ballot in support of the republican party, and has served as a member of the city council of Hammond. In matters of citizenship he has ever been loyal in his allegiance to the country of his adoption, giving his support and indorsement to all progressive movements inaugurated in his community.

CHARLES E. FORD, who for twenty-one years has been a resident of Hammond, where he engages in contracting and building, was born in Washington county, Oregon, in 1866. His parents, Edward J. and Welthy A. (Pomeroy) Ford, were natives, the father of New York state and the mother of Washington county, Oregon. Mr. Ford, a carpenter by trade, emigrated to Oregon in the pioneer days, and here he met and subsequently married Miss Pomeroy. He devoted his entire attention to the carpenter's trade and contracting in Washington and Oregon until his retirement in 1910. He then removed to Astoria, Oregon, where he continues to live at the age of seventy-one years, while the mother is sixty-one years old. To them were born six children, of whom the son Charles E. is the eldest. The others in order of birth are as follows: Mary Olive, who died at the age of four years; William A., who is living at Chinook, Washington; Minnie, who married Leander Lebeck, also a resident of Chinook; Benjamin D., who is living at Beaverton, Oregon; and John E., of Chinook, Washington.

The early years in the life of Charles E. Ford were spent amid the hardships and privations generally incident to pioneer life. He acquired a common-school education, remaining a member of the home circle until he was seventeen years of age when he began to shift for himself. His first work was as a salmon fisher on the Columbia river. For fourteen years he followed this occupation during the summer season, devoting his winters to carpentry work. Since that time, however, he has given his undivided attention to contracting and building in which he has met with excellent success. He owns a very pleasant home in Hammond, besides three other residence properties which he rents.

In 1889 Mr. Ford was married to Miss Mabel N. Andrews, a native of California and a daughter of Samuel and Jane Andrews. Both of Mrs. Ford's parents are now deceased, the father having passed away in California and the mother in the state of Washington. Their family numbered eight: Marion; Thomas; Samuel; Martha, who married a Mr. Pate, of California; Mary, the wife of J. P. Paul, both now deceased; Henry Andrews, who is now deceased; Mabel N., the wife of Mr. Ford; and Olive, who is deceased. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Ford there has been born one son, Reuben P., whose birth occurred in 1890, in Pacific county, Washington. After graduating from the grammar school he began his business career and is now residing at Eugene, Oregon, where he is engaged in railroad work. Four years ago Mr. and Mrs. Ford adopted a little daughter, May Mildred, whose birth occurred on the 9th of December, 1906, in Multnomah county, Oregon.

In religious faith they are Episcopalians, and fraternally he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, while they both hold membership in the Rebekahs and the Maccabees, all of these organizations being represented in Hammond. His political support Mr. Ford gives to the democratic party, and for ten years he has served as mayor of Hammond, while for two years he was a member of the town council. His long period of service as head of the municipality attests the regard in which Mr. Ford is held in Hammond, among whose citizens he numbers many stanch friends.

JAMES A. NEAL, who has been a resident of Warrenton, Oregon, for the past fifteen years, was born in Orono, Maine, on the 4th of July, 1844, being a son of James A. and Sarah H. (Knapp) McNeal. The father was also a native of Maine, but of Scotch extraction, his parents having emigrated to the United States from Scotland. The mother was born in Ireland, whence she emigrated to the United States when a child with her parents, who settled at Bucksport, Maine, in 1827. There she was reared to womanhood but she was married to Mr. McNeal at Orono.

After his marriage James A. McNeal established a blacksmith shop at Orono, which he operated until the Civil war broke out. He enlisted in the Eighteenth Maine Volunteer Infantry, and went to the front where he remained for three years. He was discharged on account of his wounds and because of the fact that his constitution was entirely depleted by the hardships and privations of army life. He survived for a little more than a year, his demise occurring in 1866. The mother lived until the 16th of December, 1897. Of this union there were born thirteen children, of whom the son, James A., is the only one now surviving, the others are as follows: Daniel, who died when he was five years of age; Adeline, who passed away at the age of fifty-one; Abbie, who was nineteen years old when she died; Zephaniah, who was killed in the army in 1862; Angeline, whose death occurred when four years old; Elizabeth, who passed away at thirty-five; Mary, whose demise occurred when she was twenty-five years; Charles, who was fifty-seven years old at the time of his death; Daniel, who died at the age of sixty-three; Albridge, who attained an age of sixty-five years when he passed away; and two, who died in infancy.

The first seventeen years of his life James A. Neal spent under the parental roof, acquiring a knowledge of the common branches in the public schools of his native town. His career as a wage earner began in a lumber camp in the vicinity of Orono, where he spent one winter. On the 10th of November, 1862, he enlisted in Company C, First Maine Volunteer Cavalry, remaining at the front until the 9th of August, 1865, when he was mustered out at Augusta, Maine. During the period of his service he participated in many notable battles and skirmishes, among them being the following: Stony Creek, Ring Station, Sycamore Church, Rear of Petersburg, Cedar Creek, Hatch Run and Hanover Court House. He was shot in the left side at the battle of Ring Station and again wounded at the battle of Petersburg, where his horse was killed and fell on him, throwing his eyes out on his cheeks. After receiving his discharge, Mr. Neal returned to Orono residing there until 1868, when he came west, locating in Michigan where he engaged in the lumber business for three years. From there he went to Wisconsin, remaining until 1874, being employed as a foreman by his uncle, Daniel E. Hubbard. He then moved to Portland, devoting seven years to agricultural pursuits, following which he spent six years in the vicinity of Walla Walla engaging in various occupations. At the expiration of that period he went to Squaw Valley, California, and operated a hay ranch for seven years, then came to Ashland, Oregon, and bought a fruit ranch. Two years thereafter he disposed of this property and came to Warrenton, where he has ever since resided. Mr. Neal owns a fine residence here, which together with his other interests and the pension he receives from the government enables him to live comfortably.

Mr. Neal has married three times, his first union having been with Miss Elizabeth J. Good, in Portland, Maine, November, 1866. Mrs. Neal passed away in 1868, having been the mother of three children, twins, who died in infancy and a daughter, Abbie, the deceased wife of John Lerne, her demise occurring at the age of twenty-four years. In 1870 Mr. Neal was again married, his choice this time being Mrs. Sultana Woodard, a widow, and a daughter of William Cleveland of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. This marriage took place at Stevens Point, Wisconsin, the union being terminated by the death of Mrs. Neal in 1879. She also left one daughter, Mittiebell, who married Elmer Benham of Beaverton, Oregon, and died in 1898, leaving one child, Zella May. Mr. Neal married his present wife, formerly Miss Mary Henrietta Stadaroth, on the 16th of May, 1883. Mrs. Neal was born in Hanover, Germany, emigrating from there to America when a child with her parents, who settled in Jacksonville, Jackson county, Oregon, in 1865. There the father passed away two years later, leaving a widow and two daughters: Mary Henrietta, now Mrs. Neal; and Matilda, the wife of C. W. Wentworth, of California. The mother was again married in 1868, taking for her second husband C. D. Reed, of Jacksonville, by whom she had four daughters: Charlotte, who is a teacher; Kate, a milliner; Emma, also a teacher; and Sarah, who died on the 15th of January, 1883. The daughters are all unmarried and make their home with their parents in Jacksonville. The father formerly engaged in placer mining, but is now living retired at the age of eighty-two years, while the mother is seventy-two. Mr. and Mrs. Neal have one son, Loris Dewey, who was born in Ashland, Oregon, on the 28th of August, 1897. He is now attending high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal affiliate with the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally he is a Mason, his membership being held in a lodge in Maine, and he also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in Wisconsin, while he maintains relations with his comrades of '61 by means of his membership in the Grand Army of the Republic. In matters politic, Mr. Neal was formerly an ardent republican, but he now casts an independent ballot, giving his support to such men and measures as he deems best adapted to subserve the interests of the majority.

J. L. HOSKINS. One of the highly honored pioneers and substantial citizens of Yamhill county is J. L. Hoskins who for the past three years has been president of the United States Bank of Newberg, the duties of which post he is discharging in connection with the operation of his ranch. His birth occurred in Clinton county, Ohio, on the 20th of March, 1846, his parents being Joseph and Sarah A. (Hodson) Hoskins. They were also natives of Clinton county, the father's natal day being in 1819 and that of the mother in 1822. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Hoskins numbered four: Cyrus F., who passed away leaving a wife but no children; J. L., our subject; A. M., who died in Portland, and Carrie M., who is also deceased.

J. L. Hoskins was given the advantages of a good common school education in his native state, where he resided until he was seventeen. Upon attaining that age he responded to the call for volunteers and enlisted in the Thirteenth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. He remained at the front for two and a half years, and during that period saw much active service but was never wounded. He was present at the siege of Petersburg and participated in the battle of the Wilderness, while he also witnessed Lee's surrender. Although he was one of the youngest men in his regiment, he displayed rare courage and presence of mind and was discharged with the rank of sergeant. When mustered out he joined his parents, who had removed to Indiana during his absence. There he engaged in farming during the summer months, while his winters for four years were devoted to teaching. At the end of that time he learned to mould brick, following this occupaton for four years in Indiana, whence he subsequently removed to Oregon. During the first six years of his residence in this state he continued to mould brick, but at the expiration of that period he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, purchasing the ranch where he has ever since lived. The country in this vicinity was but sparsely settled when he located here, his arrival being prior to the founding of the town of Newberg. In the operation of his land Mr. Hoskins has met with success, as he is very practical in all that he undertakes and has made a careful study of his soil, devoting his fields to such crops as he considers they are best adapted for. His personal supervision has always been given to the work about his place, much of which he has performed himself, and the result has been all that could be desired. As his circumstances have warranted he has added such improvements and conveniences as were needed to operate his land in accordance with modern methods of agriculture, while he has also erected substantial barns and a comfortable residence. His ranch presents a most attractive appearance, everything about the place indicating careful supervision and capably and intelligently directed efforts. He takes great pride in his homestead, which has responded most gratifyingly to the labor he has expended in its cultivation and now nets him a handsome annual income. In 1900 Mr. Hoskins entered public life in the capacity of county recorder, and owing to the nature of his duties during the four years of his term he lived in McMinnville, but at the end of that time he returned to his ranch. He has always taken a deep interest in the development and upbuilding of Newberg and has been associated with its business life through his connection with the bank for more than six years. For three years he was a director and vice president of this institution, displaying during that period such fine powers of organization and executive ability that he was later elected president. He has discharged the responsible duties of this office in a manner highly acceptable to the stockholders, and the bank has become recognized as one of the stable and conservative financial institutions of the county.

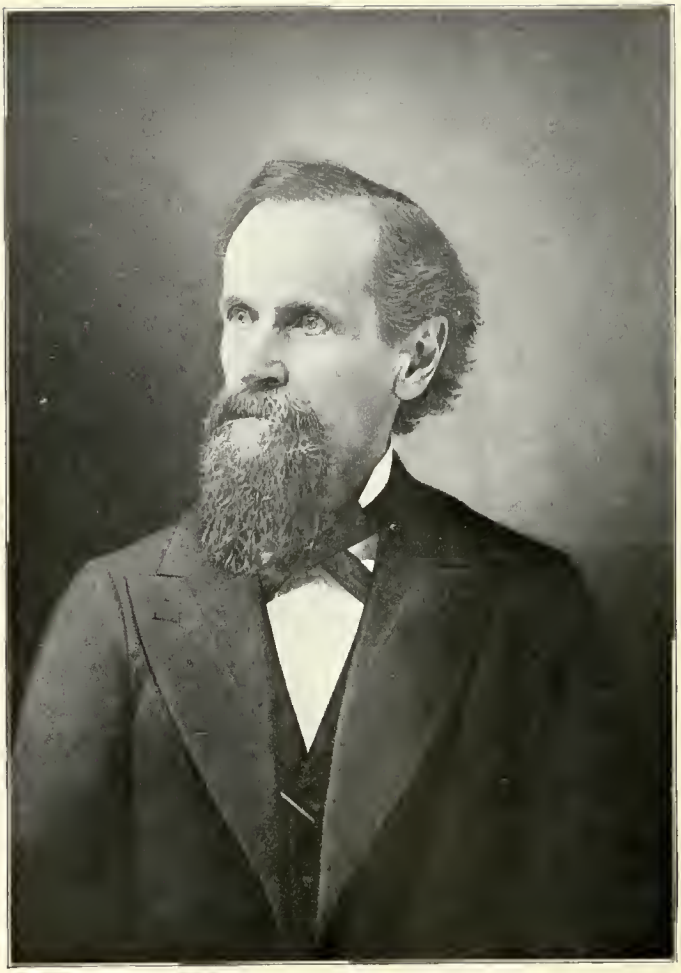
In Indiana on the 10th of February, 1876, Mr. Hoskins was united in marriage to Mary L. Hadley, who was born in Monrovia, Morgan county, that state, on March 17, 1850. Her parents were T. M. and L. M. (Macy) Hadley, the father a native of North Carolina, his birth occurring December 10, 1810, while the mother was born in Tennessee, August 28, 1818. They were the parents of nine children. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hoskins there have been born three children, as follows: Anna, the wife of F. K. Jones, principal of the high school at Santa Paula, California, by whom she has had two children, Bernice and Merle; Hervey M., who is married and living at McMinnville, where he is postmaster; and Cecil J., who is a lawyer by profession, also married and living in McMinnville, where he is connected with one of the banks.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hoskins are members of the Friends church, and he is a charter member of the Woodmen of the World and for forty-three years he has been affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Rebekahs. He maintains relations with his comrades of the war through his connection with Shiloh Post, G. A. R., and he also belongs to the Commercial Club of Newberg. His political support he gives to the republican party, and has always taken an active interest in all governmental affairs. Beside acting in the capacity of county recorder, as previously mentioned, he was deputy assessor for six years and represented Yamhill county in the state senate for four. A man of sound judgment and progressive views he is often called upon to serve in a public capacity and for twelve years he was one of the trustees of Pacific College, having entered upon his duties when the school was first founded. Mr. Hoskins is one of the pioneers, who in the development of his own interests has not forgotten his duties as a citizen in the community at large, and has always given much of his time and energy to promoting the various public utilities. A strong personality, his influence is ever exerted in advancing the best interests of the people by giving his unqualified support to every movement that will tend to uplift the standards of the community along moral, social or intellectual lines.

JACOB KAMM. It is frequently the case that men who are pioneers in an undeveloped region or in the establishment of a business, who bear the hardships and trials incident to settlement in a new community or meet the discouragements and difficulties attendant upon the establishment and development of a new industry or commercial enterprise, do not receive the financial returns which seem to be their due. Not so in the case of Jacob Kamm. He is now one of the wealthiest residents of Portland and in his success his fellow townsmen feel that he has fittingly come into his own. His prosperity has followed the closest application, the most unremitting industry and ready utilization of opportunities that others might have enjoyed had they possessed the ability and the courage to utilize them. No history of the development of the northwest would be complete without mention of Jacob Kamm, for as one of the promoters of navigation interests he has accomplished for this section of the country a work the value of which can



JACOB KAMM

MRS. CAROLINE A. KAMM

THE N
PUBLIC
ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOU

scarcely be overestimated. While he has prospered, the public at large has been a direct beneficiary of his labors in that his work has been a factor in opening up this great section of the country with all of its splendid natural resources. His history constitutes an interesting chapter in the life of the northwest.

Psychologists claim that ancestry, individuality and environment are the three-fold elements of success, representing material, ability and opportunity. The land of the Alps was the ancestral home of Jacob Kamm, who was born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, December 12, 1823, and to the eighty-eighth milestone he has traveled life's journey, the evening of his days being spent in one of the beautiful homes of Portland in an honorable retirement from the labors that so many years engaged his attention. His father resigned his commission in the Swiss army to make a home for himself and his family among the broader opportunities offered in America, but four years later, in New Orleans, yellow fever claimed him as a victim and his son, then twelve years of age, was left to face the difficulties of life alone. A sturdy, self-reliant spirit came to him from his ancestry and with this there developed in him a determination to utilize to its full every advantage. Already prior to his father's death he had secured a position in the office of a prominent daily paper in New Orleans and after leaving that position, which he had obtained through the influence of the foreman, who was his friend, he performed any task which he could secure until November, 1837, when he changed the base of his business operations to St. Louis. On the trip up the river he was robbed by a smooth-talking stranger of all of his money save ten cents. The urge of necessity therefore forced him to obtain immediate employment, which he secured as cabin boy on the Ark, a small steamer on the Illinois river. During the winter months he attended a private school. Contact with the world served to show him his own limitations and at the same time awakened his ambition. He gave every leisure moment to mastering the details of marine engineering and, becoming an expert workman in that field, was offered paying positions which in time brought to him the capital that enabled him to become part owner of the steamer Belle of Hatchie, a steamboat which he ran until his health became impaired. He then sold out and for several years thereafter was chief engineer on packet boats plying between St. Louis, Keokuk and New Orleans. The requirement demanded of engineers before they were licensed was at that time very high. Mr. Kamm received his diploma from the Engineers Association of Missouri but again impaired health forced him to seek a change and, hoping that different climatic conditions would prove beneficial, he crossed the plains in 1849 to the mining regions around Sacramento. After a brief period he was installed as engineer on a steamboat running on the Sacramento and Feather rivers in California. The following year in San Francisco, he became acquainted with Lot Whitcomb and it was this incident that eventually brought Mr. Kamm into such close connections with the development of navigation in the northwest. In order to install the machinery ordered for the steamer Lot Whitcomb, Mr. Kamm went to Milwaukie, a Portland suburb. While his knowledge of such work was of expert character, his sole equipment at that point was a bellows and anvil; but with the assistance of a blacksmith by the name of Blakesley, who was ingenious and painstaking, Mr. Kamm managed to shape the crude tools that enabled him to perform the work that he had undertaken. It was necessary also that he assemble the boilers, which had been shipped from New York in twenty two sections, and at length the Lot Whitcomb steamed out of the harbor—the first craft of the kind ever equipped in this port, Mr. Kamm being behind the engines and operating the machinery until the vessel was sold and taken to California.

From that time forward Mr. Kamm was closely identified with navigation interests of the northwest. He built the first stern wheel steamer of Oregon, the Jennie Clark, of which he was half owner with Messrs. Abernethy, Clark and Ainsworth owning the other half. This enterprise was a stupendous one for that day, for all machinery had to be brought around Cape Horn, but the work was successfully executed and the craft launched. Later he was active in the construction of the Carrie Ladd, also one of the first steamers on the Columbia, this vessel becoming the nucleus of the property of what was later the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, which was organized in 1860 with Mr. Kamm as one of the large stockholders and as chief engineer. He sold his interest in the business in 1865 to a syndicate, which in turn transferred its stock to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. Mr Kamm also became one of the organizers, president and principal stockholder of the Willamette Steam Navigation Company, which operated extensively on the Willamette and eventually sold out to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. He was likewise the owner of the George S. Wright, a steamer engaged in the coast trade, running from Portland to Victoria and Sitka. With the settlement of Oregon and the northwest he developed his business to meet the growing demands of the time. Although on one occasion he thought to withdraw from active connection with navigation, he was forced to take in payment the small steamer Carrie, which was made the nucleus of the fleet of the Vancouver Transportation Company that was organized in 1874 with Mr Kamm as president. He has continued in that connection to the present time, although he has long since retired from the active management of the business. He was at one time owner of considerable stock in the Union Railway & Navigation Company and with others he was associated in building the Ocean Wave and the Norma, of the Snake River Transportation Company which are the only boats that have passed through the famous Box canon on the Snake river without being wrecked. Long before the era of railroad transportation his labors had facilitated trade relations in providing means of transportation for the products of the northwest. The growth of a district must always depend upon this and the work of Mr. Kamm was therefore of incalculable benefit and value to Oregon and Washington. Moreover, he became a factor in banking circles in Portland, subscribing largely to the stock of various banks and at one time serving as vice president of the United States National Bank. His business operations at Astoria featured largely in the upbuilding of that city. He invested extensively in property and business enterprises there until he became one of the large tax-payers of that seaport and is now president of the First National Bank of Astoria. His realty holdings include valuable property in Portland and in San Francisco.

On the 13th of September, 1859, Mr. Kamm was married to Miss Caroline Augusta Gray, a daughter of William H. and Mary A. (Dix) Gray, missionaries of the northwest of 1836 and 1838 respectively. Both of her parents, of whom mention is made on another page of this work were prominent in the educational and religious development of the northwest. The missionary spirit brought them to this section of the country that they might spread the teachings of the gospel among the Indians and the early white settlers in this region. The father was also a practicing physician and a man of considerable literary ability. Unto Dr. and Mrs. Gray were born seven children, of whom Mrs. Kamm is the second in order of birth, and by her marriage she has become the mother of one son, Charles T. Kamm, now deceased, who became his father's associate in navigation interests. He left four children: Mrs. Caroline A. McKinnon; Jacob G., now in Europe; Willis W.; and Philip S.

While the extent of the business interests which Mr. Kamm has managed is such as would preclude for many a man the opportunity for engaging in other interests, Mr. Kamm was long known among the active workers of the First Presbyterian church and as president of its board of trustees. He contributed generously to the maintenance of the church, manifesting deep interest in the extension of the work. In Masonry he has attained high rank. His initiation into the order occurred in St. Louis, July 27, 1847, and following his arrival in this state he became one of the early members of the Multnomah Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M., of Oregon City, but is now a member of Willamette Lodge, No. 2, of Portland. His name is also on the membership rolls of Portland Chapter, No. 3, R. A. M.; Oregon Commandery, No. 1, K. T.; Oregon Consistory, No. 1, A. & A. S. R.; and Al Kader Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

A review of his life seems to indicate that Mr. Kamm has lost no opportunity not only to further his own interests but also to contribute through his business activities to the growth and development of the northwest. The sterling characteristics of the Swiss people—industry, reliability and courage—are his and they enabled him to meet the demands of our splendid western citizenship. Rich in its natural resources, the country offered him opportunities of large value. He saw them and made them his own. His knowledge and his business training, both largely self-acquired, were of the most practical character and as the years passed he developed a marked genius for organization that carried him into important business relations. He spends his time today in superintending the details of his large business interests. Although he is unable to leave the house he daily receives reports from the First National Bank of Astoria, of which he is president, from the Vancouver Transportation Company and from his other extensive interests, and regularly gives advice with reference to their management. He occupies one of the most beautiful homes in Portland. In the period of his early residence here he purchased, in the early '60s, fourteen acres of land then outside of the city limits. Today this tract is in the center of the great and beautiful city that has grown about it and is in itself a center of beauty scarcely surpassed. Beautiful trees and shrubs indicate the art of the landscape gardener and, though in the very heart of the city, seem in a measure to shut out the cares and activities of the outside world that the owner may enjoy that peace and quiet which he has so worthily won and which are so rightfully his. The home with its magnificent surroundings is a most suitable environment for the honorable old age to which he has attained.

CHARLES A. PELLAND, a well known farmer of Marion county, was born in Champoeg, February 11, 1874. His parents were Charles O. and Mary E. (Coleman) Pelland, the father being a native of Canada, and the mother of Yamhill county, Oregon. The father came to Oregon in 1860, locating at Oregon City, where he was engaged for eight years in milling. Upon his removal to Champoeg he established a mercantile business but in 1880 he removed to a farm near McMinnville, in Yamhill county, and remained there two years. Subsequently for six years he was again in mercantile work at St. Paul, Oregon, and at the end of this period he purchased a farm of four hundred acres, where he lived until his death, May 31, 1904. He wedded Mary E. Coleman, at St. Paul, Oregon, on January 1, 1873. She was a daughter of James and Frances (Murrey) Coleman, who were married in Iowa in 1847, came directly to Oregon and settled in Yamhill county, near Bellevue, on a donation claim where they lived several years. They then removed to St. Paul, where they resided until the father's death, which occurred June 11, 1911. He was a very prominent farmer. In their family were eleven children, of whom Mary E. was the third in order of birth. The others were: Mrs. Ann Davidson, the deceased wife of W. F. Davidson, of St. Paul, Oregon; John, deceased; W. Thomas, of Champoeg, Oregon; James, of Turner; Mrs. Eliza Hammond, the wife of Frank C. Hammond, of Portland; Steve H. and Charles D., both of St. Paul; Mrs. Emma Murphy, the wife of W. M. Murphy, of St. Paul; Mrs. Louise Casey, the wife of J. J. Casey, of Portland; and Frank N., of St. Paul. Charles O. and Mary E. (Coleman) Pelland became the parents of eight children, of whom Charles A. was the eldest. The others are: Mrs. Florence G. Daly, the wife of Alfred J. Daly, of Seattle, Washington; George, deceased; Fred J., of Athena, Oregon; Mrs. Marie Newsom, the wife of G. S. Newsom, of Athena, Oregon; Philip O., of Lostine, Oregon; Helen L., of Corvallis; and Francis Gerald, who is a student in the electrical engineering department of the State College at Corvallis.

Charles A. Pelland received his education in the common schools and remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-five years of age, when he started out in life of his own accord by renting a farm of three hundred acres, on which he engaged in raising oats and live stock. After two years he took charge of his present farm, which consists of four hundred acres and is a part of his mother's home place, and he owns two-fifths of it. His principal crops are grain and hops, and he is also engaged in raising live stock.

In 1899 Mr. Pelland was united in marriage with Miss Mary A. Gratton, who was born October 4, 1876, in St. Louis, Oregon. She is a daughter of Felix and Sophia (Ouimette) Gratton, both of whom were natives of Canada, born in Quebec. In 1865, soon after their marriage, the parents came to Oregon, and settled in St. Louis, where they lived for twenty-seven years, during which time the father followed the trade of blacksmith. They then removed to a farm of seventy-five acres near St. Paul, where they lived until the father's death, September 17, 1889. In their family were ten children, of whom eight are deceased. The two surviving are: Edward F., of Portland; and Mary A., who is now Mrs. Pelland. Mr. and Mrs. Pelland have four children: Florence M., born August 19, 1900, who is attending an academy in St. Paul; Kathryn, born October 31, 1902, who is also attending an academy in St. Paul; Mary Octavia, born September 2, 1904, who attends the same school; and Charles Felix, born February 21, 1912.

In politics Mr. Pelland is a democrat, but has neither sought nor desired office. Fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and both he and his family are zealous members of the Catholic church. For his advancement in life he depends entirely upon his own efforts and enterprise and he is steadily achieving success.

ROBERT A. ABBOTT. The life record of Robert A. Abbott, who for more than a quarter of a century has been a resident of Skipanon, Oregon, began at Binghamton, New York, on the 22d of May, 1845. His father, George W. Abbott, was a native of Connecticut of English parentage. In his early manhood he moved to New York state where he met and subsequently married Miss Angeline Carmon, who was of Dutch extraction and a native of Dutchess county, New York. Their marriage occurred at Binghamton, where he worked at shoemaking and also engaged in the tannery business with his brother until his retirement. He passed away in 1887, but the mother survived until 1892. By this union there were born the following children, the eldest of whom died in infancy; in order of birth, the others are as follows: Robert A., our subject; Betsy A., the wife of Samuel Bennett, of Binghamton, New York; James F., who is living in Oregon; Emmet W., a resident of Waterville, New York; Julia, the wife of Joel Van Newkirk, a hardware man of New York city; Carrie Belle, who passed away at the age of twenty three; and George, who died at Brookline, New York.

Robert A. Abbott remained under the parental roof until he was seventeen years of age, when he left to join the Union forces in the Civil war. He enlisted on the 4th of March, 1862, in the Fifteenth United States Infantry, spending three years at the front, receiving his discharge on the 4th of March, 1865, on the top of Lookout mountain in Georgia. He actively participated in twenty-seven battles, among them being those of Pittsburg Landing and Stone River. After receiving his discharge he returned home, where he remained until September, 1867, when he again enlisted in the army. He joined Battery I, Fourth United States Artillery for three years, being discharged on the 4th of September, 1870, at Fort Maryland on the Potomac. Immediately thereafter he re enlisted in Battery E, of the same regiment, and has the distinction of assisting in the capture of Captain Jack of the Modocs, in the Modoc Indian war in 1873. He was honorably discharged at Fort Stevens, Oregon, on the 4th of September, 1875, with drawing permanently from army life. He subsequently came to Skipanon and bought a homestead, that he improved and cultivated for twenty five years. Disposing of his ranch in 1900 he has ever since followed the carpenter's trade. Mr. Abbott also draws a pension from the United States government.

Baltimore, Maryland, was the scene of the marriage of Mr. Abbott to Miss Maria Henderson, the event occurring on the 7th of June, 1870. Mrs. Abbott is the only daughter of William H. and Annie (Bowes) Henderson and was born at Acquia Creek, in the vicinity of Fort Washington while her father was a native of London, England, and the mother of Florida. Her mother died during her early childhood, while the father passed away at the barracks at the Presidio, San Francisco, in 1881. He has been in the United States army for many years always having been a soldier. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Abbott there were born the following children: Robert, who is deceased; Ruby, the wife of Carlos Drew, of Astoria, Oregon; Edwin V., who is a farmer at Auburn, Washington; Mary, the wife of C. H. Collins, who is in the service of the Great Northern Rail way, also at Auburn, Washington; Blanche, who married S. T. Smith, who is engaged in the clam business at Skipanon, Oregon; Nellie, the wife of J. A. Collins, of Hammond, Oregon, who is a sergeant in the United States army and also a ticket agent; Lottie, who is still at home; William H., who is engaged in the lumber business, married and living in Warrenton; and Fred and Charles H., both of whom are unmarried and living at home. The two eldest were twins.

The family affiliate with the Episcopal church, and politically Mr. Abbott is a republican. He has held the position of police judge and justice of the peace, and he also served for many years as a member of the school board at Skipanon. He has been on the republican committee since locating here in 1875, and has repeatedly been chosen as a delegate to state conventions.

CHARLES F. TRUE. To men, who possess the initiative and determination of purpose to cope with conditions that confront the new settler, the northwest affords the opportunities to quickly attain the plane of prosperity. Of such as these is Charles F. True, one of the successful general farmers and extensive hop-raisers of Washington county.

His birth occurred in a little seafaring village in Cumberland county, Maine, on the 16th of January, 1845, his boyhood and youth being spent within sight and sound of the Atlantic. His earliest memories are of the water, during both calm and storm, and the various crafts that plied their trade. The son of a shipbuilder, he delighted to spend his time about his father's place of business, where he met many sailors with wonderful stories and experiences that fired his imagination and intensified his longing to adopt the same vocation when he had attained manhood. At the age of eleven years he lost his mother, and, as is often the case with a mother's passing, the home soon became but a memory and from then on the lad was practically dependent upon his own resources, so he laid away his school books and gratified the great longing of his life, to go to sea. For eleven years he served in different capacities on various sailing vessels, where his youthful knowledge and enthusiasm, and the natural understanding of the sea, as well as his love for the seafarer's life served to promote him, while yet in his early youth, to the position of an officer. During the time of the nation's great need for men of fortitude he withdrew from his work and offered his services to his country, going to the front on the 23d of December, 1863, with Company C, Thirty-second Maine Volunteer Infantry. He entered the ranks at Augusta, Maine, and was sent from there to Alexandria, Virginia, where his regiment joined the Ninth Corps. They participated in the battle of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anne, Bethany Church, Five Oaks and Cool Arbor, as well as the advance on Petersburg. Their regiment was composed of brave men, whose fearlessness made them almost reckless in the face of danger and as a result their showing at the end of the year revealed many empty places, both in the ranks and among the officers. Probably no other regiment had met with greater disaster in the same length of time or could produce a more remarkable record. Eighteen officers and one hundred and sixty-five men were killed on the field; thirty-four died in rebel prisons; one hundred and forty-two were in the hospitals, and four hundred and forty-five received non-mortal wounds. Thus there were about eight out of every nine killed or wounded and of this brave company of volunteers only sixty-four men were left at one time. Mr. True, himself, was twice wounded in the advance on Petersburg and in consequence spent four months in the hospital at Alexandria. At the expiration of that period he was mustered out and returned to his home in Maine, glad of the restoration of peace and proud of the part he had played in hastening the end. When his health was fully restored and he was able to once more resume the responsibilities of civil life, he decided to avail himself of the greater opportunities which he felt were afforded on the western coast, and it was in the summer of 1867, that he took passage on the Meldon for Portland, by way of the Horn. He reached his destination on the 17th of September and soon thereafter became identified with the lumber interests of the vicinity. Later he severed this connection with the lumber business to become manager of the Dave Logan ranch, continuing to discharge the duties of this position until his marriage in 1871. Very shortly after this event he and his bride located in McMinnville, where for a year Mr. True conducted a meat market. A man of much sagacity and foresight, he early recognized the wonderful possibilities Oregon afforded agriculturally and purchased the ranch where he now resides. After giving up the meat business he engaged in carpentry work until 1883, when he removed to his ranch. A dense growth of marketable timber covered his land and much time was consumed in clearing and grubbing preparatory to operation. Mr. True has spared neither expense nor labor to create out of a wilderness one of the most attractive and valuable properties of the county. He has erected a modern residence and durable outhouses and barns, many modern improvements are to be found on his place and the grounds are under intense cultivation. In connection with general farming, he has made a specialty of hop-raising and has met with lucrative returns from both. He is one of the best known and most influential ranchers in the vicinity of Middleton, and of great credit to the community, in the development of which he has prominently figured.

In 1871 Mr. True was united in marriage to Miss Lucetta Van Curen. Mrs. True is a native of the state of Iowa, whence she crossed the plains with an uncle in 1863 to Oregon. Four children were born of this marriage, as follows: William, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Washington county; Estella, who married C. L. Shat-

MR AND MRS C E HULL AND SON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

tuck, of Pineville, Oregon; and Blake and Albion, who are deceased.

His political allegiance Mr. True gives to the republican party, and fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, in which organization he has held all of the offices, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is also a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, thus maintaining his connection with his comrades of the field. Mr. True is held in the highest esteem in Washington county, where he has resided for over thirty years. During three decades he has always manifested substantial qualities and that stalwarthiness of character that would make him an acquisition to be desired in any community, his efforts and influence ever being exerted on behalf of general progress.

J. W. JACOBS. Forty-seven years' residence in Oregon has made J. W. Jacobs largely familiar with the history of the state and he has witnessed many of the events which have been prominent features in the development and upbuilding of the state. He now resides at Central Point and at the present time is serving for the second term as city recorder. His birth occurred near McMinnville, in Yamhill county, December 15, 1865, his parents being A. S. and Rebecca E. (Matthews) Jacobs, the former a native of Jefferson county, Indiana, and the latter of Clark county, Missouri. They were reared and married in Keokuk, Iowa, and in 1865 they started across the plains with mule teams for Yamhill county, Oregon. The following year they removed to Ashland, where the father followed his trade of a bricklayer and stone mason. In 1882 he was elected sheriff of Jackson county and removed to Jacksonville, serving in that position for two terms, or four years. He bought a ranch two and one-half miles east of Central Point and resided thereon for about ten years after which he took up his abode in the town and lived retired throughout his remaining days. He died in 1907, at the age of seventy-five years and thus passed away one of the well known and worthy pioneer settlers of the state. Mrs. Rebecca E. Jacobs had died in Ashland in 1875 and Mr. Jacobs afterwards wedded May Smith, who now resides in Ashland. There were four children by the first marriage: N. A., of Riverside, California, who served for two terms as county superintendent of schools in Jackson county and as county clerk for a term of two years, ere his removal to the south; L. L., who for two years was county treasurer of Jackson county and is now cashier of the Fruit Growers Bank of Medford; J. W., of this review; and Mary F., who is the wife of A. E. La Ponta, of Central Point.

J. W. Jacobs resided with his parents until he had reached man's estate and learned the marble-cutter's trade in Jacksonville, after which he followed that pursuit in Jackson county for twenty years, being engaged in the business on his own account most of the time. He conducted the first marble shop in Medford and two years ago he returned to Central Point, where he now makes his home. He was elected city recorder in 1910 and is now serving in that position for the second term. He was also school clerk here for nine years. All of the family have been adherents of the democratic party and have held many offices, although living in a strong republican county, their election being proof of their personal popularity and the confidence reposed in them.

On the 16th of April, 1897, Mr. Jacobs was married to Miss Mary Morris, who was born six miles east of Central Point in 1872, and is a daughter of Archie Morris and a granddaughter of the Rev. Martin Peterson, a well known pioneer preacher and farmer of Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs have one child, Edith, born November 12, 1908. Mr. Jacobs belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen and in those organizations has many friends. He is proving an able official and one in whom the public has absolute confidence. He early recognized the fact that the only way to win regard and respect as well as success, is to be thoroughly reliable, to discharge his duties faithfully and to meet every obligation of life as it comes, and by following these principles he has become well established as a worthy citizen of Central Point.

WALTER S. CARSNER is the owner of a valuable ranch of four hundred and eighty acres located on the south side of the John Day river, four miles below Mount Vernon. He is one of Grant county's pioneers and was formerly extensively engaged in the stock business, but has greatly reduced his herds of recent years, giving more attention to the cultivation of his land. He was born in Polk county, Iowa, on the 11th of November, 1852, and is a son of Jonas and Sarah (Parkinson) Carsner. The father was a native of Ray county, Missouri, and the mother of Pennsylvania. The paternal grandfather, Henry Carsner, who was a farmer, located in Missouri during the pioneer days and there passed the remainder of his life. His son Jonas subsequently removed to Iowa, which was his place of residence until in the late '50s, when he went to Kansas, settling in the vicinity of Leavenworth. He and his family spent the winter of 1861 at Nebraska City and there the following spring they joined an emigrant train of about sixty wagons coming to Oregon. They made the journey with six yoke of oxen, experiencing no unusual difficulties or hardships on the trip, their party not having been attacked by the Indians nor having suffered from the epidemics with which some of the emigrants were afflicted. On the 20th of October, 1862, they arrived in the Willamette valley, and there for two years Mr. Carsner rented land. At the expiration of that time he came to the John Day valley, filing on a tract of land located on the river twelve miles below Mount Vernon. The family settled there in August, 1864, and on the 11th of December following, the father passed away, leaving a widow and a family of seven small children practically penniless. Despite the many hardships and privations Mrs. Carsner experienced in supporting and rearing her family, she lived to attain the venerable age of eighty-two years, her death occurring in November, 1910.

Walter S. Carsner was a child of twelve years when his father died, but despite his youth he was compelled to assist in maintaining the family. They remained on their claim until the spring of 1865 when, owing to the danger from the Indians, they removed to the Willamette valley, making their home there for three years. In the spring of 1868, they returned to this section, settling six miles below Mount Vernon, which was their place of residence for many years. Mr. Carsner has passed the greater part of his life in this immediate vicinity, where of recent years he has prospered in his undertakings and is now numbered among the well-to-do citizens of his community. His first ranch was situated three miles below Mount Vernon, and there he engaged in stock-raising until he bought his present place, which is located on the south side of the river and four miles from Mount Vernon. He has a good location and a large portion of his holdings is bottom land and is very productive. Until the last three years he has been ranging a large herd of cattle, but he now keeps only about three hundred head. His place, which is crossed by the McLellan creek, is well improved and equipped and one of the attractive properties of the county. Although his early education was very limited, as he had but meager schooling, Mr. Carsner has overcome his deficiencies by close observation and careful reading, developing into a man of practical intelligence, sound judgment and liberal views, whose opinion is often sought in business affairs.

On the 27th of November, 1877, Mr. Carsner married Miss Tennessee Dunn, a native of Tennessee and a daughter of Robert and Ellen (Page) Dunn, the former of North Carolina and the latter of Virginia. They came to Oregon in 1876, locating on Long creek in Grant county. Both Mr. and Mrs. Dunn died in 1882. During the long period of their residence in this section Mr. and Mrs. Carsner have become widely acquainted and have a large circle of friends.

JESSE D. CLINTON is living five miles below Myrtle Point on the Coquille river in Coos county, Oregon, and is actively engaged in the cultivation of a fine tract of land. He was born in Crawford county, Missouri, April 27, 1872, and is a son of John W. and Eliza Ann Clinton. His parents were married in Missouri and they lived in that state until 1873, when they came to Oregon and settled on the north fork of the Coquille river where the father cultivated land for four years. At the end of that time they removed to the eastern part of the state, settling in Umatilla county, and there the father became a tie contractor for a local railroad company. In 1880 he returned to the Coquille river and settled three miles below Myrtle Point where he has since resided. He is known as a representative and prosperous agriculturist who has done much to promote the farming interests of his section. He and his wife became the parents of twelve children: James, Marion, Jesse D. and Mary, all of whom reside in Coos county; George, of California; A. R., Samuel, Dora, Edward, Clarence and Ray, of Coos county; and Annie who is deceased.

Jesse D. Clinton started life for himself when he was eighteen years of age. His education was acquired in the public schools of Coos county. When he laid aside his books he obtained work in the logging woods and was prosperous in this line of occupation in the employ of others for six years. At the end of that time he worked at the same business in the employ of his father and altogether spent eighteen years as a logger. For two years of this time he was foreman of a large camp and gained a valuable experience in all the details of lumbering. In 1904 he bought a small farm five miles below Myrtle Point on the Coquille river and began its cultivation. As he was able financially he added to his holdings and now has one hundred and seventy-six acres of land all improved to some extent and seventy-five acres under constant cultivation. He does general farming but makes a specialty of the breeding and raising of high-grade cattle, and keeps at the present time twenty-two cows for dairy purposes, besides the large number of horses and cattle which he raises for the market.

In 1896 Mr. Clinton was united in marriage to Miss Daisy Myers, and to their union four children were born: Lilas, born in 1899, and who is now attending school; Lillie A., who died in infancy in 1902; Lawrence W., who was born in 1904; and Ardis, born in 1909.

In his political views Mr. Clinton is a republican and is always ready to do his duty in the service of his fellow citizens. He was road supervisor for his district for a number of years and the county highways have been placed in their present splendid condition through his able and constructive work. For six years he has been a member of the school board and has always been interested in education. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and to the Modern Woodmen of America and is active and well known in both of these organizations. In all relations of life he shows a progressive spirit and a policy of gradual expansion. These qualities, directed toward agriculture, have made him prosperous as a western farmer and an important influence in the development of Coos county.

COLONEL H. G. NEWPORT. Hermiston largely stands as a monument to the enterprise and progressiveness of Colonel H. G. Newport, who was one of the founders and builders of the town and whose labors have been a factor in the upbuilding of this section of the state. He has for a long period conducted a general contracting business and at the same time he is identified with agricultural interests. Moreover, he has been a generous supporter of projects for the intellectual and moral advancement of the community and cooperates in every movement for the public good. The greater part of his life has been passed west of the Mississippi and the spirit of advancement characteristic of this section of the country finds exemplification in his life. He was born in Newport, Washington county, Ohio, October 8, 1850, his parents being Reese and Mary (Cole) Newport, who were natives of Pennsylvania and of Ohio respectively. The father, who was born in 1797, died in 1853, at the age of fifty-six years and the mother, whose birth occurred in 1814, passed away in 1852. Reese Newport was a very enterprising and industrious man. Before the Civil war he built the first swinging ferries and spent a number of years in installing these through the south. Witnessing conditions which existed in that section of the country, he became a strong abolitionist and because of his admiration for Horace Greeley, who advocated the same principles, he gave the name of the prominent New York journalist to his son, the subject of this review. Doing all in his power to further the cause of liberty, he made his home one of the stations on the famous underground railroad and thus assisted many a slave on his way to freedom in the north. By a former marriage he had five children and by his marriage to Mary Cole there were also born five children, of whom Colonel Newport is the youngest.

Colonel H. G. Newport has been engaged in railroad construction and general contract work for over thirty years. He is president of the Newport Land & Construction Company, of which his son Harry R. Newport is superintendent. Their company is the largest contracting concern in eastern Oregon, and has done a great deal of work in the irrigation line.

Colonel Newport is an optimist in reclaiming the desert and nothing pleases him so well as to give the desert drink. He and his son Harry R. have done more to develop the Umatilla project than any other two men in the community. They have both been live wires in building up the fine little city of Hermiston. They in fact both always stand for advancement and improvement and employ practical methods in their attainment.

Colonel Newport is a man of determined purpose in business affairs and in public life manifests the resolution and energy which enables him to carry forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes. He has been both the architect and the builder of his own fortune and at the same time his labors have been of a character which contribute to general prosperity as well as to individual success.

ANDREW SMALLEY owns a well improved farm of one hundred and sixty-seven acres, six miles below Myrtle Point, Oregon, and is well known as a general agriculturist and stock-raiser. He dates his residence in this section from 1888 and is widely and favorably known as one of its substantial residents. He is a native of Pennsylvania, born April 3, 1853. His parents were Benjamin L. and Hannah M. Smalley, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Pennsylvania. The father came to America when he was sixteen years of age and married in Pennsylvania, where he resided until the outbreak of the Civil war. He enlisted in the Federal army as one of the first volunteers from his state and was killed in the battle of Bull Run. He and his wife were the parents of three children: Mary J., who died in Virginia City, Nevada; Andrew, the subject of this sketch; and Edgar, who was killed in a mine accident in Nevada. Mrs. Smalley, the mother of our subject, died at the home of her daughter in Virginia City.

Andrew Smalley was educated in the public schools of Pennsylvania and remained at home until he was twenty years of age. He came west a few years later and mined for eight years in Virginia City, Nevada, and thence went to California, where he worked in the timber forests and at various other occupations for seven years. When he came to Coos county in 1888 he bought one hundred and sixty acres of land on Hall creek and began its improvement by building fences and erecting good barns and outbuildings. He has since added seven acres to his original purchase. He carried on the work of tilling and cultivating the soil, later adding stock raising to his activities, until he is now one of the most substantial citizens of his district and his farm is numbered among the prosperous enterprises of this kind in the state.

In 1873 Mr. Smalley was united in marriage to Miss Emma Tillman, a native of Pennsylvania. In that state their marriage occurred and in 1888 they came west to Oregon. Mrs. Smalley is a daughter of David and Sarah Tillman, who lived in Pennsylvania for a number of years and both died in that state. She is one of five children born to her parents, the others being Sarah, who died in Pennsylvania; Miranda, the wife of James Brewster, of Pennsylvania; Marcus, also a resident of Pennsylvania, and one child who died in infancy. To Mr. and Mrs. Smalley have been born fourteen children: David J., who is still at home; Charles E., also living at home; Andrew, who died at the age of nine years; Christopher, who passed away when ten months of age; Carl, who is now a resident of Cashmere, Washington; Callie, the wife of Charles McVey of Napa, California; Dolly V., who married Russell Hill of Coos county; Emma L., the wife of Bud King of Coos county; Benjamin S., Marcella, Mary I., Mildred H. and Etta, all of whom are at home, and Eva, who died at the age of two years. All the children of Mr. and Mrs. Smalley received their education in the public schools of Coos county.

During the twenty-four years of his residence in this section Mr. Smalley has taken an active and helpful part in the work of improvement and progress which has been carried forward along various lines. He has directed and managed his business affairs so successfully that he is today placed among the prominent agriculturists of Coos county. In his political affiliations Mr. Smalley gives his allegiance to the republican party but takes no very active part in public affairs.

ORSON AVERY STEARNS is in every way entitled to be numbered among the pioneers of Oregon and is known throughout his portion of the state as a pioneer soldier, settler and in later life a successful agriculturist and stockman. He was born on his father's farm sixteen miles northwest of Rockford, Winnebago county, Illinois, January 9, 1843, and is a son of David Ebenezer and Fidelia S. (Cannon) Stearns, the former a native of Vermont, his birth having occurred at Monkton, February 11, 1808. The latter was a native of Ohio, her birth occurring at Twinsburg, September 30, 1820. The family of which the subject of this review is descended was founded in America in 1630, when Isaac Stearns and family, in company with Sir Richard Staltonstall and family and Rev. George Philip and Governor Winthrop, together with many others, sailed from Yarmouth, England, and landed at Salem, Massachusetts, June 12, of that year. The party upon investigation was not pleased with the location at Salem and at once proceeded to Charlestown, from which place they removed to Watertown, near Auburn, Massachusetts. The paternal grandparents were Rev. John and Asenath (Campbell) Stearns. David E. Stearns at the age of nine years left home and engaged in work as an apprenticed carpenter. At the age of fourteen as a master carpenter he engaged in the pursuit of his trade wherever an opening presented itself. While working as a carpenter he was for some time employed in the construction of a number of early buildings in Buffalo, New York. During the early '30s he removed to Winnebago county, Illinois, and there settled on government land and was engaged in farming until 1853. On April 5, of that year, with his family he began his journey across the plains with ox teams to Oregon and on October 9 camped near Wagner Springs, twelve miles south of Ashland, which was the point of his destination. Two days later he took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres on Wagner creek, near Talent, Jackson county, and there remained until the time of his death, which occurred August 31, 1886. His wife died February 4, 1869. They were united in marriage in Illinois in 1840 and became the parents of six children: Oscar Leroy, deceased; Orson Avery, the subject of this sketch; Newell Dasky, also deceased; Arminda Melissa, the wife of James Purves, of Talent; George Arthur, who passed away in 1861; and Emily Maria, deceased.

Orson Avery Stearns was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. He came to Oregon with his parents in 1853 and grew to manhood under the parental roof. On November 17, 1864, he enlisted in Company I, First Regiment of Oregon Volunteers, and was the first to enlist in that company, in which he served as first sergeant. His command remained in Jackson county until May 25, 1865, when with his company he went to Fort Klamath and there took part in locating and building the new road from that fort to the Rogue river and the road survey passed through the vicinity adjacent to Crater lake, which up to that time had remained undiscovered. The lake was discovered when two comrades, John M. Corbell and Francis M. Smith, were out on a hunting expedition and shortly thereafter Mr. Stearns in company with Captain Sprague and a party of gentlemen from Jacksonville when inspecting the construction of the road passed near the location of the lake. On seeing the same Sergeant Stearns and a Mr. Coates attempted a descent to the lake. Sergeant Stearns was the first to reach the water's edge and at once christened the lake as Lake Majesty. The name was later changed to that of Crater lake on account of the discovery of a crater on the island near the northwest bluff. Mr. Stearns served with his company in the Snake country and was there engaged in the building of Camp Alvord during the fall of 1865, in which year his company also made several campaigns in search of hostile Indians and later was engaged in one battle near Alvord lake in 1866. He was sergeant of his company during his period of service in the army with the exception of two months. On July 19, 1867, he was mustered out of service at Jacksonville. During the time he was engaged in the army he located his present farm and immediately after his discharge he settled on the place and has since continued to devote his entire time and attention to its cultivation. His farm is located six and three-fourths miles southwest of Klamath Falls on the Ashland road and includes four hundred and seventeen acres, of which three hundred has been brought to a high state of development. On that property Mr. Stearns lived until 1905 when he removed to Klamath Falls. During this time he has made a specialty of stock-raising and for many years past has been numbered among the most successful stock-raisers of his portion of the state. For twenty years he has successfully conducted a dairy and was one of the pioneers in this business in the county. He now owns five hundred and sixty-five acres of valuable land which he rents out.

Mr. Stearns was united in marriage at Sacramento, California, May 17, 1873, to Miss Margaret Jane Riggs, who was a native of Ray county, Missouri, her birth having occurred July 22, 1855. She died May 17, 1895. They were the parents of three children: Leslie O., who resides at Klamath Falls; Blanche Alice, the wife of George Ager, who owns a farm adjoining her father's place; and Eva May, who is the wife of W. E. Bowdine, of Klamath Falls. The father of this family was married on January 10, 1897, to Miss Luella M. Sherman, a native of Ohio, her birth having occurred in July,

O. A. STEARNS

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

1861. They are the parents of one child, Ernel Everett.

Mr. Stearns is affiliated with the republican party and has the distinction of having been the first delegate from his portion of the state to the republican county convention, which was held at Jacksonville, March 16, 1866. To that convention he was a representative of the republican soldier vote at Fort Klamath. At that time he was also serving as the first justice of the peace over a jurisdiction which then included all of Klamath and Lake counties. In 1880 he was elected by the republican party to the state legislature and at that time Klamath was still a part of Lake county. During that session of the legislature he served with credit to himself and with entire satisfaction to his constituents. Mr. Stearns was one of the prime movers in the establishment of a county historical society and served as president of the Klamath County Historical Society. During a long life of usefulness he has so lived as to maintain the respect of all people with whom he has come in contact and is in his advanced years numbered among the active, enterprising and progressive citizens of his county and state.

JOHN HENRY SCHROEDER. Although seven years have passed since John Henry Schroeder died in Coos county, the residents of that section still mourn his passing, which deprived the state of Oregon of an early pioneer, a man who aided in the slow work of development which has brought the wild sections of the country to a state of fertility and productiveness and who was a vital and efficient factor in agricultural, political and business life of his state. Mr. Schroeder was born in Baltimore, Maryland, May 7, 1840, and was a son of John Henry and Dorothy Schroeder, both natives of Germany. His parents came to America when they were still very young and settled in Baltimore, where their marriage occurred. They lived in that city until 1859, in which year they came by way of the Isthmus of Panama to Coos county. They settled on the south fork of the Coquille river, where the father bought land and was active in agricultural development until his retirement. His death occurred while he was living with his son. His wife survived him for some years and died in Coos county. They were the parents of six children: John Henry, of this review; August, of Coos county; Fred, who is residing in Coquille, Oregon; Louisa, the wife of Orville Dodge, of Myrtle Point; William, who met his death by drowning; and Charles, of Seattle, Washington.

John H. Schroeder received his education in the public schools of Baltimore, Maryland, and was a graduate of the high school there. He early in life learned the millwright's trade and followed this for a number of years. In 1870 he bought a farm on the Coquille river, comprising one hundred and sixty acres of unimproved land, and this he brought to a high state of development, adding to his property from time to time until he owned two hundred and sixty acres of the most fertile and productive property in Coos county. He was associated for a time with placer mining on the coast and assisted in the construction of the first commercial sawmill in Coos county. He became interested in this line of work and afterwards held the position of head sawyer in the mill which he constructed. He saw the development of the county in which he settled from an unorganized community into one of the wealthiest and most thriving districts of the state of Oregon. He was a force in its evolution and his commercial and agricultural skill added materially to the change. He erected the first creamery in Coos county and operated this upon his farm, supplying it from the products of his meat and sanitary dairy. This enterprise was afterward destroyed by fire. He made extensive improvements upon his farm from time to time and was always at the head of any movement looking towards agricultural development. He built the first silo ever erected in the county and introduced the first head of Jersey cattle into the state. He was an extensive and expert stock raiser and breeder and owned the first head of Berkshire hogs in Coos county. His efforts were all along constructive and extensive lines and Coos county owes him a debt of gratitude for his aid in its development.

December 31, 1861, Mr. Schroeder was united in marriage in Coos county, Oregon, to Miss Emily Perry, who was born March 17, 1845, in Clatsop county, near Astoria. She is a daughter of William T. and Ann (Able) Perry, the former a native of Connecticut and the latter of Ohio. Mrs. Schroeder's parents were married in July, 1839, in South Bend, Indiana, and moved to Michigan and later to Muscatine, Iowa. The father was a carpenter and contractor by trade and worked at his occupation at irregular intervals until he came to Oregon in the early days of its pioneer settlement. He made the journey across the plains with ox teams, locating in Clatsop county, six miles from Astoria, in 1842. Here he took up a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres and was active in the management and development of this tract of land until 1851. He constructed, in 1845, the first grist mill ever built in this state, erecting it near Oregon City. In 1851 he moved to Douglas county, near Roseburg, where he erected a grist mill which was the first enterprise of its kind in Douglas county. He lived there until 1854, in which year he came to Coos county and took a donation claim of one hundred and sixty acres on the Coquille river, where he was active and successful as a farmer until his death on the 4th of November, 1882. He and his wife were the parents of five children: Vol. N., who is now residing in the state of Washington; Mary, who was the first white child born in Oregon and who is now deceased; Emily, the wife of our subject; Dora C., who married August H. Schroeder, of Coos county; and Kate L., the wife of B. Holmes, a resident of Coos county, living on the Coos river

Mrs. Schroeder received her education in the public schools of Douglas county, Oregon, and remained with her parents until her marriage. She is now living on one hundred and seventy acres of her husband's farm which she owns in connection with her children. This property is now operated by her two sons. She and her husband became the parents of eleven children: Dora M., born in October, 1892, who is now the wife of T. P. Hanley, residing near Parkersburg, Oregon; Mary E., the wife of Harry S. Kribbs, of Myrtle Point, Oregon; W. H., of Coquille; Mrs. Ella J. Laingor, who lives upon her father's homestead; George, who is prominent in the hotel business in Florence, Oregon; Alice M., the wife of Allie Hite, of Coquille; Walter B., of Gravel Ford, Coos county; Clarence E., who in conjunction with his brother, John Henry, operates his father's homestead and who is the father of three children, Emily L., Lloyd and Irma; Ralph, who is a farmer of Coos county; Gustav, who resides near his father's farm; and John Henry, who is residing on the home farm.

John Henry and Clarence E. Schroeder are in partnership in the operation of the largest dairy farm on the Coquille river. They handle ninety cows and have a cheese factory on their farm which they supply with dairy products. This enterprise, however, is conducted by C. E. Broadbent.

In his political views Mr. Schroeder always affiliated with the democratic party and served his fellow citizens in many different capacities. He was elected county superintendent of schools and served with ability and efficiency in this office for two years. He was county representative at one time and in 1874 was elected county judge. For many years he was a member of the school board and took an intelligent and active interest in educational expansion. At the time of his death he was a member of the Pioneer Historical Society of Oregon and his early reminiscences were extremely valuable to this organization. His life was molded along honorable and upright lines and no suspicion of business corruption was ever connected with his name. In attracting to himself numerous friends among the most respected residents of his district, Mr. Schroeder won true success. His death, which occurred May 30, 1905, was regretted in many circles of Coos county where he was held in universal respect and esteem for his exemplary personal life, his high sense of honor and his rare qualities of citizenship.

WILLIAM CORVOSSO LEE is a prominent and well-known representative of the sheep industry near Baker. He was born in Paoli, Orange county, Indiana, May 31, 1863, a son of Hiram and Ruth Elizabeth Lee, who were also natives of that state. The father was born October 13, 1833, and he was married about 1860 in Orange county. He devoted his life to general farming until 1863, when he enlisted for service in the Civil war in the Thirteenth Indiana Cavalry, with which he served until the close of hostilities. He participated in the battle of Murfreesboro in which his brother, John Lee, was killed. Hiram Lee also took part in the battles of Memphis and Mobile and in a number of lesser engagements, but was never wounded. Unto him and his wife were born seven children, three sons and four daughters, but the first born, a son, died in infancy. The second, William C., is the subject of this review. Archie, the third, was born June 18, 1866; Cleopatra, born July 16, 1869, became the wife of John Payton, of Indiana, and after his death she married John Steiger, with whom she is now living in Baker county, Oregon. She has one son and one daughter by her first marriage. Junie Viola, born about 1872, died when twenty-two years of age. Alfaretta died in early girlhood. Ruth Elizabeth, born February 1, 1883, became the wife of Walter Steiger and lives in Baker. The mother of these children passed away in Indiana, February 5, 1883. The father married again and by the second union had two children, Charles Isaiah and Leslie H. His second wife also died in Indiana. About 1900 he came to Oregon by railroad and settled in Baker City, where he lived to the time of his death, six or seven years later.

William C. Lee was educated in the common schools of Paoli, Indiana, being a student in the old Atkinson school, in which his father had also pursued his education and which is still in use, being one of the oldest schoolhouses in that state. Mr. Lee was reared to farm life, remaining at home and assisting his father in the cultivation of the fields until about twenty-four years of age. He then went to southern Kansas and worked with a construction train for about four months. He afterward removed to Kansas City, Missouri, where he was employed in laying street car tracks until the snow and cold of winter terminated that work for the season. He then took up the trade of brick-making, which he followed while he remained in Kansas City, covering a period of about fourteen months. By rail he then came to North Powder, Union county, Oregon, in August, 1888, and entered the employ of his uncle, David Lee, at hauling saw logs. After two months he began hauling lumber and was thus engaged until winter came on. During the cold season he fed his uncle's stock —horses and cattle—after which he again hauled logs until the 1st of September. At that time he began herding sheep for his uncle, Miles Lee, and was thus employed for two or three years, his uncle being then, as now, one of the wealthiest sheep growers of Oregon. William C. Lee afterward purchased an interest in the sheep business and for a number of years acted as camp tender. Subsequently he became associated with his uncle, David Lee, in the sheep industry, the partnership continuing for a number of years. About 1903 he began to raise sheep on his own account and is finding it a profitable business. He has about twelve hundred ewes and their lambs on the government reserve, paying six cents per head for the ewes while the lambs are pastured free. It is necessary to feed his flocks for about three months during the cold season.

In Paoli, Indiana, Mr. Lee was married on the 2d of October, 1910, to Miss Minnie Adelphia Jones, a daughter of N. L. Jones, who was a carpenter and also operated a threshing machine. He married a Miss Hill and they became the parents of six children, three sons and three daughters. Edward married Laura Atkinson and they became parents of three daughters, one of whom is deceased. Later he married again and there was one daughter by that union. Adelphia, now Mrs. Lee, was born July 23, 1879. Ray is married and has one son. The fourth child was a daughter, who died in infancy. Alta and Charles are both at home with their parents in Paoli, Indiana.

Mr. Lee is a republican in politics, interested in the welfare and success of the party yet never seeking office. For about twenty-seven years he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church but now has his membership in the Church of God.

JOHN W. KIRK, a progressive and enterprising farmer of Marion county, Oregon, was born in Minnesota, November 8, 1857, a son of Peter and Margaret (Lyon) Kirk, both natives of Ireland. The former came to America at the age of twenty and the latter, accompanied by her mother, at the age of sixteen. They were married in 1854, resided in Massachusetts for three years and then removed to Minnesota, where they obtained a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. The hardships he encountered there were very great, the nearest market for the grain which he raised being sixty miles distant, and after making the long trip with oxen he received only forty cents per bushel for the grain. Leaving his family in Minnesota, Peter Kirk, together with two hundred men made up a wagon train and went into Montana prospecting for mines. After investigating conditions there he decided to establish a shoemaking shop and with a crude beginning, being forced to depend upon a pack horse to carry the small purchases that he made, he gradually added to his stock until he had a mercantile business requiring his undivided attention. After three years of persistent effort he had accumulated a small fortune and in 1870 he came to Oregon, making his way direct to San Francisco and thence by water to St. Paul. There he purchased three hundred and forty-five acres due north of St. Paul, living there until his death. Mrs. Kirk died there in 1873. In their family were eleven children, two of whom died in infancy. The others are: Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy of St. Paul, who is the mother of seven children; Thomas F., also a resident of St. Paul; John W., of this review; Mary J., who died in Minnesota; Richard, of Portland, Oregon; Robert E., of St. Paul, who is married and has three children; and Peter P., James and Margaret, all now deceased.

John W. Kirk spent his early boyhood days in Minnesota, where he and his brothers attended to the farm of one hundred and sixty acres while the father was establishing his shoemaking business in Montana. Later he went with his family to Oregon, where he grew to manhood. At the age of twenty-two he and his brother began farming for themselves, purchasing of their father two hundred and fifty-seven acres of land which they continued to cultivate until 1890 when they added to this an adjoining one hundred and fifty acres, operating both farms together until 1906. They then divided the place, John W. Kirk taking possession of the larger farm and his brother, of the one hundred and fifty acres. Prior to his marriage he built his home and at present he holds two hundred acres of land under a high state of cultivation and carries on various lines of farming, and raises cattle, horses, sheep and hogs. Thirty acres of the farm are planted to hops and yield yearly a profitable crop.

Mr. Kirk was married to Miss Cecilia McKay, a native of St. Paul, born in 1862, the daughter of James and Cecilia (Lawson) McKay. The father was a native of Ireland and the mother of Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. McKay were married in Scotland, came to America and crossed the plains with ox teams, locating in Marion county, at Mission Mill, near St. Paul, where they both died. They were the parents of five children: William R., of St. Paul, who is married and has five children; Mary, now residing in Portland; John N., of St. Paul, who was born on the home place and who is married and has four children; Mrs. Kate McCormick, of Woodburn, Oregon, who has five children; and Cecilia, the youngest, who is now Mrs. Kirk. Mr. and Mrs. Kirk have become the parents of eight children: Ralph D., who after completing a college course returned to his father's farm which he helps to operate; Geraldine, a teacher in Portland who was graduated from St. Mary's College with the highest honors; James F., a graduate of Columbia College, who is now at home with his parents; Marie, Elinor, Louise and John L., all of whom are attending school and Lauretta, who passed away at the age of two years.

Mr. Kirk and his family are loyal members of the Catholic church and his fraternal relations are given to the Catholic Order of Foresters. In politics he is a democrat and is very much interested in local conditions but has neither sought nor desired office. In business Mr. Kirk has made continuous progress along the path leading to prosperity and he and his family stand high in the regard of all their friends in the county in which they have lived so long.

CHARLES L. CONYERS [illegible] enterprise and activity in the management of commercial interests have made Charles L. Conyers one of the foremost representatives of trade interests in Clackamas county. He is now conducting a hardware, crockery and sporting goods establishment which is the largest of the kind between Portland and Salem. Into other fields of business activity he has also directed his efforts, and the success which is the reward of intelligently directed industry and unfaltering [illegible] is his. Clackamas [illegible] her native sons. He was born September 30, 1864, his parents being E. W. and Hannah C. (Bryant) Conyers. His youthful days were spent under the parental roof until he reached the age of seventeen years, when he began earning his own living by hunting and trapping in Columbia county, Oregon. He afterward went into the woods, where he worked in connection with his brother for three years in locating timber tracts. He then formed a partnership with his father and brother for the conduct of a general mercantile business, in which he continued until May, 1894, when, owing to a financial stringency, he retired and took up his abode upon the homestead claim in Columbia county which he had previously entered. There he resided until 1896, proving up the property, after which he removed to a farm near Clatskanie, upon which he lived for a year. In May, 1897, the first passenger train came to this point over the Astoria & Columbia Railroad and Mr. Conyers met the train with a hack. For two years he continued to follow that business and then again turned his attention to merchandising, opening a small store at Clatskanie in a rented building. In this field of labor he has since remained and growing success has attended his efforts. He now owns the building in which he carries on his business and he has one of the largest stocks of hardware, crockery and sporting goods between Portland and Astoria. His place is well supplied with an extensive and attractive line of goods and his straightforward business methods combine with reasonable prices to secure him a liberal patronage. From time to time he has made judicious investments in real estate and now owns a fine home and other properties in Clatskanie. He is also one of the stockholders in the Cooperative Creamery Company and in the Nehalem Mutual Telephone Company, with main office at Mist, Oregon. He likewise has stock in the Pacific Fire Insurance company of Portland and thus is extending his efforts to various lines which contribute to the business development and prosperity of the state as well as to individual success.

On the 21st of May, 1893, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Conyers and Miss Lizzie Miller, a native of Ohio and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Miller, both of whom were natives of Ohio, where they were reared and married, removing thence to Illinois, where the mother died in 1884. Five years later the father came with his family to Clatskanie, where he made his home until his death in May, 1908. He is survived by three daughters and a son: Mrs. C. H. Owens, of Clatskanie; Mrs. Annie G. Murray, also of Clatskanie; Mrs. Conyers; and A. R. Miller.

In his political views Mr. Conyers has always been a republican since age conferred upon him the right of franchise. He has been recorder of the city and councilman for several years and has also served as mayor of Clatskanie, ever discharging his official duties with strict regard for the interests involved, giving to the city in his position of mayor a most businesslike and progressive administration. He was one of the organizers of the Commercial Club of Clatskanie, of which he has been president, and at this writing, in 1911, is president of the Lower Columbia County Good Roads Association. Fraternally he is connected with Clatskanie Lodge, No. 160, I. O. O. F., and is serving as deputy grand master; also is state master of arms of the state organization of the Maccabees and both he and his wife are connected with the Rebekah degree of Odd Fellows. His fraternal and political interests constitute an even balance to his business affairs and produce a well rounded character that invites the confidence and good-will of his fellowmen and proves himself worthy of the trust reposed in him.

WILLIAM H. GRAY. This pioneer of pioneers and historian of events in which he took so conspicuous a part was born in Fairfield, New York, on the 8th of September, 1810, and was a gentleman of Scotch descent. When but a lad of fourteen he lost his father and was apprenticed to the cabinet-maker's trade. At the age of seventeen, before the term of his apprenticeship was completed, he became foreman of the shop. After attaining his majority he studied medicine and, being a member of the Presbyterian church, he was solicited by the American board to accompany Dr. Whitman. He crossed the plains with Dr. Whitman and wife and Rev. Henry H. Spalding and wife, the party arriving at Fort Vancouver on the 12th of September, 1836. Having come with Whitman in 1836 across the plains in company with Sublette to the Greene river, having assisted the other missionaries in the journey to Vancouver and in establishing themselves at Waiilatpu, and having himself gone to Alpona among the Flatheads, he determined to return the next year for reinforcements. To defray the expenses of his journey he drove a band of twenty horses and also had as companions in his company three young Flathead Indians, one of whom was the son of a chief. All went well with the party until Ash Hollow on the Nebraska river was reached. There they were attacked by a war party of three hundred Sioux. The Flatheads, being desperate fighters, although vastly outnumbered, kept the enemy at bay for three hours, laying fifteen of them dead on the sand. Gray himself took a hand in the fight, having two horses shot under him and receiving two bullets through his hat. The Sioux, having lost a war chief among the slain and seeing no likelihood of overcoming the doughty little band, proposed a truce. But while the chiefs were parleying with Gray, others of the Sioux treacherously attacked his young men, shooting down one Iroquois, one Snake and three Flatheads, one of whom was the chief's son. The French interpreter then declared that the others were prisoners and must give up their guns. This Gray refused to do and told the rest of his squad to sell their lives as dearly as possible. At this show of determination the Sioux gave back

MR. AND MRS. W. H. GRAY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

again and proposed a talk, and over the slain of both sides smoked the pipe of peace. It has been said variously that the death of this young chief alienated the Flatheads from Gray and that it was one of the causes of the Whitman massacre. Neither of these statements is correct or even reasonable. After his return to his mission, the Flatheads allowed Mr. Gray to live and teach among them until 1842; and his final withdrawal seems to have been due not to the disaffection of the Indians but to lack of agreement with his missionary companions. To suppose that the death of a Flathead in company with Gray in 1837 would cause another tribe, the Cayuses, two hundred miles off, to kill Whitman in 1847, is very peculiar.

Gray's services in establishing the provisional government were as that of originator of the scheme. His Americanism found no vent or scope in the Oregon of the old Hudson's Bay rule; and, shut off from the national life which had been a part of his own and learning to hate the plans and expectations of the British, he was no sooner in the Willamette valley than he conceived the idea of the American settlers establishing a government of their own. He took the responsibility of agitating the matter, of interesting Le Breton and Matthieu and others, of getting up the Wolf meetings and of pushing the scheme which seemed constantly on so slender a basis as to be ready to fall to the ground either on this side or that. With admirable tact, shrewdness and force, Gray and Le Breton led the column and carried the matter through to a most pronounced victory. The following is an account of the "Wolf meeting." An avowed attempt to form a government would have arrayed the Canadian-French in opposition, would have confirmed the doubting or conservative Americans into opponents. Hence the expedient was resorted to of bringing together all classes and uniting them in a movement in which all felt a common interest. A notice was issued for a meeting on the 2d of February, 1843, at the Oregon Institute, to consider the propriety of adopting measures for the protection of herds and for the destruction of animals which preyed upon cattle, stock, etc. The ulterior purpose was a combination of settlers—a cooperative association to concert measures for the formation of some kind of civil government. At this meeting William H. Gray was chosen a member of a committee of six to make arrangements for a general meeting and to report business to such meeting. This done, the "Wolf meeting," as it is known in history, adjourned to meet at the house of Joseph Gervais on the first Monday in March. After adopting resolutions looking to the defense and welfare of their live stock against predatory animals and organizing the "Wolf Association," the meeting did not adjourn but appointed a committee of twelve, of which Mr. Gray was a member, to take into consideration the propriety of taking measures for the civil and military protection of this colony. That the outcome of that meeting to form a "Wolf Association" would prove to be either the submission of a plan of government, or a proposition to initiate the preliminary steps to organize, had been public expectation. There was an eventful meeting at Champoeg. Mr. Gray was chosen a member of the first legislative committee. He was a member of the first territorial legislature and was one of a committee of five appointed to draft a memorial to the congress of the United States, setting forth the condition, situation, relation and wants of the country. In achieving the success of the "Wolf Association," the cunning of Le Breton would have had no effect without the moral earnestness and direct force of Gray, who did the talking, made the appeals, wrote the resolutions and closed the debates. This detracts nothing from the merits of Gritlin, Meek, Smith and others, who were not simply followers but colaborers. It is to be regretted that no record remains of the secret sessions of these American agitators.

After the full establishment of the provisional government Gray went to Clatsop Plains and in 1852 went east once more for the purpose of getting sheep for the young settlement. The scheme had been original with him for some time; and it was a favorite theory with Whitman himself that sheep were of more value than soldiers to the early settlers and also to the Indians. Colonel James Taylor was interested in the same line and formed a partnership with Gray for the purpose. Gray made the arduous journey in safety, bringing his flock by boat down the Columbia, but at Tansy Point a heavy south wind coming down Young's Bay prevented a landing. The scow was caught in a storm and blown out upon the sands and was wrecked on Chinook Spit and the whole almost invaluable flock was drowned. He assumed the entire responsibility of the loss and gave up his farm and home to meet the obligation, yet was not disheartened by the reverse. He was engaged in many business operations, being in California in 1849 to dig gold. He went to the Fraser river mines at Fort Hope and Okanagan in 1858. In the winter of 1860-61 he built a boat at Asotyn's lake on the British border. This was a craft with ninety-foot keel and a twelve-foot beam. It was constructed with no tools but a saw, hatchet and chisel and was caulked with moss mingled with pitch gathered from the pine trees. She was brought down the Okanogan and Columbia rivers to Celilo. Mr. Gray was also one of the earliest navigators of the violent Snake river.

For many years he lived at Victoria and during part of that time was a government inspector of the post. His later years were most enjoyably spent on the farm of his son-in-law, Isaac Swartz, on the Klaskanine. It is a matter of history, which he was never forward to claim for himself, to say that his reason for first going to the Columbia was on account of the prevalence of a disease, then epidemic, of measles on Clatsop Plains, to prevent the ravages of which he was particularly desired to remain by those who were going to the scenes of war and who wanted some one upon whom they could rely to care for their families in this sickness. He was the only physician in that region. For a number of years he was thus practicing medicine on the plains and was ever successful. Dr. Gray performed the first operation of trephining of the skull on the Pacific coast, and the Indian boy who was thus benefited by his skill spread his good fortune up and down through the forests. He was ever the friend of churches and schools, ever bore his hand in politics and public affairs, served as representative, county judge and justice and found his chief interest in public improvements. He was exceedingly active in the promotion of temperance, holding the most advanced views upon that subject.

Mr. Gray's history of Oregon, the first history written in the state, is so well known and so important in its sphere that it is fitting to devote some space here to its special consideration. The history was published in 1870. It exhibits flashes of dramatic power throughout. To those who have no interest in the contests of old times and to whom it is somewhat offensive to read of plots, charges and countercharges, the book ceases to please. But while these elements awaken the opposition of the reader, . . . to the scientific or philosophical inquirer into the early conditions of our state, it is invaluable as presenting the feelings of all parties—not only of Gray himself, but of the Presbyterians, Methodists, the non-mission people and even of the English. This makes Gray's history a most useful work upon this subject. Gray discards nothing as unimportant and makes little use of the cloak of charity but tells everything with reckless truthfulness. He caters to no one, writes nothing for the sake of popularity and never changes a word for the sake of rhetoric.

In his political career, as well as in all his enterprises, Mr. Gray was ever inflexible, blunt and direct, hard to manage, a good hater, but keen and faithful to his cause. When he had some great object to accomplish, he showed address and appreciation of the circumstances, and in the early days was without doubt the Achilles of the American party. He was an honest friend, moreover, and his personal relations with Dr. McLoughlin were most kindly, although for many years they were firm political opponents. Mr. Gray died on the 14th of November, 1889, and his remains were taken to Astoria to rest beside those of his loved wife. Taken all in all, William H. Gray is one of the most remarkable characters of North Pacific history.

One of Mr. Gray's objects on his first return trip to the east, in 1837, was to claim his bride. The young lady to whom he was betrothed was appalled by the prospect of a life in the far western wilderness among savages and remote from civilization, so the match was broken off. After a brief but ardent and forceful wooing, he married Miss Mary A. Dix, who was born in Ballston Spa, New York, on the 2d of January, 1810. The marriage ceremony took place on the 25th of February, 1838, Mrs. Gray being the daughter of a Revolutionary soldier who had decided to devote her life to missionary work. In 1838 this courageous couple set forth upon their life mission in the west, taking with them three other missionaries and their wives and locating at Fort Lapwai, Idaho. The zeal of the missionaries is understood when it is known that two weeks after their arrival Mrs. Gray had started a school for Indians under a pine tree in the wilderness and had a membership of from fifty to one hundred. Nor were her efforts confined to teaching the children, for during leisure hours she instructed the mothers in keeping their homes clean, in the art of making bread, and also taught them to cut and make clothes for their families. In 1838 both Dr. Gray and his wife received certificates from Rev. Dr. Greene of New York as missionaries of the American Board of Foreign Missions, both of which now hang in the historical rooms together with their passports. In July, 1842, Mr. Gray resigned from the Board of Foreign Missions and made a trip to the Willamette valley, where he became trustee and contractor and built the old Oregon Institute, since known as Willamette University. From 1842 until 1844 he lived with his family in Salem and then until 1846 in Oregon City. He next removed to Clatsop Plains, where, aided by his wife and three others, he organized the first Presbyterian church in Oregon. During the latter years of their lives Mr. and Mrs. Gray lived principally at Astoria. Mrs. Gray died in 1881. They had the following children: Captain J. H. D. Gray, who died at Astoria on the 26th of October, 1902, and was ex-state senator and ex-county judge of Clatsop county; Mrs. Jacob Kamm; Mary S., deceased, who was the wife of Frank Tarbell of Tacoma, Washington; Sarah F., who became Mrs. Abernethy, of Oregon City and Portland; Captain William Polk; Captain Albert Williams; and Captain James T. Mrs. Gray was a lady of education and refinement and of unusually lovely person, manners and character. She was an humble, consecrated Christian. One especially interesting fact in connection with her labors at Lapwai has been handed down to us. She had a remarkably sweet, finely trained voice, and when upon the morning after her arrival she joined in the singing at family worship, Mr. Spalding felt that it would be a power in their Sabbath services and requested her to conduct that part of the worship. When the Indians heard her sing they were visibly impressed and afterward spoke of her as "Christ's sister." While visiting at her mother's a few months before her death, Mrs. Kamm said to her one day, "Mother, I have often wondered how you, with your education and surroundings, the refinements of life that you were accustomed to, and your own personal habits, could possibly have made up your mind to marry a man to whom you were a total stranger so short a time from your first meeting with him, and go with him on such a terrible journey, thousands of miles from civilization, into an unknown wilderness, across two chains of mountains and exposed to countless dangers. Mother, how did you ever do it?" Her mother sat with her eyes intently fixed upon the carpet and then, after a few moments' pause, replied with great earnestness and solemnity: "Carrie, I dared not refuse! Ever since the day when I gave myself up to Jesus, it had been my daily prayer, 'Lord, what wilt thou have me to do' And when the question, 'Will you go to Oregon as one of a little band of self-denying missionaries and teach those poor Indians of their Savior?' was suddenly proposed to me, I felt that it was the call of the Lord and I could not do otherwise."

MRS. W. H. GRAY. Side by side with the fathers, husbands and brothers who constituted the mighty army that conquered the west for civilization stood the women who in spirit were as heroic, whose endurance was as great and whose zeal as untiring as that displayed by the men of the pioneer households. Many of them were reared in eastern homes of culture and refinement, tenderly nurtured and carefully educated. It seems that it would have required sterner stuff to meet the conditions here to be found, but one of the elements in Oregon's splendid citizenship of today is found in the gentle influence and consecrated lives of those eastern bred women. History contains no more thrilling story than the records of the lives and military records present no account of greater fearlessness in the face of danger than is contained in the life story of Mrs. W. H. Gray, who in 1835 came as a missionary to the Oregon country. Her Christian work was among the Nez Perce Indians.

"A labor loved and followed to the goal. . .
A faith so sure of the divine intent
It dignifies the deeds of daily life."

In her maidenhood Mrs. Gray bore the name of Mary Augusta Dix. She was of English lineage and came of the same ancestry as Dorothy A. Dix, the philanthropist. She was born at Ballston Spa, New York, January 2, 1810, and was one of a family of seven daughters who were reared in a Christian home amid refined associations. Her parents took an active interest in church work and it was no unusual thing to see them with their seven daughters seated in the church choir, the mother and daughters dressed in white. The first break in the happy home circle came in February, 1838, when W. H. Gray of Utica, New York sought the hand of Mary Dix in marriage. He had recently returned from the Oregon country, where he had gone in 1836 with Dr. Marcus Whitman and Rev. H. H. Spalding as secular agent of the missions they went to establish. She was to be not wife alone but co-laborer in this mission field. Not long before the death of Mrs. Gray her daughter, Mrs. Famm, said to her: "Mother, I have often wondered how, with your education and surroundings, the refinements of life you were accustomed to and your personal habits, you could possibly have made up your mind to marry a man to whom you were a total stranger so short a time before and go with him on such a terrible journey thousands of miles from civilization into an unknown wilderness, exposed to countless dangers. Mother, how did you do it" After a few moments' pause her mother replied with earnestness and solemnity: "Carrie, I dared not refuse. Ever since the day I gave myself to Jesus, it has been my daily prayer 'Lord, what will thou have me to do?' When this question, 'Will you go to Oregon as one of a little band of missionaries to teach the poor Indians of their Savior?' was so suddenly proposed to me, I felt that it was the call of the Lord and I could not do otherwise."

This was the motive that led Mrs. Gray to sever home ties and go with her husband in the work of consecrated Christian service to the far west. By steamer and stage coach they traveled westward until they reached Independence, Missouri, where they were joined by the Rev. Cushing Eells, and wife, Rev. Alkanah Walker, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Smith and Mr. Rogers, who were also to become workers in the missionary field. They planned to make the journey on horseback a difficult undertaking as well as arduous one in that day when the streams and rivers in the west were unbridged and when little more than an obscure trail marked the way to the coast. The Indians were a constant menace and often surrounded their camp, standing around like great dogs and sometimes even following the party all day. They carried with them tents which served as shelter at night while a buffalo robe and oil cloth blankets constituted their beds. At times their blankets would become heavy with rain and their clothing in the morning would be as damp as when they took it off the night before and when darkness came upon them they pitched their tents, spread the robes upon the ground within and then the piece of oilcloth. The saddles and loose baggage were arranged neatly about on the walls inside and rolled up blankets served for seats. In the center of the tent a table was spread for the evening meal. At night the cries and howling of wild animals could be heard. When day broke about [illegible] in the morning all were [illegible], the animals [illegible] turned out to feed, breakfast prepared and eaten, the dishes washed, the repacking [illegible] morning prayers were said and they were ready for the journey of another day. They had traveled for one hundred and twenty-nine days after leaving Independence, Missouri, when on the [illegible] of August last they reached Whitman mission, where they were joyously greeted by Dr. and Mrs. Whitman and Rev. and Mrs. Spalding, who had been anxiously awaiting them. Mr. and Mrs. Gray became the assistants of Rev. and Mrs. Spalding, who were in charge of the mission at Lapwai. Mrs. Gray earnestly undertook the task of teaching the Indian women and children and even commenced a band of fifty or more natives whom she taught under a pine tree until a log schoolhouse could be built. It was a primitive structure with puncheon seats and earth floor. There Mrs. Gray continued her labors until November, 1842. Her well trained voice proved a potent factor in her work. When she first joined in the singing at family prayers Rev. Spalding realized what a power her voice would be in his Sunday worship and requested her to take charge of that part of the service. The Indians, too, were visibly impressed by her singing and spoke of her as "Christ's sister," and told the tale of her music long afterward. No doubt the awakening powers of her voice, coupled with her rare sweetness of character, had much to do with bringing about the great revival among the Nez Perce Indians. Several hundred made confessions of religion and the influence was at least in a degree lasting, for years after Mr. Spalding left that field the Indians in many of the lodges continued to read the Bible, to sing hymns, to pray and return thanks at their meals.

In November, 1840, the Gray family came to the Willamette valley, Mr. Gray having severed his connection with the missions to accept the appointment of secular agent for the Oregon Institute. The journey to the coast was one of untold hardships, the parents, their son and two daughters floating down the Columbia to Clilo in a bateau belonging to the Hudson Bay Company. Believing that the trail would be safer than the turbulent waters of the Columbia near the cascades, Mr. Gray arranged that he and his family should proceed on the backs of Indian ponies, but when they were deep in the mountains they encountered a severe snow storm which not only imperiled their lives but rendered further travel impossible. Some of their Indian guides were then sent to Fort Vancouver for help. At the Columbia the red men found a canoe in which they proceeded down the river and when Dr. McLaughlin heard that a woman and little children were snowbound in the mountains he at once sent a boat manned by Hudson Bay Company men to their relief. Mrs. Gray's calm faith and belief that all would yet be well served to keep up the courage of the others and as the relief party were making their way up the Columbia, there came to them upon the wings of the wind the strains of a song that she was singing. Thus they directed their course to where the little party were imprisoned. They returned with the family to the river bank where embarkation was made for Fort Vancouver.

From that time forward the work of Mr. and Mrs. Gray proved a strong force in advancing the religious development of Oregon and also the temperance and educational work. Their home was the center from which radiated social and reform movements. In 1848 they assisted in forming on Clatsop plains the first Presbyterian church in the northwest. The strongest influences in life are often the most intangible and who can measure the work of this noble couple who were never contented with second best but chose those things which are highest and holiest. Every movement or measure for the promotion of truth, justice and righteousness received their support and many such found their impetus in their home. In 1870 they returned on a visit to their old home in New York, going from Portland to San Francisco and thence across the continent by rail, accomplishing in a few days a journey to which they had devoted months when they made their way on horseback to the Pacific coast thirty-two years before. It has been said of Mrs. Gray that her presence was gentle and dignified. Many there are yet who bear testimony to the nobility of her character. She possessed a pure spirit and strong soul and was so pacific in her disposition that under the severest tests she remained calm and self-possessed. Her last words were a prayer that her husband, children and friends might join her in the Father's house not made with hands. She passed away at her country home, the Clalskanie farm, December 8, 1881, when nearly seventy-two years of age, survived by her husband and seven of the nine children born unto her. The high sensitiveness of her nature was tempered by a serenity that had its root in an unwavering faith. She never faltered when she believed that the work before her was that which her maker intended that she should do. Of a most quiet, refined nature, her life was a restraining power to the spirit of lawlessness which is too often an element in a new community where an organization of society and of government has not been effected. While her words carried weight and influence, the beauty of her own Christian life and spirit constituted a still stronger power for good.

DR. ERNEST A. WOODS is a medical practitioner of Rogue River, where he settled in September, 1910. He is a leading man of his town, being president of the council and secretary of the Commercial Club. He has a satisfactory and growing practice, many of the best families of the community having chosen him as their regular physician. Dr. Woods was born in Chicago, Illinois, July 26, 1876, a son of Josiah G. and Martha E. (Huggins) Woods, both of Boston, Massachusetts. The parents removed to Chicago in 1873, where the mother died in 1900. Later the father removed to the state of Washington where he died at Puyallup in 1910. In their family were four children, of whom three are still living, those besides our subject being: Clarence, of Chicago; and Jessie May, the wife of Edwin Draper, of Marshalltown, Iowa. The deceased member of the family was Alfred P. C. Woods.

Dr. Woods was educated in the public schools of Chicago, later attending the University of Chicago. He next entered the Chicago Athenaeum where he made drawings for the Chicago World's Fair. He was later employed by Fraiser & Chalmers, after which he entered the First National bank of Chicago, remaining for two years engaged in writing bills of exchange. In 1895 he entered the College of Medicine and Surgery of the University of Minnesota and was

DR. ERNEST A. WOODS

THE N
PUBLIC ASTOR, LEN X AND TILDEN FOU ATIONS

graduated in the year 1899. After hospital interneship in the Twin cities Dr. Woods settled in the city of Stillwater, where he practiced for six months. He then removed to Clear Lake, Minnesota, where he remained in general practice until September, 1910, when he migrated to Oregon and settled in Rogue River, Jackson county, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession.

Dr. Woods was married at Clear Lake, Minnesota, in 1901, to Miss Adel A. Anderson, of that place, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Anderson, both natives of Sweden. She received her education in the schools of Minnesota, being graduated from the St. Cloud Normal school, after which she taught for a considerable period in the Clear Lake district. The Doctor and Mrs. Woods have become the parents of four children: Chester Y., Harvey A., Marcus B. and Clarence A. In his political views Dr. Woods is a republican. He has attained to the second degree of the Masonic body, being an active member of that order. He belongs to the Stearns and Benton County Medical Society of Minnesota, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Rogue River is extremely fortunate in having as a resident so estimable a representative of the medical profession as Dr. Woods, who has been thoroughly educated in medicine and has in addition received much experience in the practice of his profession before settling in Rogue River, being thus splendidly equipped to discharge the duties which fall upon him in the community of his adoption. He is uniformly successful in his practice and has formed an extensive acquaintance in Jackson county where he is greatly respected and held in high esteem by his close friends.

DAVID WINN HOLMAN owns and operates a ranch of one hundred and fifty-nine acres, located on Sutton creek, nine miles from Baker City. He is a native of Tennessee, his birth having occurred about eight miles from Sparta, the county seat of White county, that state, November 26, 1856. His father, A. J. Holman, was born in North Carolina in 1818, and there he was educated and reared to manhood. When he was about twenty-one years of age he removed with his parents to Tennessee, and there he met and subsequently married Miss Mary Jane Spiers, a native of White county, where their marriage occurred. Mr. Holman, who had been given the advantage of a good education, taught school until he was married, when he accepted the position of overseer on the plantation of William Glenn, one of the wealthy citizens of White county. Later he engaged in farming on his own account, continuing to follow this vocation during the remainder of his life. He removed to Arkansas in 1870, and there he and the mother passed the remainder of their lives, his death occurring in Johnson county in 1885, and hers in 1892. They were the parents of thirteen children, our subject being the eighth in order of birth. William Henry Harrison, a soldier in the Confederate army, died from the effects of a cold contracted soon after recovering from an attack of the measles. The father obtained permission to take him home, where he died nine days later. James S. was also a member of the Confederate army, where he served for three years. While at the breakfast table with an uncle one morning during the war, he was shot through the shoulder, by a minie rifle slug ball, which he picked up and kept. It was never known who shot him as there were no suspicious characters about, nor did any one hear the report of the rifle. He married Miss Hannah Welch, of Putnam county, Tennessee, which state continued to be their place of residence, and they became the parents of four sons and three daughters. Martha, who is the third in order of birth, died in infancy. Mary married Elijah De Rossett, and to them were born a son and a daughter. Amanda Elizabeth became the wife of W. L. Overley, a master mason, of Johnson county, Arkansas, and became the mother of three sons and two daughters. Perry S., also a resident of Johnson county, married Miss Belle Stewart, and they have two sons and two daughters. Thomas G. married Miss Eliza Joiner and resides in Johnson county, Arkansas. Florence married Joseph Horn, also of Johnson county, and they have had two sons and two daughters. Charles S. married Emma Nelson and they have become the parents of several children. Frank Cheatham chose for his wife Martha Harmon, and to them were born thirteen children. Margaret J. married Robert Hardy and they have several children. Josie F. became the wife of Burl Harmon, by whom she has had four or five children.

The education of David Winn Holman was begun in his native state and completed in the schools of Arkansas. Having been reared on a farm he was early trained to the duties of the agriculturist. Upon leaving home he engaged in farming for himself in the vicinity of Lamar, Johnson county, until 1887. His principal crop was cotton, and in connection with this he also raised large quantities of corn, wheat and oats. For about two years prior to the date mentioned he had been keeping an account of the time, labor and expense entailed by each crop and found at the end of that time that he was only receiving about fifty cents a day from his efforts, and this did not include the taxes on his land and the expense involved in keeping up the property. After much deliberation he and his wife decided that this undertaking was not sufficiently profitable to warrant its continuance, so they disposed of their farm, and April 12, 1887, started for Oregon with their two eldest children. They stopped in Baker City six days later, and here he [illegible] years he worked for the Miller & Lux Cattle Company, one of the largest and wealthiest corporations of the kind in California and Oregon. He thus accumulated sufficient capital to enable him to buy a farm for himself, and in 1891 he leased a tract of land from this company, which he cultivated for two years. At the end of that time he removed to Irrigation Baker county, where he located his present [illegible] 1906. The first year of his residence here he leased land, but he later purchased the improvements on a tract which he subsequently homesteaded. He proved up on this place and about 1906 sold it, and purchased his present ranch, which is well improved and easily worth fifty dollars per acre. As he has made steady progress in the development of his interests and each year has proven more successful than the one preceding he has never had occasion to regret locating here, but on the contrary has ever been thankful he made the change when he did. His farm is splendidly adapted to dairying and stock-raising, of which he makes a specialty, and he is realizing good results therefrom.

In Johnson county, Arkansas, on the 8th of March, 1883, Mr. Holman was married to Miss Eliza Shackelford, a daughter of J. C. Shackelford. The father, who was a native of Tennessee, removed from there to Illinois, whence he crossed the plains with an ox team to California in 1849. He worked in the mines of the latter state until 1855, when he went back to Tennessee, making the return journey by way of the isthmus. He took with him some gold, which he had panned and had it manufactured into jewelry, which he presented to different members of his family. Mrs. Holman has one of the rings, inside of which is engraved the initials of her father, and her sister has some earrings and a brooch. The father is still living and continues to make his home in Arkansas, but the mother passed away in Illinois. They had three daughters, the second in order of birth being Mrs. Holman; Fanny, the eldest of the family, married Frank Richey, a prominent mason and farmer of Illinois, now deceased, by whom she had eight children; Fredonia, who was the youngest, died in early life.

Mr. and Mrs. Holman have had ten children, all but the two eldest of whom have been born in Oregon. James F., the eldest, who owns a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres adjoining his father's place on Sutton creek, is employed by the E. P. Vorez Furniture Company of Baker City. He was born March 12, 1884, and married Hattie Carter, and to them have been born two sons. Jennie May, born in 1886, has been teaching in the district and public schools of Baker county for the past five years and is preparing to continue her education in the college of Corvallis. Maud Elizabeth, born in 1888, has for two years engaged in teaching and is now occupying a position in Harrison's ice cream parlor in Baker. Margaret Alma, born in 1890, is at home. Ruth Belle, born in 1892, will graduate from the Baker High School with the class of 1913. Adeline Eliza, born in 1896, became a high-school pupil in Baker in September, 1912. William Jennings, born in 1898, Eugene David, in 1900, Ceeil Gertrude, in 1902, and Edith Maria, are all in school.

The family attend the Presbyterian church, with which denomination Mr. Holman united in 1874 and his wife in 1883. He became a charter member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Durkee, Oregon, December 6, 1902, and is also a charter member of Triumph Lodge, No. 80, K. P., of Durkee, which was organized about 1900. In his political views Mr. Holman is a democrat, thus following in the footsteps of his forefathers who have for several generations been stanch advocates of the democratic party. He served both as road supervisor and constable while residing in Malheur county. That Mr. Holman is now the owner of an excellent tract of land comprising almost a quarter of a section is an indication that his has been an active and useful life. At all times he has commanded the respect and good-will of his fellow townsmen by reason of his enterprise, his determination and his capability.

HUGH COSGROVE. Among the natives of Marion county who still remain within its borders is Hugh Cosgrove, a prosperous farmer, residing two miles east of St. Paul. He was born January 9, 1849, on the tract of land where now St. Paul is situated and is a son of Hugh and Mary (Roseter) Cosgrove. The father was born in the northern part of Ireland in 1802 and was brought to America at the age of six years, the family locating in Canada, where he lived until he was twenty-seven years of age. He was married in Perth, Canada, at the age of twenty-three, and in 1830 he moved to Michigan and settled near Detroit, where he remained two years. At the end of that time he went to Illinois and in 1847 came to Oregon, crossing the plains with ox teams, and on reaching The Dalles he floated the wagons down the river on rafts and drove the oxen over the trail. At the Cascades he again took the baggage and hauled it to Vancouver. At first he left the family in Vancouver and went out prospecting on the French prairies, and, buying of a British subject three hundred and twenty acres near St. Paul, he moved his family there. The next year, or in 1848, the gold fever broke out in California near Scutters Point and together with James McKay and John Kennedy he went to that region. He mined gold that summer and, making quite a considerable sum of money, returned in the fall. After placing his six daughters in a convent in Oregon City he took his wife and two sons overland to California, where he was engaged in the mercantile business at Jacksonville until 1851. Selling his store on that date, he moved to Sacramento and bought property but soon sold it and purchased a stock of goods in San Francisco, which he brought to Oregon, opening a general merchandise store on his home place, two miles east of St. Paul. He continued in this business until 1856, when he took up farming, an occupation which he followed until his death, April 10, 1901, being laid to rest on his home place. Ten children were born to this union, of whom seven are deceased, namely: Margaret; Annie and Mary, twins; Elizabeth; Caroline; James; and one boy who died in infancy. Those who are living are: Susan G., a resident of Portland; Emeline, the wife of D. F. Wagoner, of Salem, Oregon; and Hugh, of this review.

Hugh Cosgrove started out in life for himself at the age of twenty-one, working on a farm for one year and then taking up mining in Idaho. He then engaged in cattle raising, and later in stage driving, after which he returned to his home place. He had prospected a good deal and several of his mining enterprises returned fair financial results. In all he spent four years away from his present farm. The homestead which he now owns consists of one hundred and sixty-nine acres and his wife also owns three lots in Woodburn, Oregon. Mr. Cosgrove has engaged in various branches of agriculture, including dairying and the cultivation of oats, wheat, potatoes and hops, to the latter of which he has planted fifteen acres yielding him a crop, the profit on which materially adds to his income. He has also engaged in raising live stock of a high grade, making a specialty of hogs and horses.

Mr. Cosgrove was married November 16, 1885, to Mrs. Emma Clifton, who was born in St. Joseph, Missouri, in 1851, a daughter of Thomas and Mary Anna (Morgan) Stanley, both of whom were born near St. Joseph, Missouri, of Kentucky parentage. The father took up a homestead near St. Joseph and lived there until 1860, when with his family he started to cross the plains, but died on the way of lung fever. The mother came on with her brother, James Morgan, and settled in Linn county, Oregon, seven miles south of Albany, where she lived until her death in 1881. In their family were four children: Martha, the wife of Lee Kendall, of Marion county; Emma, now Mrs. Hugh Cosgrove; Noah, of Eastern Oregon; and Isabella, deceased. Mrs. Cosgrove at the time of her marriage was the widow of Thomas Clifton, whom she wedded in 1876. The three children by her first marriage are: John, who was born in 1878 and is now a resident of Alaska; Lawrence, deceased; and Annie, born November 1, 1880, who married Frank Lurze, of Vancouver, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Cosgrove were married in Albany, Oregon, and lived in Linn county one year. Then, on the death of Mr. Cosgrove's father, they moved to his farm, where they now reside. They are the parents of one child, Mary Ethel, who was born August 6, 1891, and is attending college at Mount Angel, Oregon, where she is fitting herself for the teaching of literature. In politics Mr. Cosgrove's allegiance is given to the republican party, and in religion he adheres to the Roman Catholic faith. He is widely known in his county and is highly respected by all his acquaintances.

EDWARD L. EDGERTON. The business interests of Clatskanie find a worthy representative in Edward L. Edgerton, a general merchant, who was born in Taylorville, Illinois, on the 21st of November, 1875, a son of William A. and Mary Edgerton, the former a native of Vermont and the latter of Illinois. They were married, however, at Chicago, Illinois, and for a number of years the father was upon the road as a traveling salesman. He afterward embarked in business on his own account, opening a general store in Taylorville, which he conducted for several years. The opportunities of the far west, however, attracted him and in 1881 he came to the Pacific coast country, settling in Portland, Oregon, where he lived retired. In 1885 he removed to Clatskanie, where he resided until 1900, when he went to Yamhill, where he opened a store. He is still an active factor in the business world, being now proprietor of a large mercantile establishment at Long-beach, California. In 1877 he lost his first wife and has since been married again. By his first union there were six children, of whom three are deceased, while those living are: Mrs. M. E. Page, a resident of Clatskanie; Mrs. Nellie McClure, of the state of Washington; and Edward L. The only child of the father's second marriage was Agnes Edgerton, now deceased. In 1895 the mother died and in 1902 William A. Edgerton was again married.

Edward L. Edgerton spent the first nine years of his life in the middle west and then came with his father to the Pacific coast, where he has since lived. His education was acquired in the public schools and his business training was received under his father's direction. In 1905, when thirty years of age, he started upon an independent business life and has since been proprietor of a general mercantile store in Clatskanie. He has here a well selected line of goods and makes every effort to meet the wishes of his patrons and to give to them full value received.

On the 4th of May, 1904, Mr. Edgerton was married to Miss Ethel Hill, who was born in Wisconsin and in 1891 came from that state to Portland with her parents, who are still living in the Rose city. They have but two children, their son, the younger, Leroy Hill, being still at home. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Edgerton has been blessed with one child, Leonard James, born September 7, 1907. Politically Mr. Edgerton is a republican but while he keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day, he has never sought nor desired public office as a reward for party fealty. He and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church and are people of sterling worth, being held in high regard wherever known and most of all where they are best known.

DR. LEROY ELSON DOOLITTLE, who has been engaged in the practice of medicine in Newberg for the past two years is recognized as one of the very promising younger representatives of the profession in Yamhill county. He is a native of Illinois, his birth having occurred in Lacon, on the 5th of March 1881. His parents are E. B. and Julia F. (Kimberly) Doolittle, the father having been born in Vermont in 1851 while the mother is a native of New Haven, Connecticut her birth occurring in 1853. The father is a traveling salesman and the family residence is now located at Sioux Falls, South Dakota. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Doolittle there were born two sons, the other being Herbert E., who is living at Sioux Falls.

The boyhood of Dr. Doolittle was spent in his native town, in whose common schools he acquired his elementary education. The family subsequently removed to Luverne, Minnesota, where he pursued his high-school course, being graduated in 1901. He then enrolled in the academic department of the University of Minnesota, being graduated with the degree of B. A. in the class of 1905. Having decided to become a physician, after the completion of his collegiate course he matriculated in the medical department of the same university, being awarded the degree of M. D. in 1909. In order to better qualify himself for the practical duties of his profession, Dr. Doolittle spent a year as interne in St. Luke's Hospital at St. Paul, his experiences there having proven very helpful by giving him greater confidence in himself and his powers as a practitioner. At the expiration of his term of service he came to Newberg and entered into partnership with Dr. Rankin, with whom he has ever since been associated. Although he engages in general practice, Dr. Doolittle infinitely prefers the work in surgery, in which he specialized during the entire period of his preparation. Since locating here he has had ample opportunity to manifest his skill both in medicine and surgery, and that he is a capable representative of his profession is evidenced by the extent of his practice as well as the social class his patients represent. His preparation has been very thorough in every respect, in addition to which he has the strong personality and ready sympathy so essential to success in this profession. He is a progressive man and keeps in touch with the discoveries made through modern research and scientific investigation, readily adopting in his own practice every new theory, the practicability of which has been proven to his satisfaction. He is too conservative, however, to lay aside an old method, the efficacy of which has been well tried and proven, for a more recent discovery that is yet in an experimental stage.

On the 20th of March, 1911, at Spokane, Washington, Dr. Doolittle was united in marriage to Miss Bessie Kent, who was born and reared in Ely, Minnesota, and is a daughter of Captain Frank Kent, vice president and superintendent of the Chandler mine in the Vermilion range. Dr. Doolittle met his wife while an interne in St. Luke's hospital, where she was a trained nurse.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Doolittle are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America, and also the Phi Beta Pi, with which he became identified during his university days. In his political views he is independent, giving his support to the men and measures he feels are best qualified to subserve the interests of the majority. In June, 1910, Dr. Doolittle passed the examination at Fort Snelling entitling him to the rank of first lieutenant in the medical corps of the United States army, and has five years in which to accept, but at the present time feels that he prefers a private practice. His decision in this respect would appear to be a wise one from a personal point of view, as judging from present indications his future gives every assurance of being a most promising one.

ALEXANDER MURRAY, who owns a ranch of eleven hundred acres two and a half miles below Dayville, is one of the well known pioneer stockmen of Grant county, of which he has been a resident for more than forty years. He was born in Lairg, Scotland, on the 24th of April, 1849, and is a son of Robert and Ellen (McDonald) Murray, natives of the same place. He is descended from a long line of sturdy Highland ancestors, whose energies were largely devoted to agricultural pursuits and stock-raising. His paternal grandfather lived to attain the venerable age of ninety-one years, while his father was seventy-seven at the time of his demise. The mother, who was the only daughter in a family of fifteen children, also lived to attain a ripe old age. Both parents passed their entire lives in the old country. The father had two brothers, William and Alexander Murray, who came to America in early life and established a business in Buffalo, New York, which is still conducted under their name, although they have long since passed away.

The first nineteen years in the life of Alexander Murray were passed in the land of his birth, where he received a practical education. His home was the typical Highland Scotch household, where respect and obedience is exacted of the younger members, into whose youthful minds are early instilled precepts of thrift, diligence and honesty. These qualities have become more marked with the passing of time and are the most noticeable characteristics of Mr. Murray, and without doubt have been the salient factors in promoting his success. In 1868 he left the parental home and emigrated to the United States, joining his uncles at Buffalo, with whom he remained for three years. At the expiration of that time, in 1871, he and his brother William came to Oregon by way of the isthmus, their destination being the John Day valley. They filed on land two and a half miles above Dayville, now known as the Glenshield ranch, where for ten years they engaged in stock-raising. Their place was within the district attacked by the Indians in the uprising of 1878, and they consequently suffered heavy losses at the hands of a marauding party, which raided a territory about twelve miles wide, taking from the Murray ranch alone about fourteen thousand dollars worth of stock, mostly horses. Although resistance was offered but two lives were sacrificed, two English lads, sheep-herders, being killed by the thieves just as they were crossing the John Day river. A long series of misfortunes resulted in the financial failure of the Murray Brothers in 1893, and William Murray removed to Malheur county, where two other brothers, Adam and Kenneth, are also residing. Alexander Murray subsequently came to his present ranch, where he continued his stock-raising, making a specialty of sheep.

ALEXANDER MURRAY

ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

His sheep herd has numbered as high as twenty-nine thousand head, while he has had a thousand cattle and about four hundred horses. He is prospering in his business and is interested in Malheur county property with his brothers, while he formerly owned the section of land on which Dayville is now located, there erecting the first building, a frame store room.

On the 30th of June, 1886, Mr. Murray was married to Miss Jennie Mitchell, a native of Scotland, and to them have been born five sons: Robert, Adam, Kenneth, Alexander and John. The second named is a graduate of the Hill Military Academy, which institution two of the other boys attended for two years.

Mr. Murray is one of the substantial citizens of Grant county, where he is highly esteemed and has many friends. He is a man of high standards of conduct, upright principles and incorruptible integrity, as has been manifested times innumerable during the long period of his residence here and is accorded by all who know him the respect such qualities command.

HENRY A. DUGGAN is proprietor of the largest general mercantile store in Clatskanie, having developed his business along progressive lines that have secured to him an extensive patronage. Each year chronicles a growing success and the position that he has already won in commercial circles argues well for the future. His birth occurred in east Tennessee, March 25, 1863, his parents being H. D. and Susan (Ware) Duggan, both of whom were natives of the same state, where they were reared and married, there residing until 1877, when they removed to McDonald county, Missouri, where they resided for three years. The succeeding nine years were passed in Cass county, Missouri, after which they became residents of Allen county, Kansas, where they still reside, their home being in Iowa. The father is now sixty-eight years and the mother sixty-two years of age. To some extent ever since his marriage he has engaged in preaching the gospel as a minister of the Baptist church and has also followed farming but is now living retired from agricultural pursuits, spending his days in quiet at Iowa. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Duggan were born thirteen children of whom twelve are still living: Henry A.; J. R., of Allen county, Kansas; Sarah J., the wife of J. M. Rhodes, of Oklahoma City; Mrs. Elizabeth E. Thompson, of Moran, Kansas; W. J., also living in Moran; Emma, the wife of Ed Irving, of Iola, Kansas; Ellen, the wife of Ed Hart, of Bartlesville, Oklahoma; Birtie, the wife of Ira Downs, of Pawnee Rock, Kansas; Edward, of Lawrence, Kansas; Louis, of LaHarpe, Kansas; Everett and Russell, both of Clatskanie.

Henry A. Duggan spent his youthful days amid the pleasant environment of a cultured home, acquiring his education in the public schools and devoting much of his time to assisting his father in the operation of the home farm. When twenty-six years of age he started out in business life on his own account, taking up farm work in Kansas, where he followed agricultural pursuits until 1900. He then came to Oregon, settling in Columbia county, where he secured a homestead claim which he improved until after he had secured his title, and then sold. Turning his attention to commercial pursuits he formed a partnership with a Mr. Simmons for the establishment and conduct of a general mercantile store. Success attended the new venture and in 1911 Mr. Duggan purchased his partner's interest and is now sole proprietor of the largest store in the town, carrying an extensive and well selected line of goods. His business methods are strictly reliable and his enterprise and modern ideas constitute the basis on which his prosperity is founded. He has not confined his attention, however, entirely to one department of labor but is connected with various business concerns which are important elements in the upbuilding and progress of the community. He is a stockholder of the Creamery Company, also of the Telephone system and of the Gold Hill Mining Company of southern Oregon. He is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of land in the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico; fifty acres in the state of Oaxaca, Mexico; and has five acres planted to rubber producing trees in the state of Chiapas, Mexico. He is likewise financially interested in the Consolidated Typewriter & Telegraph Company and in the British Columbia Coal Mining Company operating near Vancouver, and his property interests in Clatskanie include a commodious and beautiful residence.

Mr. Duggan was married, October 13, 1889, to Miss Eva M. Marvin, who was born in Neosha county, Kansas, a daughter of George and Rosa (Culbertson) Marvin, the former a native of Illinois and the latter of Des Moines, Iowa. They were married in Kansas and there resided until the father's death in 1887. The mother still survives and is now living in Adrian, Missouri. The Marvin family were among the prominent early settlers of that state and the grandparents of Mrs. Duggan there passed away after having made their home in the Sunflower state for many years. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. George Marvin were five children: Mrs. Duggan; Edward, of Portland, Oregon; Robert, living in Clatskanie; Grace, the wife of Claud Lewis, and Estella, of Clatskanie. After losing her first husband Mrs. Marvin was married to Mote Wright and by that marriage had a son, Frank Wright, now of Adrian, Missouri. Her second husband died in 1900 and she has since become the wife of John Adams. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Duggan have been born seven children: Beulah E., who died at the age of two years; Lela V., born on the 10th of May, 1894, now attending high school and also studying music; H. Leon, who was born in October, 1898, and is now attending school; Ethel M. and Robert E., both now deceased; Susan E. R., born in May, 1902; and Henry E., born in December, 1906.

The Duggan family hold membership in the Baptist church in which Mr. Duggan is serving as deacon. In the work of the church he takes an active and helpful interest and is also in full sympathy with the beneficent and fraternal spirit of the different associations to which he belongs, holding membership in Clatskanie Lodge, F. & A. M., and also with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Foresters. Politically he is a republican but while he gives expression to his belief by his ballot he does not seek nor desire office, preferring to concentrate his energy upon his business interests, the capable direction of which has brought him substantial returns while the reliability of his methods has gained for him the confidence and good-will of all.

RICHARD PATTERSON, who is a native of Marion county, was born near Silverton, March 9, 1857, the son of John and Sarah Ann (Stout) Pickering Patterson. The maternal grandfather and grandmother were both natives of Tennessee, the grandfather being of German descent. The father, John Patterson, was born in Pennsylvania, of Irish parentage, and was one of a family of seven children, all of whom are deceased. He crossed the plains from Missouri in 1845 and came directly to Oregon, settling in Marion county near Abiqua, where for a number of years he kept a place for emigrants to stay until they should decide upon a location. Later he took up a donation land claim of six hundred and forty acres but being a bachelor at that time, was forced to give up three hundred and twenty acres. After his marriage he lived on this land until 1866 when, selling it, he moved across Abiqua creek and bought an old donation land claim of one hundred and sixty acres which belonged to a Mr. Beardslee. There he and his wife lived the remainder of their days, he dying in 1869 and she in 1868. During his early days in Oregon he volunteered his services to the government to fight the Indians, who at that time had captured a number of emigrants and had massacred Whitman. This uprising was known as the Cayuse war and lasted about six or eight months. Mr. Patterson, buying his own horse and equipment, joined a force of fifty volunteers which was later increased to five hundred. He served as a member of Companies A and C, under Captain Maxim, and no remuneration was ever received by him for his services or for the loss of his horse and equipment.

In 1853 John Patterson was united in marriage to Sarah Ann (Stout) Pickering, in Marion county, Oregon. She was one of a family of five children, all of whom are now deceased. At the time of her marriage to Mr. Patterson she was the widow of Mr. Pickering, whom she had wedded in Missouri. His death took place while he was on the plains en route to the far west and he was buried where he died in a very deep grave to prevent the wolves from digging up the body. By the mother's first marriage three children were born: William, of California; Cordelia, the wife of Daniel Markham, both of whom are now deceased; and Sereldia, who married a Mr. Wood, of California, and died one year after her marriage. John and Sarah (Stout) Pickering Patterson were the parents of four children: Elizabeth, of Portland, who is the widow of James Down; Richard, of this review; Samuel, who is a farmer in Ontario, Oregon; and Nancy, who died in 1878, and who was the wife of James Bowman, of Idaho.

Richard Patterson was twelve years of age at the time of his father's death, the mother having passed away the previous year. He stayed with a neighbor, Andrew Shepherd, for six months, or until the marriage of his older sister, after which he lived with his brother-in-law for three years. He did various kinds of work until he was twenty-seven years of age and then purchased his home place, where he lived until 1898, when he sold it and rented two farms, one of which was the property of Judge Hubbard. In 1904 he bought his present farm of one hundred acres.

On the 5th of November, 1883, at Silverton, Richard Patterson was united in marriage to Miss Lola Desart, who was a native of Idaho, born in 1864, while her parents were crossing the plains. She was the daughter of George and Melissa (Armstrong) Desart, both natives of Illinois. After crossing the plains the parents first located at Boise, Idaho, and a year and a half later, in 1866, came to Oregon and settled on Lower Abiqua creek, in Marion county. In 1899 they removed to Salem, where the father died in 1903 and where the mother now resides. To Mr. and Mrs. Patterson eight children have been born. Raymond, born December 30, 1884, resides with his parents and helps to operate the home place. He has a business-college education. Chester died at the age of six years. Mabel was born May 6, 1889. Rosie, born August 24, 1891, is at home with her parents and has a high-school education. Nellie was born July 27, 1894, and is now attending high school. Wilhelmina was born August 5, 1897, and died May 16, 1899. Pearl, born December 10, 1900, is now a student in the public schools. Ruth died in infancy.

Mr. Patterson is a republican and very strong in his convictions of the principles of the party. Although he has neither sought nor desired office, he was at one time road supervisor. He has always given much time to the interests of education and has advocated those principles which tend towards the good of the community, and as a result he is well known as one of the highly honored citizens of the county.

JULIAN E. JOHNSON, who is conducting a photograph studio at Hillsboro, to which endeavor he has devoted his attention for over twenty years, was born in Buffalo county, Wisconsin, in 1861, his parents being Mordecai and Lydia (Curtis) Johnson, both of whom were natives of the state of New York, where they were married and lived for more than four years.

They then removed to Wisconsin where the father died at the age of eighty-three years, while the mother passed away soon afterward in Minnesota, at the same age. In their family were eleven children: Annette, who died at the age of sixty-five years; Decatur, who died of typhoid fever while serving in the United States army; Pulaski, living in Wisconsin; Elizabeth, who died in 1908 at the age of sixty years; Jane, the widow of Alonzo Lewis; Jasper, whose home is in McGregor, Minnesota; Adelaide, the wife of B. F. Holcomb, of Mondovi, Wisconsin; Hartwell, who passed away when twenty years of age; Romanus, living at Barnum, Minnesota; Julian E., and George A., of St. Paul.

The educational opportunities which Julian E. Johnson enjoyed were those offered by the public schools of his native state, and when nineteen years of age he started out in life for himself. For ten years he engaged in teaching school and then took up the study of photography, in which field of business he has since continued. He has followed that profession in Minnesota, being located successively at McGregor, Morgan and Little Falls. He next went to Oakes, North Dakota, and in the year 1907 arrived in Oregon, making his way to Portland, where he spent two years. In 1909 he came to Hillsboro, where he has since remained, and presides over a well appointed photographic studio, using the latest improved processes in his work. He gives close study to the effect of light and shade and has the happy faculty of so placing his patrons at their ease that he gets most natural pictures.

In 1882 Mr. Johnson was married to Miss Caroline Johnson, who was the first white child born in Brown county, Minnesota, her parents being Isaac and Almina (Hewett) Johnson. Her father was born in Canada and in his childhood days came with his parents to the United States. His mother was a native of New York and they were married in Michigan, after which they removed to Minnesota where they spent their remaining days, the father following the occupation of farming in that state. In their family are the following children who are still living: George, a resident of Sleepy Eye, Minnesota; Permelia, the wife of George Miller, of McGregor, Minnesota; Charlotte, the wife of Merrill Tolman, of Morgan, Minnesota; Lillie Porter and Mrs. Johnson. Two children, Permelia and Frances, have passed away. Unto the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have been born five children: Cora, who was born in 1884 and is the wife of Fred Strom, of Ocean Falls, British Columbia; Florence, who was born in 1886 and is the wife of Lee Witheril, of Portland, Oregon; Viola, who was born in 1896, is attending high school; Dewey, born in 1899; and Rose Selma, in 1903.

Mr. Johnson and his family hold membership in the Presbyterian church and he belongs also to the Mutual Brotherhood of America and the Modern Woodmen of America. He votes with the republican party and is in hearty sympathy with its principles. He has never been an office-seeker yet has filled several county offices, the duties of which he has discharged with promptness and fidelity. His life has been a useful, active and busy one and whatever success he has achieved has come to him as the reward of ability and industry. Those who meet him find him a social, genial gentleman, and his good qualities win for him the warm regard of those with whom he comes in contact.

AARON W. NUSOM. Through improvement of the opportunities which Oregon offers in agricultural lines Aaron W. Nusom has become one of the substantial citizens of Marion county. He is now residing upon his farm six miles southwest of Gervais on the Fairfield and Salem road. His birth occurred in New York in 1859, and when he was but one year of age his father enlisted in the Federal army and served until the close of the war four years later. The father was a native of Ireland but came to the United States at the early age of thirteen years. For several years he was employed in various positions, until he had finally saved enough money to purchase property in New York state. He was married in that state to Tirza Jones, but shortly after their marriage they removed to Kansas and lived there for twenty years before coming west to Brooks. Here they resided until their deaths, the father's occurring in 1907 and the mother's in 1899. To them seven children were born: Mary and William, deceased; Aaron W., the subject of this sketch; Lucy, deceased; Sarah, who is the wife of John Ridinger who is living near Gervais, Oregon; Lola, who is the wife of William Hoover, of Tillamook, Oregon; and Robert, a resident of Brooks, Oregon.

Little occurred to vary the ordinary routine of school and farm life during the boyhood and youth of Aaron Nusom. He remained at home until he was twenty-two years of age at which time he took up a homestead. He immediately built a home for himself upon it and after his marriage settled there for two years. During this time he made many improvements upon the property, and although he was winning a good measure of success in his pursuit he gave it up to enter the mercantile business. He engaged in this undertaking for five years but at the end of that time disposed of it and removed to Oregon where he now has forty-four acres of valuable land. When he first arrived in this state he rented forty acres of hop land and in 1905 purchased forty-four acres which were in an unimproved condition. He immediately set about clearing away the stumps and timber and at the present time he has fifteen acres planted to hops and the remaining acreage set out in peaches and loganberries. His agricultural pursuits have been highly successful and because of his perseverance and indefatigable energy he has already brought his land to such a state of productivity that it is not only remunerative but also affords its owner extreme gratification.

In 1885 Mr. Nusom was married to Miss Etta Brown, whose birth occurred in 1870 and who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, the father a native of Indiana and the mother of Pennsylvania, of German descent. To Mr. and Mrs. Brown five children were born: Mrs. Nusom; Daisy, who is the wife of Edward Williams, of Carthage, Illinois; Helen, of Bowen, Illinois; George, who is living in Brooks, Oregon; and Cora, who is the wife of Marcus Dunn, of Albany, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Nusom seven children have been born: Grace, who died at the age of six years; Ella, whose death occurred when she was but four years of age; Alberta, who was born in 1891 and who has been given the full advantages of a public-school education; Walter, who was born in 1894, and who is attending school; Lola, whose birth occurred in 1896 and who is a student in the Albany high school and has also received a musical education; and Frances and Allyn, whose births occurred in 1899 and 1902 respectively, and who are attending school.

In politics Mr. Nusom gives his support to the democratic party, and is one of the stanch and enthusiastic supporters of the democracy in his district. Although he has never desired the honors or emoluments of office he has accepted such positions as would give him opportunity to further the educational advantages in his community. He holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America and is also a member of the Christian church. He is one of the sturdy and thrifty agriculturists of Marion county, and has shown remarkable foresight in cultivating his property and also in providing for the future welfare of his family in case of any misfortune occurring to him. At present he is heavily insured in the New York Life Insurance Company, and has so arranged his business interests and activities that his family will always be well provided for. The esteem and respect of his neighbors are accorded him because of his high regard for the rights and opinions of others, and because of the integrity which he displays in all business, social and political relations.

LOUIS M. HESSE. One of the finest farms of Washington county is the property of Louis M. Hesse, who in the cultivation of his place manifests a spirit of progressiveness that has led to the development of the property along the most practical and modern lines. He has been a lifelong resident of Oregon, representing one of the old pioneer families of the state. His birth occurred in Forest Grove, September 16, 1877. His father, Christopher F. Hesse, was born in Hesse, Germany, in 1849, a son of Jacob and Margaret Hesse, who came to America with their family in 1850, settling in Clinton county, Illinois, where they resided until March, 1876. They then removed to Oregon, renting land near Forest Grove for two years, after which Jacob Hesse purchased two hundred and forty-two acres of the Scholl donation claim, upon which he and his wife spent their remaining days, her death occurring in September, 1882, while Jacob Hesse passed away, January 27, 1893. Of their family of six children three are still living: Henry, now a resident of Hillsboro, Oregon; Christopher F.; and William J., of Pasco, Washington. Those deceased are Mary, Dorothy and one who died in infancy.

Christopher F. Hesse was only about a year old when the family emigrated to America and upon his father's farm in Illinois he was reared, continuing to assist in the cultivation of the home place there until the family came to Oregon. Following the arrival in Washington county, Jacob Hesse rented land and then purchased property, and Christopher Hesse remained with him until his death. He then came into possession of the old homestead, already having become interested in the same. He is today the owner of two hundred and forty-two acres of that property and has added thereto from time to time until his holdings now aggregate seven hundred and thirty-five acres, upon which are four different sets of farm buildings and improvements. Six hundred acres of the land was under a high state of cultivation and the place is pleasantly and conveniently located about fifteen miles southwest of Portland. The home of Christopher Hesse is located in township 2, south, range 2, west. He is accounted one of the prosperous farmers of this section of the state and his enterprise and capable management have constituted the source of his success. His political allegiance has always been given to the republican party and, while he has never been an office seeker, he has served as a member of the school board for fifteen years. He and his family are of the Lutheran faith. In 1872 he married Elizabeth Hesse, who was born in Germany and came to America in 1870, the only one of her family to cross the Atlantic, her father and mother having died in Germany during her early girlhood. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Hesse have been born four children: William G., who was born December 24, 1873, and is living on a part of the old homestead in Washington county; Louis M., our subject, who is the second of the family; Henry T., who was born September 13, 1879, and is married and also lives on his father's land; and Emma E., born April 30, 1884, who was married December 2, 1908, to Walter Heaton, who was born in Council Grove, Kansas, August 27, 1879, and is a son of John and Hortense (Robison) Heaton, who now reside upon a farm in Washington county. To Mr. and Mrs. Walter Heaton has been born a son, Clarence Elwood, on October 19, 1910.

The second son, Louis M. Hesse, whose name introduces this review, pursued his education in the common schools near his father's home and in the Portland Business College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1907, being thus well qualified for the practical duties of life and the conduct of his business interests. He was born

MR. AND MRS. L. M. HESSE

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

in Washington county and he has always been identified with agricultural interests, determining to make his life work the occupation to which he had been reared. He is now the owner of one hundred and fifty-three acres, constituting one of the finest farms of Washington county. Its proximity to Portland makes the advantages of the city easily accessible and the nearer towns afford him a market for his produce. His farm is cultivated according to the most progressive modern methods and annually large crops are gathered as the result of the care and labor which he bestows upon his fields.

On the 19th of May, 1904, Mr. Hesse was united in marriage to Miss Etta Christ, a daughter of Henry Christ, one of the pioneer settlers of Vancouver, arriving here in 1852. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Hesse is a hospitable one and its good cheer is greatly enjoyed by their friends, who are many. In his political views Mr. Hesse is an earnest republican and has served as constable of his precinct. His wife is a member of the Episcopal church. Both are held in high esteem and justly merit the kindly regard and friendship entertained for them.

EDWIN BRUCE GAYLORD, residing at Carson, is a native of Oregon and a representative of one of the pioneer families, his parents, Sarah E. and Orange Gaylord, having made their way across the plains to Oregon City in 1852. It was seven years later that the birth of Edwin B. Gaylord occurred at The Dalles, in Wasco county. A decade before this, or in 1849, his father had left Illinois and by way of New York and the isthmus route had journeyed to California, arriving at San Francisco, then a city of tents, in February, 1850. After looking over the state somewhat he concluded to make his way to Oregon and took passage on a sailing vessel, which arrived at Astoria after a voyage of six weeks, the long delay being caused by adverse winds and storms. As carpenters were in demand he began work at his trade, remaining at Astoria through the winter, during which time he received eight dollars per day for his labor. The next season with his pockets full of fifty dollar gold pieces, which the miners called slugs, he started for Illinois with the intention of bringing his little family to the northwest and establishing his home permanently in Oregon. The return trip was made by way of the water route as a passenger on the first steamer that the Vanderbilt line put on the route to New York. After reaching his Illinois home he at once began making preparations for the removal of the family to Oregon and as previously stated arrived in Oregon City in 1852 after a long, tedious and difficult journey across the plains. A settlement was later made at The Dalles, where the family remained until the fall of 1862, when they started thence for Idaho. The winter was spent a short distance below the present site of Boise City and in the spring the family continued on their way to Idaho City but in the succeeding fall returned to Boise. The father had driven a herd of milch cows from Oregon and engaged in dairying, receiving [illegible] prices for everything in that line. Butter sold for a dollar per pound and other things in proportion. Everyone that transacted business to any extent at all had in his possession scales for weighing out the gold dust for [illegible]. Nothing sold for less than twenty-five cents, a common red apple readily bringing that price. In the work of development and improvement in pioneer days Mr. Gaylord, the father, took an active and helpful part. At one time he was a candidate for sheriff of Ada county on the republican ticket but his opponent, a man by the name of Upleyer, stood in with the gang and was elected but later he was hanged by the vigilantes on Squaw creek before his term of office had expired because he had given aid to certain members of the lawless element in the community. The Gaylord family, indeed, took a helpful and prominent part in the work of early development in the different localities in which they lived.

Edwin B. Gaylord early became familiar with the hardships and privations as well as the pleasures of pioneer life. The first school which he attended and the first held in Boise City was taught by Mrs. Savage, the wife of Austin Savage, who for a number of years was collector of internal revenue for Idaho. He did not attend school after he was thirteen years of age, however, and about that time accepted the position of "devil" in the printing house of the Albany Register, which was then edited by Colonel Van Cleve. At sixteen years of age he considered himself a journeyman printer and accepted a [illegible] on the Boise City Statesman. At that time, 1875, modes of travel in the northwest were somewhat primitive. Passengers had to be transferred from a boat to the portage railroad at the Cascades, then back to a boat for The Dalles, thence by rail to Celilo and by boat again to Umatilla landing, from which point Mr. Gaylord, who had traveled in this manner preceded by stage to Boise. During the Nez Perces Indian war Mr. Gaylord volunteered under Ruby Bolton, who was made chief of scouts by General Howard during the campaign. When General Bernard's command came upon the Indian camp just at daybreak at Silver Creek and made a charge through the camp and took it, Mr. Gaylord's horse was shot from under him and he had to make his way out as best he could. Out of the forty Indians who were killed four had to be scalped to [illegible] was sent as a scout to the Bitter Root and at the close of the Nez Perces war he was presented [illegible] with a beautifully engraved gold watch in recognition of meritorious conduct and valor.

In 1881 Mr. Gaylord married Miss Fannie [illegible], the second daughter of Cyrus Jacobs of Boise City, who was a pioneer of Oregon and Idaho. He located in Idaho and for a time was engaged in merchandising there. For [illegible] years Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord traveled life's journey happily together and were then separated by the death of the wife in 1907.

Mr. Gaylord has long been an exemplary representative of the Masonic fraternity, joining the lodge in Boise City in 1881. Since the early days when he started out in newspaper work he has engaged in various lines of business, including merchandising, mining, stock-raising and farming. He put the first saw shingle and planing mill in the Panhandle of Baker county, then Union county, the lumber taking the place of log cabins, dirt and puncheon floors. Through his business activity and in many other ways he has contributed to the development and improvement of the sections in which he has lived and he is now engaged in farming in the vicinity of Carson, where he is pleasantly situated. He relates various interesting incidents of the early days when not only Idaho but Oregon was largely an unsettled and unimproved district and for fifty years he has been a witness of the progress and improvement of this part of the country.

CHARLES W. BROWN is a representative of the lumber industry of Oregon, being superintendent of the Hillsboro Lumber Company Mill at Hillsboro. Since attaining his majority, he has been connected with the lumber trade and is thoroughly informed concerning the business in its various phases. While he has always lived on this side of the Mississippi and has therefore ever been termed a "western man," he was born in Johnson county, Missouri, November 30, 1863. His parents are William M. and Mary (Morrow) Brown; the former a native of Indiana and the latter of Johnson county, Missouri, where their marriage was celebrated in 1862. For twenty-two years, the father remained a resident of that county and then, in 1868, brought his family to Oregon. He settled first in Yamhill county, where he resided for five years, cultivating a farm during that period. He then removed to Washington county, Oregon, where he is still living. On the 15th of August, 1911, he reached the age of three score years and ten. His wife passed away October 20, 1906, and her death was deeply regretted by many friends. In their family were six children, of whom Charles W. Brown is the eldest. The others are: J. H., now a resident of Portland; B. A., who is living in Washington county, Oregon; J. M., who died in Laurel, Washington county, when twenty-two years of age; and F. R. and F. L., both living in Washington.

Charles W. Brown was a little lad of five years when the family left his native state and came to the northwest. His youthful days were spent in his father's home, and the public schools afforded him his opportunities for acquiring an education. He was twenty years of age when he started out in business on his own account, purchasing a half-interest in a sawmill in Washington county, which he operated for a short time and then sold. He was afterward employed as head sawyer in another mill for twelve years, and then engaged in logging for five years. On the expiration of that period, he became superintendent of the mill in which he is now employed. His long connection with the lumber business has thoroughly qualified him for the responsibilities that now devolve upon him in this connection and he has made an excellent record; proving his ability to promote the interests of the house which he represents by his careful superintendence of the plant and his direction of the labors of those who serve under him.

Mr. Brown was married, October 18, 1884, the lady of his choice being Miss Katie Baker, who was born in Jefferson county, Iowa, a daughter af Zachariah and Sarah (Ross) Baker, both of whom were natives of Ohio. Following their marriage, they left the Buckeye state for Iowa, and, for sixteen years, thereafter were residents of Jefferson county, whence they came to Washington county, Oregon. Here, the father lived until 1884, when his life's labors were terminated in death. His widow still survives him and resides in Washington county at the age of seventy-six years. Their family numbered twelve children of whom ten still survive: Mrs. Mary Clow, Mrs. Jane Hill and Mrs. Emma Pelton, all of Portland; Marshall, living in Laurel, Oregon; Charles W.; Mrs. Della Heton, of Hillsboro; Lee Nicodemus, also living in Hillsboro; W. D., whose home is in Timber, Oregon; Anna McCumposy, of Mountaindale, Oregon; and Mrs. Eva Taylor, of Laurel. The two who have passed away are Lloyd and Alonzo.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Brown was blessed with a family of nine children: May, who was born March 25, 1887, and is the wife of Clyde Baker; Lloyd L., born in 1889; Grace, in 1895; Rubie, in 1897; Ray, in 1899; Roy, in 1900; Harold, who died at the age of six months; Walter, born in 1905; and Beatrice, in 1907.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown hold membership in the Christian church and his fraternal relations are with the Odd Fellows lodge of Hillsboro. Mr. Brown votes with the republican party, and is never neglectful of the duties of citizenship; yet he does not seek the rewards of office for party fealty. He has practically spent his entire life in the west; and the spirit of enterprise, which has been the dominant factor in the upbuilding of this section of the country, has been manifest in his life.

FRANK A. BIDWELL, a substantial and representative resident of Union, has been successfully identified with milling interests throughout his entire business career and is now the secretary of the Union Flouring Mill Company, proprietors of the Oregon Roller Mills. His birth occurred in Galesville, Wisconsin, on the 19th of October, 1860, his parents being Charles C. and Mary (Gilbert) Bidwell, the former a native of the state of New York. The Bidwells come of old colonial stock and their ancestors were the earliest millers and sawmill proprietors in Connecticut. The Gilberts were among the earliest pioneers of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, settling on the present site of that city at a time when the nearest postoffice was sixty miles away—at Milwaukee. Owing to the sparsely settled and undeveloped condition of the country, they were obliged to live in their wagon until they had erected a house. Calvin Bidwell, the paternal grandfather of our subject, removed to New York and spent the remaining years of his life in that state. He was awarded a contract at the time of the construction of the original Erie canal and was assisted in the work by his son, C. C. Bidwell. The latter removed to Wisconsin and in 1886 came to Oregon to join his son Frank.

It was in the year 1885 that Frank A. Bidwell made his way to this state, locating in Union, where he secured employment in the plant of the Union Milling Company. The milling industry has claimed his attention throughout his entire business career. He was largely instrumental in bringing the three Kiddle brothers to Oregon and is now associated with them in business under the name of the Union Flouring Mill Company. The officers of the concern are as follows: Ed. Kiddle, president; F. H. Kiddle, vice president; and F. A. Bidwell, secretary. These gentlemen are proprietors of the Oregon Roller Mills, comprising five plants in different parts of the state, all of which are financed separately and in several of which Mr. Bidwell owns stock. A sketch of Ed Kiddle, together with a complete history of the Oregon Roller Mills, appears on another page of this work.

In May, 1886, in Missouri, Mr. Bidwell was united in marriage to Miss Fannie E. McCormick, a native of Ohio. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to the blue lodge, the chapter, the commandery and the shrine. He has filled all of the chairs in the chapter. He is also a member of the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he has served as a member of the city council and also as a member of the school board. His has been an active and useful life, crowned with success and enriched by the kindly regard of many friends, who recognize and appreciate his worth.

CLAUDE H. NOSLER. The name of Claude H. Nosler is prominently connected with farming development in Coos county, where his energy and enterprise along progressive lines has resulted in the partial ownership of six hundred acres of fine farming land. He is operating his farm in conjunction with his father, Amos Nosler, and is interested in many different phases of activity in the town of Bridge and in the surrounding country. He is a native son of Oregon, born in Coquille, Coos county, June 21, 1875. He is a son of Amos L. and Annie R. (Hatcher) Nosler. His father is one of the prominent and representative farmers in this section of the state and a more extended sketch of him appears on another page of this work.

Claude H. Nosler received his education in the public schools of Coos county and supplemented his primary studies by a course in the Coquille Academy. He is a graduate of the Monmouth State Normal College and by wise use of every educational opportunity he fitted himself for teaching. He followed this profession for eleven years in Coquille and Myrtle Point and was prominent and successful as an educator. He was principal of the schools in Coquille for two years and held the same position in Myrtle Point for three years. When he was thirty years of age he abandoned the profession and in connection with his father bought three hundred and twenty acres of land located eleven miles up the river on the stage road to Roseburg from Myrtle Point. His original purchase constitutes a part of the town of Bridge and upon this Mr. Nosler and his father are now residing. They have brought the property to a high state of development and have operated it along progressive lines. At various periods they have added to their holdings and today their farm of six hundred acres constitutes one of the model properties on the Coquille river. They also own twenty acres of orchard land in the same vicinity. Mr. Nosler also owns an interest in a three hundred and twenty acre ranch valued at two thousand dollars and is active in its cultivation. He makes a specialty of horticulture and stock raising and is interested in every phase of activity looking toward the future prosperity of his section. For many years he operated a general store and postoffice in association with his father and until July, 1912, they conducted a telephone station and were prominently connected with the building of various telephone lines throughout the county.

June 29, 1898, Mr. Nosler was united in marriage to Miss Emma A. Cole, a native of Waldo Hills, Marion county, Oregon, and a daughter of John and Mary (Reasoner) Cole, both natives of Illinois. The father lived in that state until he crossed the plains to Oregon, making the journey with ox teams in 1852. He settled in Marion county, where he later married Mrs. Mary A. Reasoner Condit, the widow of Alva Condit. To Mrs. Cole's first marriage was born one son, Alva Condit, Jr., who is now a resident of Clackamas county. Mrs. Cole came with her parents to Oregon in the early days of the settlement of the district and spent her childhood in this state. To her second marriage were born six children, all of whom are still living. Abner, who resides in Aurora, Marion county, Oregon; John, of Molalla, Oregon; Nathan, of Aurora, Marion county; Emma, the wife of our subject; Christopher, who maintains his home at Bellingham, Washington; and Rose, the wife of Edward Mabry, of Walla Walla, Washington.

The wife of our subject received her education in the public schools of Marion and Clackamas counties. She is a graduate of the Monmouth State Normal School and taught for several years in her native section and for two years in Portland, Oregon. She and her husband are the parents of three children: C. Lyle, born April 27, 1900; Bryce, whose birth occurred on the 17th of June, 1907; and Alma A., born May 4, 1909.

Mr. Nosler's religious belief is in accord with the Christian church and with his wife and family also attends. In his political preference he is a stanch supporter of the republican party. His farm, highly developed and richly productive; his large herd of sheep scientifically cared for, his modern barns and outbuildings set in the midst of his large acres, pay tribute to his agricultural efficiency and skill and mark him as an individual force in the development of a great farming section.

FLOYD L. OFFICER owns a valuable ranch of three hundred and twenty acres, three-quarters of a mile below Dayville, where he is successfully engaged in agriculture. He represents the third generation of his family to have been identified with the progress and development of Oregon, his people having first come here in 1845. A native of Grant county, his birth occurred at Dayville, on the 24th of November, 1870, his parents being Eli Casey and Martha (Thorpe) Officer, the father from Missouri and the mother from Illinois. His paternal grand-parents were James and Eveline (Cooley) Officer, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Kentucky. They were married in Missouri and there passed the early period of their domestic life. In 1845 they crossed the plains to Oregon and the following spring the grandfather bought a donation claim twenty-five miles south of Portland and lived on it the remainder of his life. The family of Mr. and Mrs. James Officer numbered eleven children, as follows: Martha A., who is deceased; Eli Casey, the father of our subject; Susan M. and John E., both of whom are deceased; Robert V., Francis M., Joseph Thomas and Nancy, all of whom are deceased; Mrs. Snyder, who is more fully mentioned in the sketch of A. P. Snyder; Ellen, deceased; and David.

In 1861 Eli C. Officer, together with one of his brothers, came to the John Day valley, bringing with them the first flock of sheep ever brought into this section of the state. He located on a claim a half mile above the present site of Dayville, and there for twenty years he engaged in raising cattle and sheep. In 1881 he disposed of this property to the present owner, E. Stewart, and removed to he filed on a homestead. There he continued the Basin, ten miles below Dayville, where his stock-raising until 1898, when he passed away at the age of sixty-three years. In common with the majority of the pioneers of that period he endured many hardships and unusual experiences. In his youth he joined a party of government surveyors and with them went from The Dalles up the Columbia to the Snake river, covering a large portion of Washington and Oregon. On one occasion their camp was raided by the Indians, who relieved them of the greater portion of their supplies, and for thirty days they subsisted on "cricket" bread, which is made from a mixture of roots and dried crickets, and cayuse meat. Finally word was conveyed to The Dalles, and a relief train was sent to their rescue. Mr. Officer was very fond of reading and not only subscribed for many local publications but for a varied assortment of papers and periodicals published throughout the country. His children always being surrounded by good literature, thus acquired a taste for study and reading and are generally well informed and thoroughly conversant with the topics of the day. The family of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Officer numbered thirteen children, our subject being the ninth in order of birth.

Reared on a ranch at a time when his section of Oregon was but sparsely settled and little provision had been made for educational facilities, the schooling of Floyd L. Officer was confined to the three months' session held in his home district during the winter. During his boyhood he began to assist in the herding of sheep, and after attaining maturity he engaged in sheep shearing, following this business for sixteen years. He subsequently filed on a homestead in the Basin, which he developed together with a desert claim, his holdings aggregating six hundred acres. He there engaged in cattle and sheep raising with good success until 1910, when he disposed of his interests and bought the Highland and Robinson ranches, three-quarters of a mile below Dayville, where he is now residing. His present holding comprises three hundred and twenty acres, mostly bottom land and all under irrigation. It is rich, fertile soil, easily cultivated and highly productive, and in every way well adapted to the purpose for which Mr. Officer is using it. He is a man of progressive ideas, which he carries out in a practical and systematic manner, exercising good judgment and foresight in his undertakings.

In 1898, Mr. Officer was married to Miss Sylvia Fitzgerald, who is a native of Iowa, her people having been among the early settlers of Salem, and to them have been born four daughters: Flossie L., Vera R., Eva Alberta, and Ruby Ruth, who is deceased.

Mr. Officer has been recently made a member of Blue Mountain Lodge, No. 27, A. F. & A. M. He is one of the substantial and enterprising citizens of Grant county, in the progress and development of which he takes an active interest by co-operating in promoting its various public utilities and advancing the welfare of the community generally.

BERT LEVI JONES. To the vast majority of Americans good citizenship means industry and reliability with a more or less active interest in the measures which are calculated to promote general prosperity. Mr. Jones is endowed with the qualities which the term good citizenship implies, and his energies are engaged in the work of the farm, his property consisting of one hundred acres seven and one-half miles southwest of Gervais on the River and Waconda road. This is a well cultivated farm and gives every evidence of a life of industry and thrift on the part of its owner. Mr. Jones was born on the 21st of April, 1886, near Wheatland, Oregon, his parents being Thomas B. and Mary O. (Coonse) Jones. Thomas Jones purchased his father's donation land claim and cultivated it throughout his active career, and it is upon this property that Bert L. Jones is now residing.

The grandparents of Bert Levi Jones came to Oregon from Missouri where they were married. They crossed the plains in 1849 as members of one of the parties of gold seekers going to California in that year. After remaining in that state for a year, however, they came to Marion county, Oregon, and took up a donation land claim of three hundred and twenty acres. This was one of the smallest claims given out that year, and because of its undesirable situation was the only property vacant at the time of their arrival. The grandparents lived upon this claim until their retirement, when they removed to Portland and made that city their home until they passed away. To them nine children were born: Paul, who is residing in Portland and has three children; Claude and Sam, both deceased; William, who is a resident of Salem, Oregon; Thomas B., who is the father of Bert L. Jones; Mary, who is making her home in Portland; Ida, who is the wife of William Bracket, of San Francisco, California; and two who died in infancy. Mary O. (Coonse) Jones was born in Marion county in 1857 and was one of six children. Her parents, Felix Lagrunda and Lucinda (Gibson) Coonse, were both natives of Missouri and were married in that state. They crossed the plains as members of a party of hardy pioneers and took up a homestead near Parkersville, Oregon. They had eleven children, two of whom survive: Mrs. Mary O. Jones; and Kily, of Lake View, Oregon. The father died in 1878, at the age of sixty-five, and the mother in 1895 when seventy-seven years of age. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Jones occurred in 1874, and to that union five children were born: Wiley Alva, whose birth occurred in 1878 and who is living in Joseph, Oregon, is married and has two children; Silas Ray, of Marion county, who was born in 1880, is married and has one child; Pearl, whose birth occurred in 1882 and who passed away in 1902; Bert L., the subject of this review; and Alta Lucinda, who was born on the 18th of November, 1893.

FLOYD L. OFFICER

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

After Bert L. Jones finished his education in the common schools of Marion county he assisted his father in the daily duties on the home farm until he was twenty years of age. At that time he began to work independently, for the first four years accepting employment on various nearby farms, but after his marriage he removed to the farm upon which he is now residing. His property is highly cultivated and sowed to grain and he also engages in stock-raising. He has improved the farm considerably since he has been living upon it, and although it is not equipped with all the modern improvements it is well provided with the implements and buildings essential to highly profitable farming.

In 1909 Mr. Jones was married to Miss Wretha Whitmore, whose birth occurred on the 6th of December, 1892, a daughter of William H. and Angie Eva (Manning) Whitmore, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of West Virginia. The parents were married in Hillsboro, Oregon, in 1889, and immediately afterward settled permanently in Yamhill county. The father was a soldier in the Civil war, serving in Lee's army. To Mr. and Mrs. Whitmore four children were born: Mrs. Jones; Leona, whose birth occurred in 1894 and who is the wife of Giles A. Winchester, of California; Herbert M., who is residing with his mother in Anacortes, Washington, and whose birth occurred in 1898 in British Columbia; and Ervin, who is deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Jones one child has been born, Herbert Benton, whose birth occurred on the 1st of May, 1911.

In politics Mr. Jones gives his support to the republican party because, after an intelligent study of the various platforms offered by the different political parties, he has become firmly convinced that the policies and measures of the republican party will be most conducive to good government. Both Mr. and Mrs. Jones are affiliated with the Presbyterian church. Because of their geniality and hospitality their home is one of the most prominent social centers in the neighborhood.

MARK BAILEY BUMP, a representative of the Oregon bar engaged in the active practice of law in Hillsboro, has always been a resident of this state and the western spirit of enterprise and progress find exemplification in his life. He was born in Kings Valley, Benton county, December 18, 1872. His father, Wilson Bump, was a native of the state of New York, and, in early manhood, in 1859, he crossed the plains with an ox team to California and on to Oregon, in 1861. Settling in Benton county, Oregon, he met and married Mrs. Emily C. Pitman, whose maiden name was Emily C. Allen, a native of Indiana, who had also come to the west in childhood days, locating in King's Valley in 1847. Following his marriage, Mr. Bump took up the occupation of farming in King's valley, previous to which time he had engaged in carpentry. For a long period he continued to till the soil but has now retired from active business life and is living in Forest Grove, where he and his wife occupy a pleasant home.

Mrs. Bump had two daughters by her first husband: Emma Pittman, who is living with her mother; and Mrs. Nettie Hoffman, whose husband is a well known attorney of Forest Grove. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Bump three sons were born: Mark B., Clarence L. and Daniel D., both of Forest Grove.

The work of the schoolroom, the pleasures of the playground and the duties assigned him by parental authority occupied the attention of Mark B. Bump in his youthful days. He finished his common school education when eighteen years of age and was afterward graduated from the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis. He likewise pursued a business course in Portland which included the study of shorthand, and he began to earn his own livelihood by teaching school, which profession he followed in the winter months. At the same time he taught instrumental music and, while thus engaged, he took up the study of law under the direction of Colonel John Kelsey, of Corvallis. He further pursued his reading under W. S. McFadden, of that place and on the 7th of June, 1898, at Salem, Oregon, was admitted to the bar. In 1900, Mr. Bump opened an office in Hillsboro, where for eleven years he has now been engaged in active practice and has been accorded a large and distinctively representative clientage, connecting him with much of the important litigation tried in the courts of his district. In addition to his law practice, he has realty interests, owning a tract of timber land about twenty-five miles from Hillsboro. He practices in all the state courts and also in the United States district and circuit courts.

Mr. Bump is a republican in politics, with prohibition sympathies. He strongly advocates temperance principles and, in fact, is in favor of all the projects which are recognized forces for progress and morality. He belongs to Montezuma Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Hillsboro, and to the Rebekah degree; he is also connected with the Masonic lodge of Forest Grove and the Modern Woodmen camp of that place.

FESTUS BUTTS is a retired farmer living in Baker. He was born in Des Moines county, Iowa, April 17, 1838, a son of John and Catherine Butts. The former was a Virginian by birth and his father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. John Butts was a planter and removed to Illinois and afterward to Iowa, making his way to the Platte purchase, where he bought land about 1836. He was married in Virginia about 1830 and to him and his wife were born seven children. Lewis, the eldest, born about 1832, married Elizabeth Constable in the Willamette valley of Oregon and they had two sons of whom Henry Butts married a Miss Davis in the Willamette valley, where his children, two sons and three daughters, are yet living. Mary Ann was the wife of Sanford Wilcox living near Forest Grove, Oregon, and they had three sons and three daughters. Festus Butts is the third of the family. Jacob married Miss Sarah Dixon and they have five sons and four daughters. Melva is the wife of Elijah McKinney of Newport, Oregon, and they have three daughters and a son. Annice is the wife of Newton McClanahan who came to Oregon in 1852 and was a large landowner and successful stock-raiser. They were married in the fall of 1859 and came to Baker county in 1862, residing on Burnt river where Mr. McClanahan engaged in farming and stock-raising until 1908. He then sold out, retired from business and removed to Ashland, Oregon, where he died March 5, 1910, at the age of eighty-four years and one day. Sarah became Mrs. Hall and had six sons and a daughter. The whole family reside near Gaston, Oregon. Lewis Butts and Mary Ann Wilcox, the two eldest of these children, are deceased. The father crossed the plains from Iowa to Oregon with ox teams in 1845, accompanied by his family. This was the largest train of emigrants that had started to Oregon up to that time, there being one hundred and forty-five wagons in the train. The federal government furnished a special escort of about one hundred and twenty-five United States dragoons that traveled with them as far as Boise, Idaho, where the American Fur Company had established a post. Noted members of that party of emigrants were Samuel Parker, David Tethrow, W. G. T. Vault, Herman Lewis, Captain Stewart and James Noble. After reaching Boise the train continued on for two or three days and then divided, about forty wagons going forward under James Meek on what he told them would be a cut-off, while the remainder journeyed by way of Burnt river and the Powder river valley, following the old route to The Dalles. The Butts family went with the Meek party and endured great hardships. The way was so difficult that many became dissatisfied and one night Meek left the camp, fearing personal violence. Only one man, however, died as a result of his hardships, his death being caused by overeating when he reached The Dalles, his weakened stomach being unable to stand a heavy meal. While on the Meek cut-off Mrs. James Noble found the gold that gave rise to the famous Blue Bucket diggings.

Mr. Butts, instead of taking up land, purchased six hundred and forty acres upon which some improvements had been made, paying seven hundred dollars. This place, located near Forest Grove, is said today to be worth from two to four hundred dollars per acre and was long known as the John Butts donation claim, the father residing thereon until 1867 when he retired and removed to Forest Grove. Afterward he lived among his children until his death in 1890, at the age of eighty years. At that time his son Festus Butts was in eastern Oregon and with a man named Whited was out riding after cattle in the deep snow to get them out of the mountains. That night he dreamed of listening to the finest singing he had ever heard. When he awoke next morning he had a presentiment that something unusual had happened in the family. Five days later he received a telegram to come home, that his father had died and that the burial would be postponed three days, but five days had passed so he did not return to the old home. Later he received a letter from his sister giving particulars of the father's death, stating he was not ill but went to bed as usual and sang one of his favorite songs in a good, strong voice. That was the same night Mr. Butts dreamed of hearing beautiful music four hundred miles away. His mother had died on the Meek cut-off and was buried in a little flat at the head-waters of the des Chutes river, leaving the father with seven small children. He afterward married a Mrs. Evans and they had three daughters. John Butts was a soldier in the Cayuse Indian war, serving under Colonel Tom Cornelius, at the time of the Whitman massacre.

Festus Butts was educated at Forest Grove Academy under Professor Marsh. This was a pay school and his educational opportunities were somewhat limited for his services were needed on the home farm. In March, 1862, he started for the Florence placer mines in Idaho and there purchased one-sixth interest in two claims of rocker diggings, each claim being one hundred and fifty feet long. He paid one hundred dollars for his interest and the six men working the claims stripped the dirt and wheeled it to two rockers where it averaged an ounce of gold a day, worth fourteen dollars, for each man. To make his purchase Mr. Butts had to borrow eleven dollars from his brother-in-law, Newton McClanahan, who was working at six dollars per day and advised him to work for wages. He did not take the advice, however. The camp in which he was located had some very rich districts, one man's claim paying him about three thousand dollars a day to the rocker while other claims were also equally rich. Mr. Butts worked in Florence until the 24th of August, when he sold out and went to the recently discovered Warrens diggings where were found good claims. He remained at Warrens until 1865, then again sold out and with a party of about thirty went to Montana. In the spring Mr. Butts' partner went to Lemhi, finding what are called the Leesburg diggings. Mr. Butts had ground on a small gulch there that would pay three hundred dollars a day to the man. One day as he was shoveling he saw a piece of gold about the size of a quarter on the dirt that he had thrown in the sluice boxes. He found it weighed fourteen dollars. He called his partner to take a pan of dirt and pan it out and when this was done it was found that the man had about one hundred and five dollars. Mr. Butts gave him another pan which yielded one hundred and seven dollars. They then turned the water off and went to panning, securing about seven hundred dollars in that way for their day's work, which, added to the two hundred dollars already taken from the sluice boxes, made nine hundred dollars for the two men for one day. That was Mr. Butts' best day in mining.

On leaving Leesburg Mr. Butts invested in a farm in the Willamette valley in 1870. At length he sold that property and removed to eastern Oregon, preempting a claim on Burnt river. When he disposed of that place he removed to West Camp creek and located a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, also purchasing a preemption claim of one hundred and sixty acres adjoining. He also bought forty acres of school land and thus had three hundred and sixty acres in one body which he improved, cultivated and made his home until 1908. He then sold out and retired, purchasing property in Baker and in Ashland, dividing his time now between the two places. While on the farm he was largely engaged in raising cattle. He has three properties in Baker, a part of which he rents, and in Ashland his real estate consists of very valuable fruit land. He has had varied and interesting experiences in the mines and as a pioneer resident of Oregon but is now comfortably situated in life, having investments that yield to him a good income.

Mr. Butts was married March 30, 1862, in Baker county, to Miss Susie Dunn, who comes of southern ancestry. Her mother lived with them for a long period and died April 1, 1910, at the age of ninety four years, seven months and fifteen days. She had never been ill in her life. A sister of Mrs. Butts became the wife of Thomas Boyer, living on Burnt river, and they had fourteen children. By his first marriage Mr. Butts had two children, Caleb Butts and Mary Ellen. The former, a farmer and stock raiser on Burnt river, is married and has two sons and two daughters. Mary Ellen Butts became the wife of Leon Wins, a saddler and harness maker of Shoshone, Idaho.

While mining and stock raising interests have largely occupied the attention of Festus Butts he has not been neglectful of his duties of citizenship and has done important public service. He filled the office of school director in the Willamette valley and in Baker county has been school director and school clerk for a number of years. He served as road supervisor in the Willamette valley and in Baker county for several years, and while acting in that capacity on Scoggins creek he built a grade that saved a bad piece of the road over which water frequently flowed, making the highway almost impassable. He did away with this by a grade in which the county felt pride. He has always stood for practical improvement and his labors have been an element for progress along many lines. His religious faith is evidenced in his membership in the Second Baptist church of Baker City.

CHARLES M. HALL, who owns and cultivates three hundred and forty three acres of very valuable land seven miles southwest of Gervais, on the old Earl D. Jones donation land, was born in Moulton, Texas, in 1871, his parents being Charles M. and Mary (Humphreys) Hall. The father, who was reared in Tennessee, spent fourteen years of his early life in Missouri, from which state he enlisted for four years' service in the Civil war, where he was under the command of General Price. Subsequently, in 1866, he removed to Texas. The mother was a native of Oxford, Mississippi, and removed to Texas in 1845, where she resided until the death of her parents, her mother passing away in 1877 and her father three years later. Charles M. Hall, the father of the subject of this sketch, passed away in Arizona in 1898. Charles M. was the eldest of the three children, the others being William A., of New Mexico, and Jessie, wife of E. M. Cole, of Tempe, Arizona.

At the early age of fourteen years Charles M. Hall started out to earn his own livelihood, his first employment being as a cowboy on the plains of Texas. For a number of years he was thus engaged, laying by the extra funds earned for saving. For one year he was on the old Chisholm cattle trail. New Mexico was for three years with the employ of the Cass Land and Cattle Company in New Mexico. For another year he was employed in a sawmill, having previously worked on a ranch in Arizona for eight years. He came to Oregon in 1904 and purchased the present home of three hundred and forty three acres which his industry and careful management have converted into one of the most profitable and highly productive farms near Gervais. One hundred and fifty acres have been sowed to grain and twenty acres are planted to hops. In addition to these crops he raises cattle and hogs for the markets.

On the 31st of December, 1901, Mr. Hall was wedded to Mrs. Anna (January) Felton, who was born near Fort Worth, Texas, in 1877, her parents being Marcus and Louisa (Cornet) January, both of whom were natives of Texas. The mother's parents, however, were born and reared in Arkansas, and in her grandmother's home Mrs. Hall was reared until ten years of age. At that time she went to Arizona where she was married and resided until 1904, when she and her husband removed to Oregon. She was the second of four children, the others being Mary Ellen, who is the wife of Benton Pyeatt, and is living in Marion county; Clyde DeW., deceased; and one who died in infancy. To Mr. and Mrs. Hall two children have been born: May, whose birth occurred on the 21st of January, 1903, and who is now attending school; and a son whose birth occurred on the 23d of March, 1907, but who has since passed away.

In politics Mr. Hall gives his support to the democratic party and is an ardent advocate of its principles and policies. He also holds membership in the Woodmen of the World, the United Artisans and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Being a public-spirited citizen and taking a great interest in all that pertains to the moral, educational and social welfare of his community, he has frequently been called upon to serve on boards and committees whose purpose it has been to promote such movements. His altruistic spirit as shown in his fraternal, social and business relations has made him one of the esteemed and popular men of his community where he holds the respect of all who know him.

ABSALOM C. WOODCOCK. Choosing a profession in which advancement does not depend upon outside aid or influence but entirely upon the capability of the individual, Absalom C. Woodcock has made continuous progress in the practice of law and his extensive clientage indicates how successful he is in the conduct of his cases which are presented in the strong, clear light of common sense and logical judicial reasoning. He has been dependent entirely upon his own resources from the age of thirteen years. His faithfulness and ability enabled him at that age to command twenty dollars a month and board for farm labor, when many others were being paid a much less wage. He was born on a Molalla farm in Oregon, July 22, 1859, and was the fourth in order of birth in a family of eleven children whose parents were W. D. and Alizina (Cornelius) Woodcock. The father died in 1870, leaving the family in limited financial circumstances as it was necessary for them to depend entirely upon what could be raised on the farm on the Molalla. W. D. Woodcock was a native son of Illinois but was reared and educated in Missouri. He possessed courage and determination, which qualities were displayed in his trip across the plains in 1845, an undertaking hazardous in the extreme for such a trip was beset not only with trials and hardships but with many dangers, owing to the hostility of the Indians. However, he made the effort with wagon, ox and horse teams, his companions being Absalom Cornelius and his family, including a daughter, Alizina. When the time came for them to separate Mr. Cornelius took up his abode on a claim near Turner, in Marion county, but the daughter soon afterward became the wife of W. D. Woodcock and thereafter resided on the farm on the Molalla. His death occurred when he was fifty-two years of age, while his wife survived him until 1889. In their family were eleven children, of whom eight are yet living: W. D., who is a blacksmith of Lane county; W. S., who is a stockman of Wasco county; T. P., who is carrying on an extensive business as a commission merchant at Weiser, Idaho; Newton and Jasper, twins, the former a resident of Weiser, Idaho, and the latter of Wasco county, Oregon; Keziah, who is the wife of E. B. Ramsby, of Lake county, Oregon; and Ada, the wife of Ed Harriman, of Wasco county.

Absalom C. Woodcock, the other member of the family, was only eleven years of age at the time of his father's death and two years later he secured employment on the farm of William Barlow, one of the best known of the earlier pioneer settlers in Clackamas county. He carefully saved his earnings and at the end of a year established a butchering and stock business at The Dalles in connection with his brother, T. P. Woodcock. As he started out in the world he recognized fully the need and value of an education and made up for his early deficiency in that direction by attending the public schools at The Dalles during the winter sessions. Later he entered the subfreshman class of the University of Oregon at Eugene and in due time was graduated from that institution in 1885 with the degree of B. S. He was afterward appointed a tutor in the university and at the same time took up the classical course which he completed by graduation in 1887, at which time the B. A. degree was conferred upon him. In the meantime his attention had been directed to the legal profession and he began reading, with the end in view of some day becoming a legal practitioner, in the office of Dolph, Mallory, Bellinger & Simon, of Portland. He was admitted to the bar in October, 1887, and in partnership with George S. Washburne began practicing in Eugene. He continued alone after the death of his old friend until May, 1903, when he was joined by L. T. Harris under the firm style of Woodcock & Harris. This relation was terminated when the latter was elected judge of the circuit court in 1905. The present firm of Woodcock & Smith was later formed and is today one of the strong combinations at the bar of Lane county. Mr. Woodcock prepares his cases with great thoroughness and care and seems to apply almost intuitively the correct legal principle to the point in litigation. He holds membership with the Star Bar Association and has a wide acquaintance among the profession in Oregon.

A. C. Woodcock

In politics Mr. Woodcock is a stanch republican. He has served as chairman of the county central committee and has also been a member of the state committee. He belongs to the Eugene Commercial Club and the Native Sons. Fraternally he is connected with Eugene Lodge, No. 11, F. & A. M.; Eugene Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M.; Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; Eugene Lodge, No. 357, B. P. O. E., and Helmet Lodge, No. 33, K. P. High regard is everywhere accorded Mr. Woodcock who is a man of marked courtesy and geniality. He has made steady progress since starting out in life on his own account and the steps in his orderly progression are easily discernible. His powers and ability have been developed through exercise and his record is indicative of what may be accomplished when determination and ambition lead the way.

GEORGE FRANCIS HALL is a prominent figure in the business circles of Union, where he has resided since 1882. He is a large landowner, and served as postmaster of his city and at the present time is conducting one of the largest mercantile enterprises in Union. He lives in a modern home in Union and is one of the city's most prominent business men. He was born in Eldorado county, California, November 23, 1855, the son of John F. and Sophia M. (Mitchell) Hall, the former a native of St. Louis, Missouri, while the latter was born in France. The paternal grandfather, who was born in England, emigrated to America when a small boy, coming on a war ship in 1812. He settled in New Orleans, where he spent several years, and then went to St. Louis, Missouri, where he married a Miss Hawks, whose parents were from Canada and among the first settlers of St. Louis. A grandaunt of Mr. Hall died in St. Louis in the early '80s and from the best records obtainable is known to have reached the age of one hundred and ten years. The grandfather continued to reside in St. Louis until his death, after which his widow married G. W. Ames, their son, George W. Ames, settled in Oregon in pioneer days. The father took part in the war with Mexico and was with the American armies which invaded Mexico City. At the termination of the war he returned home and shortly afterward started across the plains with California as his destination. He settled on Weber creek in 1850 and for a number of years was engaged in mining, residing in that state until the time of his death. In Weavertown, California, he wedded Miss Sophia M. Mitchell, the ceremony being performed by Squire Rossington. To their union ten children were born: Celia M., who now resides with her mother in Placerville, California; George Francis, of this review; W. A. of Lents, Oregon; M. M., of Portland; Mrs. S. I. Benson, of Union; Nina May, Ada Edna and John, all three of whom died in infancy; Georgie, who died June 1, 1890; and Maggie, now Mrs. Thomas Conger, of San Francisco, California. John F. Hall died in 1888, but the mother still survives at the age of seventy-six.

George F. Hall spent his boyhood in Placerville, California, where he received a good education, attending the public schools and an academy. His first steps in business were taken as a clerk in a grocery store and his next occupation was that of mining. In 1880 he went to Mississippi, being employed as a clerk by his uncle, who conducted a general mercantile store at Friars Point. At the end of two years he came to Oregon, settling at Union. The trip was made by rail as far as Kelton, Utah, and the remainder of the journey was accomplished by stage. In 1881 W. A. Hall, the brother of our subject, settled in Oregon and engaged in floating firewood down the river, establishing a wood yard. On coming to this state George F. Hall entered into partnership with his brother and they maintained the wood yard until 1883, after which they established a street sprinkling and draying business in Union and were the first to introduce modern trucks in this city. This was conducted mostly by the brother, while George F. Hall engaged as an agent for the Grande Rondo Post and also as solicitor for the Baker City Reveille, being successful in his work for both of those newspapers. He also worked for a time on the Walla Walla Democrat with equal success. When the brothers first engaged in business they had only a very limited capital, but their reputation and credit were good. In the fall of 1883 Mr. Hall was appointed postmaster, a position in which he acceptably served for nearly six years. In the meantime the brothers had established a mercantile business and the postoffice was conducted in a section of their store building. Their trade increased from year to year and after a time they were compelled to secure quarters in a larger building. This business was continued until 1905, when the brothers sold out to H. J. Lucas. Early in their business career they engaged in the stock business, conducting it in connection with the mercantile and other enterprises in which they were engaged, having at first rented land for that purpose. In February, 1897, they bought from the Ainsworth National Bank of Portland the Nodine Ranch, consisting of about thirteen hundred acres. After a time they began selling small tracts of their holdings at a handsome profit, finally disposing of the main body to the Amalgamated Sugar Company. During the time they owned and operated the land they raised a large number of horses, cattle and hogs, as well as grain, and also did a grain buying and shipping business under the name of Hall Brothers, another brother M. M. Hall, having joined the original partner in 1883. When the railroad was completed it was the Hall Brothers who built the first warehouse at Union Junction and at that point they began shipping hay and grain, being pioneers in that line and without competitors for several years.

They also conducted a sawmill and lumber-yard and continued in business until 1905, when they sold out. Among the holdings which the brothers still own in partnership may be mentioned sixteen hundred acres of particularly valuable timber land, which is located on Catherine creek, where an opportunity is afforded for a large reservoir. Mr. Hall personally owns some valuable property in Union, which includes a fine modern residence. He also owns in partnership with William Hutchinson about eight hundred acres of land in the Grande Ronde valley. In 1912 he again entered the mercantile business and is now conducting some of the largest stores in Union.

May 19, 1891, Mr. Hall was united in marriage to Miss Melissa May Miller, a daughter of Simon Miller, a successful stock-raiser and pioneer of the Grande Ronde valley. To them have been born five children: Herbert A., who attended the public schools; Ehrman and Eleanore G., who are students in the high school; and Harold and Alice May, both of whom are in school. In his political faith Mr. Hall is a democrat, and he has served as mayor and councilman of Union. Fraternally he is identified with the Woodmen of the World. Like his brothers, he is a very progressive man and is greatly esteemed in the community.

FRED NOSLER, in the operation of his fine farm comprising one hundred and eighty acres of fertile land in Coos county is carrying on the agricultural standards of his father, who is one of the representative citizens of the district and is bringing his land to a high state of productiveness. Mr. Nosler is a native son of Oregon, his birth having occurred in Coquille on the 8th of June, 1877. He is a son of Amos L. and Annie R. (Hatcher) Nosler, the former a native of Iowa and the latter of Missouri. His parents crossed the plains with ox teams and settled in Coos county at an early date. Their marriage occurred in this section and they lived in Coquille until 1901, when Amos Nosler bought a farm near Bridge on the middle fork of the road eleven miles above Myrtle Point and here he has since resided and cultivated the soil for eleven years. He has been engaged in mercantile pursuits at various times during his career, operating his store and postoffice near his present farm and also being identified with the hardware and butcher business when he was a resident of Coquille. He is at the present time retired, but in conjunction with his son Claude, is one of the most extensive owners of farm lands in Coos county. He is the proprietor of four hundred acres, highly improved, and is also interested in town property in Coquille. A large part of this city stands upon land which Amos Nosler originally owned. He was president and founder of the first creamery in Coos county and is today one of the enterprising and representative citizens of that section. To him and his wife four children were born, three of whom are still living: Claude H., who lives upon the old homestead; Fred, the subject of this review; Maude, the wife of A. Wilson of Coquille, Oregon; and John, who passed away when he was two years of age.

Fred Nosler was educated in the public schools of Coos county, and in the State Normal School for one year. His boyhood and youth were spent upon his father's farm. He early became acquainted with all the details relating to the tilling of the soil and the planting and harvesting, and was an expert agriculturist when he started out for himself at twenty-two years of age. He farmed in conjunction with his father and brother for four years and then bought land four miles north of Bridge and Big creek where he did general farming and conducted a model dairy for four and one half years. At the end of that time he disposed of this property and bought the farm of one hundred and eighty acres on the middle fork of the Coquille river nine miles from Myrtle Point, where he now resides. He has made a specialty of dairying. He has equipped his dairy with modern sanitary conveniences and is increasing its capacity every year. He is also interested in the raising of fancy Poland China hogs and owned the original herd in Coos county. He is enterprising, progressive and ambitious and these qualities have united to make him one of the prominent agriculturists in the state of Oregon.

In 1898 Mr. Nosler was united in marriage to Miss Oreta J. Skeels, who was born in Indiana in 1880. She is a daughter of Clay M. and Nellie (Henry) Skeels, both natives of Ohio, where they married and lived for some time. They later removed to Indiana and subsequently returned to Ohio where the father taught school for many years. In 1887 they removed to Missouri and here Clay Skeels operated a zinc mine for two years. Their residence in Oregon dates from 1889, in which year they settled in Portland and remained for a short time. Later they left this state for Washington, living in Olympia for a short time. They afterward spent four years in Salem, where the father operated a fruit and dairy farm with success for some years. In 1894 he removed to Cottage Grove, Oregon, where he conducted a general merchandise business for some time. He later disposed of his holdings in order to come to Coos county. He bought land where a portion of the town of Marshfield now stands and conducted a general merchandise store until his death in 1910. His wife is still living, and is a resident of Coquille, in the fifty-seventh year of her age. They became the parents of eight children: Charles T. of Coquille; Mary, the wife of L. Lorenz, of Bandon, Oregon; Oreta J., the wife of our subject; Grace E., who married George H. Baxter of Creswell, Oregon; Nellie and Porteus, twins, who died in infancy; Dollie May, who lives at home; and Paul, who also resides with his parents. All the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Skeels received business education. To Mr. and Mrs. Nosler have been born three children: Gladys R., whose birth occurred in March, 1899; James C., born in 1901; and Fred E., who is now six years of age.

In his political affiliations Mr. Nosler is a stanch republican and always votes the party ticket. He and his family affiliate with the Christian church and are well known in its affairs. Mr. Nosler has sought his prosperity along agricultural lines and has been a force in the development of his section of the county.

JAMES D. SLATER, who has been successfully engaged in the practice of law since his admission to the Oregon bar more than a quarter of a century ago, is a leading and well-known attorney of La Grande. His birth occurred in Corvallis, Oregon, on the 18th of October, 1856, his father being James H. Slater, who figured prominently in public affairs and served as United States senator. A more extended review of him appears on another page of this work in connection with the sketch of Judge W. T. Slater, who served on the supreme bench.

James D. Slater obtained his early education in the public schools and subsequently attended the University of Oregon, at Eugene. Having determined upon the legal profession as a life work, he studied law in the offices of L. B. Cox and J. H. Turner at Pendleton, this state, and in 1883 entered Washington and Lee University of Lexington, Virginia, there completing a two years' course in one year. In June, 1884, he was graduated at the head of his class with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Returning to Oregon, he was admitted to the bar in October, 1884, and has since remained in the active practice of law at La Grande. His practice is extensive and of an important character. He is remarkable among lawyers for the wide research and provident care with which he prepares his cases. At no time has his reading ever been confined to the limitations of the question at issue. It has gone beyond and compassed every contingency and provided not alone for the expected but for the unexpected, which happens in the courts quite as frequently as out of them. Since his father's demise Mr. Slater has managed the family estate in connection with his law practice.

In November, 1888, Mr. Slater was united in marriage to Miss Fannie B. Hayes, of Macon, Missouri, her parents being Isaac and Margaret Hayes, who, after spending some time in New York state, came to Oregon in 1885. Here Mr. Hayes devoted his attention to mercantile pursuits.

Mr. Slater gives his political allegiance to the democratic party and has served as mayor of La Grande for two terms. Fraternally he is identified with the Woodmen of the World, while in religious faith he is an Episcopalian. His personal characteristics and social qualities are pronounced and he is an acceptable companion in any society in which intelligence is a necessary attribute to agreeableness.

JOHN GERBER is engaged quite extensively in farming in Washington county. He cultivates a forty-acre tract of land which he owns, also two hundred and forty acres which he rents. He has lived a life of diligence and determination, and whatever success he has achieved is attributable to these qualities. He was born in Switzerland, April 12, 1874. He is a son of Ulrich and Annie Gerber, who left the land of the Alps in 1876, when their son John was a little lad of two years, and made their way to the new world, settling upon a farm in Washington county, Oregon. This farm the father continued to till and improve until his death in 1910. For a decade, he had survived his wife, who passed away in 1900, and was laid to rest in Union cemetery in Washington county. Following her demise, he wedded Mrs. Wyman, the widow of Peter Wyman. The children of the first marriage were four in number: Alice, now deceased; John; Minnie, the wife of Adolph Badger, of North Plains, Oregon; and Samuel, still living in Washington county. By the second marriage there was one daughter, Clara, now nine years of age.

No event of special importance occurred to vary the routine of farm life for John Gerber, during his boyhood and youth. He was reared in the old homestead in Washington county, early becoming familar with the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist, his time being divided between the work of the fields and the attainment of a common-school education. He assisted his father until he reached the age of twenty-five years, and then, desirous that his labors should more directly benefit himself, he purchased a small tract of land in Washington county which he has since cultivated, owning at the present time forty acres of highly improved land. In addition, he leases a tract of two hundred and forty acres. He has the entire amount under a splendid state of cultivation so that the fields annually return to him a gratifying income. His methods of farming are most progressive; the results achieved indicate how practical is the course he pursues.

On the 28th of December, 1905, Mr. Gerber was married to Miss Mary Wyman, who was born in Washington county, Oregon, and is of Swiss lineage, her parents, who were natives of Switzerland, having come to the United States in 1878. They cast in their lot with the farming people of Washington county, and the father engaged actively in cultivating his fields up to the time of his death in 1895. His widow still resides upon the old homestead, which he had developed from a wild and unimproved tract of land into a state of rich fertility. The children in their family were: Arnold, who is living on the old home place; Mrs. Gerber; Emma, the wife of Jacob Stoller, of Washington county; Paulina, Lillie and Louisa, all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Gerber are the parents of a son and daughter: Louis William, born November 1, 1907; and Adaline P., born November 22, 1908. Mr. and Mrs. Gerber are members of the Baptist church; and he is a republican in politics, but with somewhat liberal views. He has never actively participated in public affairs, beyond performing his duties of citizenship; for it has ever been his chief ambition to acquire a good home and comfortable competence for himself and family. To this end, he prefers to give his undivided attention to the occupation which he has chosen as his life work. Mr. Gerber's fields present a neat and attractive appearance, and his diligence has constituted the key which has unlocked for him the portals of success.

JAMES P. ATWOOD, M. D., is a prominent and capable physician of Baker, residing at No. 2302 Main street in the large, fine old home which he erected in 1883. It stands in the midst of a splendid lawn adorned with lambert, silver poplar and box elder trees, all of which were set out by him. The appearance of the home at once bespeaks comfort and convenience and it is a fitting place in which to spend the hours of leisure when professional duties are not making strenuous demand upon his time and efforts.

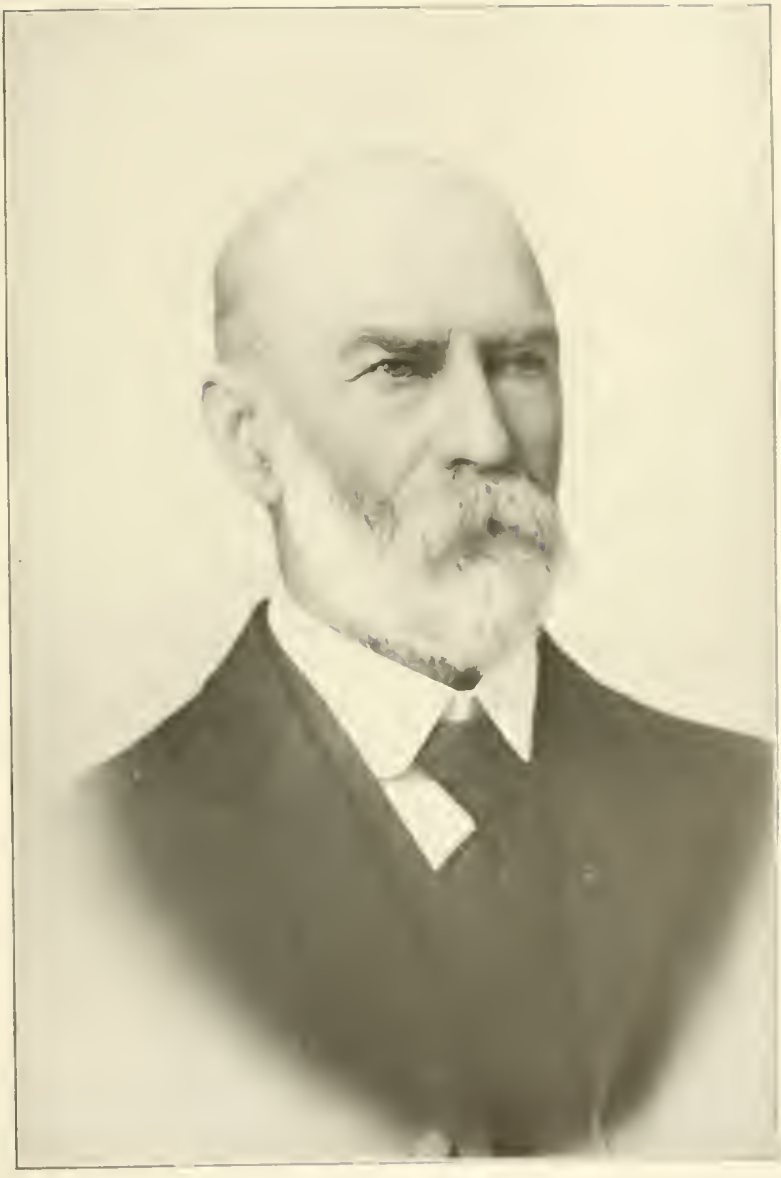
Dr. Atwood was born in Green county, Wisconsin, March 19, 1846. His father, Aurelius Fielden Atwood, was born in Clark county, Indiana, January 1, 1817, and in that state and in Illinois he was reared. In the latter he wedded Rosannah B. Hays, whose birth occurred in Ohio in 1827. Her girlhood, however, was largely passed in Illinois and both were pioneer settlers of Sangamon county, that state, where A. F. Atwood formed the acquaintance of Abraham Lincoln, then a young man. In 1845 they removed to the territory of Wisconsin and Mr. Atwood secured a claim from the United States government. He at once began its development and continued to make his home thereon until March, 1853, when, as yet undeterred by the experiences and hardships of frontier life, he started across the plains with his family to establish a home and aid in the upbuilding of the northwest.

A year before Dr. Atwood's birth Pervine Atwood, an uncle of the Doctor, started from Illinois to the Pacific coast as a member of a train that crossed the plains. At length he reached the Willamette valley and secured lots now included within the city limits of Portland and later located squatter's claims in the Willamette valley. He went to California when gold was discovered there and engaged in mining. He also established a store at Sacramento but the high water came and flooded the store, but he managed to escape with his life. He made considerable money at mining and through investment in town property in both Sacramento and San Francisco. In 1850 he returned to Wisconsin, where he purchased land and carried on farming and stock-raising, his well directed labors bringing him wealth as the years passed. He had a large family and died at Brodhead, Wisconsin, in 1911, when eighty-eight years of age. He was the first of the family to come to the coast, but, as previously stated, in March, 1853, A. F. Atwood started with his family, driving across the country with four mules hitched to a freight wagon and two horses to draw the lighter wagon in which rode the family. They arrived at Corvallis, Oregon, in September and Mr. Atwood secured a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres four miles south of the town. This he developed and improved and also bought adjoining land until he was the owner of six hundred and forty acres, which he continued to cultivate until 1868. He then sold out and went to Washington territory, taking up a claim about eighteen miles from Walla Walla, where Bolles Junction now stands. He died there in March, 1889, having for about eight years survived his wife, who passed away in January, 1881. He did little farming but devoted his attention to the raising of stock. In early days he had engaged in school-teaching. He had been educated for surveying and civil engineering but entered the schoolroom as an instructor and to that profession devoted his energies until he took up farming and stock-raising as a life work. His early political support was given to the democratic party but he afterward became a stanch republican. He was also a member of the United Brethren church in early life. His family numbered five sons and five daughters, of whom three survive: James P.; Willie, a resident of California; and Eslie.

Dr. Atwood remained at home with his parents until twenty-one years of age. He supplemented his public-school course by a year's study in the Corvallis College and about two years in Sublimity College of Oregon. On attaining his majority he took up the study of medicine after having previously engaged in teaching in Washington. It was in 1867 that he began preparation for the profession in the medical department of the Willamette University at Salem, from which he was graduated on the 3d of March, 1870. Not yet content with the preparation he had already made, he went to New York and was graduated from the medical department of Columbia University with the class of 1874. During the interval between his two college courses, however, he practiced at La Grande, Oregon, for a year and since 1871 he has practiced continuously in Baker save for the period which he spent in the east in post-graduate work. He has pursued two post-graduate courses in the Polyclinic in New York, one in 1897 and the other in 1901. He engages in the general practice of medicine and his post-graduate work and his private study have kept him in close touch with the advancement made by the medical fraternity as investigation and research have broadened their knowledge and promoted their efficiency. Dr. Atwood also gives his supervision to two ranches which he owns, together comprising over five hundred acres, forty acres of one lying within the corporation limits of Baker.

In 1882 Dr. Atwood was married to Miss Florence Thompson, who was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1861. She was an adopted daughter of John Thompson, with whom she came to Oregon in 1881. The only child of this marriage is James Pervine, who is a ranchman of Baker county. The wife and mother died in September, 1902.

In politics Dr. Atwood is a republican and is conversant with the leading questions and issues of the day, which enables him to support his position by intelligent argument, yet



DR. J. P. ATWOOD

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

he does not seek nor desire public office. He is an exemplary representative of the Masonic fraternity and in his practice finds ample opportunity to embody the teachings of the craft. His has been a well spent life, his labors, indeed, proving a serviceable element in the community where he has now long lived and labored.

JAKE BETTIS. The name of Bettis is closely associated with the agricultural interests of Washington county where the family has been represented since 1907. Jake Bettis was born in Tennessee on the 3d of April, 1883, and his parents John C. and Alice (Huffaker) Bettis, were also natives of that state. The father was born January 27, 1856, a son of Allen and Elizabeth (Phillips) Bettis, both of whom were natives of Tennessee and were there married. Allen Bettis passed away in that state in 1910 at the advanced age of eighty-five years, and his wife, now eighty-five years of age, is still living on the old homestead where she has remained since her marriage. In their family were seven children: P. C., George and James, all of Tennessee; Thomas of Anthony, Kansas; John C.; and Eliza and Sarah Jane, who died in Tennessee.

Spending his youthful days in his native state, John C. Bettis started out in life on his own account when twenty-five years of age, carrying on agricultural pursuits in Tennessee until 1907, when, thinking to find better opportunities in the northwest, he came to Oregon, settling in Washington county. There he purchased a farm of one hundred and fifty-seven acres which he has since cultivated, making many excellent improvements upon it.

While in Tennessee John C. Bettis was married to Miss Alice Huffaker, who was born in Knox county, that state, as were her parents, Marshall and Mary Jane (Campbell) Huffaker, who spent their entire lives in their native county, the father passing away in 1897 and the mother in 1907. Of their seven children Mrs. Bettis is the eldest, the others being: Josie, now deceased; William, living in the state of Washington; Annie, the wife of Dr. King, of Jefferson City, Tennessee; Bettie, who is living with Mrs. Bettis; Florence, of Knox county, Tennessee; and Dr. Floyd Huffaker, of Knox county, Tennessee. Unto Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bettis have been born seven children: Jake and Charles, who are partners in business; William, Elizabeth, Clarence, Pearl and Vada, who are still at home. The parents hold membership in the Baptist church and in that faith they reared their family. They are well known in the community where they reside and during the period of their residence here have gained many friends. Mr. Bettis gives his political support to the republican party and fraternally is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Piedmont, Jefferson county.

Jake Bettis attended the public schools of Tennessee in the acquirement of his education and afterward became a college student. He was a young man of twenty four years at the time of the migration to the northwest. He has since been associated with his brother Charles in business. The latter, too, is a college man and their liberal education constitutes the foundation upon which they have builded their advancement. The farm which they are now operating together is pleasantly located a mile and a half northeast of Hillsboro, and comprises two hundred and twenty acres of cultivable land and one hundred and eighty acres of timber. Jake Bettis first started out for himself on attaining his majority and for a short time engaged in clerking in Hillsboro, after which he and his brother took charge of the farm which now claims their time and energies. It is one of the best farms in the neighborhood and in its excellent appearance gives evidence of their careful supervision and practical, progressive methods. They utilize the latest improved machinery to facilitate the work of the fields and as the years pass on they are meeting with excellent success.

Both of the brothers are supporters of the republican party and Mr. Bettis became a member of the Odd Fellows society when in Tennessee. Their interests, however, center upon their business which, capably directed, is proving profitable, their work placing them among the foremost agriculturists of their district.

GEORGE BAIRD is one of the industrious and highly respected citizens of Union. He was born in Putnam county, Missouri, January 27, 1862, and is the son of Thomas P. and Lydia B. (Ledford) Baird. His father was a native of Tennessee and his mother of Kentucky.

Thomas P. Baird in early life removed from his native state to Kentucky, where he remained for some time and later he established his home in Missouri. In 1849 he emigrated to California, crossing the great American desert with ox teams and remaining on the Pacific coast for four years, after which he returned to Missouri, where he continued to reside until 1863. In the early part of that year in company with sixty other emigrants to the far west, he again crossed the plains with ox teams and horses and in addition to their draft stock they also drove with them a band of mixed stock including horses, oxen and cows. On reaching the Burnt river they encountered hostile marauding Indians who drove away the best stock, including many of their oxen and draft horses. Mr. Baird himself suffering the loss of all of his stock except one ox and one cow which he yoked into a team and with them completed the journey from the Burnt river to Union. Their long trip from Missouri to the point of their destination required a period of six months during which time many of the party lagged by the wayside. Others becoming discouraged, turned back and returned to their former homes and in their places other wandering emigrants were occasionally picked up and added to their train. On reaching the Grande Ronde valley Mr. Baird also took a homestead one and one-half miles from Union and very shortly thereafter purchased an additional one hundred and sixty acres of ing his preemption claim, thus giving him a total of three hundred and twenty acres of valuable ranch and agricultural land in this state. Upon that property he built a comfortable log cabin in which to house his family and began at once to improve and cultivate his farm. At the time he entered the Grande Ronde valley only a very few homes had been established in the vicinity of what is now the site of Union and they had only preceded him in their settlement during the previous year. He is justly entitled to have his name written on the honored roll among the early pioneers of Union county. Upon his original homestead he remained with his family until 1874 and in that year he disposed of his ranch at a fair profit, selling to Taylor B. Green, who was one of the party composing the emigration train of which Mr. Baird was also a member in 1863. The property is now owned by A. E. Eaton but is still known throughout the county as the Green ranch. After disposing of his land to Mr. Green, our subject purchased a homestead in the Thief valley, Union county, where he engaged in farming and stock-raising. The valley in which he located obtained its forbidding name because it included a territory in that part of the state which for many years had been the rendezvous of a band of horse and stock thieves from the early days. After moving upon his newly acquired property he engaged at once in general farming and stock-raising and continued to give his attention to the interests of that business until 1880, at which time he sold his ranch and at once purchased two ranches in the Antelope valley, one of which is known as the Brennan place and the other as the Baird place. He removed his family to his new home in the Antelope valley, where he continued to reside until 1897, at which time he sold at a fair profit that property to Smith & Hale and afterward purchased eighty acres, known as the George Watt place, of which he later sold all but four acres to A. E. Eaton and the four remaining acres became afterward the property upon which was located the county poor farm. Previous to this last sale of his real-estate holdings Mr. Baird had accumulated an amount of property sufficient to enable him to live in retirement but had the misfortune later in the panic of 1893 to lose nearly all of his hard-earned, accumulated resources. During the immediate years following the panic he maintained his residence in Union until the time of his death, which occurred in 1907, at the advanced age of eighty-six years. He was a man of an enduring constitution and despite the hardships of pioneer life retained the use of all his natural powers until the last few years of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Baird were united in marriage in the state of Missouri and they were the parents of eight children, five sons and three daughters. One of the sons resides in California, two in Idaho, two in Oregon and one in Seattle, Washington. One daughter is a resident of Nevada and the youngest daughter is deceased.

George Baird is the youngest member of his father's family and remained under the parental roof until he was eighteen years of age. During the early period of his boyhood life he made seven trips across the trail with stock, going into Idaho, Wyoming and Montana. On one of these trips, which occurred during the Bannock Indian war, they were hemmed in by the Indians at Dry Creek for two weeks. There were about one hundred in their party and during the time they were surrounded by hostile Indians they endured much physical suffering in addition to constant anxiety concerning their probable fate. They were, however, fortunately rescued by United States troops from Boise and every member of their party was brought out alive from what had proven to be a mountain prison in which they had served a guiltless but enforced term for a period of two anxious weeks. On reaching Boise they learned that another party of white people had been corralled by the Indians at Willow creek and Mr. Baird promptly tendered his volunteer services to go with the government troops to their rescue, but owing to his extreme youth he was refused service as an enlisted volunteer. Notwithstanding this disappointment he joined the party of soldiers and went with them to assist in saving the lives of the imperilled white people. Just before reaching the location of their imprisoned friends they learned that three white men had recently been killed just ahead of them. They encountered no additional alarms or trouble after that and were successful in their mission of taking relief to the people of Willow creek. At the age of eighteen Mr. Baird engaged in the barber business, in which he continued for four years, after which he gave his attention to various matters of interest for some time and then reestablished himself in the barber business in Union, continuing in the pursuit of his trade for a period of six years. In 1891 he opened a merchandising establishment to which he gave his attention until 1907. During that period he was also in the employ of the Pacific States Telephone Company, with which he continued until May, 1910. As a representative of the telephone company his headquarters were at Union but his duties necessitated his spending much of his time on the road, looking after the affairs connected with the interests of the company. After closing his relations with the Pacific States Telephone Company he entered into a copartnership with Thomas Brasher under the firm name of Brasher & Baird and engaged in the real-estate business, and in the month of December, 1910, he took charge of the Home Independent Telephone Company with headquarters at Union. This, however, was not included as a part of his real-estate business but wholly an independent interest of his own.

December 25, 1885, Mr. Baird was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Seamans, she having removed from her native state, Arkansas, to this state with her father's family in the late '70s. Mr. Baird is the owner of a very beautiful ranch property in this county and other property in and about Union. Fraternally he is associated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is one of the accredited and highly respected citizens of Union and is much esteemed for his known loyalty to his friends and associates, and is always interested in the advancement and welfare of the people of his state and county.

C. C. FERGUSON, a well known and highly successful real-estate and insurance agent in Newberg, is the son of one of Yamhill county's honored pioneer citizens. His birth occurred in the vicinity of La Fayette on December 17, 1863, his parents being J. L. and Parmelia Jane (Bird) Ferguson. The father was born and reared in Kentucky, whence he came to Oregon in 1852, locating in La Fayette, where he engaged in business. He became one of the influential and affluent citizens of the county, and at one time owned about two thousand acres of land in this vicinity. His political support was accorded to the democratic party, and he always took an active interest in all governmental affairs, and for two years represented this county in the state legislature. As he was a man of forceful character, possessing strong powers of organization and good executive ability he was called upon to serve the public in innumerable ways during the early days. He was always ready and willing to do anything in his power to promote the interests of the community or to advance the development of the country. Realizing the need of higher institutions of learning in this section he was one of those who founded the agricultural college at Corvallis, which at that time was a denominational school, being under the control of the Methodist Episcopal (South) church. To him is also due considerable credit for developing the industrial interests of this part of the state, as he was one of the active promoters of the first woolen mills established at Oregon City. He was highly esteemed throughout the county, not only for the enterprise he had manifested in promoting various public utilities, but because of his many fine personal traits, that made him a friend much to be desired. There was deep and sincere regret throughout the community when he passed away in August, 1903, as, although he had attained the venerable age of seventy-two, he was still recognized as one of the strong personalities of the county. The mother of our subject was a daughter of John Bird, one of the well known pioneer settlers of the county. Her death occurred at the age of forty-six years. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson there were born four sons and three daughters, as follows: Ella, the deceased wife of Clarence Baker, who has a son and a daughter living in this county; C. C., our subject; Nettie, who is deceased; Ray, who is a resident of La Fayette, Oregon; James L., who is living in Newberg; Maggie Jane, the wife of ex Senator Caldwell, now living at Ontario, this state; and Lynn, who is engaged in the drug business in Newberg.

Reared in this county, at the usual age C. C. Ferguson entered the local common schools, where he pursued his preliminary education. He subsequently supplemented this by a course in the agricultural college at Corvallis, after which he returned home and for two years thereafter engaged in farming. At the expiration of that time he took up his residence in La Fayette, entering the employ of the Southern Pacific Railway Company, whom he served for several years in the capacity of freight and passenger agent at that point. He next went to Oregon City, where for two years he was engaged in mercantile pursuits, subsequently returning to his ranch upon which he resided until he disposed of it. Immediately following this he located in Newberg, engaging in the real-estate and insurance business in which he has ever since continued. This has proven to be very successful and he now has a fine line of both city and country property, while he is the local representative of the Norwich Insurance Company of London, England, and the Pacific Home Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He is an enterprising, capable business man, who conducts his transactions in an upright, straightforward manner, always retaining the respect and confidence of those with whom he has dealings.

On the 27th of September, 1885, Mr. Ferguson was united in marriage to Miss Katie G. Olds, who was born and reared in Yamhill county and is a daughter of James and Nancy (Parker) Olds, both of whom are now deceased. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson there have been born two daughters: Helena, who is a teacher in the Newberg High school; and Mildred, who is still attending school.

Mr. Ferguson's fraternal connections are confined to his membership in the Woodmen of the World. His political allegiance he has always accorded to the democratic party, and he is now and has been for the past two years a member of the town council. He was a delegate to the state convention held at Pendleton at the time of Cleveland's first nomination, and has always taken an earnest interest in all political activities. Although the duties of his own business make great demands upon his time and energy, Mr. Ferguson is too public spirited a man to neglect his responsibilities as a citizen of the community, and he gives much of his attention to furthering the development of the town along the various lines of general interest. At the present he is a member of the building committee of the Carnegie library, which is now in course of construction, and he has often served in similar capacities during the period of his residence here. He is widely known throughout the county where he has spent his entire life, and is held in favorable regard by a large circle of acquaintances, many of whom have known him from early childhood.

EDWARD CRANSTON BOWEN is engaged in farming near Baker and is a western man by birth, training and preference. He was born in Hyde City, February 11, 1867, one of a family of thirteen children, seven sons and six daughters, whose parents were I. B. and Ann (Hardy) Bowen. The father, who was born in the Mohawk valley in Montgomwas a locomotive engineer and machinist. In Illinois he wedded Ann Dooley, a native of New York, and after living in Illinois several years they removed westward to Oregon in 1862, crossing the plains with ox teams. In September they arrived at Auburn, Oregon, and the father, in company with Mr. Leverage, owned and operated the first sawmill in eastern Oregon. They afterward removed their mill to Idaho City, Idaho, in the spring of 1863, having the first plant of that kind there. In 1864 Mr. Bowen became interested in the mercantile firm of Brooks & Cranston, the name being then changed to Bowen & Cranston. He followed merchandising afterward in various places, including Auburn, Clark's Creek, Salem and Baker City, until 1870, when he and his partner became interested in building the Eagle canal then being constructed to furnish water to the Koosta mines. He then engaged in merchandising and in managing the ditch until about 1876, when he came to Baker City and purchased and conducted the Cosmopolitan Hotel, remaining its proprietor until his death in May, 1881. His wife died April 25, 1902, in Baker.

Edward C. Bowen attended pay schools and the public schools of Baker county and entered business life as a dealer in cattle on the Powder river. Later he was in Malheur county near Castle Rock, and in January, 1904, removed to the farm which he now owns, comprising about five hundred acres on Powder river nearly four miles south of Baker. Thereon he is largely engaged in stock-raising and also in the production of hay, cutting from four to five hundred tons each year. He also has over one hundred acres of grain land and his property is valued at one hundred dollars per acre. He also runs cattle and horses upon his place. His land is well improved according to modern methods, good buildings are upon his farm, and he has the best water right on Powder river for irrigation.

Mr. Bowen was married in Baker City, June 12, 1894, to Miss Euphrosyne Relling, who was born in Portland, Oregon, July 10, 1874, a daughter of John Michael Relling, who was a native of Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Bowen have four sons and two daughters: Dudley E., whose birth occurred May 25, 1895, now attending the high school; Francis A., born July 29, 1897; Mary Kathleen, born February 8, 1900; Edward Clifford, born March 18, 1902; Robert R., born January 9, 1905; and Marcella Grace, born December 9, 1906. All are now in school and it is the purpose of their parents to give them the best educational opportunities possible and so train them that they may become upright and useful men and women. Mrs. Bowen was educated in Peoria, Illinois, and in St. Louis, Missouri. She attended the Academy of the Lady of the Sacred Heart conducted by the Sisters of St. Joseph, and later the St. Joseph Academy at Carondelet, St. Louis, Missouri. She had instructions in oil, crayon and pastel painting and has received a number of prizes for her work. She still continues to paint and her artistic nature has found expression in many beautiful pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen have an attractive home and are held in high esteem by all who know them. He is a democrat of the Cleveland school and the religious faith of himself and family is that of the Roman Catholic church. He deserves much credit for what he has accomplished for he has worked hard, and a busy and useful life has brought him his success.

W. B. PIPER is a respected and very successful dairy farmer, whose home is located fourteen miles up the north fork of the Coos river, in Coos county. He was born in Guelph, Canada, July 18, 1849, and is the son of Stephen and Frances (Frederick) Piper, the former a native of England and the latter of Pennsylvania. The parents were married in Canada, where the father died in 1900. The mother is still living and continues to maintain her residence in that country. To Mr. and Mrs. Piper ten children were born, the subject of this review being the eldest member of the family. A brother, James Piper, is a resident of southern California and the remaining members of the family reside in Canada.

W. B. Piper received his early education in the Dominion of Canada and remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-one years of age. At that time he moved to Oregon, where he first was employed in sawmills in various sections of the state. In 1883 he moved to the Coos river district and there purchased one hundred and seventy acres of land which he improved and upon which he has since continued to reside. He is engaged in dairy farming and in that business he has been very successful, his farm being one of the most perfectly equipped and highly improved of its kind in his part of the state.

On July 7, 1872, Mr. Piper was united in marriage to Miss Ada Clinkenbeard, a native of Douglas county, Oregon, and a daughter of James L. and Mary A. (Holman) Clinkenbeard, the former of whom was born in Kentucky and the latter in Missouri. The father emigrated to Oregon in 1847, when a young man, and settled upon a donation claim located on Tualitin plains. He, however, maintained his residence in Portland for a number of years, after which he moved to Wilbur, in Douglas county, and there purchased a large ranch, upon which he lived for many years and then removed to Coos Bay and retired from active business. The mother as a young girl emigrated with her parents to Oregon in 1845 and celebrated her marriage some years later in Portland. Mr. and Mrs. Clinkenbeard after a residence of a few years in Portland removed to Wilbur, Douglas county, where they purchased a large ranch, upon which they resided for many years and then removed to Coos Bay, where their remaining days were passed. To them nine children were born, all of whom reside in Oregon except one sister, who makes her home in Washington, and a brother and two sisters, who are residents of California. Mrs. Piper received her early

MR. AND MRS. W. B. PIPER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

education in the public schools of Oregon and later was graduated from Wilbur Academy, and for some time previous to her marriage was engaged in teaching school. Mr. and Mrs. Piper are the parents of four children. William F., born in 1873, attended the Oregon State Agricultural College and is now employed in dredging in the service of the government. Mrs. Harry B. Webster, the second child, was born in 1874 and now resides in Los Angeles, California. Claude B., born in 1877, is married and lives on the old homestead. Mrs. Florence Nowlin, who completes the family, is also married and resides on the home farm.

Mr. Piper is a member of the republican party but is very liberal in his political views, and fraternally is a member of the Masonic lodge of Marshfield. He is one of the well known and highly respected citizens of Coos county. As a farmer specializing in the dairy business he is known to be one of the most scientific and up-to-date men of his class engaged in that special feature of farming. He has taken great pride in the development and improvement of his property, which is now one of the finest places of its kind in his part of the state.

STEPHEN A. LOWELL. The list of the leading citizens of Oregon contains the name of Stephen Arthur Lowell, who is one of the representative residents of Umatilla county. His record as a lawyer, as a public official and as a publicist, has gained for him the confidence and good-will of all with whom he has been brought in contact. As judge of the circuit court of the state he won high encomiums from his fellowmen by reason of the fidelity with which he discharged his official duties. Moreover, he has done much to mold public sentiment in support of material, moral and civic ideals, and progressive political policies. As a lecturer and writer for the press his eloquence and clear thinking have made a lasting impress upon the state.

The subject of this sketch was born in West Minot, Androscoggin county, Maine, January 1, 1859. His parents were William and Hannah (Attwood) Lowell, the latter a descendant of the Pilgrims. She was born in 1824, and lived to an advanced age, passing away in Oregon in 1911. The father, William Lowell, a member of the famous New England family of that name, was a country merchant, and in his time a distinguished political leader in the Pine Tree state. In early life he was an old line whig, and when new issues arose he became one of the founders of the republican party. He represented his district in both branches of the Maine legislature, and participated in the enactment of the historic legislation of that state, including the first prohibition law, of which he was an ardent supporter. He was born in 1803 and died in 1889.

Stephen A. Lowell was educated in the public schools of Maine, at Hebron Academy and Bates College, from which latter institution he was graduated in 1882, receiving the Bachellor of Arts degree, later followed by that of Master of Arts in course. In early manhood he engaged in teaching, beginning that work at seventeen years of age. For a year he was principal of Foxcroft Academy in Piscataquis county, Maine, but in 1883 he began the study of law in the office of Judge George C. Wing of Auburn, Maine, who directed his legal studies until his admission to the bar of his native state in 1885. Mr. Lowell was appointed by Governor Marble a member of the state board of normal school trustees, and served thereon until he came to Oregon in 1891.

Upon his arrival in this state he located in Pendleton, where he has since resided. For a time he was engaged in the newspaper business, as editor of the Pendleton Tribune, but in the fall of 1892 he became associated with the late Thomas Griffin Hailey in the practice of law, under the firm name of Hailey & Lowell. He has served as city attorney of Pendleton and also as clerk of the supreme court for its eastern Oregon district. In 1895 Governor Lord appointed him judge of the circuit court of the state, vice James A. Fee, resigned, and in 1896 he was elected by the people to the same office, and continued upon the bench until 1900, when he declined renomination and resumed the active practice of his profession, forming a partnership with Henry J. Bean, now a member of the Oregon supreme court. In 1902 the old firm of Hailey & Lowell was revived, and continued until Mr. Hailey was appointed associate justice of the state supreme court in 1905. Judge Lowell then practiced alone until he organized the partnership of Lowell & Winter in 1907, the junior member being John P. Winter, one of the ablest of Oregon's lawyers, which partnership continued until May, 1912. Judge Lowell is regarded as one of the leading lawyers of the state, and has a clientage of distinctively representative character, which connects him with important litigation in the courts of the eastern counties, and the federal courts. He is a brilliant advocate, remarkably successful before juries, impressive in equity cases, and a safe counsellor. Systematic and methodical in habit, sober and discreet in judgment anxious that justice shall be done, conscientious in the discharge of every duty, he easily takes rank among the leaders upon the bench and at the bar. Had his lot been cast in a great city, no fame would have risen higher in Oregon.

Judge Lowell is pleasantly situated in his home life, having been married in West Minot, Maine, June 4, 1884, to Miss Ella Purington, daughter of Elisha and Sarah (Williamson) Purington of North Anson, Maine. They have two children: William L. Lowell, born June 30, 1888, who is a graduate of the University of Oregon, and engaged in the newspaper business; and Margaret, born July 6, 1892, who is a student in the University of Pacific. The family attend the Congregational church, and Judge Lowell is prominent in fraternal relations. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity, and has served as master of Pendleton lodge [illegible] and as grand orator of the grand lodge of the state in 1912. He is a member of the State Historical Society, and of the Oregon Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

Always a republican in politics, although never an extreme partisan, he has been a most vigorous and consistent advocate of political decency, and a tireless opponent of machine domination. He has fearlessly arrayed himself in opposition to all special privileges and espoused the cause of the average man. His writings which have appeared in the leading journals of the state, have awakened wide-spread interest, and called forth strong commendation from the patriotic element in all parties. For thirty years Mr. Lowell has been a popular and efficient public speaker, his services being in demand upon all occasions. He has delivered addresses upon almost every subject demanding attention in his time. Perhaps no other citizen of Oregon has addressed so many audiences upon so wide a variety of topics.

His platform work in attracting attention to Oregon's undeveloped resources, the opening of the Columbia river to commerce, the adoption of a comprehensive water code, and the establishment of national irrigation enterprises, constitutes an important chapter in the history of the commonwealth. As president of the State Bar Association he supported the movement, then in its infancy, for the initiative and referendum, giving it its first substantial impetus toward adoption by the people. In advocacy of the Australian ballot and the direct primary he was a pioneer, and has always been a vigorous advocate of equal suffrage. He is recognized as a man of unquestioned integrity of character, fearless in the discharge of his duties, and in the expression of his honest convictions. He possesses the force of a statesman, but has never been willing to practice the arts of the politician. He has labored earnestly for public welfare, and his efforts have redounded to the credit of his city, county and state.

CHARLES A. BURDEN, the senior member of the Burden & Graham Shoe Company, of Eugene, was born in Bowmanville, near Toronto, Canada, July 1, 1870, a son of Samuel and Isabella (Younie) Burden, natives of Devonshire, England, and Canada, respectively. The father emigrated from the mother country to Canada with his parents at the age of eight years. He received a good education in the schools of Canada and became a teacher, a profession which he followed for many years. Later in life, however, he embarked in the wholesale and retail produce business, in which connection, he remained until his death in 1898, when he had reached the age of sixty-eight years. In his fraternal connections he was a Knight Templar Mason. The mother, who was of Scotch extraction, was a cousin of Lord Mount Stevens.

Charles A. Burden was educated in the common and high schools of Canada, after which he took a two years' course in Yale College. During the last five years of the time in which he was obtaining his education he worked at cabinet-making, thus earning money to support himself while gaining his education. He settled in Oregon in the fall of 1897, where his previous training and experience secured him a position of physical director in the University of Oregon, a position which he held with distinction to himself and credit to that institution for nine years. At the close of that period, desiring to enter commercial pursuits, he formed a partnership with David M. Graham and they bought the retail shoe business of Frank Hampton. Entering upon this business with a broad knowledge of men, a reasonable amount of capital and the ability to look after details to which he had trained himself in his educational career, he was able to be of great service to the firm and this concern is now one of the well known retail shoe stores in Eugene.

Mr. Burden was married June 23, 1903, to Miss Carrie May Hovey, a daughter of the Hon. A. G. Hovey, of whom mention is made on another page of this volume. Mrs. Burden is a member of the Christian Science church of Eugene.

Any city is fortunate in having among its citizens and business men so capable and well educated a man as Charles A. Burden, who possesses those qualities of education, energy, industry and ambition which make for good citizenship. Aside from the business which requires most of his time and which he helps so ably in managing, he takes time to assist in the civic and social duties of Eugene and vicinity and is an extremely popular man in the wide circle in which he moves.

ARTHUR B. FLINT, a progressive and enterprising agriculturist residing at Scholls, eight miles southwest of Beaverton, devotes his time and energies to the operation of a farm of two hundred and thirty-five acres. He is numbered among the worthy native sons of this state, his birth having occurred in Washington county, on the 8th of March, 1870. His parents, Benjamin T. and Julia E. Flint, are mentioned at greater length on another page of this work. Our subject supplemented his early education by a course of study in the University of Oregon, attending that institution during the years 1898 and 1899. When a young man of twenty-four years he started out as an agriculturist on his own account, taking charge of his father's farm of five hundred acres and operating the same until 1908. In that year the property was divided between himself and his brother, two hundred and thirty-five acres thereof being his share. Under his care the tract has become one of the best improved farms of the locality, two hundred acres thereof being under a high state of cultivation. He raises the cereals best adapted to soil and climate, each year harvesting good crops as a reward for the care and labor which he bestows upon the fields.

On the 9th of November, 1898, Mr. Flint was united in marriage to Miss Cornelia A. York, a native of Arkansas and a daughter of John W. and Margaret York, who were born in North Carolina. They resided in that state until the early '70s and then removed to Arkansas, while the year 1876 witnessed their arrival in Washington county, Oregon. There Mr. York operated a farm until 1910, when he took up his abode in Hillsboro and has since enjoyed the fruits of his former toil in well earned ease. He and his wife have five living children and one daughter, Martha L., who was the wife of W. H. French and passed away, April 25, 1909; the others are: Charity, the wife of W. R. Baldra, of Portland; Joel T., living at Reedville, Oregon; Mrs. Flint; John A., who is a resident of Douglas, Arizona, and Alice, the wife of Thomas Hughes, of Portland. Mr. and Mrs. Flint have three children, namely: Julia E., whose natal day was December 26, 1901; Leland A., whose birth occurred on the 2d of March, 1903; and Waldo B., who was born on the 27th of June, 1907.

Mr. Flint gives his political allegiance to the republican party and for one term, from 1904 until 1906, ably represented his county in the state legislature. He likewise assisted in organizing the Grange and became one of its charter members. His life has been one of continuous activity and today he is numbered among the substantial and esteemed citizens of his native county.

ROBERT S. FRENCH, a retired resident of Cove, is one of the extensive landowners and substantial citizens of the town, owning five hundred and thirty acres of farm and timber land in association with his brother Harris and also considerable town property. He studied pharmacy and was engaged in business as a pharmacist at La Grande for a couple of years but owing to ill health has since been obliged to lead an outdoor life. His birth occurred in Cove, Oregon, on the 21st of May, 1885, his father being H. H. French, who passed away in 1901. The son obtained his early education in the schools of Cove and in 1901 entered the Bishop Scott Military Academy of Portland, in which he spent one year. Subsequently he became enrolled as a student in the Hill Military Academy of Portland, from which institution he was graduated with honors in June, 1905. He served as captain of Company A in the college military organization and was also editor of the alumni notes in the college paper. In the fall of 1905 he entered the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In the summer of 1906 he returned to Cove and was here married, on the 27th of July, to Miss Era L. Trippeer, a daughter of Joseph E. Trippeer, a sketch of whom appears on another page of this work. In the fall Mr. French returned with his bride to Philadelphia and resumed his studies in the College of Pharmacy, from which, at the end of two years, he graduated with a class of one hundred and fifty, winning several honorable mentions. The date of his graduation was May 21, 1908. During his student days he took up research work in bacteriology. His son, Stewart Gautier, was born on the 29th of March, 1908.

After his graduation Mr. French was engaged in business as a pharmacist of La Grande for two years, but ill health made close confinement inadvisable and he has since led an outdoor life. In association with his brother Harris he owns five hundred and thirty acres of farm and timber land and also considerable town property in Cove. He likewise owns property in La Grande, is a stockholder in the Cove Bank and has other investments. He gives his political allegiance to the democratic party and is a member of the city council. His fraternal relations are with the Masons. He has won a creditable degree of prosperity for one of his years and is well deserving of mention in this volume as a representative and worthy citizen of his native state and county.

J. P. EASTER, M. D. One of the most public-spirited, charitable, efficient and broad-minded men in Coos county at the present time is Dr. J. P. Easter, who formerly practiced medicine but is now giving his attention to a small farm of eleven acres. He practiced medicine for forty years in Ohio, Kansas, Oregon, and California, and his efficiency in his profession combined with his kindly and generous heart has made his career useful and his life beneficent. He was born in Highland county, Ohio, September 12, 1842, and is a son of John and Mary Ann (Miller) Easter, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Virginia. Dr. Easter's grandfather was born in North Carolina, and his grandmother came from Pennsylvania. His parents were among the pioneer settlers of Ohio and the father followed farming in that state until his death. His wife afterward removed to Kansas and passed away at Burlingame. They were the parents of nine children, four of whom are still living as follows: Samuel R. of Montezuma, Iowa; Alexander C., of Burlingame, Kansas; Mrs. Angeline Geesling of Oklahoma; and J. P., the subject of this sketch. Those deceased are John B., Benjamin W., Jeptha H., and Enoch. The latter died at the age of eighty years.

Dr. Easter received his early education in the public schools of Highland, Ohio. In 1863 he enlisted in the Twenty Fourth Ohio Independent Battery and served for two years and thirteen days, receiving an honorable discharge at the close of hostilities. He immediately continued his education, entering Franklin College in Clinton, Ohio, later pursuing a medical course in Cincinnati, where he graduated in 1869. He practiced medicine for more than forty years, locating in various parts of the United States. He was well known as an efficient physician in Ohio, Kansas, and California, and his career in Oregon has been marked with success. His residence in this state dates from 1898, in which year he settled in Coos county, where he practiced for many years. He has now retired from the active work of his profession and is living on a small farm eleven miles up the Coquille river from Myrtle Point. His property is known as the Maplehurst farm and here Dr. Easter gives his attention to the cultivation of small fruits. He is interested in dairying and has recently purchased a flock of milk goats for this purpose. His farm, although small, is highly developed and well improved and forms one of the model properties in Coos county.

For twenty-nine years Dr. Easter has preached the gospel in this section of the country, actuated only by the desire to promote the spirit of Christianity among his fellow citizens. He received no pay for his services during this long period of time, with the exception of the last two years. He is one of the most public-spirited men of his town. In his capacity as physician he persuaded county Judge Dyer to purchase property with which to establish a poorhouse in Coos county and gave his personal labor and attainments to its management as house physician for two years and six months. The institution was established in 1886 and during the short period of Dr. Easter's connection with it, he put it upon a financially firm basis and made it a paying institution. The poor farm is located four miles beyond Coquille City on Cunningham creek in Coos county and in its improvement and efficient state is a monument to the broad charity which has always actuated Dr. Easter in all the phases of his life.

Dr. Easter has been twice married. In June, 1867, he wedded Miss Nancy Jane Frump, a native of Highland county, Ohio. To this union were born three children: William Carey and Benjamin E., both of whom are deceased; and Belle, the wife of M. O. Hooton of Coquille City. The mother of these children died in 1873, and in the following year Dr. Easter was again married, his second union being with Miss Martha A. Musgrove, who was born in Jackson county, Ohio, and who received her education in her native state. She and her husband are the parents of three children: Wyckliffe, born February 28, 1875, who is married and lives in Modoc county, California, with his wife and two children, Kenneth and Dorsey Dale; Chester L., born May 20, 1878, who is married and lives in Boise, Idaho, where he is acting as secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association; and Annie, the deceased wife of Arthur E. Follett of Dallas, Polk county, Oregon.

Dr. Easter affiliates with the church of Christ and his career has been a valuable asset in religious expansion in Coos county. He preached the gospel without pay for twenty-nine years working for the promotion of the Christian religion in that section. He has won success in the various walks of life with which he has affiliated during the course of his long career and there is no more widely loved person in Coos county today than this genial and kindly old man who in the seventy years of his life has done nothing that was not useful, honorable, and worthy.

JOHN W. GEARY, M. D. An honorable ancestry is a thing to be proud of even in this democratic age and in this republican country. A long line of brilliant and distinguished forefathers gives to a man a valuable asset of knowledge that his family has been worthy and distinguished through long generations. Just as we like our fathers to be honest and responsible men so we like to feel that our father's father and his ancestors back through the ages were honorable, too. John W. Geary has behind him a long line of distinguished ancestors. The family is an old one and was originally of Scotch origin. A representative moved to Ireland and afterwards to England. The first of the name in that country was Sir Francis Geary, 1710-1796. At the outbreak of the war with Spain he was a lieutenant and served in the navy for many years. He was later promoted and made commander of the Squirrel, of twenty guns. He made a rich capture and was put in command of the Chester, of fifty guns. In 1745 he was ordered against the French and joined Captain Warren at the siege of Lewisburg, Nova Scotia. When the enemy surrendered he was sent to carry the news to England and so did not share in the rich prize money. He commanded the Prince Frederick in the channel in 1747 and was in charge of the Cullodon, of seventy-four guns, of which Admiral Summerset was senior officer, in 1755. His coat of arms consisted of a red shield, crossed by two golden bars bearing two mascles on the upper and one on the lower, and on a canton of silver a black anchor. His crest was a naval crown out of which came a left hand and arm in naval uniform, supporting a silver flag with a red cross. Sir Francis Geary was the great-grand-uncle of the subject of this sketch. The Geary of the next generation, the grandfather of Dr. Geary, was the first of the name in America and was for many years the employe of the father of James Buchanan and later held public office in Maryland. He accumulated a considerable fortune and removed to Pennsylvania, where he opened one of the first iron foundries in that state. After the war of 1812 when the tariff was taken off iron he with all of the other foundrymen in that section was completely ruined and he engaged in school-teaching from that time until his death, at the age of forty-five years.

The father of our subject, Edward R. Geary, D. D., was also a teacher, occupying the position of principal of an academy in New Alexandria, Alabama. He was a graduate of Jefferson College in western Pennsylvania, studying for the ministry and preaching in Ohio for fourteen years. He was the first Geary to come to Oregon. He started from Ohio in 1850, coming to this state by way of the isthmus and arriving in Lafayette, Yamhill county, in 1851, where he remained for some years. He was superintendent of Indian affairs of the original Oregon territory at the outbreak of the Civil war, at which time he went to Linn county, Oregon, where he remained many years and assisted in founding Albany College. He later removed to Eugene, where he held the position of regent of the State University until his death, in 1886, at the age of seventy-five years. He had been married twice, having by his first wife two daughters, while by his second wife, who bore the maiden name of Nancy Merrick Woodbridge, he had three sons, of whom John W., of this review, is the eldest. She was a native of New York and was educated at Mount Holyoke Seminary in Massachusetts. Later she became an instructor in a young ladies' seminary at Wooster, Ohio, and it was there that she met and married Dr. Edward R. Geary, the father of our subject. She died in 1889. She was of Revolutionary stock, her paternal grandfather being Colonel Woodbridge. Her second son was Captain Woodbridge Geary, of the Thirteenth Infantry, United States Army, who was a graduate of the West Point Military Academy and was killed at the battle of San Francisco De Malabon, in the war in the Philippines. The other brother is Dr. E. Payson Geary, now a practicing physician at Portland, Oregon.

J. W. Geary, M. D.

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Dr. John W. Geary was born February 16, 1850, at Fredricksburg, Wayne county, Ohio, and received his early education at Forest Grove, Oregon, whence he went to Homer New York, graduating in 1869. He later attended Hamilton College at Clifton, New York, and then entered Lafayette College, at Easton, Pennsylvania. He came west in 1872 and entered the employ of the Northern Pacific railroad, which connection he retained for one year, after which he came to Oregon and taught school for some time. He next entered the Willamette University of Portland and was graduated from the medical department of that institution in 1883. Dr. Geary is essentially a progressive man and keeps his medical knowledge abreast of every new modern discovery. He took a post-graduate course in the New York Polyclinic and later studied in Chicago. He began practice at Halsey, Linn county, Oregon, in 1883 and continued in active practice at that point until 1894. Later he removed to Junction City, Lane county, and in 1899 to Burns, Harney county, where he continues to carry on a general practice. He is a member of the District Medical Society of Eastern Oregon, of the Oregon State Medical Society and of the American Medical Association. He has built up a prosperous practice during his years of activity and is well known throughout the county as a capable and able physician.

He was married September 3, 1903, to Miss Phoebe L. Kelley, a daughter of Captain Kelley, the first receiver of the district land office. By this union was born one son, Woodbridge Kelley. Dr. Geary is named for an uncle, John W. Geary who was a prominent figure in San Francisco politics for some time and took an active part in the Mexican war. He was first United States postal agent in San Francisco in 1849 and first mayor of that city. He was later appointed governor of Kansas by President Pierce at a time when that state was in a very disordered condition. He performed a remarkable work in restoring tranquility and when he had accomplished what he set out to do he resigned his office. Later he removed to Pennsylvania and when the Civil war broke out raised the Twenty-eighth Volunteer Infantry from that state, serving as its colonel. He continued his connection therewith throughout the period of hostilities and was retired with the rank of major general. The Grand Army post at Eugene, Oregon, is named in his honor.

Dr. Geary is a splendid type of western citizenship. He is prominent in many different lines of activity in his native state and his talents are not confined entirely to his profession. He is prominent in the Masonic order and is a past master of that organization. He has gone through the various chairs of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is now chairman of the board of school trustees of Burns, taking an active part in the building of the new thirty thousand dollar public school which the city is now erecting. This structure upon its completion will be one of the most modern and thoroughly equipped buildings of its size and character in the country. The plans call for a beautiful brick building, whose first story and trimmings are to be made of native stone. Dr. Geary is an active force in the building committee, where his energies and talent have aided greatly in the development of the original plan.

JOHN BERGER, Jr., the owner of a well improved farm of one hundred and forty acres in Washington county, is meeting with a gratifying measure of success in his undertakings as an agriculturist. His birth occurred in Switzerland on the 19th of September, 1862, his parents being John and Mary (Kuntz) Berger. In 1878 they crossed the Atlantic to the United States and took up their abode on a farm in Ohio, where the mother passed away in 1881. The father is still living at the age of seventy-eight years and makes his home with our subject. Their children were three in number, namely: Mary, the deceased wife of Fred Stuckey, of Washington county; John, of this review; and Fred, also living in Washington county, Oregon.

John Berger, Jr., began his education in the schools of his native land and continued his studies in the state of Ohio. He early became familiar with the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist and was identified with farming interests in the Buckeye state until 1881, when he made his way to Washington county, Oregon, being here joined by his father two years later. For more than two years Mr. Berger of this review worked as a farm hand in the employ of Jacob Brugger. He subsequently purchased three hundred and twenty-eight acres of land in association with his father, the property being located about ten miles southwest of Portland. In 1888 the estate was divided and his share thereof was a tract of ninety-eight acres. Since that time, he has extended the boundaries of his farm by an additional purchase of forty acres. The property is well improved in every particular and eighty acres thereof are under a high state of cultivation.

In 1891, Mr. Berger was united in marriage to Miss Alice Yurgen, a native of Switzerland, who, in 1889, emigrated to America with her parents, who still reside on a farm in Washington county, Oregon. She was one of a family of seven children, six of whom are still living, namely: Rosa, Alice, Sophia

Emma, Alfred and Robert. All make their home in this state. Mr. and Mrs. Berger have a family of twelve children, as follows: Alice Lena, whose birth occurred in 1893; Flora, born in 1894; Ella Louisa, whose natal year was 1895; John Ernest, who was born in 1895; Henry born in 1896, was one of a pair of twins, the other dying in infancy; Simon Robert, whose birth occurred in 1897; Mary, whose natal year was 1898; and Carl, Freda, Clara, Lillian and Margaret, who were born in the years 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1903, respectively.

Mr. Berger is a stanch republican in politics, but has never sought nor desired office as a reward for his party fealty. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the German Reformed church, to which his wife and children also belong. He is likewise identified with a German order called the Shrine of Portland. Alert and energetic, he is in close touch with all the interests which are factors in the life of a progressive citizen and of the community at large. He is recognized as a forceful factor for development and improvement in the locality where he now makes his home.

STEVEN A. D. MEEK, an agriculturist whose landed holdings aggregate two hundred and three acres, is numbered among the worthy native sons of Washington county, Oregon, his birth having there occurred on the 20th of October, 1857. His parents, Joseph L. and Virginia Meek, celebrated their marriage in Idaho and a short time afterward came to Washington county, Oregon, settling on a farm in 1840. To the operation of that place Joseph L. Meek devoted his time and energies throughout the remainder of his life, passing away on the 20th of June, 1875. His wife was called to her final rest on the 5th of March, 1900. At the time of his demise Mr. Meek was the owner of four hundred acres of valuable land, all of which was covered with a heavy growth of timber when it came into his possession and was brought under a high state of cultivation through the efforts of himself and his sons. Unto him and his wife were born twelve children, four of whom are still living, namely: Mrs. Riley, of Portland, Oregon; Mrs. Newhard, living in Vollmer, Idaho; Joseph L., Jr., who resides on a farm at Vollmer, Idaho; and Steven A. D., of this review.

When a young man of twenty-six Steven A. D. Meek started out in business life for himself, going to the Coeur d'Alene mines of Idaho, where he spent less than a year. Returning to Washington county, Oregon, he turned his attention to general agricultural pursuits and has since been actively identified with farming interests save for a period of one year spent in the logging business. In 1890 he purchased the farm whereon he now resides and at the present time his possessions embrace two hundred and three acres of well improved land. Three-fifths of the property has been thoroughly tilled and the remainder is fine pasture and timber land. Mr. Meek also owns property in North Plains and has long been numbered among the substantial and leading citizens of his community.

On the 26th of February, 1896, Mr. Meek was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude A. Pasley, who was born in Illinois on the 22d of June, 1879, her parents being George and Martha (Sewell) Pasley, natives of Illinois and Indiana, respectively. They were married in the Prairie state and a short time afterward removed to Kansas, where they continued to reside for eight years. In 1888 they came to Washington county, Oregon, where George Pasley passed away on the 21st of October, 1904. His widow, who is now the wife of M. M. Harvey, has since made her home at Hillsboro. Mrs. Meek was the eldest of three children, the others being Mrs. Lennie Billion and Wallace, both of Portland, Oregon. Our subject and his wife have eight children, as follows: Robert M., who was born on the 1st of March, 1897; Clarence D., whose natal day was November 11, 1898; Steven A. D., Jr., whose birth occurred on the 3d of October, 1900; Alice M., born July 2, 1902; Ruth V., born February 14, 1904; Gertrude A., March 17, 1906; Pasley N., whose natal year was 1908; and Joseph Lafayette, who was born on the 6th of January, 1910.

Mr. Meek is a stanch republican in politics and has served as a member of the school board twenty years, while for four years he held the office of constable. In 1908 he was honored by election to the legislature and his record in that connection fully justified the expectations of his constituents. Fraternally he has been identified with the Woodmen of the World for twelve years, during ten years of which period he has held the position of clerk. Both he and his wife belong to the ladies' auxiliary of that order. Mr. Meek has spent practically his entire life within the borders of Washington county and no history of the state would be complete without extended mention of his career.

ROBERT LEE ROBINSON, who has devoted his attention to general agricultural pursuits throughout his entire business career, is now the owner of a well improved farm of one hundred acres, eleven miles southwest of Beaverton, near Farmington. His birth occurred in Lee county, Iowa, on the 7th of March, 1847, his parents being George and Martha (Akins) Robinson. In 1859 the family crossed the plains with an ox team, settling in California, where they remained until 1869, which year witnessed their arrival in Washington county, Oregon. George Robinson purchased from Felix Landers a donation claim of six hundred and thirty-one acres and continued to reside thereon throughout the remainder of his life. His wife was called to her final rest, on the 30th of March, 1863. Unto them had been born seven children, as follows: Robert Lee, of this review; Joseph, who is a resident of Washington county, Oregon; Permelia Jane, the wife of Joseph J. Jack, of Washington county; and Leah T., Jacob, Annie and George, all of whom are deceased. George Robinson later married Miss Mary J. Bailey, a native of Ireland, by whom he had two children: George S., living in Washington county, this state; and Mary E., the wife of Josiah Miller, also of this county. When George Robinson passed away on the 13th of January, 1888, the community lost one of its honored pioneer residents.

Robert Lee Robinson attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education and started out as an agriculturist on his own account at the age of twenty. He devoted his attention to the cultivation of rented land for four years and on the expiration of that period came into possession of his share of his father's estate—one hundred acres. He has since been engaged in its further cultivation and improvement and now owns a model farming property, forty acres being under a high state of cultivation. In the work of the fields he has won a well merited measure of success and has long been numbered among the substantial and representative citizens of the community.

Mr. Robinson has been married twice. In 1873 he wedded Miss Barbara E. Ferguson, a native of Iowa, who passed away on the 24th of July, 1898. On the 9th of October of that year Mr. Robinson was again married, his second union being with Miss Mary Jane Patterson, who was born at Roseburg, Oregon, on the 16th of December, 1878. Her parents, James and Kate (McCollum) Patterson, are residents of Washington county, Oregon. They had six children, namely: Kate; Charles, who is deceased; Mrs. Robinson; Maggie May; Hattie; and Wilhelmina, who died in infancy. Our subject and his wife have eight children, two sons and six daughters, as follows: Ida Jane, Clarence Lee, George Washington, Clara May, Rachel Ann, Ruth Irene, Fannie Lucile and Annie Bell.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Robinson has supported the men and measures of the republican party, but the honors and emoluments of office have never had any attraction for him. His religious faith is that of the Baptist church, to which his wife also belongs. The period of his residence in this state covers more than four decades and the circle of his friends has steadily grown as the circle of his acquaintance has widened.

JOHN DOBBIN. On the list of Union county's honored dead appears the name of John Dobbin, who during his lifetime was one of the extensive landowners of the Grande Ronde valley. He was born in Richland county, Ohio, in 1840, and was of Irish descent, his father, William Dobbin, having been born on the Emerald isle. He emigrated to the United States when but seventeen years of age and on reaching this country settled first in New York. There he was married and later he removed to Ohio, from which state he subsequently went to Galesburg, Illinois, where his remaining days were passed.

In the schools of Ohio and Illinois John Dobbin acquired a good education and the period of his boyhood and youth was divided between the duties of the schoolroom, the pleasures of the playground and the tasks assigned by parental authority. He remained at home until 1860, when he went to Pikes Peak, Colorado, where he spent the summer, after which he returned to Illinois, having been accompanied on the trip by his brother William. Three years later, in 1863, he joined a party of five young men who were starting for the far west with horses and wagons, and ere they reached their destination the company were compelled to suffer many hardships. It was necessary at last for them to desert their wagons and on one occasion they went for three days with only prairie dogs for food. Before Walla Walla, Washington, was reached their shoes were either worn out or gone entirely, and only two of the party arrived at that point, the others stopping at different points, discouraged by the trouble which they had encountered with the Indians. Mr. Dobbin continued his journey as far as the Grande Ronde, where he remained for only a short time, however, going thence to Idaho. Soon afterward he returned to the Grande Ronde valley, locating about one mile from the city of Union, where he engaged in farming for two years. At the end of that time he sold his interests there and went to the Willamette valley and there purchased cattle, after which he returned to the Grande Ronde valley, locating on land which has since been incorporated within the city limits of Union. He engaged in agricultural pursuits for a number of years, his efforts winning him most gratifying success, and as he prospered from time to time he purchased other land in various parts of the valley until he had in his possession nearly four thousand acres at the time of his death. For many years he also engaged in sheep-raising, and this branch of his business proved a gratifying source of income.

Mr. Dobbin was married, on the 15th of December, 1872, to Miss Florence Johnson, a native of Indiana and a daughter of David Johnson. In 1856 her father took up his residence in Missouri, where he remained for eight years, after which he started for Oregon in 1864, leaving Missouri on the 17th of April. They journeyed by ox teams and the party with which they traveled consisting of sixty men, suffered serious interference from the Indians. At one time they were openly attacked and their cattle stampeded and it was necessary for them to be escorted for a part of the journey by a company of cavalry. Five of the party remained to await another outfit but before it arrived two had been killed. After reaching Oregon Mr. Johnson and his family stopped for a couple of weeks at La Grande, after which they proceeded to the Willamette valley where they maintained their residence for only one year, however. Returning again to the Grande Ronde valley he located on land which is now the site of the Centennial Hotel and there he remained until 1875, when he took up agricultural pursuits on a large scale. He passed away in 1910 at the age of eighty-six years.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Dobbin were born five children, as follows: Hettie, who married Dr. W. H. Ewin of Sunnyside, East Portland; Margaret, at home; John F., engaged in farming; William M., a resident of Sherman county, Oregon; and James D., at home. In 1889 occurred the death of John Dobbin and with his passing Union county lost one of its substantial and representative citizens. The term progress had been the keynote to his successful career, and his well-directed efforts were potent forces in the accumulation of a fortune which at the time of his death left his family in most comfortable circumstances. They own considerable valuable land and their beautiful home in Union is well known and popular because of its warm hospitality.

R. M. ROBINSON owns and successfully operates two hundred and seventy acres of choice agricultural land in Josephine county, on a portion of which he has in bearing one of the finest among the far-famed apple orchards of Oregon. His birth occurred in Tennessee on the 17th of July, 1857, his parents being James J. C. and Susan (Jackson) Robinson, who spent their entire lives in that state.

R. M. Robinson was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. During the early years of his life he was engaged in farming and in addition he gave some attention to his trade—that of a carpenter. In 1878 he removed from his native state to Denton county, Texas, where he spent three years and in 1881 he moved to Oregon and located at Salem, where he continued to reside for a period of three years, after which he removed to Josephine county, spending his first night as a camper on the eighty acres which he afterward preempted and on which he later established his home and built his residence. Since the night of his first camp in Josephine county he has continued to reside here and from time to time has added by purchase to his original preemption claim of eighty acres until he now owns a farm comprising two hundred and seventy acres of fine agricultural land. The original eighty upon which he built his home is now one of the finest Spitzenburg apple orchards in this portion of the state. In the fall of 1910 he had the good fortune to receive five thousand dollars in cash for his apple crop, the most of which was grown upon eight acres of his orchard plantings. In addition to his apple industry he harvests an average of one hundred tons or more of alfalfa per annum and is able from other portions of his farm to make a considerable harvest of various other forage plants.

On the 3d of August, 1875, at the early age of eighteen years, Mr. Robinson was united in marriage to Miss Isadora McCann, a native of Tennessee, by whom he had nine children, eight of whom are still living. Shubael E. follows farming in Josephine county. John B. also devotes his attention to general agricultural pursuits in Josephine county. Kirkman K. has a fellowship in the Worcester University at Worcester, Massachusetts. As a student in the University of Oregon he specialized in psychology and philosophy and he was graduated with the master's degree in the class of 1909. Addie E. is a teacher in the district schools. She has been a pupil for two years of the State University and intends later to complete her studies at that institution. Chloe A. is the wife of Paul Ruttencutter, a ranchman of Josephine county. Lucius, a high-school graduate, is associated with his father in farming. Radburn R. is now in attendance at the high school at Grants Pass. Ennis is also a pupil of the high school at Grants Pass.

Mr. Robinson is in his political affiliations associated with the republican party but has always refused political preferment. Fraternally he is identified with the Woodmen of the World, belonging to Rogue River Camp, No. 55, of Grants Pass. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife and children also belong. R. M. Robinson is one of the most enterprising and successful agriculturists of this portion of the state of Oregon. By careful attention to his business as an orchardist he has successfully demonstrated that Josephine county is adapted in soil and climate to the successful and profitable growing of high grade apples. It is largely due to him that the town of Wilderville in Josephine county has been put on the map of the state as one of the choice locations for the growing of apples. He is widely known as a man of truthfulness and integrity in his business transactions and is always found associated with every movement of public interest seeking the improvement of the county in which he lives.

ALBERT HINDMAN, a wealthy and prominent farmer and stockman of Baker county, is the owner of twenty-two hundred acres of land, all of which is improved with the exception of a forty-acre tract of timber land. He was born in Ohio on the 14th of May, 1855, his parents being McClure J. and Elizabeth (Cyle) Hindman, who were married in the Buckeye state in November, 1853. They first made their home near Lake Erie but subsequently removed to Pottawattamie county, Iowa, where Mr. Hindman was busily engaged in general agricultural pursuits, purchasing large tracts of both timber and farming land. In 1864 they crossed the plains from Iowa to Oregon, making the journey with ox and horse teams. On the Platte river they experienced some trouble with Indians, who stole about thirty head of horses which were never recovered. Arriving in this state about September, 1864, they preempted land in the Powder river valley but later disposed of the same and removed to California in 1863. In July, 1870, they returned to Oregon and the Powder river valley and homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of land near Baker City. After

YORK
LIBRARY

R. M. ROBINSON

ORDWAY AT R. M. ROBINSON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

improving the property Mr. Hindman sold out and purchased what is known as the New York Ranch on Alder creek, a tributary of Burnt river, there following farming and stock-raising for a number of years with great success. At times he had as high as one thousand head of cattle and two or more hundred head of horses on the range. After disposing of that ranch he removed to Baker and now lives on a farm which he owns in Pleasant valley, about twelve miles from that city. He is now about eighty-eight years of age and has long survived his wife, who passed away on the 26th of January, 1893. The period of his residence in this state covers more than four decades and he is well known and highly esteemed as a pioneer whose labors have contributed in substantial measure to the work of development and improvement here. Unto him and his wife were born seven children, three sons and four daughters. Albert, of this review, is the first in order of birth. Florence, living in Baker, is the wife of J. E. Dorsett and the mother of one daughter. Oscar, who makes his home about four miles east of Durkee, has been twice married, his first union being with Miss Julia Hudspeth, by whom he had seven children, five of whom, two sons and two daughters, are still living. For his second wife he chose Miss Alice Stevenson, and by this union there is one son. Lilly passed away in Baker in the year 1864. Mildred also died in Baker, her demise occurring in 1877. Mark, who resides on a farm about seven miles northwest of Weiser, Idaho, married Miss Eva Griffith, by whom he had three daughters, two of whom still survive. Fannie, living near Caldwell, Idaho, is the wife of C. L. Kirtz and the mother of two sons.

Albert Hindman was educated in Baker City, Oregon, his principal instructors being Professors Grubbs and Barrett, noted educators, who are now deceased. After putting aside his text-books he engaged in stock-raising in association with his father and this branch of activity, together with real-estate dealing, has claimed his attention to the present time. Among the noted places he has owned was that known as the old Kitchen Ranch on Alder creek, comprising a quarter section of land which he homesteaded in 1883 and adjoining Straw Ranch on the west. The latter ranch was noted as the point from which the old emigrant road left the creek to the north to cross over the dividing mountain to the Powder river valley. Mr. Hindman now owns two of the most noted places on the line of travel from Umatilla Landing on the Columbia river to the mines of Idaho basin—the Express Ranch and the J. F. Jarvis Ranch, which were known as stage stations from 1862 until 1884. Express Ranch, a stage station and roadhouse, came into possession of C. W. Durkee in 1862 and comprises one hundred and sixty acres. The Jarvis Ranch, also a famous roadhouse on the old emigrant road, adjoins Express Ranch on the west and comprises three hundred and twenty acres. Mr. Hindman here owns five hundred and twenty acres of land in one body, which includes the town site of Durkee, a station on the line of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company and a thriving and prosperous village. It boasts two good stores, a hotel, livery stable, blacksmith shop, etc. The land outside of the town site is all enclosed and well improved and is worth one hundred dollars an acre. Mr. Hindman also owns other property, including a tract of eighty acres of hay land about two miles east of Durkee, one hundred and sixty acres of farming land about a half mile north of Durkee, three hundred and twenty acres of farming and grazing land three miles northwest of Durkee, six hundred acres of grazing land about six miles northeast of that town and forty acres of timber land. He likewise owns three hundred and twenty acres of farming land about forty-five miles from Canyon City, in Grant county, so that altogether he has twenty-two hundred acres of land, all of which is fenced and improved with the exception of a timber tract of forty acres. He now owns about fifteen hundred head of cattle and about two hundred and fifty head of horses and mules and in times past has had double this number. Throughout his entire business career he has been engaged principally in stock-raising and land-dealing and he has been uniformly successful in his undertakings.

On the 10th of December, 1882, Mr. Hindman was united in marriage to Miss Addie Powers, her parents being E. R. and Annie (Wright) Powers, who were married in Sedalia, Missouri, about 1854. During the Civil war the father served in the Confederate army for about three years. He then went to California but subsequently returned to his family in Missouri and about 1876 removed to Montana, where he was engaged in mining and farming until about 1892. At that time he came to Oregon, spending the remainder of his life with his son in law, Albert Hindman, in whose home he passed away about 1904. The demise of his wife had occurred in Missouri in 1875. They were the parents of six children, three sons and three daughters. The two surviving members of the family are Edward Powers and Dora Foster. Unto Albert and Addie (Powers) Hindman were born five children, three sons and two daughters, as follows: Claude, whose birth occurred on the 22d of May, 1884, and who is still at home with his father; Elmer, who was born on the 1st of March, 1886, and is now deceased; Edith, whose natal day was October 31, 1888; Edgar, whose birth occurred on the 19th of January, 1892, and Edna, who was born on the 6th of June, 1895. The three last named are also yet at home. The wife and mother passed away on the 18th of July, 1903, and on the 27th of April, 1906, at Baker, Oregon, Mr. Hindman was again married, his second union being with Eva Meyers. Her father came to this state from Kansas about 1871 and resides in Baker county. The mother, however, was called to her final rest about eighteen or nineteen years ago. By his second wife Mr. Hindman has two sons and one daughter, as follows: Lowell, who was born on the 13th of November, 1907; Louise, whose birth occurred on the 24th of May, 1909; and Charles, whose natal day was September 20, 1910. About eight years ago Mr. Hindman became identified with the Masons lodge at Baker, and has since been a worthy exemplar of the fraternity. He has never refused assistance to the needy nor turned away the hungry from his door and, living at noted places on the highway, has fed thousands. Everywhere he is held in high regard and his friends are legion.

IRVIN E. CUTSFORTH, who for ten years has been engaged in the cultivation of his home farm, one-half mile north of Gervais, was born in Michigan, February 6, 1862, his parents being Thomas and Sarah (Harrison) Cutsforth, both of whom were natives of England, the former having been born in Yorkshire in 1823 and the latter in Lincolnshire in 1833. The father came to the United States at the age of twenty-five years and went directly to Michigan, where some of his family had preceded him and where he at once rented land for cultivation. In addition to this he engaged in landscape gardening and accepted employment by the day until he purchased a farm and entered upon agricultural pursuits independently. in 1851 he was married to Sarah Harrison, the daughter of John Harrison. Mrs. Thomas Cutsforth had come to America at the age of fifteen years and had also gone directly to Michigan. For the first fifteen years after their marriage they resided upon the farm which Mr. Cutsforth had previously purchased, but at the end of that time they sold their property and removed to Wisconsin, settling near Poynette. For the ensuing twenty-five years the father engaged in buying farms for speculative purposes, selling them immediately after he had improved them. He carried this on until his retirement and removal to Poynette in 1890, where he resided for five years, and then after a three years' residence in New Auburn he came to Oregon to live retired on a small place he had purchased near Gervais. This was his home until a year before his death, on March 6, 1907. Mr. Cutsforth was a man whom any community would value because he was always interested in everything which pertained to the public good and was active in enforcing any measures which would tend to bring about an improved condition. Throughout his life he was engaged in speculating in land and so successful was he in this that he was financially able to give each of his children a good start in life. To Mr. and Mrs. Cutsforth nine children were born. Joseph, the eldest, who is a resident of Gervais, married Elizabeth McDonald and to them five children have been born. Thomas, who lives at Riddle, Oregon, married Gertrude Gevans and to them four children have been born. Frederick, the third son, is deceased. John H., who resides in Gervais, married Eva Warren and they are the parents of five children. Irvin E. Cutsforth is the subject of this sketch. Ellen, who is the wife of William McDonald, resides in Poynette, Wisconsin, and is the mother of three children. George H., resides in Riddle, Oregon. He married Nora Rodgers and to them three children have been born. Frank H., who is a resident of Gervais, married Eunice Hovey and has two children. Jarvis E. married Catherine Bohem and they are the parents of one child. They reside in Gervais.

Irvin E. Cutsforth started to earn his own livelihood in Wisconsin at the age of twenty-one years, being employed by the month for the first two years and then purchasing a farm upon which he began working at once. About this time he was married and in 1901 removed to Oregon where the climatic conditions were more pleasing. In Wisconsin he had found the severe weather very trying and, furthermore, his barn had recently been destroyed by lightning, all this influencing him to remove to Oregon. Upon his arrival in this state he purchased one hundred and eight-six acres of what is known as the E. Brown and T. L. Baker donation land claim. This land has all been brought under a high state of cultivation and is proving very profitable for grain and cattle-raising, besides being one of the most improved and best equipped farms in the district, among the recent improvements being the substantial and comfortable two-story house and two large, modern barns. Special attention has been given to the raising of thoroughbred Percheron horses, as well as to other fine breeds, and sheep.

In 1883 occurred the marriage of Mr. Cutsforth to Miss Irene Black, who was born in Poynette, Wisconsin, December 20, 1866. She is the daughter of James and Harriette (Lewsley) Black, both of whom were natives of England but took up their residence near Poynette, Wisconsin, their present home, after they had spent their first years in America on Long Island. The father was a mason by trade, but led the life of an agriculturist whenever circumstances permitted. To Mr. and Mrs. Black four children were born, namely: Emma, the wife of Lester Luther, who is a resident of Poynette, Wisconsin, and has four children; Amelia, who is the wife of Joel F. Keebough, of Poynette, Wisconsin, and has four children; Mary, the wife of C. A. Sawyer, who resides in Gervais, Oregon, and has seven children; and Irene, now Mrs. Irvin E. Cutsforth.

After his marriage Mr. Cutsforth engaged in farming on his property of eighty acres near Poynette, which he devoted to corn and hog-raising, along which lines he has since met with marked success. To Mr. and Mrs. Cutsforth two children have been born. Reuben Jesse, the elder, was born January 15, 1890. He is residing at home and although he has shown some aptitude for machinery, he still assists his father with the management of the farm. He is the owner of a house and lot in Woodburn, Oregon. J. Ross, the younger, whose birth occurred on November 16, 1893, resides at home and takes a great interest in the farm work which he desires to make his life's occupation.

Mr. Cutsforth is a republican but casts his vote for the man and principle concerned rather than for the party. He has never been an office seeker but has served as school director because of his great interest in furthering the welfare of his community, and fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. In religious faith the family are Presbyterians and are close adherents to the faith of that denomination. By his own efforts and because of his great determination to act for the best interests of others as well as himself Mr. Cutsforth has become a strong and important citizen in the community of which he is a member.

EDWARD CARPENTER, who passed away at his home in La Grande at the age of eighty-two years, was born near Buena Vista, December 12, 1828. He was a man who attained the extreme fullness of years and in whom were embodied the virtues of the early pioneers—steadfast purpose, strict integrity and religious zeal—virtues to which the civilization of America is indebted for its splendid development and wonderful progress. He was the son of Daniel Carpenter, who was one of five brothers of English birth, who came to America and settled in Pennsylvania. Later Daniel Carpenter removed to New York and thence to Indiana, where he died. He joined the Mormons at an early day but did not go west with them.

Edward Carpenter in his youthful days had little chance for an education. When only a small lad he drove a team on the Erie canal, between Buffalo and Chillicothe, Ohio. Later he went to northern Indiana and afterward became a sailor on Lake Erie. Finally he went to Wisconsin and in 1861 enlisted in the army in Company I, Thirteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and served for three years and twenty-one days, being with the Third Army Corps, under Captain Kingman. His company was assigned to scout duty in Missouri, Kansas, Kentucky and Tennessee. He was within hearing of the battles of Fort Donald and Fort Henry. After the war he returned to the southern part of Wisconsin and in 1868, in Monroe county, took up a claim on which he erected a cabin and cleared and improved the land. In 1891 he came to La Grande, Oregon, where he resided until his death.

On the 20th of January, 1852, Mr. Carpenter was united in marriage at Concord, Wisconsin, with Miss Almira Stevens, who was born in Brutus, New York, April 10, 1833. She died at the age of seventy-two and was the mother of eight children. Daniel E. was born May 29, 1854, in Concord, Wisconsin. In 1878 he went to the Black Hills, where he was employed for two years in driving a mule team for the government. In 1881 he went to Seward county, Nebraska, where he was employed as a fireman for the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad, and in 1884 was promoted to engineer. He was with this company at the time of the two strikes in 1888. Later he came to La Grande as an engineer on the Union Pacific railroad and in 1896 went to Grand Junction, Colorado, where he has since been employed on a passenger train between that city and Helper, Utah, and is one of the best and oldest men on the road. Victoria was born August 15, 1856, in Jefferson county, Wisconsin, and is now the wife of John Dunaway, of Hot Springs, South Dakota. She is the mother of four children, Ethel, Leafy, Daniel and Zerna. Amanda was born October 25, 1859, in Jefferson county, Wisconsin, and is now the wife of Charles Broughton, of Lagrange, and the mother of three children, Raymond, Ruby and Eula. Royal B. was born July 15, 1866, in Walworth county, Wisconsin. He was a fireman for the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and was killed on this road, October 27, 1896. He married Miss Augusta Roloft and they became the parents of three children, Earl, Gertrude and Glenn. U. S. was born November 5, 1868, at Lagrange, in Walworth county, Wisconsin. In 1888 he went to Nebraska, where he was employed as helper in the roundhouse of the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad for two and one-half years. Subsequently he came to Oregon and was on the helpers of the Union Pacific railroad at Durkee for two and one-half years as a fireman. Later he was an engineer at Baker City, Oregon, for the Sumpter Valley railroad for four years and eight months, after which he went to Grand Junction, Colorado, and for three years was an engineer on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad. Subsequently he returned to Baker City, where he has since been located as an engineer on the Sumpter Valley railroad. He is identified with Blue Lodge, No. 47, A. F. & A. M., at Baker City, Oregon. On the 10th of December, 1895, he married Miss Patience Landreth, of Baker City, and they have become the parents of five children, Sibyl, Floyd, Lyle, Olive and Lola. Edward E. was born July 27, 1871, at Glendale, Wisconsin, and removed with his parents to Oregon. He began life for himself by driving a freight team of eight horses for William Hunter, at which he was employed for three years, and was then engaged in logging for seven years. Subsequently he worked in roundhouses at La Grande, Huntington, Umatilla and The Dalles for five years. He now resides in La Grande, Oregon, where he manages several teams on contracting work. On April 1, 1897, he wedded Miss Emma Good, of La Grande, Oregon, who is a daughter of Albert Good, a pioneer of this section. They have become the parents of four children, Edna A., Albert, Ezra and an infant son. Frank H. was born April 1, 1873, in Wisconsin. He is now a section foreman on the railroad at La Grande and is married to Nora Good. They have one child, Goldie. Raymond C. was born May 24, 1875, in Wisconsin, and came to Oregon with his parents. He was fireman on a railroad for four years and in 1890 he was promoted to the position of engineer. He worked for the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company until 1892, then for the Union Pacific at Rawlins, Wyoming, and later for the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company for six years as engineer. Later he was appointed chief assistant superintendent for the motor cars of the Harriman lines. On the 23d of November, 1911, at Dayton, Washington, he was overcome by gas while on a motor and died from the effects and was buried November 28, 1911, at La Grande, beside his parents. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He was married to Miss Della Eads, of Colorado, and they had four children, Waneta, Della, Alfred and Raymond.

In politics Mr. Carpenter of this review was a stanch republican, and in religion he adhered to the faith of the Christian church. Socially he was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. His whole life was an active, useful and honorable one and throughout the entire community no man was ever more respected or more fully deserved the esteem in which he was held.

CARL E. FISCHER. Although still a young man and not yet having reached the zenith of his business career, Carl E. Fischer, of Springfield, has become one of the prominent lumbermen of the northwest, being the president and manager of the Fischer & Bally Company and secretary of the Fischer Lumber Company located at Marcola, and identified with numerous other similar concerns of the state of Oregon. He was born in Bayfield, Wisconsin, in 1878, his parents being Frederick and Alvina (Toepel) Fischer. The father, who emigrated to the new world in 1868, is a native of Germany and the mother was born in Wisconsin. On reaching the United States Frederick Fischer worked at various occupations until he removed to Wisconsin and in the early '80s engaged in the lumber business. He was an early comer to the community in which he settled and by industry and economy, together with well directed efforts he succeeded in business. In his family were five children: Henry and Frederick, Jr., both of Marcola, Oregon; Carl E., of this review; Adella, the wife of Arthur Brown, of Elgin, Oregon; and Walter, also a resident of Marcola.

Carl E. Fischer was given good educational advantages in his native city, being graduated from its high school and later from the University of Wisconsin. After his graduation in 1900 he came directly to Oregon and began working for the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company as a laborer at a dollar and seventy-five cents a day. He saved his earnings and soon after coming to Oregon took up a timber claim and a little later opened a store in partnership with his brother Henry in Springfield, Oregon. He remained in that connection for only a short time, however, after which he came to Marcola where he embarked in the sawmill business with a combined capital of eighteen hundred dollars belonging to himself and his brother Henry. Business started auspiciously and the two brothers were soon able to induce the father and other brothers to remove to Oregon, which they did in 1903, when they together entered into the lumber business. They continued to operate the mill continuously enlarging the business, until in 1909, when the present concern, known as the Fischer & Bally Company, was incorporated. The business continued growing and Mr. Fischer soon afterward became interested in the Springfield Timber Company, the Fischer-Parks Lumber Company of Eugene and the Fischer Lumber Company of Junction City and Halsey, Oregon. Mr. Fischer's management of business and his handling of details are masterful and his holdings have increased rapidly under his industrious and well directed efforts. He now owns the finest residence property in Springfield which he occupies and it is only just to him to emphasize the fact that he began his business career earning a day wage of one dollar and seventy-five cents.

Mr. Fischer was married in November, 1900, to Miss Emlyn Boutin, of Bayfield, Wisconsin, a daughter of Joseph and Charlotte (Leihy) Boutin, both of whom are natives of Wisconsin. Mrs. Fischer is one of three children born to her parents, her sisters being: Ethel, the wife of Milton Bally, of Springfield, Oregon; and Elsie, who married Harry Stewart, also of that city. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Fischer have been born three children, Jean, Dutee and Angeline. In his political affiliations Mr. Fischer is a republican and although not an office seeker and having little time to devote to politics he takes a commendable interest in the political affairs of his state and nation. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Odd Fellows lodge, being as active as is consistent with his limited time for fraternal matters. The phenomenally successful career of Mr. Fischer is an object lesson illustrating conclusively what energy, industry and ability can accomplish in this great western state. He is known either personally or by reputation to the entire lumber trade of the Pacific coast and in his business dealings he has long since acquired a reputation for the strictest integrity, and makes it his special business to see that every customer is given entire satisfaction. Through the activities of Mr. Fischer in the lumber trade he has been of great service in the development of the resources of Oregon and wherever known he is held in high esteem and accorded the greatest respect.

SIMON E. MILLER. General farming and stock-raising on a large scale are now occupying the time and attention of Simon E. Miller, and his efforts in those directions are being attended with most gratifying and substantial results. He has always made his home in Union county, his birth having occurred on a farm in the Grande Ronde valley about two and a half miles northwest of the city of Union, September 26, 1876. His father, Simon Miller, was born in Switzerland and when but fourteen years of age came to America with his brother Conrad, who was seventeen years of age at that time, their first settlement being in Indiana. Later they both came to Oregon, originally locating in the Willamette valley, but shortly thereafter they came to the Grande Ronde valley.

CARL E. FISCHER

NEW YORK
LIBRARY
AND

Simon Miller, Sr., taking up the farm on which his son was born and now resides, while Conrad Miller located near Union. The father continued on the homestead until his death, in 1887, his time being given to agricultural pursuits and stock-raising. In early life he had married Anna Galloway, whose death occurred in 1885, and in their family were eleven children, eight of whom now survive.

Simon E. Miller spent the period of his boyhood and youth on the home farm and attended the schools near his father's home in the acquirement of an education. Upon attaining his majority he wisely chose as his life work the occupation to which he had been reared, and he has since been engaged in agricultural pursuits, being now the owner of six hundred acres of finely cultivated land, and seven hundred and sixty acres of pasture land. He makes a specialty of raising oats, wheat and barley, and his soil, naturally very rich and fertile, annually yields abundant harvests which are a source of gratifying income. He gives considerable time and attention to his stock interests, also running about five thousand sheep on his ranch and from one hundred to one hundred and fifty horses and cattle.

In February, 1905, Mr. Miller was united in marriage to Miss Elida Stackland, of Cove, and unto them have been born two children, Elida and Bethene. Mr. Miller has never found time to engage in public affairs, although he takes a public-spirited interest in all matters relating to the general welfare and upbuilding of the great commonwealth in which he lives. He is, rather, preeminently a business man, with keen perception and unusual sagacity, and few men deserve more credit for the success which they have attained, for to his own well directed labors alone is due the creditable degree of prosperity which he today enjoys.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN DAVIDSON, who is residing on his farm nine miles northwest of Gervais on the Salem and Champoeg road, was born in Stark county, Illinois, on the 28th of March, 1843, his parents being G. C. and Nancy (Million) Davidson. The father was born near Belleville, Illinois, and the paternal grandfather, who was a native of England, was a captain in the war of 1812, serving on the United States side. The mother was born in Kentucky in 1821, a descendant of a Virginia family. Her parents removed from Virginia to Kentucky where they were extensive slave owners and cotton planters. G. L. Davidson was a juggler in his early days and was employed by Sands and Lee's circus, and it was while on one of these tours in Kentucky that he met Mrs. Davidson. Their marriage occurred while he was still in the employ of Sands & Lee, and because of a contract which bound him to remain with them until a successor could be found, he continued his service until his understudy was able to perform his act. Before he was released from the employ of Sands and Lee he was injured by a serious accident while performing a hangman's act, and for the next three months was obliged to use a silver breathing tube. As soon as he was able to start out for himself in some other line he moved to Stark county, Illinois, where he took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson resided upon this property for four years, during which time two of their children were born. The house in which they lived was built entirely by Mr. Davidson, and it had been necessary to haul the timber eight miles. After their four years' residence they disposed of the property and moved to Peoria where he purchased a hotel and livery barn. Subsequently, on the 28th of March, 1852, he set out for Oregon with his family, crossing the plains with horse teams, their party numbering about two hundred and fifty. The journey was not marred by any untoward happenings barring the death of Mrs. William Green, whom they buried on the plains. The first stop which the party made upon their arrival in Oregon was near Forest Grove, but after a short stay there the Davidsons removed to Dayton and purchased a hotel and livery stable. So successful did this undertaking prove that in the second year Mr. Davidson was able to purchase a half interest in the mercantile store, and for five years he devoted his whole time and attention to these two enterprises which netted him considerable money. After disposing of these interests in 1857, he removed to St. Paul, where he operated a ferry, a store and a warehouse, and also purchased six hundred and forty acres of land known as the DeCere donation land claim. During the next three years he met with many reverses, the first being a big flood when the store house containing twenty thousand bushels of grain worth two dollars a bushel was carried away. This meant a very heavy loss to him as he was depending upon it to fulfill his obligations for shipping flour to the mines of Idaho and eastern Oregon. Again, when he had a large shipment on the dock in Portland ready to be taken up, the river rose to such heights that the flour was ruined. So great was this loss that Mr. Davidson was for the time financially embarassed to such an extent that it was necessary for him to sell practically all his cattle, horses and hogs. At the time of this misfortune he was the owner of seven hundred and fifty acres of land, but turned all of it over to his creditors. With a very small amount of money but the energy, persistency and daring which was characteristic to his nature, he removed to Fairfield, and there opened up a store which he operated for three years before disposing of it and removing to Salem. In this latter city he remained until his death which occurred when he was sixty years of age. His wife had passed away three years previously. They were the parents of six children: Gideon, deceased, formerly a resident of Independence Oregon; William Franklin, the subject of this review; Amelia, the wife of Porter Magness, of Wheatland, Oregon; Bird, of Spokane; G. C., a resident of Marion county; and May, who is wedded to John Ross, of Salem, Oregon. Mr. Davidson was married a second time, and by this union had two children: John, a resident of San Francisco, California; and Minnie, the wife of a Mr. Haden of Walla Walla, Washington. After the death of her husband Mrs. Davidson was married to Ples. Nolan, now deceased. She is living in Walla Walla, Washington, and by her second union had one child, Neva, who is deceased.

At the age of twenty-one years William Franklin Davidson started upon his independent career. He first rented land from his father-in-law, which for one year he cultivated, but at the end of that time he removed to St. Paul where he again remained for but one year. He spent another year at Fairfield where he was interested in a sawmill and then purchased three hundred and thirty acres of land, but because of his desire to give his sons a good start in life he has now only retained one hundred and forty-six acres of the home place. Throughout his agricultural career he has given much of his time to the careful study of the needs and possibilities of the soil and has made for himself as an agriculturist a name which is synonymous with success.

On the 24th of May, 1864, Mr. Davidson was wedded to Miss Anna Coleman of St. Paul, Oregon. Her birth occurred in 1840 and she was the daughter of James and Fanny (Murray) Coleman. It was in the year 1847 that her parents crossed the plains from Iowa and took up a land claim of six hundred and forty acres in Yamhill county where they settled and met with the success they expected to find in this rich western country. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson were the parents of twelve children: Fred, of St. Paul, Oregon; Mary, who is the wife of Hugh Kirkpatrick of Idaho; Eugene, also a resident of St. Paul, and who has two children; Laura, who is the wife of Jerome Jackson of Hubbard, Oregon, and who has three children; John, a resident of St. Paul; Blanche, who is the wife of Charles Gooding; Jane, who is the wife of James Smith of Champoeg, and has five children; Hilda, who is the wife of Fred Gearin, of St. Paul; Ralph, who has assumed charge of his father's place and married Hazel Littlefield, born in 1891, a daughter of Dr. H. J. and Maggie (Nelson) Littlefield, who belonged to one of the pioneer families, and they have one child, Margaret, born in 1910; Chester, who is residing in St. Paul and engaged in contracting and decorating; Edna, deceased; and Arzelia, who is the wife of Paul Reedie, of Salem, Oregon, and has two children. On the 24th of April, 1907, Mrs. Davidson passed away at the age of sixty-two years.

In politics Mr. Davidson is a firm believer in the principles and measures of the democratic party but has never sought public office, although the interest he takes in the welfare of the community has led him to serve as road supervisor for the last ten years and, in fact, he has been connected with this public department from time to time for the last twenty-five or thirty years. Fraternally he is connected with the Ancient Order of United Workmen. In religious faith he is a Roman Catholic. His life record shows what can be accomplished when industry, perseverance and progressiveness are adhered to by a young man when carving out his destiny. By all in his community Mr. Davidson is accounted one of the most respected, most honorable and most faithful citizens.

WILLIAM O. GALAWAY. Wherever men are gathered in the conduct of business interests there is a demand for a bank that will provide a medium of exchange in the transaction of business affairs, and there is no one element which has greater effect in upholding financial stability in a community than has a carefully organized and conservatively conducted bank. Of such an institution William O. Galaway is now cashier and one of the chief stockholders, having aided in the organization of the Washington County Bank, which is situated in the town of Banks, Oregon. He is yet a young man but has already made for himself a name in business circles that is most creditable and promises well for the future. He was born in McCool Junction, Nebraska, March 13, 1884. His father, John J. Galaway, was a native of Illinois but in early life removed westward to Nebraska, where he followed farming for many years. It was there that he met and married Miss Mattie Wolsenholm, also a native of Illinois. Her death occurred in 1886, the father surviving for fourteen years or until 1900.

William O. Galaway, their only child, pursued his education in the public schools to the age of nineteen years, and afterward attended the York Business College, from which he was graduated the following year. Later he pursued a special course of study in the same institution, thus becoming well qualified for the onerous and responsible duties of business life. Looking over the field in search of a favorable location, he decided that the far west had better opportunities than could be secured elsewhere, and accordingly made his way to the Pacific coast, settling at Banks, where he worked at various occupations for a year and a half. He next bought an interest in a general store in Banks which he conducted for two years, but at the end of that time sold out and became one of the organizers of the Washington County Bank, of which he was made cashier. He is also secretary at the present time and one of the leading stockholders of the institution. His fellow officers are: N. I. Burnett, president; and William L. Moore, vice president. Mr. Galaway gives personal attention to the business which is conducted along safe lines, a wise conservatism tempering a progressive force. The patronage of the bank has steadily increased and the institution is now regarded as one of the substantial financial interests of the county.

In 1907 was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Galaway to Miss Dette Friday, who was born in Washington county, Oregon, September 24, 1886, a daughter of Nicholas and Fannie Friday, who were natives of Switzerland and were married in Wisconsin, where they resided for some time before coming west to Washington county, Oregon, where the mother has since lived. The father, however, passed away in 1899. In their family were nine children of whom seven yet survive, namely: Mrs. A. C. Carstens, of Banks, Oregon; Mrs. O. H. Drorbaugh, of Portland; Mrs. Galaway; John, Albert and Bert, all of Banks; and Edward, who is living at Galice, Oregon. The two who have passed away are Eugene and Henry. Mr. and Mrs. Galaway have an interesting little daughter, Melva, born October 4, 1910. Mr. Galaway exercises his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the republican party. He is a prominent member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Banks, in which he is serving as vice grand. His loyalty to the order is unquestioned and it is characteristic of Mr. Galaway that he is ever faithful to any cause which he espouses and to any trust reposed in him.

W. R. HOLMES, who is the conscientious and efficient cashier of the Wallowa National Bank of Enterprise, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, July 2, 1853. He is a son of L. R. and Jane (Gabriel) Holmes, both natives of Ireland, having been reared in that country. As a young man the father came to America, locating in New York, and two years later his betrothed bride, Jane Gabriel, joined him, and they were married in New York. Soon after their marriage they removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, where Mr. Holmes accepted a position as bookkeeper for the furniture manufacturing house of L. M. Duncan. Later he was sent to Memphis, Tennessee, where he became superintendent of a branch furniture store for a Cincinnati firm and also had an interest in the company. In 1861 he returned to Cincinnati and for a short time was engaged in the grocery business. In 1863 he crossed the plains with mule and ox teams, intending to come to Oregon, but the mining excitement drew him into Montana, where he spent one year freighting from Salt Lake City to the mining towns. Subsequently he went to Walla Walla, Washington, and lived there four and one-half years, during which time he continued in the freighting business, hauling supplies from Umatilla county, Oregon, to the Idaho mining points. In November, 1868, he removed with his family to Grande Ronde valley, Union county, Oregon, where he engaged in farming and stock-raising, with which he was prominently identified until his death in 1892. The father was a member of the Masonic lodge, a democrat in politics, served as a member of the board of county commissioners of Union county, and was a very influential man.

W. R. Holmes was reared under the parental roof and acquired his early education in the public schools, having spent some four years in the Walla Walla city schools. When he was about sixteen years of age, putting aside his text-books, he became apprenticed as a miller in the Cove Mills, in the employ of S. G. French, one of the pioneers of Grande Ronde valley. Upon finishing his apprenticeship he remained with Mr. French and subsequently became manager of his business which comprised besides the mill a ranch of four thousand acres, stocked with many hundred head of horses and cattle. So well did Mr. Holmes perform the duties of this position that upon the death of Mr. French in 1882, he was chosen administrator of his estate, to which he gave that rare and careful attention which characterizes all his business enterprises. In 1884 he came to Wallowa where he engaged in the cattle business, and four years later was one of the dominating factors in the organization of the Wallowa National Bank of Enterprise, which on September 29, 1888, opened its doors to the public, with Mr. Holmes as its cashier and business manager, in which capacity he has since so ably served.

On the 29th of September, 1890, Mr. Holmes wedded Miss Mattie Aram, a daughter of William and Mary (Eaton) Aram. Mr. and Mrs. Aram in 1852 removed from Ohio to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama, locating in San Jose. In 1876 they removed to Portland, where they resided until a short time before their deaths when they came to make their home with their daughter. To Mr. and Mrs. Holmes have been born three children, two of whom survive. They are: Frederick Aram, who is in his sophomore year in the State Agricultural College at Corvallis; and Elise Gabriel, who is a student at St. Helen's Hall in Portland. The other member of the family, Gerald Eaton, passed away September 14, 1909.

In politics Mr. Holmes is a stanch republican and at different times has served as mayor. Both he and Mrs. Holmes are greatly interested in the cause of education, he having been a member of the school board for many years, while Mrs. Holmes is now serving her sixth year as a member of the same. Mr. Holmes is identified with Wallowa Lodge, No. 82, A. F. & A. M. of Enterprise, and is a member of Enterprise Chapter, No. 30, R. A. M. Both he and his wife are affiliated with Wallowa Valley Chapter, No. 50 of the Order of Eastern Star. Mr. Holmes has always carefully planned his business and has ability and executive force to carry it forward. He is a most successful banker, and is numbered among the prominent men in the business world of Enterprise.

LYNN B. FERGUSON, a well known druggist of Newberg, who for some years has been successfully identified with the commercial interests of the town, was born in Yamhill county, on August 24, 1877. His father was the late J. L. Ferguson, a native of Kentucky where he resided until 1852, when he came to Yamhill county. He located in La Fayette, and there engaged in business in which he met with excellent success, becoming one of the largest property owners of the county. A capable business man, he became a prominent factor in the development of this section of the state, both commercially and in dustrially. He was one of the promoters of the first woolen mills established at Oregon City, thus furnishing an excellent local market for one of the state's leading products, and he also assisted in developing various other public utilities. He possessed the faculty of recognizing opportunities that were not noticeable to the average business man, utilizing them to forward his personal interests. His methods, however, were always above reproach, and although the less sagacious might sometimes envy his success, his gain was never accomplished by deliberately sacrificing another. Much of his prosperity was due to his intelligent and judicious investments in real estate, as he at one time held the titles to nearly two thousand acres of land in Yamhill county, that was later sold at a good advance over the first cost. Mr. Ferguson always took much interest in all educational matters and was one of those who founded the agricultural college at Corvallis, at that time a Methodist Episcopal (South) school. He took an active and helpful interest in political affairs, giving his support to the democratic party, and for two years was a member of the state legislature. His high standard of citizenship, integrity and trustworthiness won him the respect of all with whom he had transactions, and his death was occasion for widespread regret in the community where he had lived for the greater part of his life. He passed away in August, 1903, at the age of seventy-two years. For his wife and helpmate Mr. Ferguson chose Miss Parmelia Jane Bird, a daughter of John Bird, one of Yamhill county's honored pioneers, whose death occurred at the age of forty-six years. Of their marriage there were born seven children: Ella, the deceased wife of Clarence Baker, who has a son and a daughter living in this county; C. C., a real-estate and insurance agent of Newberg; Nettie, who is also deceased; Ray, who is residing in La Fayette; James L., of Newberg; Maggie Jane, the wife of ex-Senator Caldwell, of Ontario, this state; and Lynn B., our subject.

Reared at La Fayette, Lynn B. Ferguson is indebted to the common schools of that town for his early education. He was graduated from the high school with the class of 1895, following which he studied for a year in the Evangelical seminary of La Fayette. Having decided that he would adopt the drug business for his life vocation, after leaving the seminary he entered a drug store in North Yamhill, where he remained for three years. During that period he not only became thoroughly familiar with the business and the various lines of goods handled in an establishment of this kind, but he also qualified for his examination in pharmacy, and is now registered in both Oregon and Idaho. After resigning his position in North Yamhill he went to Albany, where he followed the same occupation for a year. At the end of that time he felt he was fully qualified to engage in business for himself and coming to Newberg he purchased the store of T. H. Whitten, that he has ever since conducted. He has a very attractive place of business and carries a full line of drugs, proprietary and patent medicines, as well as toilet articles and such sundries as are usually kept in a store of this kind. A gracious manner, thorough knowledge of the business, and strict attention to the needs of his patrons, particularly in his prescription department, have enabled Mr. Ferguson to build up an excellent trade among a desirable class of people.

On November 26, 1907, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Ferguson to Mrs. Lura Bogart, who was born in Sheridan, this county, and is a daughter of Daniel R. Ralston. The father was one of the well known stockmen and agriculturists of this section for many years, but he and the mother are now deceased.

Mr. Ferguson is a Mason, being affiliated with the blue lodge and chapter and the Order of the Eastern Star. He also belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, Woodmen of the World, Circle and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In politics he is a democrat and has served on the local school board. He is one of the enterprising business men of the town, who takes an active interest in all public affairs and champions every progressive movement, which he recognizes as one of the first duties of citizenship.

SAMUEL M. ROBISON. The history of the development of the great northwest is indissolubly connected with the history of the lives of such men as Samuel M. Robison, who during his lifetime was one of the foremost men of Jackson county and one of the early pioneers to whom much credit is due for the present advanced development of the section. The record of his father's exertions and of his own early boyhood reads like a western tale of adventure, abounding in hard struggles against primitive conditions, filled with the glamour of excitement and the thrills of Indian warfare. And yet the real living of this adventure was a stern thing, a life filled with hardship, adverse conditions, the terrors of war and the fear of death, and the lives of the men who endured it will ever be held in grateful remembrance by the succeeding generations.

The parents of the subject of this sketch were John and Susan (Milligan) Robison, who left Ohio in 1837 for the frontier country of Iowa, and it was on this journey that their son, Samuel M. Robison was born, March 16, 1837. The parents reached Linn county, Iowa, and located on a farm in that section where they remained for eight years, later removing to another farm in the same county where they resided up to the spring of 1853, when they set out across the plains for Oregon. The father had made ample provisions for the trip, providing three wagons with three yoke of oxen to each wagon, and had laid in supplies sufficient to keep his family in comparative comfort for a year. The thoroughly efficient manner in

MR. AND MRS. SAMUEL M. ROBISON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

which he provided for every imaginable detail of the journey is remarkable in a man who had never seen the section of the country to which he was going, and who could have but a comparatively vague idea of the exigencies of the life. He even added to his supplies peach and garden seeds of every variety, thus anticipating the barrenness of the frontier country. Few men had the foresight so thoroughly to equip themselves for the hardships of the journey and of the life in the Oregon country. His supplies even included fifteen mares and twelve blooded cows, which constituted comparative wealth, when the new land was reached. The family arrived in Jackson county August 30, 1853, and the elder Robison immediately located a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres on Wagner creek, two miles south of the present site of the town of Talent. Here he erected a small cabin, but soon found that life and property were not safe from the depredations of Indians without more adequate protection. He immediately erected a heavy stockade of hewed timbers, completely encircling his cabin. This stockade remained for many months until the Indian depredations ceased, when he tore it down and planted a garden around his cabin, using the seeds with which his own foresight had provided him before he set out on the journey. His peach seeds were planted in the winter of 1853 and produced the first peach crop ever harvested in Oregon. The vegetable garden, an untold luxury heretofore in the wilderness of the west, he shared with his neighbors. He advocated and insisted on the necessity of good roads, and assisted materially in gaining them for the little community. In every phase of his career he showed that progressive spirit which is so necessary in the frontiersman in the development of a country from its primitive state. He was a leader among men, always foremost in every movement for the development of his locality and his death in 1870 was a distinct loss to the community in which he lived. His wife survived him until 1889.

The qualities of initiative, originality, foresight and intelligence which the elder Robison possessed in so eminent a degree, he transmitted to his son. Samuel M. Robison was sixteen years of age upon his arrival in Jackson county. He was physically strong and on his shoulders fell a good share of the burden of clearing the land. In 1857, he left the parental roof, and apprenticed himself to the blacksmith's trade, but after eighteen months, he put aside this work and returned to farming. In 1864, Mr. Robison located on the present Robison homestead, a magnificent property of two hundred acres, two miles southwest of Talent, Oregon, and engaged in the business of dairying. The products of his dairy were known far and wide as being absolutely clean and wholesome. His business increased yearly, based as it was upon the solid foundation of strict integrity and upright business principles. His hard work and honorable methods were rewarded by financial success, and upon his death on the 16th of September, 1911, he left his family a large fortune.

On April 13, 1864, Samuel Robison was married to Miss Hannah E. Barneburg, a daughter of John and Mary A. (Wagoner) Barneburg. Her father was a native of Germany and her mother of Switzerland. They came to Oregon in 1860 from Henry county, Iowa, locating in Phoenix, Jackson county, where their deaths occurred in 1862. To Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Robison were born six children, the five now living being: John, a prominent farmer of Jackson county; Anna, the wife of Nicholas Brophy; George, who resides on a farm in this county; Eva, who married George Dewey; and Della, the wife of Ford Roper. William died at the age of nine years.

The history of the opening up of the great northwest contains no record of any man who has been more influential in its development than Samuel Robison. His life and exertions were prominent factors in its growth, and he leaves to his sons and daughters the record of a high and honorable life, by the example of which they may carve out their futures.

WILLIAM R. MASCALL has long been successfully engaged in the sheep business in the John Day valley, where he owns a ranch of three hundred and twenty acres. He was born at Petaluma, Sonoma county, California, on the 21st of April, 1862, and is the only son of Richard and Sophie Jane (Oxford) Mascall. The father, who was a native of London, England, came to the Pacific coast in the '50s, locating in California. He subsequently returned to London where he was married, and then returned to California with his bride, making the journey around the Horn. After several years residence in the latter state they came to Oregon, first settling in Canyon City in 1864. They remained there until 1872, when they removed to Mount Vernon, coming from there to the John Day valley and settling on a ranch five miles below Dayville, where the father engaged in sheep-raising until his death in 1881. The mother died about 1883. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Mascall numbered three children, one of whom died in infancy. The surviving members are: William R.; and Annie, the widow of John Jackson, now residing in Dayville.

Practically the entire life of William R. Mascall has been passed in Grant county, his education being obtained in the common schools. He was associated with his father until the latter's death, when he took possession of the home ranch, which he has since operated. His herds used to contain from ten to twelve thousand head of sheep, but this was prior to the passing of the law limiting the number the ranchers could run. Mr. Mascall is both progressive and enterprising in his business and his ranch is equipped with everything essential to its successful operation. He has made ample provision for the care and protection of his sheep, which are kept in good condition and all of his shearing is done by machinery. The greater portion of his land is under irrigation and readily responds to cultivation, and he has a fine orchard and large, attractive grounds about his residence, which is thoroughly modern. The John Day river crosses his ranch, which is conveniently located and well adapted to the purpose for which it is used.

On the 5th of October, 1887, Mr. Mascall was united in marriage to Miss Mary Valade, of Portland, Oregon, and they have become the parents of nine children: Otis, who is a member and manager of the Dayville Mercantile Company; and Erma, Vivian, Walter, Norbet, Madge, Annie, Cedric and Lawrence, all of whom are at home. Mr. Mascall is a member of the Woodmen of the World at Canyon City, and is also a member of the A. O. U. W. at Dayville. He is numbered among the substantial citizens and efficient and capable business men of his community, where he is held in high regard and has many friends.

MONTGOMERY TURNER. With the development and upbuilding of the town of Banks, Montgomery Turner has been closely associated and in the conduct of his business affairs has displayed that enterprise which works for individual success and also constitutes a factor in public prosperity. His energy and determination enable him to carry forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes, and aside from his mercantile interests in Banks he has other business interests which are proving profitable sources of income. A native of Kentucky, he was born in 1866, a son of H. V. and Nancy J. (Butler) Turner, who were also natives of Kentucky, in which state the father still resides, having attained the age of seventy-seven years on the 3d of March, 1911. His wife passed away August 26, 1900, and her death was the occasion of deep regret to many friends. In their family were seven children: John, still a resident of Kentucky; Creed, living at Oroville, California; Susan, at home; Montgomery and Monroe, twins, the latter a resident of Chattanooga, Tennessee; E. T., living in Laurel, Oregon; and Lloyd E., of California.

A quiet and uneventful boyhood brought Montgomery Turner to the outset of his business career with a fair knowledge of the branches of learning taught in the public schools and with the practical experience of home training, so that he realized the value of industry and determination as factors in the attainment of success. When twenty-two years of age he became a locomotive fireman on the Queen & Crescent railroad, running from Cincinnati to Chattanooga. He spent four and a half years at that work and was then promoted to the position of engineer, in which capacity he capably served for twelve years, his fidelity being indicated by his long connection with the road. In 1904 he came to Oregon and settled in Washington county, having previously established a mercantile business at Banks which was operated by his brother during the last four years of Montgomery Turner's connection with railroad work. He then took charge of the store, which he has since continually conducted and his earnest effort to please patrons combined with unfaltering diligence in the management of his business and with unassailable integrity in all transactions, have gained for him a satisfactory and growing trade. He owns the business block in which he is located, together with other property in the town, and also has an eighty-acre farm near Banks, of which one-half is under a high state of cultivation. He is likewise a stockholder in the Washington County Bank and also in the Pacific Coast Fire Insurance Company of Portland and in his investments has displayed sound business judgment that has found its proof in his success.

On the 22d of June, 1893, Mr. Turner was married to Miss Vessie Parmley, who was born in Kentucky, February 15, 1872, a daughter of James and Harriet (Dunegon) Parmley, who were also natives of the Blue Grass state, where they reared a family of thirteen children, eleven of whom are still living. The mother yet resides in Kentucky but the father passed away in 1886. Mr. and Mrs. Turner have a family of two sons and two daughters: Flonnie, who was born September 15, 1895, now attending high school and studying music; Herman, born May 17, 1897; James Carl, June 17, 1900; and Nellie May, October 10, 1903. Mr. Turner holds membership with the Masonic fraternity, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Locomotive Engineers and in politics is a republican, but while he keeps thoroughly informed on the questions and issues of the day, he never seeks office as a reward for party fealty. Having the prescience to discern what the future had in store for this great and growing western country, he resolved to identify his interests therewith and as the years pass by he is winning the success which is the merited reward of earnest, persistent labor.

ADOLPHE JETTE. Among the prominent and successful agriculturists whom Canada has contributed to the ranks of those active in the development of the rich resources of the state of Oregon few are more favorably known to their community than Adolphe Jette.

He was born in Repentigny, Canada, on the 10th of June, 1825, his parents being Francois and Marian (Payette) Jette. The Jette family has always been recognized as one of the prominent Canadian families, Louis Amable Jette, a first cousin of the subject of this sketch being a governor of Quebec. He was also one of the committee of five appointed by the British government to decide the Alaskan boundary question and upon him was conferred the dignity of knight bachelor by the king. When Adolphe Jette left his native country he came to New York, but almost immediately afterward sailed for

New Orleans, Louisiana, where he remained for six months being employed in a sawmill near Plaquemine. At the end of this time he left New Orleans going by boat to St. Louis, the trip taking twelve days. Subsequently after two months' employment in a sawmill near St. Louis he removed to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he was engaged by the government to drive an ox team to Fort Laramie, Wyoming. At that place he and several of his fellow countrymen purchased pack horses and came direct to Oregon stopping in Canyon City where they mined until 1856. That year they encountered some serious difficulties with the Indians. At one time they were surrounded by the savages for thirty days at the mouth of Rogue river, but Mr. Jette became acquainted with the chief of the tribe and although the lives of some of his friends were taken he was saved through the entreaties of Chetsey, the daughter of the chief. This was only one of the many trying experiences which these early settlers encountered. Mr. Jette afterwards proceeded to Creseent City and remained for one winter, but, as his business operations there were not very successful, netting him only a few hundred dollars, he settled in the neighborhood of St. Paul. He purchased a lot and built himself a home and spent the greater part of his time travelling to and from the mines in Idaho, in which he was employed.

In 1871 Mr. Jette was married to Marguerite Lierd, the daughter of Tanis and Ciles (Lirock) Lierd. Her birth occurred on January 2, 1851, near St. Paul, her father being French Canadian and her mother a part descendant from the Walla Walla tribe of Indians. Adolph Jette came to his present home in 1873 and was engaged in various clerical positions for six years. At the end of that time he purchased seven thousand dollars worth of stock on credit and paid for it within a year, which speaks highly for the success of this undertaking. But he has also suffered losses and setbacks which have been almost as remarkable, one being the loss of two thousand bushels of wheat in the flood of 1890.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jette nine children have been born. Charles W. A., the eldest, is engaged in business with his father and also is the owner of two farms of one hundred and fifty acres each, near Champoeg and of a house and lot in Champoeg. He has been twice married. His first union was to Miss Elizabeth Thededeaux, a native of Minnesota, and the daughter of Napoleon Thededeaux who settled in Newberg, Oregon, after their removal from Minnesota. To this union two children were born: C. Herbert A., whose birth occurred on the 29th of September, 1899; and Margaret, who was born on December 23, 1901. He married Mrs. Maybelle Stratton Chickering on November 16, 1908, who had been previously married to George L. Chickering. Her birth occurred near Drummond, Wisconsin, and she is the daughter of John and Martha (Wilson) Stratton. She was one of three children, the others being Harriet, deceased, and David, a resident of Hibbing, Minnesota. By her first union she had two children: Esther who was born June 30, 1906; and Martha, whose birth occurred on the 28th of June, 1907. Both daughters are residing with their mother. Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. A. Jette have become the parents of one child, Louis Amable, whose birth occurred November 22, 1909. Albert J., the second son of Adolph Jette, is a resident of Seaside, Oregon. Frank A., is living in Champoeg, Oregon. Arthur F. is residing near St. Paul, Oregon. Lillia, who is the wife of John Bungoyne, is a resident of Castle Rock. Alvina is the wife of Albert Smitson, of Portland, Oregon. Azilda, Edna M., and Elsie are all residing with their parents in Linton, Oregon.

Mr. Jette was postmaster for twenty-four years at Champoeg until the rural delivery system was inaugurated. He had a well stocked store, the management of which he turned over to his son, C. W. Jette; and he now lives retired from active duties with his wife and daughters in Linton. In politics he has ever cast his vote with the democracy and has been a firm advocate of the principles of that party which he believes most conducive for good government. Although he has been offered many county offices because of his unusual executive abilty he has declined them, feeling that all of his time and attention were needed in his business operations. Well known in this county where he has resided from pioneer times, he deserves public recognition in this volume for social qualities which have made him many friends, while his business record is most creditable and enviable. He manifests a great interest in promoting all measures that pertain to the welfare of his community and the general development of its resources.

CHARLES MELVIN CRANDALL, who since 1894 has engaged in the active practice of law and is now located at Vale, the county seat of Malheur county, was born March 18, 1861, at Morton, Tazewell county, Illinois, his parents being George Fitch and Mary Ann Crandall. In both the paternal and maternal lines he is descended from old New England families, the Crandall ancestry being traced back to the Rev. John Crandall, who was a co-worker with Roger Williams of Rhode Island. The father was born September 17, 1820, in Sheldon, Genesee county, New York, and was a son of John R. and Mary (Crowell) Crandall, the former born in Connecticut in 1779, and the latter in Massachusetts in 1787. Mary Ann Crandall was the elder daughter of Horatio N. and Catherine (Castle) Crosby and was born at Canandaigua, New York, January 7, 1820. Her father's birth occurred in Herkimer county, New York, in 1808, and his parents were both natives of Massachusetts. Catherine (Castle) Crosby was born in New York, of New England parentage. In the year 1836 George Fitch Crandall went to Tazewell county, Illinois, with his parents, arriving three years after Mary Ann Crosby had settled in the same county with her parents.

In Tazewell county Charles M. Crandall was born and reared and after completing a course in the high school of Chenoa, Illinois, he entered the law department of the Union University of New York and was graduated with the Bachelor of Laws degree in 1894. On starting out in life for himself he first engaged in teaching school for two years, after which he did clerical work until he entered upon the active practice of law, following his graduation, at Worthington, Nobles county, Minnesota. There he remained until 1909, when he removed to Boise, Idaho, where he engaged in law practice until July, 1911, when he came to Vale. Here he has since continued. For eight years he served as prosecuting attorney of Nobles county, Minnesota, but otherwise has never sought or held office, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his professional duties, and his devotion to his clients' interests has become proverbial.

On the 6th of November, 1889, at Belmond, Wright county, Iowa, Mr. Crandall was married to Miss Clara M. Kern, a daughter of Jacob B. and Melina Kern, who were natives of France. Mr. and Mrs. Crandall have a son, Charles Kern, who was born at Worthington, Minnesota, November 5, 1896. Mr. Crandall is a Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and is a past master of his lodge. He also holds membership with the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine at St. Paul, Minnesota. He is a past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, has held the highest office in the Fraternal Order of Eagles, belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Degree of Honor and the Knights of the Maccabees. He votes with the republican party and, as previously stated, has no political aspirations. He has come to be regarded as one of the strong and able lawyers of his part of the state, carefully preparing and presenting his cases, his strong and incontrovertible logic winning him many favorable verdicts.

DAVID M. GRAHAM, the junior member of the well known retail shoe firm of Burden & Graham, of Eugene, was born in Washington county, Oregon, May 27, 1880. His parents were John and Katherine (McLindan) Graham, who came to Yamhill county, Oregon, in 1875 or 1876, and later removed to Washington county. The father was of Scotch-Irish ancestry, his birth having occurred in the north of Ireland. He was twice married and by his second union became the father of seven children, five of whom grew to maturity.

Of this number David M. Graham was the youngest. He was educated in the public schools of Oregon and later attended the West Side high school of Portland, while he completed his education by a course of study in the University of Oregon, graduating from that institution with the class of 1905, at which time he was awarded the A. B. degree. After his graduation he taught economics for one year at his alma mater. However, he displayed a taste for commerce and, withdrawing from the educational field, entered the retail shoe business in partnership with Charles A. Burden in September, 1906. The business of this firm has had a steady growth, constantly expanding until it has become one of the well known shoe stores of this city.

Fraternally Mr. Graham is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, of which he was most exalted ruler, and is also a charter member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. Eugene has among its citizens many excellent young business men as well as men of a profession, but there are few, if any, who surpass in all those traits of character which make for good citizenship David M. Graham. Being still a young man and active not only in business circles but also in social and fraternal life he is of particular value to the city of his adoption where he is held in high esteem by a large number who know him intimately.

FRED FREY has been farming in Grant county for a number of years and is well known as an enterprising and representative citizen. He was born in Minnesota, October 19, 1864, and is a son of Charles and Augusta (Perru) Frey, both natives of Germany. His maternal grandfather, Christian Perru, was of old Prussian stock and lived and died in his native land. The family was founded in America by Franz Frey, the grandfather of our subject on the paternal side, who was born in Switzerland and spent his early life in that country. He came to America and located in Ohio, where he followed his trade of wagonmaker and was engaged in general farming until his death when he was fifty-three years of age.

His son, Charles Frey, the father of our subject, removed from Ohio to Minnesota and located twenty miles west of Red Wing in Goodhue county, that state. He was married in Ohio in 1860 and his removal to Minnesota took place in the same year. In 1869 he came to Oregon and located in the John Day valley, seven miles below the town. He served during the Civil war as a member of a Minnesota regiment of volunteer infantry for six months and was mustered out and honorably discharged in 1865. For many years he operated a ranch in the John Day valley, farming and keeping a large herd of graded stock. To these activities he later added truck gardening and was successful in this branch of his work. He was the father of nine children: Louisa, who married William Sproul, of California; Fred, the subject of this review; Frank; Minnie, the deceased wife of Ira Sproul; Ella, now Mrs. Ira Sproul, of Bear Valley, Oregon; Edward, of Fox, Grant county; Nettie, who became the wife of Lewis Wilson, and now resides in Washington; Carrie, the deceased wife of Henry Workins of Mount Vernon; and Dora, the wife of Charles McKrola, of Mount Vernon.

The public schools of Oregon afforded Fred Frey his early educational opportunities. He later came to Oregon with his parents and pursued his studies in that state. In 1886 he purchased an interest in the Humboldt mine on the hillside west of Canyon City and worked at mining for twelve years. His holdings were productive and he was extremely successful. At the end of twelve years he abandoned mining and took up a homestead claim in Grant county. The circumstances which led to his gaining title to this estate were peculiar. A local company engaged in the building of a military road through the district had received in exchange for their services a large grant of land. Charles Frey, the father of our subject, purchased this property from the company. In the making out of the papers ceding the land to the construction company it was found that through some legal negligence the deed was void and the land still remained in possession of the government. Upon this Mr. Frey filed his homestead claim and is now in active operation of one of the finest ranches in Grant county. He is an expert and efficient farmer and conducts his enterprise along scientific and progressive lines. He has developed his place to a remarkable extent and is known in Grant county as a man who has done much to promote the growth and development of his native state. In April, 1896, Mr. Frey was united in marriage to Miss Lou McMillan of California. Mrs. Frey is a charming and hospitable woman, and has been a great aid to her husband in his career.

FRED FREY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

GEORGE W. McGRAW is a self-made man whom Banks regards as a valuable addition to her citizenship, for he has made good use of his time and opportunities and has always been an advocate of progressive development. His financial resources were extremely limited when he arrived in Greenville in 1890 but his stock of determination and diligence was large and with that as an asset he has "made good" in business circles. He was born in Howard county, Indiana, February 23, 1863, a son of John and Nancy E. (Jones) McGraw, both of whom were natives of Indiana, where they were reared and married. There they established their home and were still living when the father died in 1863, while serving his country as a soldier of the Civil war. The mother afterward removed to eastern Indiana, where she has since resided.

George W. McGraw, their only son and child, was only a few months old when his father died and when fifteen years of age he started out to make his own way in the world. It was a heavy burden for young shoulders but the necessity of the case forced him to take up responsibilities which are usually supposed to be those of manhood. He sought employment at farm labor and thus spent his time until twenty-one years of age, when he made his way westward to Decatur county, Kansas, where he secured a claim and developed a homestead. He only gave a part of his time to his own farm, however, and the remainder of the time worked in the employ of others until twenty-six years of age. He then sold his Kansas property and a year later came to the Pacific coast, settling in Washington county, Oregon, where he worked by the month for three years. He then purchased a twenty-five-acre timber tract, which he cleared and developed, holding the property until 1907. He then disposed of that land but in the meantime had purchased other tracts and is now the owner of thirty-two acres under a very high state of cultivation. Upon this he makes his home and the well kept appearance of the place and the highly improved fields indicate his careful supervision and practical methods. He also owns a residence property and business block in Banks. When he first came to Washington county on the 7th of January, 1890, the family had their complete possession in a box which weighed about three hundred pounds and their cash capital was two dollars and a half. The snow lay on the ground to the depth of eighteen inches. It was a severe struggle to obtain a start but persistent labor overcame the difficulties and obstacles in the way and Mr. McGraw is now comfortably situated in life, having a good property from which he derives a substantial income.

While still living in the middle west Mr. McGraw was married July 1, 1888, to Miss Nettie M. Lee, who was born in Washington county, Ohio, July 1, 1866, a daughter of Edwin and Martha Lee, who were natives of the Buckeye state and there remained until 1886, when they removed westward to Sheridan county, Kansas. After an interval of six years there passed they came to Washington county, Oregon, where they spent their remaining days, the mother dying in 1901 and the father in 1908. Mrs. McGraw was the eldest of their three children, her brothers being: John F., now a resident of Washington county; and William H., who is living in Portland. By her marriage she has become the mother of six children: Oscar, who died in infancy; Mildred G., who was born December 11, 1893, and is now ready to enter the normal school; Henry E., born October 4, 1895; Roxanna, born August 5, 1904; Alva, who was born in September, 1906, and died at the age of four years and nine months; and one who died in infancy.

In his political views Mr. McGraw has always been a republican since age gave him the right of franchise and his fellow townsmen, appreciative of his worth and loyalty in citizenship, have called him to some local offices. He filled the position of township supervisor four years, was deputy game warden one year and at the present writing is serving as deputy sheriff. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and to the Rebekah degree, with which his wife is also connected, and the family attend the Methodist Episcopal church. Their influence is always on the side of progress and improvement and Mr. McGraw advocates all those forces which tend to promote material, intellectual, social and moral advancement.

LEONARD COLE is a native of Indiana but has spent practically all his life in the northwest. He is one of the extensive landowners and dealers in real estate in Vale, Oregon, and is identified with many representative industries, his prominence reaching into business, political and fraternal circles. At the present time he is engaged in an important land reclamation project and this like his others is primarily an enterprise for the general welfare. Mr. Cole's birth occurred in Ripley county, Indiana, February 11, 1858, and he was only seven years of age when he crossed the plains with his parents. His father was Joshua L. Cole, also a native of Ripley county, born in 1832. His mother was in her maidenhood Miss Melinda Wise. Their marriage occurred in Indiana and in 1860 the family moved to Scott county, Minnesota.

Joshua Cole was a farmer and land dealer and he followed these occupations in that state for four years, crossing the plains in 1864. He made the journey with ox teams and located in Boise City, Idaho, in the fall of the same year. He remained there all winter and in the following spring took up a land claim of one hundred and sixty acres in the lower Boise river which he improved and cultivated for some time. In the meantime he engaged extensively in the freighting business, operating between Umatilla Landing on the Columbia river and Boise and Idaho cities. He gave his personal attention to this line of activity and at one time drove seven yoke of oxen. In 1868 he abandoned the freighting business, trading his teams for cows and horses. In the same year he established his residence in Oregon where he farmed at the mouth of the Shasta creek. Here he carried on general agricultural pursuits and was extensively engaged in the breeding and raising of high-grade cattle and in the operation of a model dairy. In 1872 he moved to Lower Willow creek, taking up a homestead claim in this section near the present site of the town of Brogan. He planted many of his acres in orchards, raising pears, apples, prunes, peaches and cherries. His fruit was of a high quality and obtained a ready sale upon the market. He later added the cultivation of berries to his activities and was successful in this line also. He added to his holdings from time to time until he was the proprietor of one thousand acres of the finest Oregon farm land. He secured good water rights and continued his stock-breeding, enlarging this branch of his activities year by year until he ran on the range from nine hundred to one thousand head of cattle and almost two hundred high-grade horses. He remained upon this property on Willow creek until about the year 1898 when he moved to Vale, Oregon, and engaged in the banking and real-estate business. He is still thus identified although he has moved his home to Long Beach, California. He has long survived his wife who passed away in 1896. To their union were born four children: Calvin died in infancy. Leonard is the subject of this review. Emory was born on the 2d of December, 1862, in Scott county, Minnesota. He was twice married. His first wife was in her maidenhood Miss Lizzie Kendall. After her death Emory Cole wedded Miss Barbara Kennedy and they became the parents of five children: Ray, born in September, 1897; Clifford, whose birth occurred in 1899; Leonard, born in 1902; Clyde, born in 1905; and Dorothy, whose birth occurred in October, 1909. Emory Cole has lived in Baker and Malheur counties for many years, coming to Oregon in 1868. He is a farmer, land-dealer and stock-raiser and is also interested in the banking business. The youngest child born to Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Cole is Eldora, who married J. O. Moudy, by whom she has seven sons and one daughter. Three of these children have passed away, the surviving members of the family make their home at Vale, Oregon. After the death of his first wife the father of our subject was again married. His second wife was Miss Emily I. Blackwell.

Leonard Cole was educated in the public schools of Boise City, Baker, Oregon, and Walla Walla, Washington. After he laid aside his books he immediately began dealing in high-grade cattle and horses, carrying on in connection with this a large butchering business in Middleton, Idaho, and also in Payette. He later conducted an establishment of the same kind in Huntington, Oregon. He came to Baker county with his father and for some time carried on placer mining in that section and in Malheur county. He has had an extended experience in this branch of activity, having worked in the quartz mines in Idaho and Oregon for a number of years. He is still interested in this business at the present time, but he is now giving his attention largely to real estate and to two large irrigation projects which he has on in Harney county. These enterprises have for their object the reclamation of desert land amounting to almost one hundred and ninety thousand acres lying on the Silvies river and on Silvies creek. The engineer's report on the Silvies river project covers one hundred and fifty thousand acres and the other enterprise will if successful reclaim forty thousand acres. Mr. Cole is associated with his brother Emory and with C. B. McConnell in this work. They are promoting one of the largest enterprises of this kind ever attempted in Oregon. They mean to erect and develop an immense tract of desert which is now being surveyed for a railroad, which, when completed will be called the Oregon & Eastern. With transportation and water upon this land it will become very valuable and not only gain for the promoters of the project success and prosperity but will also add to the resources and advantages of the state of Oregon. Large sums of money are required to bring this work to completion but most able business sagacity and keen discrimination have insured the success of the enterprise. He now has it on a solid financial basis and has been instrumental in opening up a section of the country which will afford homes for many thousands of people.

On the 17th of February, 1886, Mr. Cole was united in marriage to Miss Hattie C. Bond, by whom he had one daughter, Nellie L., born in January, 1900. November 11, 1906, Mr. Cole was again married. His second wife was Miss Ella Shoup of Payette, Idaho. Her father was a farmer and followed general agricultural pursuits in Michigan, until his death. Her mother is still living and makes her home in Spokane, Washington. To this marriage has been born one daughter, Bernice Lorena, whose natal day was the 31st of August, 1907.

In his political affiliations Mr. Cole is a consistent republican and has been deputy sheriff in Baker and Malheur counties for four years. He has also acted as road supervisor, constable and stock inspector in these districts. He has always tried to do his duty in every phase of life, promoting his own prosperity and aiding his community to the best of his ability. He was a scout in the Bannock Indian war of 1877 to 1878, serving under Colonel Greene and General O. O. Howard. He is well known in fraternal circles, holding membership in the Woodmen of the World and in lodge No. 22, Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Payette, Idaho. Of this last organization he has been a member for twenty-six years and is well known in the affairs of the organization. He has filled all the chairs and has taken all the degrees, has been a delegate to the grand lodge and has served as noble grand for two terms. He also belongs to the Rebekah Lodge, No. 40, of Huntington, Oregon. He is a devout adherent of the Methodist church. Mr. Cole is recognized as one of the substantial, enterprising and progressive citizens of the section in which he resides. All the enterprises with which he is connected are important, public spirited and of general advantage. In his business relations he is essentially broad-minded, upright and straightforward. His political views are intelligent and independent and the private phase of his career unquestioned. His life is altogether useful and valuable and a credit to the community in which he has resided since childhood.

FRANK VAN WASSENHOVE. Belgium has contributed many men who have been active and prominent in the development of the northwest, among them being Frank Van Wassenhove, whose birth occurred in Belgium, March 8, 1842, his parents being Charles and Dorothy (Stark) Van Wassenhove. They were both natives of Belgium but left their native land for America when their son Frank was but three years of age. Almost immediately after their arrival in New York they went to Monroe, Michigan, where the father purchased a farm of one hundred and twelve acres, which he cultivated until his death, which occurred in 1866. They became the parents of six children: Dominick; Frank, the subject of this sketch; Dorothy, who is the wife of Charles Rolland; Joseph; Samuel; and Mary, who wedded Moses Strombly. They are all residing in Newport, Michigan, excepting Frank.

In 1859 Frank Van Wassenhove crossed the plains from Monroe, Michigan, accompanied by a man named Gooby. The journey took six months and was made by way of Omaha, Nebraska, and Council Bluffs, Iowa, where they remained for nine days before starting across the Missouri river. Mr. Gooby had previously gone to California in 1852 but returned to Michigan in 1857 to bring his family to the west. During his first winter in the west Mr. Van Wassenhove was engaged near Portland in cutting wood and clearing land, but afterward he came to the Willamette valley, where he was employed by Mr. Gooby before going to the Orofino mine in 1861. But this did not prove profitable employment and after a summer's stay he returned to Marion county, where he has since resided. Shortly after his return he was married and removed to the property which had been presented to his wife by her uncle, Michael Coyle. Mr. Van Wassenhove took complete charge of the place while it was still entirely covered with timber, clearing altogether two hundred and twenty-five acres. Since the division of the property among the heirs the tract contains one hundred acres, fifty acres of which Mr. Van Wassenhove has brought under a high state of cultivation and has devoted principally to raising wheat, oats and hay. In his various undertakings he has shown a willingness and capacity for diligent and persistent labor and has met with the success which is the reward of conscientious and progressive agriculturists of the northwest.

Mr. Van Wassenhove has been twice married. His first union was to Ellen Coyle, a daughter of James and Charlotte (Scott) Coyle, of St. Paul. To this union four children were born: Mary, who is the wife of Charles McCormick, of Woodburn, Oregon; Josephine, who married Thomas Kerr, of St. Paul; Alexander J., who is a resident of Portland; and Eliza, who is the wife of John Kerr, a resident of Aurora. The mother's death occurred in 1898. Mr. Van Wassenhove was again married on the 2d of February, 1901, his second union being with Mrs. Ellen Ramsey, of The Dalles, Oregon. She had been married twice previously. She was first wedded to Patrick Ferguson, of Massachusetts, and to them five children were born: John and Frank, both deceased; one who died in infancy; George, whose birth occurred in 1881 in Colorado; and Agnes, who was born August 23, 1885, and is the wife of Charles Yegen, of Hillsboro, Oregon. Her second marriage was in 1888 to Edward Ramsey, who was a native of Scotland, and to them one child, Etta, was born. Her birth occurred October 12, 1890, and in her youth she received a musical education. She is the wife of John Vincent, by whom she has had three children.

In politics Mr. Van Wassenhove is a stanch republican and always gives his support to the men and measures of that party although he has never sought office for himself. He is a member of the Roman Catholic church, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. In his social and fraternal relations he has won the regard and respect of all with whom he came in contact.

ARMIN R. BODMER is the general manager of the McCully Mercantile Company located at Joseph, in Wallowa county. He was born in La Crosse, Wisconsin, July 26, 1878, and is the son of Otto and Anna (Ochsner) Bodmer, who were natives of Switzerland.

and emigrated when young people with their parents to America. They were married in Buffalo county, Wisconsin, where the father was engaged in farming and later became interested in the woolen mills of Bangor, in that state. Otto Bodmer removed to Oregon in 1890, locating in Grande Ronde valley, Union county, and later removed to Wallowa county, where his death occurred in the year 1897. His wife survived him but a few years, passing away in 1909.

Armin R. Bodmer is a member of Baker City Lodge, No. 27, A. F. & A. M., also a member of Baker City Lodge, No. 338, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. The responsible position occupied by Mr. Bodmer and his company is in itself a guarantee of his business ability. He is recognized throughout this portion of the state as being one of the most up-to-date, enterprising and conservative business men identified with all social enterprises affecting the welfare of the community in which he lives.

ROBERT ALEXANDER. It has often been pointed out that the faculty for persistent application is one of the most important gifts any man can possess. The truth of this statement is illustrated by contact with men who have risen through their own exertions to places of responsibility. Ambition, pluck and perseverance have carried many a boy to financial success, and it is to the operation of these important qualities that Robert Alexander became the owner of a valuable farm in Washington county, and also gained recognition as one of the substantial men of his region. He is a native of Scotland, born on the 10th of December, 1860, a son of George and Mary (Cassey) Alexander. Mr. Alexander was reared as a farmer and, believing that America presented inducements superior to those of his native land, he emigrated to this country with his family in 1871, landing at Quebec. From that point the travelers came direct to Portland, Oregon, and proceeded to Cornelius Plains, where they remained for three months. They then came to Forest Grove, Washington county, and Mr. Alexander purchased six hundred and fifty acres of land two miles southwest of town, upon which he established his homestead. Here he resided until his death, in 1902. He possessed many admirable qualities, and was a true type of the brave men who do not hesitate to leave their old associations in order to establish their children under more favorable conditions. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander were ten children, namely: John, who now lives at Forest Grove; Elizabeth Jessie, who died in 1882, at the age of thirty years; Peter, who died in Oregon at the age of thirty-two, leaving two children; George, who died at the age of two years in the old country; William, who died in the old country at the age of five years; James, who died at Portland, Oregon, in 1898; Robert, of this review; George G., who died at the age of thirty-three in Oregon; A. C., who is now engaged in the real-estate business at Portland; and A. E., who is one of the successful farmers of Washington county.

At the age of ten years Robert Alexander came with his parents to Oregon. He attended the district and grammar schools, and, later was a student of the Tualitin Academy. He thus possessed good advantages of education for an active and useful life. In 1882 he went to Idaho and engaged, for nine months, in the dray and transfer business. After returning home on a visit, he took up his residence at Dayton, Oregon, where he was identified with farming for three years, and with the lumber business for two years. He then returned to Forest Grove but went to Athena, Oregon, in 1901, and spent two years at that place. After the death of the father, Mr. Alexander of this sketch and his brothers, A. C. and A. E., purchased the interests of the other heirs in the estate. He now owns one hundred acres of good land, all of which is under cultivation. He applies himself to the fruit and dairy business, and manages his affairs along practical lines that yield a substantial competence.

On June 16, 1897, Mr. Alexander was married to Miss Emma Sheldon, a native of New York state, whose father died when she was an infant. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander became the parents of four children: Peter Grant, who was born in 1898; Roland Edward, born in 1900; Lewis Clarke, born in 1904; and Charles M., born in 1907. Mr. Alexander and his children were called upon to mourn the death of the wife and mother from the effect of a surgical operation May 16, 1909. She was a woman of many attractive personal qualities; one who considered no sacrifice too great if it added to the comfort or happiness of those with whom she was associated. Mr. Alexander is a member of the Knights of Pythias of Forest Grove, the Artisans of Dilley and also of the Grange. Politically he adheres to the republican party. He is a consistent member of the Congregational church at Forest Grove. Being blessed with good business ability and a spirit of progressiveness in everything he undertakes, he is highly respected as one of the useful men of the county.

ELIAS KUHN. One of the grand old men of Union county is Elias Kuhn, a highly respected farmer living in a fine modern home near Summerville. His holdings consist of about three hundred and sixty acres of land and he is engaged principally in raising grain. He was born in Cambria county, Pennsylvania, April 14, 1829, a son of David and Elizabeth (Good) Kuhn. The father was born in March, 1804, and died in May, 1884, while the mother's birth occurred in 1808 and her death on the 19th of March, 1887, both having been natives of Pennsylvania. The grandfather, Frederick Kuhn, was a native of Germany and emigrated to the new world while a young man. He became a pioneer in Ohio, removing to that state in 1834, settling in McConnellsville, where he lived for sixteen years, or until his death. He was engaged in the sawmill business, a vocation which

ROBERT ALEXANDER

MRS. ROBERT ALEXANDER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

he followed throughout his life. In 1851 his son David, the father of our subject, removed to Iowa and lived in Davis, Jefferson and Van Buren counties until 1862, when he came to Oregon.

Elias Kuhn received a common-school education in Ohio where his boyhood days were spent, and in 1856 settled in the Three Rivers country, in Marion county, where he remained until 1862, when he joined a party going with ox teams to the Salmon river gold fields. He settled, however, in the Grande Ronde valley and his first camping place was within a half mile of his present residence two miles west of Summerville. He there took up a homestead which he still owns, his farm consisting of two hundred acres. He owns another tract of one hundred and sixty acres on Sand ridge and is engaged principally in grain raising.

Mr. Kuhn was married March 6, 1854, to Esther Cassidy, a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Cassidy, who were residents of Ohio. To them were born eight children, four of whom lived to maturity, namely: Ellen, the wife of S. D. Ficklin; Mary Ann, who married F. S. Johnson, and is the second white girl born in the valley; David, a resident of Wallowa; and Samuel, born in 1871, who was a resident of Wallowa county, and whose death occurred in 1901. The wife and mother passed away in 1871 and in 1874 Mr. Kuhn married Sarah J. McElderry. She is a daughter of James and Barbara (Toot) McElderry, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio respectively, and by her marriage to Mr. Kuhn became the mother of six children, namely: Viola, the wife of W. W. Wade, of Island City; Peter C., deceased; Charles Emery, a resident of Paradise, Wallowa county; Irvin, making his home in the valley; Willard, a resident of Wallowa; and Bert, who married Eliza Cantwell, a daughter of William Cantwell, a pioneer of the Grande Ronde valley. Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kuhn have one daughter, Vivian. Mr. Kuhn has been identified with public life in his community, holding at various times the position of school director, road supervisor and constable. Being one of the early pioneers of Oregon he witnessed many of the changes with which the present generation is entirely unfamiliar and endured many of the hardships of the early days. He is a greatly respected citizen, beloved by a large circle of friends and still active in business.

W. W. HOLLINGSWORTH, who is the tablishment in Newberg, that he has been successfully conducting for the past thirteen years, was born in Indiana on August 8, 1857. His parents were Moses and Sarah (Russell) Hollingsworth, also natives of Indiana, where they resided until 1859. In the latter year they removed to Iowa, settling on a farm in Lucas county, that the father operated until 1893, when they again started westward. They settled in Oregon, this time becoming residents of Newberg, where Moses Hollingsworth passed away in February, 1898, but the mother survived until the 28th of February, 1911. Unto this worthy couple there were born nine children, five of whom are still living, as follows: Phoebe, the wife of A. R. Cumpston, of Sellwood; Eva L., who married C. J. McClain, also a resident of Sellwood; W. W., our subject; Mary J., the wife of J. J. Niekel, of Osborne, Kansas; and Jesse J., who is living in Nebraska.

As W. W. Hollingsworth was a child of only two years when he removed with his parents to Iowa, he received his education in the common schools and in one of the local colleges of that state. Being reared on a farm he early began assisting in the lighter duties about the fields and barns, his responsibilities increasing as his strength developed. He remained with his parents until he had attained his majority, by which time he had become a capable agriculturist and fully qualified to engage independently in farming. As he had always been energetic and thrifty from earliest boyhood he had sufficient capital to buy a farm, which he cultivated until 1881, when he removed to Gage county, Nebraska. There he engaged in the meat business, opening a butcher shop which he conducted with a reasonable degree of success for four years. In 1885 he traded his business for a farm and during the succeeding six years again turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. At the expiration of that period he disposed of his property and returned to Iowa, investing in a farm in Lucas county. He cultivated this until 1895, when he decided to come to the northwest, so selling his homestead he came to Yamhill county, purchasing a ranch in the vicinity of Newberg. He devoted his entire time and attention to the further improvement of this place with constantly increasing success until 1898. In that year Mr. Hollingsworth, who is a man of much foresight and sagacity, recognized that there was an opening in Newberg for a furniture and undertaking establishment. He had brought his land under high cultivation, making his place one of the attractive properties in this section, so met with no difficulty in disposing of it, realizing a good profit on his investment. Immediately thereafter he came to Newberg and opened the store he is now conducting. He carries an excellent assortment of furniture, which he offers at reasonable prices, and he is enjoying a good patronage that is increasing noticeably from year to year.

In 1878 Mr. Hollingsworth completed his arrangements for a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Mary J. Moon, who was born and reared in Warren county, Iowa. She is a daughter of Jacob and Lydia (Wright) Moon, natives of Ohio, from which state they removed to Iowa in 1849. There the father passed away in 1892 and the mother in 1910, at the venerable age of eighty years. Their family numbered ten children, four of whom are still living. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hollingsworth there have been born seven children: Elmer J., who is living in Newberg; Elzie M., who is working for the Burlington & Missouri Railroad Company in Gage county, Nebraska; Frankie L., the wife of Calvin Martin, a missionary of the Friends' church of Kake, Alaska; Orville R., who is engaged in business with his father; Joseph B., who is also in the store; Gertrude, who is in high school; and Esther.

The family attend the Friends church, in which the parents hold membership, and Mr. Hollingsworth is affiliated with Newberg Lodge, No. 96, I. O. O. F. In his political views he is a republican, but he has never been an office seeker, preferring to concentrate his energies upon the development of his personal interests. Mr. Hollingsworth is a man of high honor, and during the period of his connection with the commercial activities of Yamhill county he has at all times conducted his transactions in such a manner so to maintain a reputation for integrity and fair dealing that has proven a valuable factor in promoting the development of his business.

H. G. F. EGGERS, who is living retired in Pendleton was for many years one of the prominent agriculturists of Umatilla county. His birth occurred in Holstein, Germany, July 23, 1860, his parents being Henry and Catherine (Carsons) Eggers. The family left their native land in 1864 and after arriving in the United States settled in McLean county, Illinois. They resided there until 1893 when they came to Umatilla county, Oregon, and located upon a farm twelve miles northeast of Pendleton. The father owned one half section there and resided upon it until he retired and took up his residence in Portland. Later he removed to Orange, California, where he is now living. To their union six children were born: Maggie, who is the wife of J. Hudermann, of Pendleton; Ella, who is married to Chris Breding, also a resident of Pendleton; Mary, who is the wife of P. W. Ahlen, of Orange, California; H. G. F., the subject of this review; Fred, who is living north of Pendleton; and J. H., who is residing in Orange, California.

In Illinois H. G. F. Eggers acquired such education as was afforded by the public schools near his father's farm. Little occurred to vary for him the ordinary routine of farm life, and such time as he did not spend in the schoolroom was given to agricultural pursuits. After he laid aside his text-books he gave his entire attention and efforts to cultivating his father's farm. He was thus engaged for two years before he came to Umatilla county two years after his parents had removed here. Desiring to start out independently he rented land for a number of years and later purchased his father's property. His agricultural undertakings have always netted him substantial results and he has from time to time been able to increase his holdings until at present he owns fourteen hundred and twenty acres near Myrick station, this county. His life's record shows what can be accomplished when unremitting energy, perseverance and hard labor are used for the means of accomplishing an end. The highly cultivated state and well equipped appearance of his property at the time of his retirement showed Mr. Eggers had striven not only to make a living but also to meet with the success which is due every earnest farmer in this county. He resided upon his farm until about 1908 when he removed to Pendleton where he is now living retired in the comfortable home which he owns at 400 Jackson street. He has rented his farm property to his son and son-in-law.

On the 12th of February, 1884, Mr. Eggers was married to Miss Anna Mary Witt, also a native of Holstein, Germany. When she was but seventeen years of age she came to America alone, going directly to Illinois. Her birth occurred on the 12th of April, 1865. To their union five children have been born: Bertha, who is the wife of B. E. Anderson of Umatilla county; John, who is living on his father's farm; Dora, who is residing at home; Theresa, who is married to W. L. Boynton of Pendleton; and Malinda, who is also living at home. The family holds membership in the German Lutheran church of Pendleton. In addition to rearing his own children and giving them such educational and social advantages as Pendleton afforded he also adopted William Breding when the boy was but one and one half years of age. He at once made him a regular member of the family and extended to him the same treatment which was afforded the children of his own family.

DELOS P. HOPKINS, the owner of a large livery barn in Banks, was born in Wisconsin, October 25, 1860. His father, Nathaniel Hopkins, was a native of Vermont and in early manhood went to the Badger state, where he met and married Miss Lucinda Eaton, who was a native of Ohio. They began their domestic life in Wisconsin where they lived until 1871 and then removed to Hamilton county, Nebraska, where the father carried on farming up to the time of his death in 1908. The mother has since become a resident of Modesto, California, and is now seventy-eight years of age.

Delos P. Hopkins spent the first eleven years of his life in his native state and then accompanied his parents on their removal to Nebraska, where he became more and more largely experienced in farm work as he assisted his father in the development and cultivation of the fields. On attaining his majority he made his initial step in the business world, preempting a homestead claim in Custer county, Nebraska, which he improved until he had a clear title to the property. He operated the farm altogether for five years and then sold out but still continued to engage in farming in Nebraska until 1894. The succeeding three years were spent at various places in the west but in 1897 he returned to Nebraska, where he was again identified with general agricultural pursuits until 1901. That year witnessed his arrival in Oregon, at which time he took up his abode in Washington county, purchasing a tract of land on which he made his home until 1909. He then sold his farm and purchased a livery business in Banks, which he has since conducted, having now a large stable, a number of good horses and well kept vehicles. This is the only livery barn in Banks. In addition to its conduct he operates a farm near the town and is the owner of a fine residence property.

The lady who presides with gracious hospitality over their home was prior to her marriage, in February, 1883, Miss Luella Shipley, who was born in Illinois, January 8, 1866, a daughter of Jefferson and Lavina (Shom) Shipley, who were natives of Pennsylvania. The mother died in Nebraska and the father's death occurred in Washington county, Oregon. Of their eleven children eight are still living: Henry and William, who are residents of Nebraska; James T., of California; N. C., Charles and Grant, all of Washington county, Oregon; Joseph, of Portland; and Mrs. Hopkins, who is the only daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins are parents of twelve children but their first born, David A., died in infancy and Henry D., died at the age of ten years. Those still living are: Clarence O., twenty-six years of age, who is married and resides in Banks; Elmer L., twenty-three years of age, who is married and is associated in the livery business with his father and brother Clarence; Herman N., twenty-one years of age; Marion L., seventeen years of age; Lloyd A., a lad of thirteen years; Willie L. and Lillie D., twins, born March 28, 1901; Charles V., born February 14, 1903; Chester L., September 23, 1905; and Inez Luella, February 3, 1908. Realizing the value of education, the parents have provided their children with good school advantages. Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church and in politics he is a republican. Throughout his life he has been identified with farming interests, which still claim a portion of his time and attention, although he is now rapidly developing a livery business at Banks. He has made good use of his time and opportunities and while there have been no exciting chapters in his life record, he has proved himself a worthy and reliable citizen of the community in which he lives.

CHARLES JOSEPH GOODING, who operates over three hundred acres of land, seventy-five of which he and his brother own, in Marion county, was born in Indiana in 1869, his parents being Nicholas and Mary (Erbsland) Gooding. The father was born in Alsace-Lorraine, Germany, and came to this country when he was but eleven years of age. His family settled in Indiana, where he resided until after his marriage on the 28th of August, 1860. To this union nine children were born: George, of Butteville, Oregon; Elizabeth, who is married to John Glatt, of Woodburn, Oregon; Theresa, deceased; John, who is residing with his brother Charles; Charles J., the subject of this sketch; Lawrence, of St. Paul, Oregon; Joseph, who is married and is living in St. Paul; Annie, also a resident of St. Paul, and the wife of Fred Davidson; and William, who is living in St. Paul. The sons are all engaged in agricultural pursuits excepting Joseph, who is a retired merchant.

In 1889 Charles J. Gooding left his native state with his father and went to Butteville, Oregon, where they were joined by the other members of the family one year later, at which time they all removed to St. Paul. At the age of twenty-two Charles J. Gooding entered upon an independent career, at first as engineer in a sawmill at Butteville, but after two years he purchased and rented land near St. Paul. His brother John was in partnership with him and together they purchased the place upon which the subject of this sketch is now residing. He has fourteen acres planted to hops, the growing of which constitutes his principal industry. In addition he raises oats, sufficient to supply the needs of his own stock.

On the 28th of May, 1901, Mr. Gooding was married to Miss Blanch G. Davidson, a daughter of W. F. and Anna Catherine (Coleman) Davidson. Her birth occurred on the 5th of June, 1882, and she was one of twelve children, as follows: Mary, who is the wife of H. G. Kirkpatrick, of Sanders, Idaho; Eliza Jane, who is married to James Smith, of Champoeg, Oregon; Laura A., who is the wife of Jerome Jackson, of Hubbard, Oregon; Arzelia, who is married to Paul Reedy, of Salem, Oregon; J. Frederick, of St. Paul, Oregon; John F., who is married and is also a resident of St. Paul; Eugene C., who is also living in St. Paul; Edna A., deceased; Ralph S., of St. Paul; Mrs. Gooding; Hilda Margaret, who became the wife of Fred Gearin, of St. Paul; and Chester A., of St. Paul. To Mr. and Mrs. Gooding four children have been born: Bertrand S., born June 15, 1902; Charles J., Jr., whose birth occurred October 11, 1903; John Russell, born April 21, 1905; and Richard Andrew, who was born June 30, 1909. They are all residing at home and with the exception of Richard are attending school.

In politics Mr. Gooding gives his support to the democratic party, believing that its policies will be most efficient in producing good government, but when he casts his vote he is influenced more by the man than by the dictates of the party. He has always taken unusual interest in the schools of his district and has served as a school director for several terms. His public spirit is further seen in the support which he gives to any measure instituted for the public good. He holds membership in the Roman Catholic church and in the Catholic Order of Foresters.

WILLIAM S. ATLEE. The success which has come to William S. Atlee is the visible evidence of his life of well directed energy and thrift. As the architect of his own fortunes he has builded wisely and well. He started out for himself when a youth of fourteen years and has since depended entirely upon his own labors for all the material interests which are considered worth while. His birth occurred in England on the 4th of October, 1851, his parents being Thomas and Jane (Slater) Atlee, who in the year 1855 left their native country of England and sailed for America, settling first at Rochester, New York, where they remained for a time. Subsequently they became residents of Springfield, Massachusetts, where the father operated a flour mill for six years. He was engaged in similar business undertakings at different times in Rhode Island, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, in Canada East and Canada West, and his last days were spent in Berrien county, Michigan, where he died in 1898. His wife survived him about eight years, passing away in 1906. In their family were twelve children: William S.; Sarah, who died in England; Jennie, the wife of John Baker, of McMinnville, Oregon; Elizabeth, who is the widow of Charles Evans and lives in Berrien county, Michigan; Josephine, who died in Massachusetts; a daughter who died in the state of New York; Caroline, who passed away in Michigan; Joseph and Alvin, who are living in the state of Washington; and three who died in infancy.

William S. Atlee was a little lad of four years when brought by his parents to the new world and with them he remained until fourteen years of age, during which time he not only attended the public schools but also spent considerable time in the flour mills which his father was operating. Thus knowledge was gained of the business of a practical character and at the age of fourteen he took charge of a four-run flouring mill at Lagrange, Cass county, Michigan. Although so young, he proved his ability and for nine years remained in that position, never losing a single day. His employer was H. F. Colby, who is still operating the mill. On the expiration of that period he removed to Vermontville, Eaton county, Michigan, where he again took charge of a mill, never losing a day in all the eight years in which he carried on the business. In this extreme faithfulness as well as in his mechanical efficiency and executive ability is found the secret of his success. Going to Wexford county, Michigan, he took charge of a new process roller mill, purchasing and installing the machinery and conducting the mill for nine years. His wages were increased from time to time as his responsibilities grew heavier and at length from his earnings he was able to save a sufficient amount to purchase a farm near Sherman, which he operated for three years. He did not find this pursuit congenial, however, and sold his property. He then purchased a flour mill at Dailey, Michigan, which he conducted until 1906, when, feeling that still better business opportunities might be secured in the west, he made his way to Oregon, settling in Banks, Washington county, where he has since conducted a general mercantile store. He owns a fine business block, carries a large and well selected line of goods and has a gratifying patronage.

Mr. Atlee was married in 1873 to Miss Mary F. Jarvis, who was born in Cass county, Michigan, a daughter of Zed and Rebecca (Simpson) Jarvis, who were natives of Indiana but were married in Michigan, where they lived until called to the home beyond. They were parents of six children, of whom four survive: Henry, a resident of Idaho; Mrs. Atlee; Almanson and Almira, twins, the former living in Nebraska and the latter in Chicago. The two now deceased are Helen and Sarah. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Atlee has been blessed with three children. Guy D., born in Cass county, Michigan, in June, 1874, has a college education, has taught school for several years and is now living in Arizona. Henry, born in Easton county, Michigan, July 12, 1880, acquired a high school education and afterward married Miss Elsie Higgins, who was born in Cass county Michigan, and by whom he has one son, Zed J., born May 10, 1907. Mabel, born in Eaton county, Michigan, is the wife of Lloyd Bunn, of Portland, Oregon. She is a high-school graduate and prior to her marriage engaged in teaching school.

Mr. Atlee is somewhat independent in his political views, supporting men and measures rather than party. He has held the office of supervisor of his township and has served on the school board for many years, the cause of education finding in him a stalwart champion. Since twenty-two years of age he has been a member of the Masonic fraternity, his identification being with Forest Grove. His has indeed been an active life and its usefulness is evidenced in the fact that he has been enabled to provide a comfortable living for his family and establish a good business, which places him among the substantial citizens of his adopted city. His record proves that success is ambition's answer.

MRS. ELIZABETH WATTS, who resides at Murphy, Josephine county, is the owner of a fine one hundred and sixty acre farm in that section, which is in a good state of cultivation and well improved. She was born in Allen county, Ohio, April 2, 1852, a daughter of Sam and Rebecca (Jennings) Daniels, both natives of Ohio. She removed with her parents to Oregon in 1864, the family going by the old-fashioned ox team method before the railroads were built. While en route the cattle belonging to the family all died and it became necessary to supply their places with horses. The parents settled in Linn county and there passed the remainder of their lives.

Elizabeth Daniels spent her early childhood in Missouri and took her first steps toward gaining an education in that state. The remainder of her girlhood was spent in Oregon, where she rounded out her common-school education.

She has been twice married. She first wedded John Elliott and to their union four children were born. In 1871 Mr. Elliott died and in 1872 his widow married Alexander I. Watts. They became the parents of seven children, Laura E., Mary E., Alec, Benjamin, Cora A., Edna and Charles H., all of whom are living. Mr. Watts passed away February 26, 1912, and his remains were interred in the Williams Creek cemetery. The farm of one hundred and sixty acres upon which the widow and her family are now living, was purchased by Mr. Watts, and he placed on it suitable improvements and brought it under a good condition of fertility. He was an excellent business man and a highly respected citizen of the community. Fraternally he was a member of the Masonic order, practicing in his life the beneficent teachings of the craft. He took part in the Indian war of 1865 and 1866, rendering valuable service to the state and its settlers. He was a man of education, standing very high in the community, and held the offices of county surveyor and county clerk. In his death his family suffered an incalculable loss and his departure was very generally mourned. Mrs. Watts is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and is an active worker in its behalf.

ALEXANDER I. WATTS

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

PHILIP HENRY VAN ORSDALL. The steps of progress are noticed quite as much in agricultural lines today as in other fields of business activity. Prominent among those farmers of Umatilla county who are carrying on their agricultural pursuits according to modern and up-to-date methods is Philip Henry Van Orsdall. For six years he has been farming independently, his property being located at the head of Seven Mile creek. Born near Upper Sandusky, Ohio, his birth occurred August 28, 1867, his parents being Elijah and Eliza (Hardie) Van Orsdall, the former of whom was a native of New York state and the latter of Scotland. The mother was reared in Scotland but at the age of twenty-one years came to America. She is now residing in Pendleton at the age of seventy-five years. After being reared in Ohio the father removed to Kansas and entered land in Cherokee county. His death occurred there in 1879, when he was sixty-five years of age. In addition to carrying on agricultural pursuits he also engaged in the cooper's trade. After his death his widow removed to Oregon and has since made Pendleton her home. To their union six children were born: Perry, of Pendleton; John, of Portland; George, who is also residing in Pendleton; Philip Henry, who is the subject of this sketch; Ella, who died at the age of eleven years; and Charles, who passed away at the age of seven years.

Philip H. Van Orsdall was educated in the district schools and reared upon his father's farm, where he continued until 1899, when he came to Oregon with his mother. For seven years he had been employed by Henry Kapetke in the general transfer business and for four or five years he was engaged in business for himself. Six years ago he took up agricultural pursuits and he now owns two hundred acres of land, which is located at the head of Seven Mile creek. He rents five sections of land, which he devotes to wheat growing, southeast of Pendleton. He has raised as high as five thousand sacks from a one-half section and in one year he raised forty thousand bushels. During 1911 he had sixteen hundred acres seeded. Aside from wheat growing he has engaged in horse-raising to some extent and has at present about eighty head. He has devoted almost his entire time and attention to the development and improvement of his farm and that his efforts have been effective forces in the acquirement of substantial results is indicated by the fact that his place is one of the well improved and valuable properties in the locality. He has conducted his affairs according to modern and up-to-date methods, has been careful and systematic in the management of his interests and today is numbered among the successful and progressive farmers of Pendleton.

In July, 1898, Mr. Van Orsdall was married to Louise Parrazo, whose birth occurred in Vermont, May 23, 1873. She is a daughter of Joseph and Mary Parrazo. Before coming to Oregon in 1883 her parents resided in Nebraska for three years and in Boise, Idaho, five years. Upon arriving in this state they settled at once in Umatilla county, where the father is still residing, making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Van Orsdall. The mother's death occurred in 1909. By a former marriage Mrs. Van Orsdall has one son, Richard Devine, who is now a student at the University of Washington.

Mr. Van Orsdall holds membership in the Woodmen of the World. With him perseverance, diligence and integrity have constituted the salient characteristics of his life, bringing him to the honorable position which he now occupies in the opinion of his fellowmen among whom he is living and laboring.

JOHN M. MILLER. No special advantages or fortunate circumstances assisted John M. Miller as he started out in life for himself but rather the stern necessity of providing for his own support, and whatever success he has achieved is due to his business ability and determination. He is now proprietor of a hotel in Banks, where he also owns a good residence property. He was born in St. Paul, Minnesota, June 14, 1862, his parents being Martin and Martha Miller, both of whom were natives of Germany. The father came to the United States in his childhood days, the family first settling in Canada, where they resided for a time and then went to Minnesota. In that state both the grandfather and father of John M. Miller entered homestead claims and the grandparents died upon their farm there. It was while living in Minnesota that Martin Miller was married and for many years thereafter he was identified with agricultural interests in that state but a few years prior to his death removed to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he passed away at the age of sixty years. His wife's death had previously occurred in St. Paul, Minnesota, when she was forty years of age. They had four children: Mary, the wife of John Casper, of St. Paul; John M.; Paulina, the deceased wife of F. Wevering, of Washington, D. C.; and a sister living near St. Paul.

When a little lad of nine years John M. Miller began earning his own living by selling papers and blacking shoes. He worked thus for five years and the advantages of his youth were extremely meager. At the end of that time he secured a position in connection with the railroad, calling the crews for two years, after which he became fireman, working thus on a locomotive for three years. That he was reliable and capable is indicated in the fact that he was then promoted to the position of engineer on a freight train and later became engineer on a passenger train on the Great Northern railroad, acting as engineer for that line and also on the Northern Pacific for twenty-two years. He resided during that period in Minnesota and in the state of Washington and in 1907 removed to Oregon, where he operated the Shea engine, which was purchased by the Doty Lumber Company and was exhibited at the World's Fair in Portland in 1905. He was with the lumber company for fourteen years and then established his home in Washington county, Oregon, since which time he has conducted a hotel in Banks, his business interests being maintained in a building which he owns. He also has several lots in the state of Washington and his property holdings are the visible evidence of his success.

On the 22d of May, 1888, occurred the marriage of Mr. Miller and Miss Martha Pawlesek, who was born in Germany, January 23, 1871, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Wloka) Pawlesek, also natives of Germany and came to America in 1886. For four years thereafter they resided in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and then removed to Tacoma, Washington. The father died August 8, 1907, and the mother is yet living in Tacoma. In their family were thirteen children, of whom six still survive: Millie, the wife of Joseph Buhr, of Tacoma; Mrs. Miller; Joseph L., a resident of Spokane, Washington; Peter, whose home is in Oakland, California; Annie, living in Seattle; and Andrew, of Tacoma. Those who have passed away are Antone, Lena, two of the name of Mary, two of the name of Rosa and another who died in infancy.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Miller are three in number: Agnes Mary, who was born November 8, 1890, and is the wife of Henry Olson, of Banks; Clara Rose, who was born August 4, 1893, and is the wife of Milford C. Biddington; and John M., born December 25, 1908. Mr. Miller and his family are of the Catholic faith and in politics he is independent. He has never held office nor cared for political preferment, save that he served as mail carrier for six years. Neither is he connected with a large number of fraternal organizations, although he belongs to the Brotherhood of Firemen and Trainmen.

ED KIDDLE. Among the prominent millers of Oregon and the successful and capable business men of Union county Ed Kiddle has attained wide renown. He is the president of five flour mill companies and has given practically all of his time and attention since boyhood to that line of business. He was born in Illinois, July 15, 1862, a son of Fred and Mary E. (Noyes) Kiddle, both natives of England. He comes of a family of millers, both of his grandfathers, Mr. Kiddle and Robert Noyes, having been engaged in that business. His father emigrated to the new world at the age of fifteen years and settled in Illinois, near Chicago, later residing in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin. His death occurred at sea, the ship on which he journeyed being lost on a trip to Australia. He was a miller and followed that business during the time of his residence in this country. In his family were three children: Ida, who married W. O. Head, of Jefferson, Iowa; Ed, of this review; and Fred.

Ed Kiddle spent his early boyhood days in the state of Illinois, where he received a common-school education, residing in that state until 1871, when the family removed to Carthage, Missouri. They later removed to Peoria, Kansas, where they resided for about four years, after which they lived in and around Kansas City, Missouri, for a time. Mr. Kiddle grew up in the milling business and at the age of fifteen years started out in life for himself. In 1886 he came to Union, Oregon, where the original mill of the valley was located. That mill was destroyed by fire shortly after he became connected with it and then for a period of two or three years he was engaged in the live-stock business. He afterward rented the Union mill, conducting his live-stock interests in connection therewith. He also became president of the mill at Island City which has since remained the home office. It was burned in 1876 but was replaced by a modern plant with two hundred barrels capacity per day. In 1902 he organized a company and bought the Union flour mill, a plant with one hundred and twenty-five-barrel capacity. Since purchasing that mill Mr. Kiddle has remodeled it and modernized it in every particular. In the same year he and his associates purchased the Alliance mill at La Grande, which is an up-to-date plant with a capacity of one hundred and fifty barrels and is now conducted under the name of the La Grande Milling Company. On July 31, 1908, the mill at Island City was destroyed by fire and in September Mr. Kiddle purchased the Imbler Milling Company's plant having an equipment to turn out two hundred barrels per day, which is also modern in construction. At the same time he purchased the property of the Elgin Milling Company at Elgin and after remodeling it the mill has a daily capacity of one hundred barrels. The mill at La Grande is driven by electricity while the mills at Imbler and Elgin are run by steam. Those at Union and Island City are operated by water power and that at Island City has an auxiliary electric plant which is used when the water runs short. Mr. Kiddle is the president of the five milling companies mentioned but each is separately organized and incorporated, the brother of Mr. Kiddle being vice president and the two brothers owning a controlling interest in each plant. They have a combined capacity of eight hundred barrels daily and fifty per cent of the product is shipped to foreign countries, various amounts going to the South American republics and to China and Japan.

Mr. Kiddle was married in 1884 to Miss Emma L. Malling, a native of Illinois and a daughter of Myron and Maria Walling, who had removed to Hamilton, Missouri. To Mr. and Mrs. Kiddle have been born seven children, namely: Merton W., who was educated in the public schools of La Grande and who is in charge of the books of the home office; Netha M., a graduate of Washington University; Fred E., attending high school; Leta, who is also pursuing her education; and Greta, Fred and Earl, all deceased. Fraternally Mr. Kiddle is a Royal Arch Mason, being past grand high priest of the chapter and also past grand master of the lodge for Oregon. He is also grand prelate of the grand commandery, Knights Templar, and his son Merton is also a Knight Templar. Mr. Kiddle is extensively known as one of the most successful milling men in eastern Oregon. He possesses unusual business ability, having the rare faculty of handling details, and as he was practically raised in the milling business is thoroughly familiar with its every detail. He has long been recognized as one of the leading business men and most prominent citizens of Union county and is greatly esteemed by a large number of close business and personal friends.

JOHN FRANKLIN WEHRUM, who is engaged in farming seven and a half miles northwest of Gervais, has been a lifelong resident of Oregon and is today one of the most prosperous agriculturists of Marion county. He was born in Fairfield, Oregon, on the 2d of October, 1877, and his life displays many of the sterling characteristics which have been so prominent in many of the men who have developed the west. He is a son of John Henry and Helena Florence Wehrum. The father, who was an only child, was born at St. Paul, Oregon, in 1853, his parents being natives of Germany who after their arrival in New York again took passage on a steamer and went to San Francisco by way of Cape Horn. Almost immediately they came to Portland by water and settled on French Prairie, near St. Paul, where the father purchased three hundred acres of land and for several years was engaged in its cultivation. At the end of this time the family went to Germany for a short visit but upon their return to Oregon purchased five hundred and fifty acres of land near Fairfield, upon which they resided until the father's death in 1881. The mother was a native of Virginia, being one of nine children. The others are: John, of Washington; Albert, who is a resident of Heppner, Oregon; Erastus, who resides in Washington; Sterling P., also living in Heppner; Cecelia, of Junction City; Alice, who makes her home in Oregon; Martha, deceased; and Ann, of Spokane, Washington. Mrs. Wehrum came to Oregon from Missouri with her parents when she was four years of age. Her parents undertook the trip across the plains in 1852 with a large party, there being forty ox teams in the train. At the end of six months they arrived in Oregon and settled in Lane county, where they resided for a number of years before coming to Marion county and locating at Fairfield. Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Wehrum became the parents of five children: John Franklin, who is the subject of this review; Buddy, deceased; Albert E., of Orchards, Washington; one who died in infancy; and Clark E., who is residing in Washington with his mother.

John F. Wehrum began his active career at the age of twenty one years. He at once assumed charge of the home place of four hundred and forty acres and has carried on its cultivation up to the present time and in addition is improving seven hundred and fifty acres which he has rented on what is known as the Harding place. By able management and close application, together with a good understanding of scientific farming principles, he has brought his land under a high state of productivity. His energy is devoted to the raising of grain and hay and also to breeding and feeding sheep and hogs for the market.

On the 13th of December, 1901, Mr. Wehrum was married to Miss Nellie May Wompole, whose birth occurred on the 13th of September, 1879, a daughter of Martin and Matilda (Lindsay) Wompole. The father was one of six children and the mother, who came with her family from New York state in 1890, was one of seven children. To Mr. and Mrs. Wehrum three children have been born: Mildred, who is now attending school; and Margaret and Helen, twins, born April 11, 1908.

In politics Mr. Wehrum is nonpartisan, casting his vote at each election for the man or measure which in his judgment will be most effective in securing good government. He affiliates with the Presbyterian church and is a member of the Woodmen of the World. His life has been an intensely busy one and its use and worth none of his fellow citizens question. Wherever he is known he is held in high esteem alike for his industrial achievements and his personal integrity.

WILLIAM L. BROWN, who is numbered among the native residents of Umatilla county, is engaged in agricultural pursuits on his farm, which is situated near Helix. He was born September 28, 1876, the son of J. L. and Nancy E. (Kutch) Brown. The parents were natives of Indiana and Missouri, respectively, and in 1861 came to Oregon, now living in Milton. In their family were ten children, five of whom are living.

William L. Brown received a common school education and remained at home until fifteen years of age, when he started out in life for himself and worked on a farm until twenty five years of age. He then engaged in farming on his own account and now owns a tract of one hundred and sixty acres and is operating besides, three hundred and twenty acres.

On September 18, 1901, Mr. Brown wedded Miss Clara J. Zenske, who is a native of Umatilla county and a daughter of A. and Williemina Zenske. The parents are both natives of Wisconsin but are now living in Pendleton. Mr. and Mrs. Brown became the parents of one son, Edward D., who was born in November, 1904, and died three years later. Mr. Brown casts his vote with the democratic party, and fraternally he is affiliated with Helix Lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F., and with Pendleton Camp, No. 41, W. O. W. He is energetic and persevering and is rapidly becoming one of the successful farmers of the community. Always active in whatever enterprise seems worth while, he is today a man on whom all can depend for furthering the movements which contribute to the growth of the county.

SYLVESTER E. VEATCH. For more than half a century Sylvester E. Veatch has been an interested observer of the marvelous growth and development of Oregon, and during the fifty-nine years of his residence in the state has substantially contributed toward its progress both as a private citizen and public official. Since 1866 he has been living on a ranch two miles west of Cottage Grove on the Lorane road, and that his life has been one of enterprise and great activity is manifested by the appearance of this property.

Mr. Veatch is a native of White county, Illinois, his birth occurring in 1831, and a son of Isaac and Ollie (Miller) Veatch. His father was born in Kentucky and was a son of Elias and Jennie (Brown) Veatch, who were married in Tennessee. Isaac Veatch was a veteran of the War of 1812, having gone to the front during the first year of this conflict, but he had the misfortune to be wounded during an early engagement and was subsequently discharged because of physical disability. After his marriage he settled in Illinois, acquiring some land on the Wabash river. He resided there until 1844, then removed to Iowa, but ten or twelve years later he returned to Illinois, continuing to make his home in the latter state until about 1876, when he came to Oregon and thereafter lived with his sons. He lived to attain the venerable age of ninety-five years, his death occurring in 1880. Mr. Veatch was twice married, and to him and his first wife, who passed away in 1845, there were born sixteen children, all natives of Illinois. In order of birth they are as follows: William G.; James; Rebecca; John; Anderson; Lowrey; Posey; Isaac M.; Harvey C.; Sylvester E., our subject; Nicie Jane; Elizabeth Ann; and Harriet Lucretia; Lafayette; Robert; and Leander, who died at the age of four years. To Mr. Veatch and his second wife, whose maiden name was Miss Nicie Gibbs, there were born two children, Adaline and Mandana. The Veatch family originally came from Scotland, but they have long been residents of the United States.

Reared amid the pioneer conditions that prevailed in Illinois and Iowa during his boyhood and youth Sylvester E. Veatch received only the limited education then provided by the district schools. He early began to assist with the cultivation of the home farm and at the age of fourteen years practically took over the management of the homestead in Iowa, thus relieving his aged father of all heavy responsibilities. In 1853, he left Iowa and came to Oregon, first settling in Linn county, where for a year he worked out by the day. Having been trained to habits of thrift and industry from early childhood he carefully saved as much as possible of his meager wages, thus acquiring sufficient capital to enable him to begin the cultivation of a claim of his own. At the end of a year he came to Cottage Grove and filed on three hundred and twenty acres of land, but he subsequently sold this and went to Cloverdale. There for four and a half years he cultivated his father-in-law's place, but at the end of that time he rented a ranch at Creswell. He there continued his agricultural pursuits for three and a half years, then on the 6th of October, 1866, returned to Cottage Grove and bought a little more than a half section of land. At the same time he filed on thirty acres adjoining this tract and here he has ever since resided. His ranch now embraces three hundred acres, seventy of which have been brought under high cultivation while the remainder is in timber and pasture. Mr. Veatch is now and has been for some years past practically living retired, having deeded his ranch to his youngest son, Sylvester Curtis.

On the 21st of January, 1855, Mr. Veatch married Miss Maria Elizabeth Knox, who was born in Hancock county, Illinois, on the 29th of April, 1834, and was one of two children born of the marriage of S. B. and Elizabeth (Mathers) Knox. The mother passed away in Hancock county on the 13th of May, 1835, and on February 4, 1838, the father married Mrs. Cynthia Stockton, the widow of Amos Stockton, and to them were born ten children, as follows: Marian Ann, who was born December 7, 1838, and died on the 5th of February, 1864; Caroline M., who was born on the 1st of March, 1840; Roscoe, whose natal day was November 1, 1841; Harriet, whose birth occurred October 27, 1843; Oscar F., born on the 22d of June, 1845; Sophronia, born on September 23, 1847; Laura, born on the 1st of April, 1850; Horace, a lawyer, who was born on March 23, 1852, and died on the 18th of October, 1888; Jerome, whose birth occurred on December 5, 1854; and Emeline, who was born on the 12th of July, 1857, and died in 1862, at the age of four years. To Mr. and Mrs. Veatch there were born seven children, as follows: Matilda Ann, who died at the age of four; Isaac H.; Margaret Jane, the widow of Theodore Martin, of Albany, Oregon; Robert Wesley, who lives in Cottage Grove; Harriet Lucetta, the widow of Isaac Thomas, of Portland; Sylvester Curtis, who is living on the old home ranch; and Dora Belle, the wife of J. H. Martin, of Creswell. Mrs. Veatch passed away October 28, 1902.

Sylvester Curtis Veatch, the youngest son of Sylvester E. and Maria Elizabeth (Knox)

MR. AND MRS. SYLVESTER E. VEACH

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Veatch, has succeeded his father in the operation of the ranch and is meeting with a goodly measure of success in his undertakings. He was married on the 17th of April, 1901, to Miss Lena Stockwell, the second in order of birth and oldest living child of Frank H. and Madora Ann (Hawley) Stockwell. The other members of their family are as follows: Mary D., who is deceased; Raymond E.; Frank, who is also deceased; and Eugene Lafayette, who is practicing law in San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Veatch have a daughter and a son: Mary Enid, who was born on the 24th of November, 1902; and Wayne Otis, whose birth occurred on the 2d of March, 1905.

Sylvester E. Veatch is a member of the Presbyterian church, and for eleven years was an active worker in the Order of Good Templars, having been a charter member of this organization. In politics he is a republican and for many years represented his district in the county conventions and on several occasions refused nominations for state representative. During his earlier years he always took an active interest in all public movements, particularly those affecting the interests of agriculturists, and was an enthusiastic member of the state Grange. The greater part of his life has been spent on the frontier and many are the interesting narratives he relates of the pioneer days. His trip across the plains was rather an exciting one, as his party had the misfortune to have some of their oxen stolen by the Indians. This made the remainder of the journey quite difficult, and they found it particularly hard to ford the mountain streams, which were very high at that season. Mr. Veatch has now attained the venerable age of eighty-one years, but he is still quite active and rugged and finds great pleasure in reviewing the experiences of the early days with his many old pioneer friends.

FRANK PEDRO, who with his brother owns over thirteen thousand acres of land in Oregon and who resides at Pendleton, was born on May 10, 1866, in Portugal, his parents being Joseph and Mary (Lee) Pedro. His maternal grandmother died in Portugal at the advanced age of one hundred and three years. The father's death occurred in Portugal, where the mother is still residing. He was a sea captain throughout his active career. To their union ten children were born, one of whom resides in Portugal. The others came to the United States and with the exception of two who subsequently returned to Portugal they have made Oregon their home, where the death of Leonard occurred at Flora and he was buried in Pendleton. Manuel is the eldest and Frank, the second in order of birth of the seven which are now living.

Frank Pedro was but sixteen years of age when he came to the United States and began following the seafaring life. His first voyage was on the whaling vessel Lottie Cook and he was on this trip for eighteen months. Subsequently he sailed on the fishing schooners Mary Nesson and Frank Butler, of New London, Massachusetts. Shortly afterward he discontinued his occupation as seaman and went to California. In 1883 he came to Pendleton, Oregon, and this city has since been his place of residence. At present he is in the sheep business and is also engaged in raising other stock. When he entered upon agricultural pursuits he was employed as a laborer for three years and in that way had ample opportunity to watch and learn the methods employed by the farmer of the northwest. He and his brother at present own over thirteen thousand acres of land, over half of which is well cultivated for barley and wheat growing. He has about ten thousand head of sheep and about one hundred head of horses. Few of his countrymen have met with equal success in agricultural lines in Oregon and his remarkable progress has been due to his careful study of farming as a science and his unremitting energy and close application to his work.

In 1894 Mr. Pedro was married to Miss Flora Waugh, whose birth occurred in Umatilla county, on the 16th of September, 1873. Her grandfather Alexander Waugh crossed the plains from Indiana to Oregon at an early day. Her parents are at present residing in Umatilla county. To Mr. and Mrs. Pedro three children have been born, Josephine, Agnes and Margaret. He is a member of the Catholic church and his fraternal relations are confined to the Woodmen of the World. His life has been one of continuous activity, in which has been accorded due recognition of labor, for today he is numbered among the substantial agriculturists of Umatilla county and his record may well serve as a source of inspiration and encouragement to others, showing what may be accomplished in this country when one has the will to dare and to do. However, Mr. Pedro has not so narrowed his activities that he is interested only in agricultural lines. He has taken a great deal of pleasure in collecting and keeping various sea relics. At present he has the largest sperm whale tooth in existence. It was taken from a whale by his father and weighs over five pounds. His collection also includes many other interesting relics of the sea.

LEWIS E. BAUGHMAN. Although Lewis E. Baughman has been a resident of Newberg for less than a year, he has, nevertheless, during that period firmly established himself in commercial circles here as the proprietor of an automobile business which is already bringing to him substantial returns. He came to Oregon from the middle west, his birth having occurred in Woodford county, Illinois, April 13, 1882. His parents, John and Catherine (Naffziger) Baughman, are natives of Germany and Pennsylvania, respectively, and at one time were residents of Ohio. Later they removed to Illinois and in 1894 took up their abode in Iowa, in which state they now make their home. Of their family of twelve children eleven are still living.

Lewis E. Baughman spent the first twelve years of his life in his native state, after which he accompanied his parents on their removal to Iowa, where he completed his education, which had been begun in the public schools, by graduation from the high school. Thus he received a good general training for responsibilities to come, and upon attaining his majority entered the business world, accepting employment with the Western Elevator Company, with whom he remained eight years. At the end of that period he came to Oregon, for the advantages offered in the far west had proved attractive to him, and he arrived in Yamhill county in the summer of 1911. He located in Newberg and here established an automobile business, in the conduct of which he has since continued. He is a man of good business ability, his enterprising spirit and practical methods having already safely established him in trade circles in this town, the growth of his business auguring well for future success. In addition to his automobile business he also owns an orchard of ten acres located about one mile north of Newberg.

It was in Iowa, on the 22d of February, 1904, that Mr. Baughman was united in marriage to Miss Nellie Moore, who was born in Waterloo, that state, a daughter of Rynaldo and Elizabeth (Holtz) Moore. The father was born in Germany and is now deceased but the mother is living in Newberg with her son Lewis. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Baughman has been born one daughter, Rachel Louise, whose birth occurred on the 18th of August, 1909, and who is the life and light of the household. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Baughman had been a successful school teacher in her native state.

Mr. and Mrs. Baughman hold membership in the Order of the Eastern Star and the former also belongs to Symbol Lodge, No. 432, A. F. & A. M., of Iowa. In politics he is a stanch democrat although he has never sought nor desired public office, preferring to concentrate his entire time and attention upon his business affairs. He has so far found no cause to regret his determination to seek his fortune in the northwest, for he has become cognizant of the fact that in this great and growing country opportunities for business advancement are constantly being afforded the individual who has but to recognize them and avail himself of them in time. He is industrious and enterprising and has already won for himself a creditable place among the progressive business men of Newberg.

CARL G. PATTERSON, M. D., has been successfully engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery at Baker for the past decade and well merits recognition among the able representatives of the profession in this state. His birth occurred in Danville, Indiana, on the 20th of November, 1877, his parents being William W. and Joan F. (Worrell) Patterson. The family comes of Irish stock. William W. Patterson, a native of Rockbridge county, Virginia, died at Indianapolis, Indiana, on the 14th of October, 1906, when seventy-five years of age. His wife, who was born in Carroll county, Virginia, resides at Indianapolis, Indiana, and is seventy-nine years of age.

Carl G. Patterson supplemented his early education by a high-school course in Danville, Indiana, and later attended the Central Normal College in that city. Having determined to prepare himself for the practice of medicine, he entered the Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, and was graduated from that institution on the 15th of April, 1902. In that year he began practice at Baker, Oregon, and this city as been the scene of his professional labors continuously since. His practice has steadily grown in volume and importance as he has demonstrated his skill and ability in coping with the problems that always confront the physician and surgeon, and his reputation is an enviable one. He has served as city physician of Baker and at the present time acts as county health officer. He holds the rank of first lieutenant of the Medical Reserve Corps of the Oregon National Guard.

On the 19th of October, 1904, at Portland, Oregon, Dr. Patterson was united in marriage to Miss Charlotta A. Roberts, a daughter of Charles G. and Margaret (Aitken) Roberts, who were natives of Glasgow and Edinburgh, Scotland, respectively. Charles G. Roberts resides at Hood River, Oregon, and his wife is deceased. Dr. and Mrs. Patterson have two children: Joan, whose natal day was April 25, 1907; and Franklin Worrell, born on the 19th of September, 1908.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Dr. Patterson has supported the men and measures of the republican party. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to Baker Lodge, No. 47, A. F. & A. M. and Keystone Chapter, No. 15, R. A. M. He is a member of Lodge No. 338 of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, at Baker. Dr. Patterson maintains the strictest conformity to the highest professional ethics and enjoys in full measure the confidence and respect of his professional brethren as well as of the general public.

J. H. KILBURG is one of the partners in a large general store at Buxton, being associated in the ownership and conduct of the business with his brother Anthony and H. Gregerson. He was born at Wilsonville, Oregon, August 22, 1882, and is of German lineage, his parents, Peter and Kathryn (Rhodes) Kilburg, being natives of Germany and Iowa, respectively. They were married in Iowa, where they began their domestic life, but after a short time came to Oregon and have since resided either in this state or in Washington. The father settled in Woodburn, Oregon, in 1890, and is there living at the age of sixty-six years, but in 1904 he was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife. For many years he followed farming but at the present writing lives retired. Unto him and his wife were born eleven children, of whom four died in infancy, the others being: Mrs. Annie McFarland, a resident of Walla Walla, Washington; J. H.; Anthony, who is living in Washington county; Mrs. Margaret Phillips, a resident of Woodburn; Kathryn, who is also living in Woodburn; and Emma and Raymond, both at home.

J. H. Kilburg attended the public schools and worked upon the home farm, early becoming familiar with the duties and labors incident to the development of the fields. He continued to assist his father until twenty-eight years of age, when, in association with his brother Anthony and H. Gregerson, he purchased a general mercantile store in Buxton, which he has since conducted. It is the only store of consequence in the town and enjoys a fine business. Mr. Kilburg also owns property in the residence district of Portland and is meeting with substantial success that comes as the legitimate reward of his perseverance, industry and capable management. He was reared in the Catholic faith and votes with the republican party but is not an office seeker, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs, which he capably manages, making a close study of the conditions of trade and of the wants of his patrons.

ARCHIE LINCOLN BLACK is a man who in a quiet way is doing much to contribute to the growth of Grant county in its commercial aspects. He is now conducting a general store in Mount Vernon and has gained success. He is a native son of the west, having been born in The Dalles, Oregon, December 14, 1869, and is a son of Charles and Mary (Rodgers) Black, both natives of Maine. The family is of English origin and the paternal grandfather of our subject, Edward Black, was born in Great Britain. Charles Black was married in his native state, Maine, and came to Oregon in 1868. He was a carpenter by trade and followed that occupation for many years. When the government was about to build a mint at The Dalles he received an appointment to work upon the building. He came to the eastern part of the state and settled in the John Day valley in 1870, locating just below Mount Vernon, where he died at the age of twenty-seven, in 1874. After his death his wife returned to Maine where she remained but a short time. She came back to Oregon after a few months and resided here until 1893, when she made her second journey to her native district, where she is now living.

A. L. Black is the eldest of a family of three children. He remained in Oregon until he was ten years of age when he went east with his mother and remained in Maine for about four years. In 1883 he returned to Oregon where he took up various activities connected with the general life of the country. He was successful in the teaming business and in various other capacities. He worked during most of his time in the employ of E. Stewart, of Dayville, Oregon, but in 1890 started in business for himself, operating a sawmill on Flat creek, eighteen miles below Mount Vernon. He added to his activities the conduct of a large stock ranch and was successful in both branches. His sawmill was finally destroyed by fire and never rebuilt. In 1905 he sold his ranch and his large herd of stock to E. Stewart, his former employer and bought the holdings of H. H. Cummings, who was conducting a general store at Mount Vernon. Mr. Black has been active in the conduct of his enterprise since that time and has built up a flourishing and prosperous business. His store is one of the largest in this section of the county and has a frontage of seventy feet and a depth of ninety feet. During the term of his ownership Mr. Black has increased the capacity of his building, has installed modern and improved equipment and has greatly extended his line of stock. He is the agent for the Oliver Plow Works and the Studebaker Wagon Company and has constantly on hand a thorough line of farm implements. He does not make a specialty of any one branch of his business but gives his time and attention to general merchandise. His stock is attractively arranged and his enterprise is run along progressive and metropolitan lines.

June 17, 1890, Mr. Black was united in marriage to Miss Sophronia Wright, a daughter of Stephen Wright, who came to Oregon in the early days of its settlement and died in Kelso, Washington, in 1905. To Mr. and Mrs. Black have been born six children: Ethel, who is living at home; Etta; Vinnie; Grace; Charles; and Howard. Mr. Black is a popular and well known citizen. His cooperation can always be counted upon in any movement looking toward the progress of the town of Mount Vernon in a commercial, political, or social way. He seeks no success beyond a purely business walk of life. He has made his commercial career honorable and upright and in doing this he has achieved prosperity.

ALBERT LOVERIDGE, who is now living in Woodburn, Oregon, was born in Ohio, on the 22d of July, 1842, his parents being Michael and Hannah (Lyddon) Loveridge. The father was born and reared in Somersetshire, England, his birth having occurred April 17, 1803, and he was married in October, 1826, in St. Gregory, England, where he resided until 1837. During early life he was educated for the ministry and was engaged in preaching in the Baptist church for many years. When he left his native land he came to America and almost immediately after his arrival in New York started west, settling in Ohio, where he remained for a short time before locating in Galesburg, Knox county, Illinois. Subsequently in 1865 he crossed the plains and settled in Molalla valley, near Oregon City, and resided there until his death, which occurred on the 27th of December, 1880. Mrs. Loveridge passed away on the 4th of September, 1883. To this union eight children were born. Elizabeth, the eldest, died October 13, 1849. Levena was married in Illinois to John Axtell, a native of England. Mary died at the age of five months and one day. Mary, who was born March 17, 1831, is the widow of Moses Hahn and resides at Maryville, Missouri. William, whose birth occurred September 16, 1836, died March 12, 1908. Lucina was married in Illinois to William Adams, now of Molalla, Oregon, and they came to this state with their parents in 1865. Albert, who is the subject of this sketch, is the next in order of birth. Newton is a resident of Weston, Oregon.

Albert Loveridge began his independent career at the age of twenty years. He crossed the plains in 1863, going directly to Austin, Nevada, where he was engaged in silver mining for a period of five years. At the end of this time he removed to the northern part of the state and mined for eight years, previous to going to Idaho in 1876 and settling in Bruneau valley, where he engaged in stock-raising and farming until his retirement twenty-seven years later. Although Mr. Loveridge retained the four hundred and eighteen acres near Mountain Home, Idaho, which he owned at that time, he came to Woodburn, Oregon, where he has since resided in a large and commodious house which he purchased upon his arrival. His farm in Idaho is well stocked and although he has engaged a capable manager to relieve him of all active duties he still takes an owner's interest in its success. He is also the owner of a ferry, which he has operated for twenty-three years, and from the income received from this ferry in addition to that derived from his successful stock-raising Mr. Loveridge has accumulated a fortune, which is commensurate with his energy, persistency and diligent labor.

On the 13th of September, 1871, Mr. Loveridge was married to Miss Mary Coats, a daughter of Thomas and Nancy (Owerton) Coats, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Virginia, which state had long been the home of her ancestors. The parents were married in Missouri in 1843, and eleven years later removed to California, where they remained for a number of years before going to Jackson county, Oregon, where they resided for some time. Mr. Coats was wounded in the arm while on active duty in the Rogue River war. Mrs. Loveridge is one of six children, the others being: Benton, William and Maggie, all deceased; John, who is a resident of Mountain Home, Idaho, and David, deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Loveridge five children have been born: Gertrude, who was born June 9, 1872, and is the wife of John S. Black, of Mountain Home, by whom she has the following children, Errol, Ralph, Guy, George, Amy and David; Ray, deceased, whose birth occurred May 20, 1875, and who was married to Miss Phoebe Simmons, of Parnell, Missouri, to whom one child, Mary, has been born; George, who was born August 10, 1882, and married Polly Owens, of Bruneau, Idaho; Vida, who was born April 23, 1889, and has received a musical education at the University of Idaho at Moscow; and Gladys, born November 28, 1891, who became the wife of Percy Beckley, of Idaho.

In politics Mr. Loveridge is an enthusiastic democrat, firmly believing that the policies of that party will be most effective for good government. His political affiliations are the same as those of his family, his father having been a strong democrat who was so loyal to his party and principles that upon one occasion, while living in Illinois, he was threatened by mob violence at a time when the democratic party was the object of attack and contumely. Mr. Loveridge has never sought office as a reward for party fealty but has ever taken an active interest in all measures which have been undertaken for the public good. His interest for the future welfare of his family is attested by the fact that he is at present holding a policy in the New York Life Insurance Company. By strict attention to the undertaking at hand and by fair dealings with all with whom he comes in contact, Mr. Loveridge has won an enviable position among those who stand for the practical development of the northwest.

HARMON L. ALEXANDER is a well known and successful blacksmith of Imbler, who has been a resident of the state since 1876. He is one of the valued men of his town and a highly respected citizen. He was born in Farmington, Ontario county, New York, April 25, 1840, a son of William H. and Nancy (Phillips) Alexander, the latter a daughter of John Phillips. The grandfather, Andrew Alexander, was a native of Scotland and emigrated to the new world when he was eighteen years of age, settling in New York. During his early manhood the father was employed as foreman in a woolen factory, holding that position for fourteen years. He removed in 1847 to Morenci, Lenawee county, Michigan, where he engaged in the flouring mill business, afterward building a woolen and carding mill, which he operated for several years. Later in life he purchased a farm near New Boston, Michigan, where his last days were spent.

The eldest in a family of nine children, Harmon L. Alexander received as good a common-school education as was obtainable in those days, his studies being pursued in a log schoolhouse. When eighteen years of age he was apprenticed by his father to a blacksmith and remained in Michigan, working at his trade, until 1876. He then removed to Oregon but owing to the Indian troubles he resided in this state but a short time when he took up his residence in Olympia, Washington. In 1879 he came to Island City, Union county, where he opened a shop and did a large business with the freighters, frequently employing as many as seven men. He remained in that city until 1888, when the railroad was built, and then settled in La Grande, where he continued running a blacksmith shop, employing three or four men. At the end of twelve years he came to Imbler, and opened his present shop, now doing a very satisfactory business.

Mr. Alexander was married in 1865 to Sarah Dean Rockwell, a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. She is a daughter of Orrin Rockwell and comes of good Quaker stock. Mrs. Alexander received a good education, completing her studies at Hillsdale College, of Hillsdale, Michigan. By her marriage she became the mother of two children, Fred Rockwell and Frank Dwight. The former received his elementary education in Island City and afterward took a course in Alma College at Alma, Michigan. He became an electrician and is now employed by the Portland Street Railway Company at a very satisfactory salary. The latter, Frank Dwight Alexander, received his preliminary education in La Grande, and afterward pursued his studies in the Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti, Michigan, and now occupies a very responsible position with the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company at Portland, Oregon, as collector in the general freight department. The mother of these children passed away November 17, 1888, at the age of forty-nine years.

H. L. ALEXANDER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Mr. Alexander is a Royal Arch Mason and stands high in fraternal circles. He is a greatly respected citizen, has been reasonably successful in business, possesses sound judgment and is not afraid to express his opinions. He is progressive, well educated and a student of human nature, and is one of the most valuable citizens of Imbler.

ROBERT T. SIMPSON, conducting a hotel at Buxton, was born in Ontario, Canada, July 22, 1866, his parents being Adam and Luthera (Cerns) Simpson, who were likewise natives of Ontario. The mother was of Irish and Scotch descent while the mingled strains of German, English and Scotch blood flowed in the veins of the father. The parents were married in Canada and there reared their family. The father was a sailor on the lakes, becoming a captain and commanding vessels until he came to Oregon in the spring of 1893, at which time he settled in Portland. In that city his wife passed away in 1893 and Adam Simpson afterward came to Buxton where he has since lived, being now sixty-six years of age. In the family were seven children: Robert T.; Angeline, who is the wife of L. C. Chapman and resides in O'Neill, Nebraska; William F., a resident of Portland; Margaret, who is the wife of Fred Burns, of Minnesota; Benjamin J., living in Buxton; and Samuel and Adam J., both of whom are now deceased.

Robert T. Simpson was only fifteen years of age when he began earning his own living and early learned that industry, determination and perseverance are the basis of all success. He was first employed at herding cattle in the state of Iowa and later worked on a farm for a time. Subsequently he went to Nebraska where he engaged in carrying the mail over a stage route for two years. He afterward worked on cattle ranches for two years, at the end of which time he was married and began farming on his own account.

It was on the 3d of April, 1889, that Mr. Simpson wedded Miss Esther J. Kuhn, who was born in Kansas in 1873, a daughter of Robert and Maria Kuhn. Her father was born in Pennsylvania and her mother in Tennessee, and their marriage was celebrated in Nebraska City, Nebraska, where they lived for a short time, and then removed to Kansas, where they made their home until the mother's death in 1878. In that year the father went to Holt county, Nebraska, where he resided until 1891, when he came to Washington county, Oregon. For eighteen years he remained a resident of this state but in 1909 removed to the state of Washington, where he is now living. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Kuhn were born four children: David F., a resident of Raymond, Washington; Mrs. Simpson; Robert R., also living in Raymond; and Sarah Elizabeth, who died at the age of two years.

Following their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Simpson began their domestic life upon a farm in Nebraska, where they remained for two years, but thinking that better business opportunities could be secured on the Pacific coast they came in 1891 to Washington county, Oregon, where they have since made their home. Mr. Simpson first proved up a homestead on which he lived for ten years, and then came to the town of Buxton, where he devoted a few years to locating people on claims. He next entered the hotel business in which he is still engaged, owning the hotel property and also an attractive residence in the town. His realty possessions likewise include an interest in three hundred and twenty acres of timber land together with property in Portland and at Turner Rocks, at Turner Rocks Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson have become the parents of six children. David B., who was born in 1891, married Miss Bessie Howard, a native of Michigan, and they have one child, Adelle Esther, born July 30, 1911. Thomas W., the second child, died in infancy. Ralph E., born in 1893, Robert R., in 1896, Hazel M., in 1898 and Elsie R., in 1904, are all attending school.

Mr. Simpson is an advocate of republican principles and is interested in the welfare and the upbuilding of the community in which he lives to the extent of giving his cooperation to all movements for the general good. At the present time he is serving as supervising fire warden and for several terms he has been a member of the school board, the cause of education finding in him a warm friend. Starting out in life empty-handed, he has steadily worked his way upward to the creditable business position which he now occupies, which is an indication of his dominant qualities—diligence and perseverance.

WILLIAM PHILLIP CLAFLIN was a well known and successful business man of Grant county. He was born in Illinois, February 5, 1829, and died in the month of April, 1879, when fifty years of age. His father was Robert Claflin, who came of Welsh, English and Scotch ancestry, representatives of the name early coming from England to America. Edward Claflin, a brother of William P. Claflin, lost his life while serving in the Union army.

William Phillip Claflin made his way westward to California with an ox team, paying one hundred dollars for the privilege of joining a party and driving a team. He was one of the pioneer settlers of this state and shared in the usual experiences and hardships of that period. He first engaged in freighting with pack mules at Jacksonville, Jackson county, and subsequently went to the Cariboo country, where he engaged in mining, meeting with success. He acquired twenty thousand dollars in gold as a result of his labors and located in Canyon City, establishing a store which he conducted until 1868. He then preempted the property which is now in possession of his family, and is situated about three and a half miles above Prairie City. He spent the remainder of his life upon that place engaged in stock-raising, and sound judgment and enterprise brought him a comfortable competence.

On the 20th of March, 1872, William P. Claflin was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary M. (Houseman) Riggs, a native of Michigan, who came to Oregon to join a sister, Mrs. Holcomb, who had been living in this state for four years. The children of that marriage are: Maud, now Mrs. Eugene Brown, of Eagle Valley; Amelia and Edward, deceased; and William P., Jr., living on the old home place. Following the death of William P. Claflin, Mrs. Claflin became the wife of George Wood, who came from England to the new world and died in this district in 1896. One child was born of that marriage, Scott H. Wood who is living in the John Day valley. The family have three hundred acres of land, over half of which is bottom land and under irrigation. During the Indian scare of 1876 and 1878 most of the people of this district went into the town and used the grist-mill for a fort. Mr. Claflin, however, with his family and four men for four nights slept in a stone cellar on his farm to watch over and protect his property if necessary.

William Phillip Claflin, the son, received his early education in the public schools and graduated from the high school in Baker in 1900, while later he pursued a business course in Portland. He was then employed as a salesman by a dental supply house until he returned to the ranch which he has since conducted. They have a pleasant home, a fine garden and orchard, and the location and surroundings are most desirable. The farm is devoted largely to stock-raising, Mr. Claflin breeding registered stock, constantly improving the strain with the intention of devoting much of his time to the raising of high-grade cattle. What energy and determination can accomplish will be his, for he is a man of strong purpose and carries forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes.

GILBERT H. BENJAMIN, who resides two miles north of Gervais, ranks among those who have won success by hard labor, earnest endeavor and constant application to duty. He was born in Jackson, Amador county, California, and is a son of Magloire Pierre and Dorilla Zoe (Thomas) Benjamin. The father was born December 19, 1839, in St. Marie De Monoire, Quebec, Canada, and the mother on December 23, 1846, in the same county. The maternal grandmother was Marie Fugere, who was the wife of Xavier Thomas, both of whom were born in Canada. The paternal grandfather, John Baptiste Benjamin, was also a native of Canada. Magloire Pierre Benjamin was the eldest of four children, the others being: Edouard, who is a resident of Watervliet, New York; Rosalie, residing in New Bedford, Massachusetts; and Julia Lemaire, deceased. The mother, Dorilla Zoe (Thomas) Benjamin, was one of nine children: Jean Baptiste, deceased; Louis, of Chambly Basin, Canada; Ami, who was killed in the battle of Pittsburg Landing in the Civil war; Honore, deceased; Felicite, deceased, who was the wife of Ferdinand Sicotte, who has also passed away; Selena, deceased; Allida, the wife of Charles Brazeault, of Providence, Rhode Island; and Nathalie, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Magloire Pierre Benjamin were married July 25, 1866, and became the parents of four children: Dorilla Felicite, who is the wife of William Dale Laughary, of Oregon City; Gilbert H., the subject of this review; William M., a resident of Sacramento, California; and Alice, deceased.

Gilbert H. Benjamin enlisted in Company M, Second Oregon Volunteer Infantry, May 15, 1898, for service in the Spanish-American war. He was in the first expedition to leave the United States for battle on a foreign shore. After coaling at Honolulu June 3, 1898, the vessel proceeded to the island of Guam, from which place they took the first Spanish prisoners to Manila bay, arriving June 20. On the 2d of July they disembarked and on the 13th of August they did effective duty for their country. Mr. Benjamin was in Wheaton's flying column which went up the Pasig river and engaged in the battles of Guadelupe Church and Pasig. Subsequently he returned to Manila and then proceeded to Caloocan, where he participated in the battle of Malabon on the 25th of March, 1899, and in the battle of Pola the following day. Following this he was in the battle of Marilo on the 11th of April and embarked for home on the 12th of of June. He sailed on the 14th via Japan and arrived at San Francisco on the 12th of July, disembarking on the 14th. After he was mustered out on the 7th of August he returned home and took up farming. Mr. Benjamin has since resided upon his father's farm and has devoted his entire time to hard work. He rents six hundred and forty acres of land, which he devotes to grain and stock-raising. At the present time he is raising sheep and hogs for the western markets and is also breeding thoroughbred sheep and fine horses. Besides giving his attention to these agricultural pursuits he has at various times been engaged in other undertakings, having for four years run a hay bailer with cook wagon and at the present time doing a general warehouse business. In addition to this warehouse he also owns two acres of land situated along the railroad in Woodburn.

On the 26th of July, 1909, Mr. Benjamin was married to Mrs. Mabel Gordon Jukes, who was born on the 3d of February, 1882, at Eagle Creek, Oregon, and is a daughter of J. L. and Adelaide (Jones) Gordon. Mrs. Gordon was one of eight children: Albert, who is a resident of Corvallis; Lydia, who is the wife of Douglas Parker, of Clackamas; Freeman, a resident of North Yakima, Washington; Mrs. Gordon; Leonard, of Clackamas; William, of Seattle, Washington; Ernest, deceased; and Dena, who died in infancy. Mr. Gordon was the second of four children, the others being Samuel, Mary and Anna, all deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, who were married in 1879, became the parents of four children: Rex, who is living at Colton, Oregon; Mrs. Benjamin; Harold L., a stationary engineer; and Neil L., deceased. Mrs. Benjamin had been previously married, her first union being to Edward J. Jukes, whom she married on the 19th of October, 1900. To this union one child was born, Eva D., whose birth occurred June 7, 1904, at Clackamas. To Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin one child has been born, Adelaide Zoe, born on the 13th of September, 1910.

In politics Mr. Benjamin is a democrat but he has never sought office as a reward for party fealty. He is a member of Salem Lodge, No. 336, B. P. O. E., and holds membership in the Catholic church. Earnest, persistent work has been the source of his success, enabling him to surpass many who started out in life earlier or more advantageously. He is one of the substantial agriculturists of Gervais and his record may well serve as a source of encouragement to others, showing what may be accomplished by one who has the will to dare and to do.

JOHN HENRY WAGNER is one of the highly successful sheep men of Wallowa county, where he has been engaged in this business for about seven years. He is a native of Oregon, being born on a ranch in the Grande Ronde valley on the 4th of December, 1877. He is a son of George and Sarah (Standage) Wagner, who came to the northwest during the pioneer days, locating on a ranch in the Grande Ronde valley. There the father continues to reside but the mother passed away several years ago.

There were no momentous events or unusual occurrences in the boyhood of John Henry Wagner to distinguish it from those of other lads who were reared on an Oregon ranch during the pioneer period. He pursued his education in the district schools in the vicinity of his home until he had attained the age of fourteen years. He then laid aside his text-books and assumed the duties of manhood, and for fourteen years thereafter herded sheep in the Grande Ronde and Wallowa valleys. His wages were not large, but being thrifty and temperate in his habits he managed to accumulate a sum of money which permitted him in 1905 to withdraw from the service of others and engage in business for himself. He now owns a fine herd of sheep and has acquired quite extensive property interests in the vicinity of Joseph. He is numbered among the highly efficient and prosperous ranchers of this section and such success as has come to him is the result of his unceasing diligence and perseverance, as he has made his way practically unaided from early youth, and is well deserving of the title of self-made man.

Since attaining his majority, Mr. Wagner has voted the republican ticket, considering the principles of that party best adapted to protect the interests of the majority. He has led a quiet, unobtrusive life, yet his qualities of heart and mind have won him many friends who hold him in the highest esteem, recognizing and appreciating in him a man of worth to the community.

GUY FORREST VIA, M. D., is one of the younger practicing physicians of Washington county but his years seem no bar to his ability and progress. He carefully prepared for the profession and his duties are discharged with a sense of conscientious obligation that makes his work of much worth to his patrons. He was born in Columbia, Missouri, October 8, 1880. His father, W. P. Via, was also a physician who, born in Virginia, removed to the middle west and in Missouri was married to Miss Emma Esther Ravenscraft, who was a native of Callaway county, Missouri. They began their domestic life in that state but after six years removed to eastern Kansas, in 1886, where they remained for a year, during which period Dr. Via continued in the practice of medicine. He then returned with his family to Missouri, settling in Columbia county, where he remained until 1888, when he came to Oregon and for eight years practiced at Forest Grove. On the expiration of that period he returned to Columbia county, where he resided until 1897, in which year he went to Oklahoma. Six months later, in 1898, he returned to Oregon where he continued in active practice until his death, which occurred April 17, 1909. His widow is now living at Forest Grove, at the age of fifty-two years. In the family were four sons and a daughter, of whom Hugh B., the eldest, died at Los Angeles, California, and William P., the youngest, passed away at the age of five years. The others are: Guy F. and Robert Lee, residing in Silverton, Oregon, and Estella, who is with her mother.

Dr. Guy F. Via pursued his early education in the common schools of Missouri and afterward attended the Tualitin Academy of Forest Grove, from which he was graduated with the class of 1901. He then pursued a course in the medical department of the state university at Portland and was graduated in 1909. In May of that year he located for practice at Forest Grove but soon afterward came to Buxton where he is still living. He is the only physician of the town and his practice covers a large part of the surrounding territory. His professional training was thorough and systematic and he has continued a close student of the science of medicine, his individual reading and research giving him knowledge that keeps him in close touch with the advanced thought of the profession and the work that is being done by its prominent members.

On the 13th of September, 1904, Dr. Via was married to Miss Mae Fredericka Heywood, who was born September 18, 1885, in Washington county, Oregon, and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Heywood, the former a native of England and the latter of the Sunset state. They were married in Oregon where the mother passed away in 1890, but the father is still living in Hillsboro. In their family were a son and four daughters; Alfred, deceased; Winifred, the wife of Frank Reeves, of Salem, Oregon; Josephine, who became the wife of Milo Mae, of Portland; Rose, a graduate of the Portland high school; and Mrs. Via, who completed her education by graduation from the high school of Hillsboro. By her marriage she has become the mother of two children, but the first-born, Gerald Forrest, whose birth occurred November 11, 1905, passed away in September, 1906. The little daughter, Bernice, was born on the 10th of November, 1906. Dr. Via is a democrat in his political views and fraternally is connected with the Maccabees of Buxton. He and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church and are prominent in social circles, the hospitality of the best homes being cordially extended them while their own doors are ever open for the reception of their many friends.

IRA BRAY. One of the successful men of Oregon is Ira Bray, now in business at Waldport, whose stories of hunting and trapping would make a volume of great interest. He has killed over fifteen hundred deer, three hundred elk, four hundred bear and numerous wild-cats and cougars, not to speak of many smaller animals. Having laid aside his gun and traps, he is now successfully conducting an agate factory. He was born at Bloomington, Indiana, on the 4th of April, 1859. His father, Nathan Bray, was born in North Carolina, in 1796, and in his boyhood became a resident of Kentucky. Later he settled in Monroe county, Indiana, and engaged in farming during the remainder of his life. He was a prominent man in his section and loaned money extensively. He lived to the advanced age of ninety-five years, passing away in 1891. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Nancy Cannon and she was also a native of North Carolina, but moved to Indiana with her parents in her girlhood.

The youngest of a family of eight children, Ira Bray was reared on his father's farm and availed himself of good advantages of education in the public and high schools of Bloomington. He was also a student for two years at Bloomington College. He received his introduction to business as clerk in his brother's store at Bloomington but, being ambitious to see the world and carve out a fortune on his own account, came to the Pacific coast at the age of twenty-one and herded sheep for a year in Humboldt county, California. He then started northward on horseback and arrived at Florence, Oregon, soon afterward securing employment in the gold mines of Ziegler & Hinch near the Heceta lighthouse. He continued in the mines for two and one-half years and then engaged on his own account in stock-raising, hunting and trapping, his experiences in those lines extending through a period of thirty years. In the spring of 1911 he located at Waldport and his agate factory is one of the flourishing concerns of this region. He has collected some of the finest specimens of agate ever found in America, and his name is well known throughout the country among lovers of those beautiful stones. During the years he was actively engaged in hunting and trapping he never wantonly killed any animal but hunted only for food or with commercial purposes in view. He ranks among the most successful hunters Oregon has known.

In 1880 Mr. Bray was married to Miss Georgie Anna Starr, who was born at Monroe, Benton county, Oregon, a daughter of George C. and Elizabeth Starr. She was the third in a family of six children. The father was born in Missouri and served in the Mexican war under General Price. He came to Oregon in the early '50s and engaged for many years in the mercantile business in Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Bray are the parents of six children: Addie Irene, who is the wife of Samuel Levens, of Yachats; Rosie Alice, who married Rufus Stonefield and lives near Heceta; John B., of Waldport; Catherine Myrtle, who is deceased; an infant, also deceased; and Joseph T., who resides at Waldport.

Politically Mr. Bray supports the republican party. He has taken the interest of a patriotic citizen in politics but has never sought public office, although he served for eight years as postmaster at Minnie, Oregon. He is a member of the Church of Christ. Actuated by a worthy ambition, he has made himself useful to his fellowmen and has ever aimed to keep in touch with the spirit of progress which is the distinguishing mark of the twentieth century.

CHARLES H. HORNER is the competent and highly respected county clerk of Gilliam county, Oregon. His birth occurred in West Virginia on the 14th of March, 1876, his parents being John D. and Anna G. (Hammond) Horner, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. They were reared and married in the Keystone state, where John D. Horner engaged in farming, following the occupation of his forebears. Subsequently he removed to West Virginia, in which state he lived but a short time and then took up his abode in Kansas, where he remained for fourteen years. In 1892 he emigrated to Oregon, locating in Marion county, purchasing land four and a half miles northeast of Salem, upon which he moved and lived until the time of his death, which occurred in May, 1905. He is survived by his widow, who still lives on the old home farm.

Charles H. Horner was reared at home and educated in the public schools of Kansas. He afterward entered the Friends Polytechnic Institute of Salem, Oregon, where he studied for one year and he then became a student at the State Agricultural College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1901. After his graduation he taught school for one year only. In February, 1902, he moved to Condon, Oregon, where he secured the position of assistant postmaster, remaining in that office until July, 1908. In the spring election of that year he was chosen county clerk of Gilliam county. Upon his election to this office

IRA BRAY

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

he resigned his position as assistant postmaster and entered at once upon his duties as county clerk. In 1910 he was reelected to this office, receiving the compliment of being the joint candidate of both parties for the position. He is widely and favorably known throughout the county and is serving the interests of his county in the most satisfactory and efficient manner. He is also a member of the bar, having been admitted on the 10th of November, 1910. He was one of the organizers of the hardware concern known as Horner, Moore & Company, being the senior member of this firm.

On the 18th of November, 1906, Mr. Horner was married to Miss Cressie Hunsaker, a daughter of G. W. Hunsaker, who is a native of Oregon and a prominent ranchman living on the donation claim taken by his father near Turner, Marion county, this state. Mr. Horner's fraternal relations are with the following organizations: Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 95, A. F. & A. M.; Summit Lodge, No. 130, I. O. O. F.; and Endymion Lodge, No. 66, K. P. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, having enlisted in Company I, Second Oregon Volunteer Infantry. His regiment was assigned to the Philippines, where he saw service for a little less than one year. In politics Mr. Horner has always been a stanch republican. He is a man of extensive influence in his county as a result of his long residence and faithful application to personal improvement in various lines of business and study all of which have contributed to his usefulness as a worthy and desirable member of his community.

JOHN PRESTON IRELAND, the owner of two hundred acres of good farming land in Washington county, about two miles south of Banks, has brought one hundred and fifty acres of this tract under a high state of cultivation and is devoting his time and energies to its further improvement. He has always lived west of the Mississippi, his birth having occurred in Muscatine, Iowa, on the 16th of May, 1860. His parents were Robert and Susanna (Benefiel) Ireland, both of whom were natives of Indiana. They were married in Iowa in 1859 but never resided there, for Mr. Ireland had previously come to Oregon and later returned to Iowa for his bride whom, following their marriage, he at once brought to the northwest. He devoted his life to general agricultural pursuits in this state and was the owner of a fine farm at the time of his death, which occurred in 1887. His wife survived him for about nine years passing away in 1906. In their family were three children: John Preston; Annie, who died in 1878, at the age of fifteen years; and Willis, of Hillsboro, Oregon.

John P. Ireland has spent his entire life in Oregon and was reared upon the home farm, early becoming familiar with the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist. He assisted his father in the farm work until twenty-one years of age, when he was married and started in life on his own account, cultivating his father's homestead, of which he has since had charge. At the present time he is the owner of an excellent farm of two hundred acres, of which one hundred and fifty acres have been converted into rich and productive fields that annually return substantial harvests. Splendid improvements have been put upon the place and the farm is pleasantly and conveniently located about two miles from Banks. The buildings are substantial, fences kept in good repair, the machinery is modern and everything about the place indicates the practical and progressive spirit of the owner. In addition to this property Mr. Ireland also has a residence in Forest Grove, which he rents.

On the 19th of October, 1884, occurred the marriage of John P. Ireland and Miss Clarissa Pierce, who was born in Oregon and is a daughter of John F. and Elizabeth (McNamer) Pierce, the former a native of Peoria, Illinois, and the latter of Iowa. They were married, however, in Oregon, and have since resided in Washington county. Five children were born unto them: Mary, the wife of George Vollum, of Portland; Charles, also living in Portland; Mrs. Ireland; Alice, the wife of Albert Thomas, of Portland; and Elsie, who is likewise living in the Rose City. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Ireland has been blessed with five children. Robert Franklin passed away in infancy. Lester C., who was born in 1886, pursued a business college course and also took a special course of study at Forest Grove. He married Miss Bessie Harrington, who was born in the east and had recently come to Oregon with her parents. Beulah B., born May 5, 1889, and now at home with her parents, is a graduate of the Forest Grove Academy and also spent one year as a student in the Pacific University of Forest Grove. Arthur, born April 3, 1893, is now attending high school at Forest Grove. John, born August 4, 1894, is likewise a high school student. Mr. and Mrs. Ireland have given their children excellent educational advantages, thus qualifying them for life's responsible duties. The family are members of the Congregational church and Mr. Ireland belongs also to the Maccabees tent at Greenville, Oregon, and to Gale's Grange at Forest Grove. His political views accord with the principles of the republican party, and while not an office seeker he is in all matters of citizenship public spirited and patriotic.

EDMUND DOERING, who is a prominent agriculturist of Riverside, near Pendleton, was born near Crown Point, Indiana, on the 11th of January, 1849, a son of Henry and Mary Ann (Higenell) Doering. The parents were natives of Pennsylvania where they were married, and all their children with the exception of Edmund, were born in that state. After residing in Indiana for a short time they came to the Willamette valley but returned to Indiana two years later. The mother's death occurred in Iowa and the father died in Pennsylvania. Of the six children born to their union Edmund is the youngest.

Edmund Doering resided with his parents until the fall of 1870. In his boyhood and youth he acquired such education as the common schools afforded and also had some experience in the working world. Upon leaving home he came to Oregon where he engaged in agricultural pursuits for fifteen years. In 1885 he removed to the Palouse country and resided in Whitman county for ten years, but in November, 1895, went to California. He was a resident of that state for six years before coming to Pendleton eleven years ago. Since his arrival here he has been engaged in agricultural pursuits. A short time ago he disposed of his ranch and secured his present home which comprises ten acres on Riverside drive near Pendleton. The greater part of his active career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, and his success in this line has been due to his careful and scientific management and his constant study of the soil, thus enabling him to make the best use of his land thereby receiving greatest possible yield per acre.

On the 7th of December, 1872, Mr. Doering was married to Miss Clarinda Julia Baughman, whose birth occurred in Oregon, on the 5th of January, 1853. She is a daughter of Samuel and Betsy (McCall) Baughman. The father was a native of Illinois and the mother of Tennessee. They crossed the plains with the great throngs which came to Oregon in 1852, and located upon Pleasant Hill, where their deaths occurred. To their union eight children were born. Mr. and Mrs. Doering have become the parents of three children: J. C., who is a resident of this county and is married and has six children; Grace L. who is the widow of James S. Kelley and the mother of one daughter, Marjory; and Maude M., who is the wife of G. M. Lewis of Adams, and the mother of three children, Dorothy, Blanche and Charles.

To such a man as Edmund Doering Oregon owes its development. Their untiring labors have turned its arid soil into highly productive and profitable tracts of land and given such impetus to its natural resources as to make it one of the most desirable locations for that portion of the population of the east which is steadily moving westward. Its advance to agricultural lines has been made on a well outlined and scientific basis, and the cooperation of its agriculturists in these plans has brought it to the highly desirable position which it today enjoys. Because of their diligence and their industry the men who have brought this about have won the respect and regard of all.

EDWARD GETTY EMMETT, a resident of Woodburn, who conducts one of the best known hardware and farm implement stores in Marion county, was born on the 24th of January, 1872, in Salem, this county, his parents being James H. and Alice (Harrett) Emmett. The father was a son of Daniel and Elizabeth Emmett, the former of whom was born in Tennessee in 1819 and lived there until he removed to Missouri in 1841. After remaining there for three years he started for Oregon. He was a slave owner and in Tennessee had been engaged in farming. Upon his arrival in Missouri he continued farming but, realizing that the west was offering great opportunities, he joined a large train, which included the Irvins of Corvallis, and made the trip across the plains, leaving Missouri in the spring and arriving in Oregon in the autumn of the same year. In 1848 he settled in Fox Valley, taking up a donation land claim of six hundred and forty acres. After cultivating this for a few years he disposed of it and purchased six hundred and forty acres in Polk county, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1881. This property is still in possession of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Emmett were the parents of seven children: Aaron, John and James H., all deceased; Daniel E., who is residing in Polk county; Louis, of Roseburg, Oregon; Mary, the widow of E. F. Hosford, of Portland; and Elizabeth, deceased. The maternal grandfather was born in Ohio and Mrs. Harrett was a native of Indiana. They made the trip across the plains with Joseph Meek and were among those of the party who were lost on the famous Meek cut-off. They came near starving before they finally found the river. Securing a boat, they floated down the river and obtained teams later. At The Dalles they made a portage and continued the trip to Vancouver. Almost immediately they went to Oregon City, where they remained during the winter, the following spring settling in Mission Bottom. Mr. Harrett was the first synodical missionary in Oregon. At that time all of the missionaries arriving in a certain territory worked together until a church was established. The family settled on a donation land claim in Polk county, which is still in possession of the descendants. A part of the city of West Salem was subsequently built on this property. Mr. Harrett's death occurred in 1890. To Mr. and Mrs. Harrett four children were born: John, of Salem; Byron, of Polk county, who is residing on the homestead; Alice, the mother of our subject; and Elmer, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. James Emmett were married in 1870 in Polk county and to them four children have been born: Edward Getty, who is the subject of this sketch; Arthur, of Salem; Bertha, who is married to J. G. Garrow, assistant city engineer of Portland; and Jessie, of Portland, the widow of G. E. Glover.

Edward G. Emmett started in for himself at the age of nineteen years, when he entered the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis. Upon the completion of his course there in 1894 he accepted a position in the mechanical department of his alma mater and remained there as assistant mechanical engineer for four years. Subsequently he went to Berkeley, California, and for two years attended the University of California. During this time he became most proficient as a mechanical engineer and after leaving the university accepted employment in the drafting departments of several railroads. These positions took him eastward and at one time he was employed by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and the Pere Marquette railroads, but subsequently he returned to Oregon, where he opened a pump, windmill and plumbing business in Salem. He successfully conducted this for some time but in 1907 removed to Woodburn and engaged in the implement business, the firm name being Emmett & Cornell. This is the largest store of its kind in Oregon outside of Salem and Portland and enjoys not only the patronage of Woodburn but also the surrounding country, covering a radius of twelve to fifteen miles. The rapid development of the agricultural resources of this section during the last few years has brought about a demand for a business enterprise of this sort and the practical manner in which Mr. Emmett has conducted his store commends itself to the judgment of all and has secured to the company a patronage which makes the volume of trade transacted over its counters of great importance and magnitude.

On the 12th of March, 1903, Mr. Emmett was married to Miss Florence Cornell, a daughter of H. A. and Lillian (Stanley) Cornell. Her birth occurred on the 21st of April, 1873, and she was the second of four children: the others being Stanley, of Corvallis; Fred, who is residing in Woodburn and is interested with Mr. Emmett in business; and Lillian, who is residing in Woodburn, where she is in the employ of the Bank of Woodburn as bookkeeper.

In politics Mr. Emmett gives his allegiance to the republican party but has never sought office as a reward for party fealty. At one time he was chief of the fire department at Woodburn. He holds membership in the Masonic order and in the Presbyterian church. The prosperity of the company in which he is interested is due in a large measure to Mr. Emmett's management. He is social and public-spirited and gives his cooperation to every movement which tends to promote the moral, intellectual and material welfare of the community.

CHRISTIAN WILDFANG LASSEN, D. V. M., who is well known as a veterinary surgeon, was born in Highland Park, Illinois, on the 21st of November, 1883, his parents being H. P. C. and Anna (Wildfang) Lassen. The father was a native of Denmark and the mother's birth occurred in Iowa. Their marriage occurred in Milwaukee but almost immediately afterward they settled in Highland Park, Illinois, and later in Winnetka, that state, where they resided for many years. Mr. Lassen was a bookkeeper throughout his active career. To their union four sons and one daughter were born, Dr. C. W. Lassen being the eldest. One boy, Axel, has passed away and the others are Valdemar, Knud, and Helene, a nurse residing in Glengary, Idaho.

Dr. C. W. Lassen resided at home until after he had received his grammar-school education. Subsequently he entered school at Madison, Wisconsin, where he took a short course in agriculture. Later he matriculated in the McKillip Veterinary College of Chicago, from which institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1906. Almost immediately after completing his course he began practicing at Lake Forest, Illinois, and in May, 1910, located at Pendleton. He now enjoys a large practice and has a well established name as a successful veterinarian. He has received an appointment of jack and stallion inspector for Oregon.

On June 21, 1910, Dr. Lassen was married to Miss Margaret M. Voorhees, whose birth occurred in Michigan, and who is a daughter of Jackson Voorhees. To their union one child, Christian Earl, has been born. In politics Dr. Lassen is affiliated with the republican party and is one of the active and enthusiastic advocates of the measures adopted by the progressive wing of that party. He holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal church and fraternally he is a member of the Masons, the Royal Arcanum and the Odd Fellows. During his short residence in Pendleton he has become very popular, being recognized as a man of pleasant disposition and courteous manner, his personality being such as to win him friends in any walk of life.

WALTER E. HANNAN, a contractor in railroad grading who also has agricultural interests in northern Oregon, is one of the native sons of this state, born on the 26th of April, 1880. He is the eldest of the seven children of Henry and Ella (Dunbar) Hannan, who were married in Oregon. The father, however, was born in Missouri but much of his life was passed in this state, where his death occurred in 1910. His widow still survives him and makes her home in Buxton. The six children of the family beside our subject are: Edgar, who is married and lives in Buxton; Herbert, who died at the age of six years; Ralph, Elizabeth, Mattie and Amie, all at home.

The boyhood days of Walter E. Hannan were spent in a manner similar to most healthy lads, his time being divided between the work of the schoolroom, the pleasures of the playground and such tasks as his parents assigned him. When twenty-three years of age he started out in the business world alone and sought employment in various ways, remaining in the service of others until 1905, when the capital he had saved from his earnings enabled him to purchase property and he became the owner of a ranch of one hundred and seventy-nine acres in Washington county, adjoining the town site of Buxton. This he continued to cultivate until 1909, carrying on general agricultural pursuits, but during the past two years or more he has given his attention to railroad grading, which work he does under contract. This business makes full demand upon his time and energies and is bringing to him a good financial return. He owns a fine home in Buxton and also one hundred and twenty acres of timber land in Washington county, together with some land in Buxton. All of this indicates the diligence with which he has performed his duties and made good use of his opportunities, and now he is numbered among the substantial citizens of Buxton whose prosperity is increasing as the years go by.

In 1905 occurred the marriage of Mr. Hannan and Miss May Scofield, a native of Texas, who when two years of age was brought to Washington county, Oregon, by her parents, who are still living here. They had a family of eight children: Clara, who died at the age of three years; Almira, who is married and resides in Texas; Cash, residing in Washington county; Cora, who is married and lives in the same county; Fred, a resident of Yamhill county; Walter, of Washington county; Mrs. Hannan; and Edward, who is still with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. Hannan have an interesting family of four children; Alva E., born July 23, 1906; Alta A., September 9, 1907; Orville H., August 21, 1909; and Eva M., January 26, 1911. Mr. Hannan belongs to the Maccabees, holding membership in the lodge at Buxton. He is a man of liberal views, looking at life from no narrow nor contracted standpoint, and at the same time he realizes that upon individual effort and character depends advancement and success. He has not only won for himself a creditable position in industrial circles but also in the regard to those with whom he is brought in contact.

LUKE D. McKERN. Probably no man is better acquainted with the details of breeding, handling and raising stock than L. D. McKern, one of the most prominent and successful ranchers in Grant county. He has spent practically all his life in the west and has the expert knowledge of his business which can only come through long and personal experience. He was born twelve miles south of Portland, Oregon, October 9, 1860. His parents, Isaac and Mary (Barton) McKern, the former a native of Indiana, and the latter of Iowa, were married in the latter state, and in 1852 started westward across the plains with ox teams. L. D. McKern's parents died when he was still a child and left him, with his seven brothers and sisters, in charge of an uncle, Luke McKern, who had lost his wife some time before and readily took charge of the rearing and educating of his nieces and nephews in conjunction with the up-bringing of his own six children.

L. D. McKern was educated in the public schools of his native section and spent his early life in the western part of Oregon. At the age of nineteen he removed to the eastern part of the state and engaged in the handling of stock to which he had been accustomed practically all his life. He worked in the eastern part of the state in the employ of others until 1883. He was constantly adding to his knowledge of ranching and stock-raising and soon became an expert workman in these two lines. In 1883 he came to Grant county where he was active along similar lines until 1890. In that year he purchased his present ranch and started in the stock-raising business for himself. His land when he first acquired it was undeveloped. Mr. McKern has made all the improvements upon his holdings and has carried on an extremely successful business in general ranching and stock-raising since that time. He is now in active operation of over five hundred acres on the home ranch and has one hundred acres under irrigation. He raises large quantities of alfalfa and other feed and makes a specialty of this branch of his activities. At one time Mr. McKern sold off his stock but is at the present time getting back into the business and is one of the enterprising and representative men of Grant county. During one period he ran several thousand sheep but has now entirely abandoned his connection with sheep-raising. He has a thorough sense of agricultural economics and never allows a foot of land to be unproductive. He applies to his farming modern and scientific methods and has never spared any expense in making his ranch a thoroughly equipped and efficient property. He has a fine orchard and his fruit harvests are growing more abundant every year. He lives in a beautiful and ideally located home a half mile from Mount Vernon and his residence, set in the midst of many large shade trees, is one of the pleasant sights in Grant county.

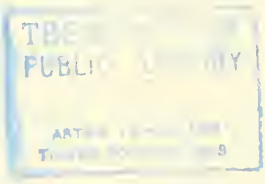
In September, 1888, Mr. McKern was united in marriage to Miss Leora E. Stone, the daughter of W. W. and Eva (Allen) Stone of Grant county, Oregon. Mr. Stone crossed the plains with ox teams in 1853 and in the early days of his western career ran a pack train to the mines of Canyon City. He finally located in the John Day valley, where he was extensively engaged in stock-raising until his death. Mr. and Mrs. McKern are the parents of six children: Gertrude, now Mrs. W. E. Damon; Harry L., Mabel, and Myrtle, all of whom are living at home; and Veda and Verda, twins.

Politically Mr. McKern gives his allegiance to the Socialist party and although intelligently interested in the affairs of his community has never sought public office for himself. He has served for some time with great ability and efficiency as a member of the school board of Grant county and has been actively interested in the educational development of that region for some time. He is one of the prominent and successful stockholders of his district and brings to his activities expert and scientific knowledge. Grant county is a fertile and productive region with wealth and prosperity hidden in its acres. No man has done more toward its development and improvement than has L. D. McKern and his success is the just reward of his intelligent labor.

CHARLES C. ECKHOFF, who was one of the active and enterprising men of North Bend, at one time was the owner of eight hundred acres of valuable timber land and for many years before his death was successfully engaged in the lumber business. He was born in Germany, July 21, 1832, and was a son of Jordan and Margaret Eckhoff, both of whom were natives of Germany and died in that country. They were the parents of seven children, all of whom are deceased.

Charles C. Eckhoff was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the schools of Germany. In 1858 he emigrated to America and settled on Coos bay, where he was employed at various kinds of work for a number of years. He later engaged in the rafting business for the sawmills at Coos bay. He purchased eight hundred acres of land which was heavily covered with merchantable timber and for a number of years he was engaged in cutting the timber on that land and delivering it to the mills at Coos bay. Some time before his death he disposed of all of that property except one hundred and sixty acres which became a part of his estate at his death. At one time he owned all the land on which the city of North Bend is now built. He was also the owner of residence and business property at North Bend and owned property at Bandon, Oregon, all of which since his death has become the property of his widow.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES C. ECKHOFF



PUBLIC

Mr. Eckhoff was united in marriage August 11, 1864, to Miss Charlotte Rhoda, a native of Baltimore, Maryland, her birth having occurred March 8 1842. She is a daughter of John A. and Mary (Rhoda) Rhoda, both of whom were natives of Germany in which country they celebrated their wedding. Shortly after their marriage they emigrated to America and settled in Baltimore, Maryland, where the mother died, and the daughter received her early education in the public schools. The father removed to Oregon in 1858, settling in Coos county, and was there engaged in farming until his death. Mr. and Mrs. Rhoda were the parents of seven children, two of whom are yet living: Charlotte, the widow of the subject of this review; and George, a resident of Marshfield, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Eckhoff thirteen children were born as follows: Mrs. Maggie Messearle and Mrs. Lottie Baker, both of whom are residents of Coos county, Oregon; Mrs. Emma Rooke and Mrs. Fredia Bentley, both of North Bend, this state; Lillie, who resides at home; John H., a resident of Bangor, Oregon; Charles F. of North Bend; Mrs. Ida Nagle, who resides in Astoria, Oregon; Mrs. Marietta Painter and Mrs. Carrie Forrest, both residents of Coos County; Mrs. Annie Cronkhite, who maintains her home in North Bend; Isabelle, deceased; and Mrs. Elsie Forrest also a resident of North Bend, Oregon.

Mr. Eckhoff belonged to the Republican party and at one time was mayor of North Bend. He was a member of the Lutheran church and his wife and children are Catholic. Charles C. Eckhoff was one of the honored pioneers of Coos county and during his active business career he was highly esteemed for his enterprising and industrious life. He was a man whose strict integrity in business affairs placed him among the trustworthy and valued citizens of Coos county.

ISAAC ABRAHAM FULLBRIGHT. Varied and interesting are the experiences which have fallen to the lot of Isaac A. Fullbright, long connected with mining in the northwest. At times he has followed what has proven to be an inducive promise; again he has obtained the substantial rewards of earnest labor. On the whole however, he has enjoyed a fair measure of success and is now the owner of good mining and farming property in the vicinity of Durkee. He was born September 9, 1856, in Knox county, Ohio, a son of Henry Lewis and Mary Louisa (Bierwait) Fullbright, who were natives of Hamburg, Germany, and were married in that country. They became parents of fourteen children beside our subject. Charles, the eldest, died when the family were crossing the Atlantic in 1834, being then a year and a half old, and was buried at sea. After landing on American shores Henry L. Fullbright made his way to Knox county, Ohio, settling near Danville where he purchased land with money saved in Germany. He was not familiar with the country or people however, and found that some unscrupulous person had defrauded him in this land deal. While living on that farm two children were born and died in infancy, their graves being made upon the farm. Later the father purchased other property and upon that place two children were born, died and were buried. William Fullbright, the next of the family, was born in Knox county, Ohio, became a mining man and died October 23, 1901. Eliza became the wife of George Hellilfinger, a farmer of Coshocton county Ohio. John, born in Knox county, enlisted from Ohio in the Union army and now lives in Medford, Nebraska. Lewis, born in Knox county, went to Mexico to look after his brothers' interests, and when on his way back to Oregon to join I. A. Fullbright, he was found dead in his bed at Leadville, Colorado, November 19, 1904. It is believed he met with foul play for his watch and chain, his money and his pension papers were missing. George and Rebecca Fullbright were twins. The former married Caroline Hellilfinger who died leaving a son and two daughters. George afterward married again and there was one son by that union. He now lives at Severance, Kansas. Rebecca, now Mrs. Reeder, has been married three times, and with Mr. Reeder, a Civil war veteran, now lives in St. Edwards, Nebraska. Samuel, who lived on a fruit farm about eight miles above Durkee, died May 16, 1904. He was a member of the Ancient Order of the United Workmen of Baker City, and was a man of good standing in his community, having not a single enemy in the world. Lorinda, now Mrs. Garrisson, has been married twice and lives upon a farm near Lincoln, Nebraska. Margaret became the wife of Henry Maston and they removed from Ohio to Indiana where her death occurred. Isaac A. Fullbright was the youngest of the family and was born at the identical moment at which his father died. His mother passed away in November, 1876, and was laid to rest in the family burying ground at Danville, Ohio.

Isaac A. Fullbright pursued his education in the public schools of his native state and in the spring of 1877, following the mother's death, he and his brothers, Lewis and Samuel, went west to the Colorado mines with their brother William who had returned to Ohio for a visit for the first time in nineteen years, having in the interim resided in Kansas and Missouri as well as Colorado. He had married, and during the Civil war period he and his wife were surrounded by Jay Hawkers or Guerillas but his wife stood with a revolver in her hand and prevented the approach of the desperadoes who would have killed her husband had they captured him. At the time of going west Isaac A. Fullbright was about twenty years of age. He worked in a minor capacity at a hotel at Snowy Range in Rosita Gap, Colorado, and gave such satisfaction to the landlady that she offered to raise his wages ten dollars a month to induce him to stay! About that time however, E. C. Basic discovered what became known as the Basic mine, a very rich property, and Mr. Fullbright and his three brothers began a search for the extension of this mine. They did not meet with the success hoped for and the brothers then went to Mount Blanco to prospect, leaving I. A. Fullbright at the Basic mine. While there a man by the name of Edward Eckleson came to his camp asking to stay there a while and prospect. Without Mr. Fullbright's knowledge Edward Eckleson obtained some of the Basic ore and left it at McBrown's assay office in Rosita as ore coming from the Fullbright prospect hole with instructions that if he did not call for the returns by 6 P. M. to give the same to Dr. Sperry, one of the most prominent physicians of the town. The returns were given to Dr. Sperry who, finding them very rich, walked over the mountains to the Fullbright cabin where he arrived about half past nine at night. The occupants of the cabin were in bed, but in response to a query from Mr. Eckleson Dr. Sperry announced his presence. He immediately called for coffee and after drinking two or three cups told of the result of the assay, showing there were thirty-three and six tenths ounces of gold and three hundred, ten and one half ounces of silver to the ton. Mr. Fullbright, believing the ore to have come from his claim at once began calculating how wealthy he would be and what he would do with the money, but as it has happened to many another, all this was but "a miner's dream." His brothers soon returned from Mount Blanco, and after a short time all started for Mexico, accompanied by Captain Sherser and Captain Hoxey. At length they reached their destination and all became ill there with smallpox but all recovered. The brothers prospected for about seven months and then returned to the Raccoon mountains in Colorado. Subsequently they went to the Boggs ranch in New Mexico later known as Willow Springs, and still later as Raton. They erected for business purposes and also as a place of residence the third house in that town which now has a population of more than seven thousand.

In the summer of 1878 Samuel and Lewis Fullbright went to Leadville, Colorado, where, in the fall of 1879, they were joined by Isaac A. Fullbright, and all engaged in mining. They had a standing offer of thirty thousand dollars for their claim from the fall of 1879 until the spring of 1880 when the first miners' strike occurred—entirely uncalled for. The result was that the claim could not be sold and after spending several hundred dollars on their property the Fullbright brothers, in the winter of 1881, took a contract for furnishing ties and worked in that way until the following spring. One brother then remained at Leadville while the other brother, together with I. A. Fullbright, proceeded into the Ten Mile and Blue river country. The last named continued in the tie business but aided in furnishing funds to a man to go into the Montezuma country, losing all he put in that venture. Later he and his brother concentrated their attention upon making ties and went to Tennessee Pass. In the spring of 1882 Samuel Fullbright removed westward to Oregon and for a year or more prospected with a Mr. McMahon in the Burnt river country, during which time he selected and located a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres on Burnt river about eight miles from Durkee. This he improved, setting out a thousand or more fruit trees of nine or ten varieties. It was after the death of his brother that I. A. Fullbright purchased the interest of the other heirs in the place which he now owns and which is today valued at eight to ten thousand dollars. It is a ranch on which the fruit crop practically never fails.

I. A. Fullbright remained in the vicinity of Tennessee Pass until 1889 when he went to Aspen, Colorado, where he followed mining and prospecting until 1895. He and his partners had a property on which they gave a lease and bond for fifteen thousand dollars. The parties found twenty-three ounces of silver ore to the ton and did about fourteen hundred feet of tunneling and drifting, but when silver was demonetized in 1893 they threw up their bonds. About that time Senator B. Clark Wheeler employed Mr. Fullbright as superintendent to take charge of a timber crew at a salary of five dollars per day and board, and he acted in that capacity for two years. He then went to Summit county, Colorado, where he again started in the timber business, John W. Gates making him superintendent on the Mountain Pride mine to look after the timber crew. Mr. Fullbright acted in that capacity for nine months. He grub-staked two men and they found a prospect for which the three were offered twenty thousand dollars but one of the number insisted upon having sixty-five thousand dollars and as a result of not selling for the original sum offered Mr. Fullbright was forced to lose all the money he had put in. He next returned to Aspen where he followed contracting, mining and timbering until he received a letter telling him of the death of his brother Samuel. He then returned to Oregon to look after matters here but when ten weeks had passed again returned to Aspen, spending three months or more in that place, in Leadville and in Danville. He then came to Oregon where he has since made his home, and his time and energies are now devoted to farming and mining interests. He has a tunnel of one hundred and seventy five feet in the mountain, with prospect of striking a rich vein of ore.

On the 11th of November, 1910, Mr. Fullbright left Durkee to pay a visit to his brothers and sisters whom he had not seen for about thirty-four years. On the trip he traveled through twelve different states, covering over thirteen thousand miles. All the experiences of life in a mining camp are familiar to him. He has intimate knowledge of all that it means to search for precious metal, to find that a hope is banished or that a dream has been realized for both failure and success have fallen to his lot. On the whole however, he has won a substantial measure of prosperity and he is today well known as one of the typical mining men of the northwest.

AL MISHLER, who is residing in Woodburn, is the energetic and successful manager of the People's Store Company in Woodburn, and was born on the 23d of August, 1880, in LaGrange county, Indiana, his parents being James J. and Lidia (Yoder) Mishler, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. The father is still residing in the old home in LaGrange county, but the mother passed away in 1896. Their marriage occurred in 1878 in the Hoosier state and they were the parents of eight children: Al, the subject of this sketch; Mabel, who died at the age of eleven years; Oliver, who is residing near the home place in Indiana; William J., who is employed by his brother Al at Woodburn, and who was the principal in the high school at Woodburn for one term after he had taught school for several terms; Elizabeth, who is the wife of J. T. Toyer, postmaster of Shipshewana for several years and who is married and has one child, Inez; Amanda and James, Jr., residing at home with their father; and Viola, who is at present living with her uncle, George Mishler.

James J. Mishler was one of nine children: George, Jake, John, Moses, Elizabeth, the widow of M. Miller, Lucy, the wife of Jonathan Plank, and Susan, the wife of Josiah Hushbered, all residing in Elkhart, Indiana; and Sarah of LaGrange county, Indiana. Mrs. Mishler was also one of nine children, the others being: George A., of Portland, Oregon; Jacob, William and Samuel, of LaGrange; Andrew, deceased; Fanny, the wife of J. Miller of Indiana; Elizabeth, the wife of S. H. Hostetter, of Indiana; and Susan, who is married to M. J. Lambright.

After finishing his education in the near by school and assisting his father in the work upon the home place, Al Mishler entered upon his career at the age of eighteen years. For four years he was employed in a general merchandise store at Shipshewana, Indiana, before going to Chicago where he was shipping clerk in a large furniture factory for a short time. After giving up this position he came to Oregon in 1902 and went immediately to Hubbard, where he took up a position in a general merchandise store remaining for three years. Subsequently, after removing to Woodburn, he engaged in the grocery business for himself, but disposed of this to go into the real-estate business in which he remained for three years. During his residence here he had won the confidence and respect of many business men and found himself in a position to organize the People's Store Company, of which he is at present secretary and manager. He has worked up a large patronage, and the store is both commodious and well equipped, keeping abreast with the needs of his patrons. The company was organized on the 15th of June, 1910, and today enjoys the patronage of not only the home town but also a large country trade. Part of the success of the establishment is due to the courtesy of its manager and his ability in pleasing customers. Mr. Mishler also owns about forty acres of land about four miles from town.

On the 17th of May, 1905, in Woodburn, Oregon, Mr. Mishler was married to Miss Inez Wampole, whose birth occurred February 10, 1886, and who is the daughter of Martin and Matilda (Lindsay) Wampole of New York state. Mr. and Mrs. Mishler are the parents of one child, Eldon A., whose birth occurred July 3, 1907.

In politics Mr. Mishler has ever given his support to the republican party, believing its policies most conducive to good government. He takes a citizen's interest in the progress and success of his party, but has never sought office as a reward for his fealty. Because of his great interest in the educational and social welfare of his community he has served for seven years as school clerk, an office which has given him an opportunity to advance many of the ideas and ideals in which he firmly believes. In religious faith the family is Presbyterian, and here again Mr. Mishler shows his altruistic spirit by the great interest he takes in the various departments of the church. Although one of the younger business men he has succeeded far better than many a young man of his age and even many an older merchant, and because of his steady application to duty at hand, a prosperous future may be predicted for him.

LUCIUS A. WRIGHT, well known as a druggist of Union, is a representative of one of the old pioneer families of Oregon, his father being John T. Wright while his grandparents were George and Naomi (Elm) Wright, the former a native of Scarborough, Yorkshire, England, and the latter of Pennsylvania. Extended mention of the family history is made in connection with the sketch of William Thomas Wright on another page of this work. George Wright, the grandfather of our subject came with his family to Oregon in 1852 and John T. Wright spent a portion of his youth in Portland. He came to Union in 1864 and was identified with the business interests of this place as a member of the firm of George Wright & Sons. They conducted mercantile and milling interests, John T. Wright remaining an active factor in the business until 1883, when the firm was dissolved and he became connected with the drug trade of the city. Four years were devoted to that business and in 1887 his store was destroyed by fire. At that time he turned his attention to farming, which he carried on until 1892, when he removed to LaGrande where he was again proprietor of a drug store which he conducted successfully until 1899. In that year he sold out and returned to Union, where he lived retired in the enjoyment of well earned rest to the time of his death in 1905. He married Della Mallory, a native of the state of New York, and they became the parents of four children: Lucius A.; Georgia, now principal of the South Union school of Union, Oregon; Ed, who is serving as county clerk and makes his home at LaGrande; and Claude C., who is engaged in the tile business in Portland.

Lucius A. Wright spent his boyhood days in Union and acquired his elementary education in the public schools. He afterward pursued a business course in LaGrande and there learned the drug business in connection with his father with whom he was associated for a few years. In 1897 he bought out the drug store of R. H. Brown at Union and has since conducted it, having a large and constantly growing patronage. He also owned an interest in the Wright Drug Company of LaGrande but recently disposed of this. His store at Union is well appointed and attractive in its arrangement, while his business methods commend him to the further confidence and support of the public.

Mr. Wright holds membership with the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained high rank, belonging to the Knight Templar commandery and to the Mystic Shrine. He is also connected with the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he is now serving for the second term as mayor of Union, having been first elected in 1910. To the city he has given a practical, businesslike and public-spirited administration, seeking the best interests of the community and exercising his official prerogative in support of many movements for the general good.

MRS. MARTHA MESSINGER is the widow of Simon Messinger and resides upon a good farm property in Josephine county. She is a native of Missouri, her birth having occurred in that state on the 3d of September, 1854. There she remained until she crossed the plains with her parents, David Lindsay and Judith Anne Mullens, who were three months upon the way, making the entire journey with ox teams.

Their daughter Martha spent her girlhood days under the parental roof and was well trained in the duties of the household so that she was thoroughly qualified to take charge of a home of her own at the time of her marriage to Mr. Messinger, which occurred in 1870, when she was but sixteen years of age. Unto this marriage there were born eight children, Clarence, Herman, William, George, Mary, Rose, Dora and Nellie. The family circle was broken by the hand of death in 1902, when the husband and father was called from this life, his remains being interred on Williams creek. He had homesteaded the farm place of one hundred and sixty acres upon which his widow now resides and later he added to that property by additional purchase until he was the owner of three hundred and fifty acres of land at the time of his death. His son George now operates the farm for his mother and devotes the acreage largely to the raising of hay. Mrs. Messinger owns a half interest in the place and is conducting it along the same progressive lines followed by his father. In addition to his farming interests Mr. Messinger owned and operated a sawmill. He was also somewhat prominent in public affairs, served as sheriff of the county for two years and was also county school commissioner for four years, in which connection he proved himself a loyal friend to the cause of education. His was an upright, honorable and well spent life and gained for him the high regard and confidence of all who knew him. Mrs. Messinger is a member of the Methodist church and possesses many attractive qualities and characteristics that have gained for her warm regard. Her home is a hospitable one, always open for the reception of her friends, who are many.

POLK MAYS. One of the most widely known and highly successful ranchmen of the Wallowa valley is Polk Mays, the most extensive cattle raiser in this section of the state. He has played as important a part in the political and public life of the county as in its business affairs and was representative in the state legislature for one term. He is a native of Oregon, his birth having occurred in Benton county on November 22, 1852, and a son of Robert and Lodema (Fowler) Mays. His parents crossed the plains in an emigrant train in 1852, locating in Wasco county, where they passed the remainder of their lives.

The boyhood and youth of Polk Mays were passed in a manner very similar to those of other lads who were reared on a ranch in Oregon during the pioneer days. He attended the common schools of Wasco county in the acquirement of an education until he was seventeen years of age. He then laid aside his text-books and went to Crook county, this state, where he engaged in the cattle business for nineteen years. In 1888, he disposed of his interests there, and came to Wallowa county engaging in the same line of business, in which he has ever since been successfully engaged. During the intervening years he has extended his property holdings until he now owns fourteen hundred acres of land that he uses principally for grazing purposes and is said to be the leading cattle man in this valley. In addition to his valuable ranch and large herds, Mr. Mays is interested in four mining claims in Union county, which he has every reason to feel assured will yield good dividends. He possesses much foresight and sagacity and owing to his enterprising spirit and determination of purpose makes a success of anything he undertakes.

At Kent, Wasco county, this state, on the 1st of November, 1884, Mr. Mays was united in marriage to Miss Mary Kelsay, a daughter of Burton and Euphrasia Kelsay, who were among the early settlers of Oregon. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Mays as follows: Harry and Dallas, who are assisting their father with the operation of the ranch; and Ted, who is still in school.

SIMON MESSINGER

PUBLIC LIBRARY

Formerly Mr. Mays gave his political support unconditionally to the republican party, and was elected on that ticket to the state legislature in 1892, but he now gives his indorsement to such men and measures as he feels are best adapted to meet the exigencies of the situation, although he favors the republican organization. He is as enterprising and progressive in matters of citizenship as in business affairs and never lets an opportunity pass for championing Oregon and the Wallowa valley, toward the development of which he has substantially contributed. He enjoys a wide acquaintance throughout this section of the state and is held in high esteem by all who know him, as he is a man of upright principles and conducts all of his transactions in an open and honorable manner, his integrity being above question.

TREPHON DIERICKX, the owner of a fine farm of one hundred and seventy-two acres, is well known as one of the enterprising agriculturists and representative citizens of Washington county. His birth occurred in Belgium in the year 1868, his parents being Peter and Monica Dierickx, who were likewise natives of that country. The father passed away in Belgium in 1891 but the mother is still living and yet makes her home in her native land. To them were born nine children, eight of whom still survive—four in America and four in Belgium. Those who crossed the Atlantic to the United States are: August, who is a resident of Washington county, Oregon; Trephon, of this review; Agnes, the wife of Charles Losevcet, of Rushville, Nebraska; and another brother making his home at the same place.

Trephon Dierickx obtained his education in the schools of his native country and when a young man of twenty-three years emigrated to the United States, settling at Rushville, Nebraska, where he remained for ten years. Subsequently he spent five years in various parts of the United States in search of a favorable location. His choice finally fell upon Washington county, Oregon, where in 1906 he purchased a farm of one hundred acres, ninety-five acres of which he has brought under a high state of cultivation. By additional purchase he has extended the boundaries of his place until it now embraces one hundred and seventy-two acres. As an agriculturist he has been quite successful and, taking pride in the appearance of his farm, he has added every improvement which might contribute to its neatness and fertility. He has also made such study of the soil as to enable him to so adapt his crops as to reap the maximum yield per acre.

In politics Mr. Dierickx is a democrat, believing firmly in the principles of that party. He has held the position of road supervisor for six years and has proven a most faithful and capable public official. In religious faith he is a Catholic. Coming to the new world in early manhood, he has utilized his opportunities to the best of his ability and has gained a place among the prosperous and esteemed citizens of his community.

LEWIS C. ROTHROCK, who since 1899 has resided in Pendleton, was for many years a well known stockman of Umatilla county. He was born in Sangamon county, Illinois, five miles north of Springfield, on June 1, 1850, his parents being A. B. and Elizabeth (Whitlock) Rothrock, both of whom were natives of North Carolina and were married in that state. They removed to Illinois about 1844 and the mother died there when the subject of this sketch was only two years of age. In 1857 the father removed to Putnam county, Missouri, and in the spring of 1864 went to Iowa, and in 1865 crossed the plains with mule teams to Oregon, locating in Marion county on the French prairie. In 1868 he came to Umatilla county where he died in Weston in 1890, at the age of seventy years. He became a very noted and successful stockman of this county. In his family were three children: Jesse, who was killed on the railroad in 1899; Mrs. Sarah E., who is the widow of J. W. Thornbury, residing in Marion county; and Lewis C. After the mother's death the father was married again. To his second union were born six children, two of whom are living, John and Adam, both of this county.

Lewis C. Rothrock remained under the parental roof until 1868, when he went to Montana and engaged in packing from Montana to Walla Walla and in 1869 he teamed from Umatilla to Boise. In 1870 he settled on Wild Horse creek where he took up a preemption claim of one hundred and sixty acres and he now owns one thousand acres in one body of highly improved land in the same locality. This ranch is one of the finest tracts of land in Umatilla county. It is located ten miles east of Pendleton, adjoining the Umatilla Indian reservation. It raises from fifty to sixty bushels of wheat to the acre and from eighty to one hundred bushels of barley. Mr. Rothrock resided on this homestead until 1899 when he came to Pendleton where he has since made his home. Two of his sons are now operating the home ranch which is principally devoted to the raising of wheat. The first few years of his residence on this claim Mr. Rothrock engaged in stock raising but in 1887 he began general farming. He built in 1906 a home which is located at 1115 East Court street this city.

In 1879 Mr. Rothrock was united in marriage with Miss Ruth Masterson who was a native of Illinois. She died in Wild Horse Creek this county, December 31, 1879, at the age of twenty-eight years; leaving five children: Andrew of Pendleton; Samuel, who helps to operate his father's ranch; Sarah who is the wife of Arthur Gibson of Pendleton; Lucinda, who is Mrs. Peter Rambo of Boise, Idaho; and Franklin, who died at the age of twelve years. In December, 1881, Mr. Rothrock was again married, his second union being with Miss Ida Bolin, who was born at Silverton, Marion county, on February 11, 1864, a daughter of Daniel and Lucinda (Moses) Bolin, the father a native of Kentucky and the mother of Indiana. They crossed the plains from Missouri in 1852 and settled near Silverton, where the father took up a donation land claim. In 1873 they came to this county, where they both passed away. Of his second marriage two children were born to Mr. Rothrock: Harley Coleman, who helps to operate his father's ranch; and Maude, who is the wife of William Rush, of Pendleton.

Coming to Oregon at an early date, Mr. Rothrock has passed through all the hardships of pioneer life here. During the trouble with the Indians in 1878, he and his father and Mr. William Parker were the only white people who remained on White Horse creek, all the others having left the country, or having taken part in the fight. Mr. Rothrock his father and Mr. Parker made a fort of their house and prepared to fight the Indians, should they make an attack on them. Having resided in this county now almost forty-four years Mr. Rothrock is well acquainted with its early development and has ever been a cooperative factor in the general advancement. He has an extensive circle of friends throughout the country and has ever been held in the highest regard by all who know him. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

ADELBERT OSBORN, who owns a farm of forty acres in Josephine county, not far from Murphy, has passed the seventy-fifth milestone on life's journey, yet is still personally supervising his agricultural interests. He was born in New York, May 5, 1837, and is a son of Isaac and Nancy (Wilson) Osborn, in whose family there were two children. The father was a native of New Jersey and the mother of New York and it was in the Empire state that Adelbert Osborn was reared to the age of fourteen years, when he began driving a team with a grading gang. He was employed in that way until the outbreak of the Civil war when his patriotic spirit was aroused by the attempt of the south to overthrow the Union and he enlisted for service as a member of Company E, of the Twenty-Sixth Illinois Infantry, under General Polk. His command was attached to the Fifteenth Army Corps and he participated in a number of important engagements during the three years which he spent at the front in defense of the stars and stripes. He was finally mustered out at Atlanta, Georgia, and upon his return to the north accepted a position as foreman and later as engineer on the Michigan Central Railroad between Detroit and Chicago. Eight years passed in that way and for several years he was also employed on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. He afterward worked at similar employment in California and then made his way to Texas where he engaged in herding cattle for a number of years. In 1879 he came to Oregon and for a year made his home in Portland, during which time he was working on the line of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company. Once more, however, he turned his attention to stock-raising interests, purchasing a large number of cattle which he took to Montana and there sold. He afterward reentered railroad service in connection with the Northern Pacific but finally returned to Oregon and is now making his home in Josephine county. Here he purchased and has improved forty acres. This constitutes one of the good farms in the vicinity of Murphy and the care and labor bestowed upon the place are bringing to him a substantial financial return.

In 1887 Mr. Osborn was united in marriage to Miss Hays, a native of Oregon and unto them were born four children: Wheeler R., Winifred H., Dan M. and Josephine.

Mr. Osborn's study of the political questions and issues of the day and of the situation which affects the general interests of society has led him to give his support to the socialist party. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, loyal to the teachings of the lodge and willing at all times to aid his brethren of the order. His business life in connection with railroad construction and grading has taken him into various sections of the country so that he knows the east, the west, the north and the south. He is much pleased with the attractive climate of Oregon and the opportunities, and natural advantages of the state, and has made permanent location here, deciding to spend his remaining days in this district. Whatever success he has enjoyed is due to his own labor and perseverance and he has many substantial qualities which have gained for him the warm regard and kindly consideration of those who know him.

EDWARD EVERETT LUCE. In these days of corruption in high places it is pleasant to record the public service of Edward Everett Luce, now mayor of the city of John Day, Grant county Oregon. His record up to the present time has been unmarred by any suspicion of evil and his energies and activities have always been directed to the service of the people without regard to personal ends. Aside from his political activities Mr. Luce is also prominent in commercial and agricultural circles of the county and in these directions is distinguished by the same honorable and upright qualities which mark his public life. He was born in Siskiyou county, California, November 22, 1860, and is a son of William and Maria D. (Fisher) Luce. His father was born in Kentucky, February 29, 1828, and his mother's birth occurred in Ohio on the 8th of February, 1836. William Luce joined the California gold seekers in 1849, making the journey by water around the horn. He returned by way of the Isthmus of Panama to Ohio and in 1853 he started on his wedding tour across the plains and mountains with ox teams. Mr. Luce and his wife located in Eugene, Oregon, where they remained but a short time. He removed his family, consisting of his wife and one child, to California, where he was active in various capacities until 1861. In the winter of that year they returned to Oregon and eventually located in Grant county. The trip from California to Oregon was made overland with wagons. In conjunction with his brother David Luce, and James Cozort, William Luce loaded a pack train with a large and varied line of goods and with sixty-two mules brought it to Canyon City. His original intention had been to locate on the Salmon river but when they reached The Dalles a rumor reached them of the failure of that camp and of labor disturbances in the mines of Canyon City. They immediately determined to abandon their intention and employed the messenger who had brought the news from Canyon City to act as their pilot on the return journey. In the spring of 1862 the three partners established the first general store in Canyon City. Their operations were carried on under a large tent and the store remained in this condition for some months. Eventually they erected a wooden building and engaged in the general merchandise business until the spring of 1864, when they sold their interests to Captain Ferrin. William Luce then took up a preemption claim and engaged in farming and in the stock business, running sometimes as high as three hundred and fifty head of cattle at one time. For fourteen years he supplied Fort Harney with vegetables under contract. He was among the earliest of the pioneer settlers of Grant county and his wife was prominently identified with the development of the section. When he brought his wife and family from The Dalles in 1863 there was no wagon road in the section and in order to make the journey as comfortable as possible Mr. Luce packed one hundred pounds of flour on each side of a mule and placed across its back a large dry-goods box, in which he put his four children. From this primitive state of development William Luce saw the state of Oregon developed into a cultivated and civilized country. He was always active in its affairs and eager to promote its welfare. He was a man who could never turn a deaf ear to those in need and his hand was always outstretched to help a fellow traveler on life's journey. He was a liberal, broad-minded and thoroughly generous man and his abounding and open handed charity prevented his amassing the large fortune which his opportunities warranted. He was never an office seeker but served with much ability as county commissioner. He died upon his holdings in Grant county. He and his wife were the parents of seven children: Isabel, born March 6, 1854; Charles F., born January 25, 1856; Henry C., whose birth occurred September 24, 1857; Marion, who was born April 17, 1859; Edward E., the subject of this review, who was born November 22, 1860; Carrie, born October 20, 1862; and Alma, whose birth occurred August 2, 1864.

Edward E. Luce spent his early boyhood days in Grant county and was educated in the public schools of John Day. He later spent some time pursuing his studies in Canyon City. When he laid aside his books he entered immediately into the stock business. After his father's death he remained upon the homestead for about five years and has since been extensively engaged in the freighting business in this section of the country. He is one of the most prominent men in Grant county at the present time. He is actively interested in various movements and his influence is always given to good and worthy causes, having for their object the welfare of John Day and of Grant county. He owns four acres of town property on which is located his pleasant, comfortable and hospitable home. He has two acres set out in apple and cherry trees and other varieties of fruit, which yield abundantly each year. He makes a specialty of his vegetable and truck garden and has been extremely successful along this line. Most of his personal attention is given to his freighting business, as its rapid growth and extension requires constant and energetic management.

Besides his activities in these various lines Mr. Luce has had a distinguished career as a politician. He has served as a member of the city council of John Day, has done efficient work as marshal of this city and has made a record for ability and honesty during his term as deputy sheriff. In 1911 he was elected mayor of the city of John Day by a large majority and served for one term with conspicuous success. In 1912 he was reelected. He brings to his public life an intelligent grasp of current questions, of broad-minded tolerance and an incorruptible moral character. He regards his office merely as an opportunity to carry out the wishes of his constituents and has never used it to further his personal ambition.

November 18, 1886, Mr. Luce was united in marriage in Grant county, Oregon, to Miss Julia J. Officer, of Clackamas county, this state, a daughter of Robert Officer, a native of Missouri. Mrs. Luce's grandfather was James Officer who left his native state of Tennessee for Oregon in 1845 and was among the early pioneer settlers of that state. The journey was made with ox teams across a wild and uncultivated country. The Indians, however, were peaceable in that year and made no disturbance. James Officer spent his first winter on the Columbia river twelve miles above Vancouver. He later located in Clackamas county, twelve miles from Oregon City, where he continued to reside until his death. In 1881 his son Robert Officer, came to Grant county where he is now living engaged in the stock business, at the age of seventy-five years. Mr. Luce is one of the representative men of the state of Oregon. In his business life he is honorable and fair minded with a shrewd discrimination and a broad knowledge of men. In his political career he is a true public servant and regards personal honesty in office as no more than his duty to the commonwealth.

WILLIS I. COTTEL, M. D., has been a resident of Oregon for a quarter of a century and has not only done important work along professional lines in the practice of medicine and surgery, but has also been active in the improvement of public health conditions. It has been said that no line of business is as little commercialized as is the practice of medicine, which statement finds support in the labors of Dr. Cottel, who has put forth every effort in his power to do away with conditions detrimental to public health. He was born in Calais, Maine, October 22, 1852, and is a son of Charles and Phoebe (Hanscom) Cottel. He traces his ancestry back to an early period in American history and in the maternal lines is descended from Hannah Dustin, a heroine of colonial days. On the paternal side he is descended from early Dutch settlers on Manhattan Island. He was but six years of age when his parents left New England and removed westward to Illinois. He was reared upon a farm near Wilmington, in Will county, Illinois, and in early manhood took up school-teaching which he followed in that county for four years. He began reading medicine under the direction of his brother, Dr. H. A. Cottel, and was graduated with honors from the medical department of the University of Louisville, Kentucky, with the class of 1877. He then practiced for four years in Braidwood, Illinois, and for six years in Peoria, Illinois. In 1887 he arrived in Portland where he opened a drug store in the section of the city in which he still resides and practiced medicine also, meeting with success in both activities. He is still interested in the drug trade, being secretary and manager of the Cottel Drug Company. His labors for the benefit of the public have been far reaching and beneficial. About 1906 he was elected a member of the Portland city council in which he served for two years and during that period secured the passage of the first milk ordinance that Portland ever had. He also served for a term in the Oregon state legislature during the session of 1911 and 1912, and in that period was chairman of the committee on health and public morals and was also a member of the committee on medicine and pharmacy. His long experience as a physician and druggist well qualified him to do excellent service along those lines. He is a member of the Portland City Medical Society, the Multnomah Medical Association, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

In 1892 Dr. Willis I. Cottel was married to Miss Lulu M. Campbell, a daughter of Eugene Campbell, of Portland, and they have one son, Charles C. Dr. Cottel belongs to Columbia Lodge A. F. & A. M., to the Woodmen of the World, to the Fraternal Union and to the Knights and Ladies of Security. He has made many friends in these different organizations and in every relation of life his fidelity to duty and his capability have established him in a most creditable position in public regard.

JAMES M. SMITH was born in Gilliam county, Oregon, on the 12th of October, 1889, his parents being W. J. and Delia (Summers) Smith, who are natives of Illinois and Missouri respectively. The father came to Oregon in 1884, settling in Gilliam county, where he has since been engaged in farming and stock-raising. To Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smith six children have been born as follows: James M., of this review; William and George, both of whom follow the occupation of farming; Mary, the wife of A. J. Bosquet; Rose; and Alice.

James M. Smith was reared at home and obtained his early education in the common schools of the district in which he lived, subsequently spending four years as a student in St. James College of Vancouver, Washington. On the completion of his college course he was employed as a traveling salesman for six months. Retiring from this position, he secured employment as buyer in the dry-goods department of Barker's store and held this position for five years. He now is in the federal service, filling the office of assistant postmaster.

In politics Mr. Smith is a republican and fraternally he is identified with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, belonging to Lodge No. 358, at Heppner, Oregon. He is likewise connected with the Knights of Columbus, being a member of Lodge No. 678 at Portland. He is a devoted communicant of the Catholic church and resides at Condon.

CARL A. L. SMEDBERG is one of the enterprising farmers of Coos county, located seven miles up Catching Inlet from Marshfield, where he is engaged in the cultivation of his farm. He was born in Sweden in 1880 and is the son of Peter Victor and Matilda (Nelson) Smedberg, both of whom were natives of that country. In their family were seven children: Victoria, deceased; Carl A. L., of this review; and Beda, Tyra, Helge, Victor and Emily, all of whom reside in Sweden.

Carl A. L. Smedberg was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the schools of his native country. At the age of twelve he engaged in work in the lumberyards in the district in which he lived and continued in that employment for two years. He then shipped as a sailor and for three years devoted his attention to that occupation, after which he became an apprenticed bookbinder, continuing in that industry until he had thoroughly mastered the trade. He has, however, never worked at the business since having acquired a competent knowledge of the art of bookbinding. He was for some time subsequent to his apprenticeship employed in a cooper shop in Sweden and on retiring from that business he emigrated to America, settling first in Chicago, where he remained for one year and then took up his abode in Kansas and there continued for three years, after which he went to Washington and in the logging camps of that state he worked for one year. He then removed to Coos county and for some time was engaged at work on his brother's farm. He later was employed as one of a surveying and prospecting crew but was unsuccessful in this undertaking. He then engaged in work as a fisherman, in which he continued for some time. Immediately

MR. AND MRS. HENRY N. BLACK

THE N
PUBLIC ASTR AND TILDEN F

following his marriage he established his permanent residence on the old homestead of his wife's father and has since continued to give his attention to the cultivation and operation of that place. He is also the owner of eighty acres of choice Oregon farm lands.

On June 20, 1910, Mr. Smedberg was united in marriage to Miss Mary Black, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry N. Black, and to them has been born a son, John Henry, whose natal day was March 20, 1911. Mr. Smedberg is liberal in the use of his franchise, giving his support to the party which in his judgment represents the best interests of the people. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and he and his wife are members of the Lutheran church. Mr. Smedberg is one of the well known and respected citizens of the county in which he resides and is in every way entitled to be enrolled among the successful agriculturists of his state.

CHARLES C. REINHARDT, a successful ranchman of Umatilla county, was born in Wurttemberg, Germany, October 6, 1867. His parents were Gottlieb and Lizzie (Frederick) Reinhardt, both of whom were natives of the same country. They came to the United States in 1873, locating in Blue Earth county, Minnesota, but after three or four years removed to Harlan county, Nebraska. Later they went to Marysville, Marshall county, Kansas, where the mother now resides. The father passed away there in May, 1911, at the age of seventy-two. In his native country he had learned and followed the trades of miller, butcher and locksmith but after coming to America he was engaged entirely in farming. In his family were nine children, of whom the subject of this sketch was the second in order of birth.

Charles C. Reinhardt, being only six years of age when his parents brought him to this country, received his education here and remained under the parental roof until he was sixteen years of age. He then started out in life for himself and for some time was employed in farm work. Afterward he went to Nebraska, where he remained one year. In 1886 he came to Umatilla county and ever since has made his home here. For the first ten years after his arrival in this county he was employed on a sheep ranch. Afterward he went to the mountain districts and engaged in sheep ranching on his own account, being there for two or three years. Subsequently he bought a half-interest in some stock and in a ranch and began farming. He is now operating fifteen hundred acres of wheat land, which is situated four miles southeast of Pendleton, some of which belongs to the Umatilla Indian Reservation. He also owns three hundred and sixty acres of pasture land in the mountains, and he raises yearly about eighty head of horses, eighteen head of milch cows and fifty head of hogs.

On the 26th of December, 1903, Mr. Reinhardt was married to Miss Agnes Kinney, who was born in Umatilla county in December, 1885, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Kinney, who reside at Walla Walla, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Reinhardt have become the parents of four children, Louis, Edwin, Lillian and Catherine. Mr. Reinhardt is a highly honored citizen of Umatilla county and is very successful in both wheat growing and stock-raising. He manifests a public-spirited interest in everything relating to the general welfare and has gained the trust and respect of all with whom he has come in contact.

JULIUS MEYER. Few of the foreign-born residents of Washington county have put to better advantage the opportunities for advancement along business lines which they found in the rich agricultural regions of this portion of the state than has Julius Meyer, a well known farmer of this district whose residence in the county covers a quarter of a century. He is one of Switzerland's contributions to the citizenship of Oregon, his birth occurring in that country on the 7th of November, 1850. His parents, Henry and Anna Meyer, were also natives of Switzerland and there passed their entire lives, the father's death occurring in 1866 and the mother's in 1876. Of their family of ten children all yet reside in their native land with the exception of Julius, of this review, and another son who passed away in this country.

A good education formed one of the principal assets in the successful career of Julius Meyer, for after passing through successive grades in the public schools of his native country he was there given the benefit of a college course, and thus a broad general mental training well equipped him for the duties of business life. For nine years he served as cashier in a bank in Switzerland, but believing that the opportunities for advancement in the United States exceeded those to be found in his native land, he came to America in 1881, locating first in St. Lawrence county, New York. After six months spent in that place he went to Ohio, where he remained for a similar period, after which he made his way to Kansas City, Missouri, where he was employed for two years. The year 1886 witnessed his arrival in Oregon, at which time he preempted eighty acres of land in Washington county which, however, he later sold. He then purchased another tract of eighty acres in this county, paying a purchase price of five dollars per acre, and on this farm he has since made his home. Something of the earnestness and perseverance which have characterized his efforts since taking up agricultural pursuits here is indicated by the fact that during the intervening years he has so developed and improved his farm that today he is the owner of a fine estate valued at four thousand dollars. Persistency of purpose has ever been one of his salient qualities and one of the secrets of his success is found in the fact that he has never been afraid of work but has labored earnestly and untiringly and the position which he occupies today among the substantial and prosperous farmers of his section of the county is therefore well merited.

While still a resident of Switzerland Mr. Meyer served for a time as county clerk but since taking up his abode in this country he has never sought nor desired to figure prominently in public life, preferring to devote his attention to the conduct of his business interests. He is, however, a stalwart believer in republican principles and never fails to support that party at the polls, while to all matters of citizenship he gives careful consideration, casting the weight of his influence upon the side of progress and advancement.

A. P. FRENCH is living upon a part of the old French homestead near Prairie City in Grant county, where he owns and cultivates nearly three hundred acres of land. He was born in the John Day valley, in December, 1873, a son of Samuel and Ann (Hyde) French, and a grandson of Joseph French. The father and the grandfather were both natives of Maine and representatives of old New England families, while on the maternal side the ancestry is traced back to Germany. The father went to California by way of the ocean route, around Cape Horn, in 1851, and there engaged in mining and later in the operation of a sawmill. He came to Oregon with a large number of settlers that included the Fisk family, and after following mining for a time opened a blacksmith's shop in Canyon City. Subsequently he removed to Dixie, now Prairie City, where he remained for several years, and later bought property about five miles above Prairie City, on the John Day river. From time to time he added to his holdings, until he had over two thousand acres of which about a half was bottom land. He was a very energetic, industrious and successful business man. He devoted considerable time to the raising of horses and cattle and at one time ran as high as five hundred head of cattle and a large number of horses. For six years he served as assessor and was the first man to assess the Harney country. He died in 1889. The six children of the family are: A. P.; J. B., living in California; Emma, now the wife of M. J. Puett; Mrs. Susie Daugherty; Frank B.; and R. S., living near Mount Vernon. Of this family Frank B. French is quite prominent as a ranchman of Grant county. He was born in the John Day valley in January, 1881, acquired his education there and remained on the home place until 1904, when the property was divided and he obtained one hundred acres of bottom land and two hundred acres of bench land. He runs range stock, as high as one hundred and fifty head, and makes a specialty of Hereford cattle. In 1905 he married Nellie McLean, a daughter of Charles McLean, who was of Scotch descent, and of Flora (Marrs) McLean, her parents being among the early settlers of Harney valley. Frank B. French is now serving as clerk of the school board.

A. P. French acquired his education in the public schools near his father's home and remained upon the farm until twenty-one years of age. He was a lad of eleven years when he accompanied his father on a trip to Maine, and later he was his companion on other trips. On attaining his majority he removed to a part of his father's property whereon he now resides. He has nearly three hundred acres, a large part being bottom land and under irrigation. He has a large ditch, irrigating extensive tracts, and the John Day river also runs through his place. He raises horses, mules and cattle, breeding from registered sires, and raises fine draft stock. His location is an excellent one and upon his place he has a good residence and substantial barns and outbuildings. He also has an excellent orchard and the appearance of the place as a whole is most attractive.

On the 4th of December, 1894, Mr. French was united in marriage to Miss Eva Axe, a daughter of William and Adelia Axe, who were among the earliest settlers of the John Day valley. Mrs. French died October 27, 1911, leaving two sons, Samuel and Harold H., both of whom are at home.

Mr. French has served on the school board for a number of terms and is an intelligent and progressive citizen, interested in the welfare and progress of the community. Mr. French is a member of Mountain View Lodge No. 33, I. O. O. F., of which he has been through all of the chairs, and is also a member of the encampment.

JOHN N. EDLEFSEN is the cashier of the Peninsular National Bank and secretary-treasurer of the Edlefsen Fuel Company, Inc., of Portland. He is a self-made man and his history indicates what can be accomplished by young men of foreign birth who make their start in the new world unacquainted with the language and the customs of the people. The difficulties which confronted him, were soon overcome, and his persistent energy and determination enabled him to surmount all obstacles which barred his path to success. He was born in Pellworm, an island north of Hamburg, Germany, September 1, 1882, and is a son of Matthias P. and Dorothea M. (Jacobsen) Edlefsen. The father died in Germany in June, 1911, at the age of seventy-six years. Throughout his life he had engaged in cabinet-making and furniture manufacturing and in his trade he had worked on the famous cathedral at Cologne. He and his father, Peter Edlefsen, grandfather of our subject, were at one time the original owners of the island of Pellworm. His widow survives him and is living in Germany at the age of sixty-eight years.

In the public schools and under private tutors John N. Edlefsen acquired his early education and afterward attended a business college at Husum. He entered the business field of endeavor as an apprentice in the wholsale dry-goods trade, spending four years in that way, after which he became a clerk for a dry-goods exporting firm at Elberfeld. He saw two years' service as a member of the Imperial Guards at Berlin, and in 1905 he came to the United States, spending a year in New York with a wholesale furniture business. In 1906 he arrived in Portland and soon afterward accepted a position in the Peninsular National Bank, which at that time had been in existence for a year. He was at first employed as teller and bookkeeper but on the 26th of June, 1911, was promoted to the position of cashier, in which capacity he is now serving. He is well known as a representative of financial interests. He is treasurer and secretary of the Edlefsen Fuel Company. Since coming to the new world he has acquired an excellent command of English, has thoroughly acquainted himself with modern business methods and has become imbued with the spirit of enterprise and ambition which is dominant in the northwest, and is leading to the rapid and substantial development of this country.

John N. Edlefsen was married in 1909 to Miss Maude E. Whelan, a daughter of W. E. Whelan and a native of Saginaw, Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Edlefsen have one son, John N. Jr., and one daughter, Dorothy Eleanore. Mr. Edlefsen holds membership in Dorie Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and also in Holmes Lodge, K. P. He is loyal to the teachings of both organizations, which are based upon a recognition of the obligations of man to his fellowmen, and his brethren of these fraternities entertain for him high regard while the general public accords him commendation and admiration for what he has accomplished since a courageous and ambitious spirit led him to leave the fatherland and establish a home in the new world.

LEVI ELDRIDGE, who is a well known farmer and stockman of Umatilla county, was born in Linn county, Kansas, April 18, 1867. His parents were Levi and Elizabeth (Storms) Eldridge, the father a native of Kentucky and the mother of Indiana. In early life they removed to Missouri, where they were married, and afterward, before the war, they located in Kansas, where the father died in 1869, at the age of thirty-two years. All his life he followed the occupation of farming. After the father's death the mother was again married, her second union being with Harrison Ragins, and in 1887 they came to this county, locating near Pilot Rock, where Mr. Ragins died and where the mother now lives. Of her first marriage were born three children: Anna, deceased; James, of this county; and Levi. Of her second marriage were born five children.

Levi Eldridge came to Oregon in 1887 with his mother and has since made his home in this county. All his life he has been engaged in farming and stock-raising and has met with excellent success. He now owns seven hundred and ninety-two acres at his home place, near Pilot Rock, and has a reservation of six hundred and twenty-seven acres of timber and pasture land. He engages principally in raising horses and mules and usually keeps between fifty and sixty head.

In 1888 Mr. Eldridge was united in marriage with Miss Cornelia Thorne, who was born in Iowa in November, 1867, and came to Oregon with her parents in 1887. She is a daughter of Jonathan and Margaretta Thorne, both of whom died in this county. To Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge have been born seven children: Grace, who is the wife of Lewis W. Keller, who resides near Pendleton, this county; Bertha, who is the wife of Peter J. Ulmen, of Montana; Zelma, who is the wife of Grover Pound, residing on McKay Creek; Ida and Levi, at home; Forrest, deceased; and Cornelia, also at home.

Mr. Eldridge is identified with the Fraternal Order of Eagles and with the Farmers Union. In his political views he is a republican, and he has ever been greatly interested in educational work and has served as school director. He is fond of outdoor life and is much interested in hunting, being considered one of the best hunters of this county and has killed specimens of most of the different kinds of game in this section. Mr. Eldridge is prosperous in his business relations and throughout the many years of his residence in Umatilla county has been an active and helpful factor in the development of the same.

HENRY F. HEBARD. The enterprising spirit which is manifest in the substantial upbuilding of the towns of western and southern Oregon finds exemplification in the life of Henry F. Hebard, who is a general merchant and the postmaster of Umpqua, Douglas county. He was born in Millwood, in this county, on the 15th of February, 1880, and is a son of Samuel and Lydia E. (Black) Hebard. The mother was a native Oregonian, having been born at Elkhead, Douglas county, her father, F. M. Black, having been among the first settlers of this part of the state. Samuel Hebard was a native of either Wisconsin or Iowa and was born in the year 1848. Early in the '50s his parents made the long journey across the stretches of hot sand and over the mountain passes to California, settling in the Sacramento valley, where they lived until Samuel Hebard had reached young manhood. The family then came north into Oregon, first settling on Cow creek, in Douglas county, but subsequently removing to eastern Oregon, locating near Baker City, where both the grandparents of our subject passed away. After attaining his majority Samuel Hebard came into the Umpqua valley of Douglas county, where he was married and began farming on his own account. In 1878 he removed to Millwood, where he was engaged in the sawmill business for a number of years, later taking up a homestead on which he located and which he still occupies.

Henry F. Hebard was reared at home acquiring his education in the public schools and at the Central Oregon Normal School at Drain, supplemented by commercial training in the Portland Business College. Following the completion of his business course he was for a time employed at office work in the mines at Placer, Oregon, and later became bookkeeper in the construction camps of the Western Pacific railroad in California. In the spring of 1906 he came to Umpqua and purchased the mercantile business of L. R. Wilson. This he has since conducted.

having a well appointed general store, which serves the needs of the surrounding country and is accorded a liberal share of the town trade.

On the 7th of June, 1906, Mr. Hebard was married to Miss Zada Viola Whiteside, a daughter of John L. Whiteside, now residing near Stockton, California. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hebard have been born three children, Ermil E., Alton B. and Harold F. Mr. Hebard votes with the democratic party and has fraternal relations with Oak Camp, No. 252, W. O. W., of Oakland. He is one of the progressive young business men of Douglas county, well trained, capable, thorough and wide-awake to the possibilities of a situation.

FRED WALTERS, who is the sole proprietor of The Walters Flouring Mills of Pendleton, was born in Switzerland, March 14, 1853. His parents were Samuel and Mary (Rose) Walters, who spent all their lives in Switzerland. In their family were six children, of whom the subject of this sketch was the youngest and the only one who ever came to America. The father was also engaged in the flouring mill business, an occupation which he followed all his life.

Fred Walters received his early education in Switzerland and early learned the miller's trade. In 1878 he came to America, locating in New York city, where he was employed for one and one-half years in making millstones. Subsequently he went to St. Louis, Missouri, and was employed in the same line of work in that city for three years. Afterward he went to Nemaha, Nebraska, and operated a flouring mill for about three years. He then came to Oregon and for one and one-half years farmed near Weston, in this county. Then for two and one-half years he operated a mill in the city of Weston. In 1893 he purchased his present flouring mill, which was known at that time as the Farmers' Custom Mill. He rebuilt the same, it having at that time a capacity of one hundred barrels per day, which he increased to five hundred barrels, and he also changed the name to that of The Walters Flouring Mills. He carries on an extensive business and the mill is running at its full capacity. Most of the flour goes to San Francisco and the surrounding country and the mill is supplied entirely with wheat that is grown in Umatilla county. This wheat does not contain as much gluten as the average kind of wheat and therefore makes a white flour. Mr. Walters considers this to be the best wheat belt in the world. The mill employs on an average ten men and it is operated by water from the Umatilla river. Mr. Walters has been very successful in the milling business and in other commercial enterprises and owns a beautiful residence here and also five other dwelling houses in the city, which he has rented.

In 1879, in New York city, Mr. Walters married Miss Julia Hofer, who was born in Switzerland in 1856 and came as a young woman to America. Mr. and Mrs. Walters have become the parents of four children: Fred, Jr., who was born in Missouri and for the past twelve years has been head miller in his father's flouring mill; H. E., who was born in Nebraska and has charge of the San Francisco office and market there for the flour; W. J., who is employed in the mill here; and Ida, who is secretary for her father. The two last named are natives of Oregon.

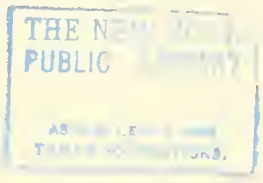
In his political views Mr. Walters is a republican, and he and his family are members of the Catholic church. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and with the Woodmen of the World. All his life Mr. Walters has devoted his time and attention to the milling business, as did his father and his grandfather before him, and as a result of his undivided interest he has met with excellent success. He may truly be called a self-made man, for when he reached New York he was empty-handed and through his thrift, energy, perseverance and splendid business ability he is now numbered among the substantial residents of Pendleton. His upright life and honest business methods have made him popular with all his associates and he is highly honored and respected by all who know him.

JAMES P. DUNCAN, proprietor of the Grave Creek Ranch of four hundred and eighteen acres near Leland, Josephine county, though reared on a farm has spent a large portion of his time at railroad work. He was born in Marion county, Iowa, August 21, 1856, a son of M. L. and Mary J. (Morrow) Duncan, the father a native of Missouri and the mother of Indiana. The parents migrated to Oregon in 1859 and settled in Lane county, where they remained for ten years. They then removed to Douglas county and there the father died in 1887, the mother's death occurring two years later. In their family were eight children, six of whom are still living.

James P. Duncan remained at home until he attained the age of nineteen years, meanwhile receiving a good common-school education. He then embarked in business on his own account, renting a stock ranch which he conducted successfully for five years. He then sold his agricultural interests and engaged in railroading, a vocation which for twenty years he continued to follow. While thus employed he saved a large portion of his earnings and at the conclusion of his employment by the railroad he purchased the ranch of four hundred and eighteen acres in Josephine county, near Leland, upon which he has since made his home. His property is known as the Grave Creek Ranch and he makes a specialty of stock-raising, although he conducts general farming as well.

Mr. Duncan has been married twice, his first union being with Miss Lucy A. Hillbrant, and unto them four children were born, namely: Anna, the wife of L. Chrisman, of Washington; Elmer, residing at Glendale; Edgar; and Lydie, who married C. F. Johns, of Douglas county. The mother of these children died December 17, 1886, and in 1894 Mr. Duncan wedded Miss Martha J. Beasley, a native of Colorado. Unto this union four children were born, Golda, Silva, Dewey and Leona.

JAMES P. DUNCAN



THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

In his political views Mr. Duncan is an adherent of the republican party. He takes an active interest in public matters and especially in educational affairs, now serving as school director on the local school board. He is a Royal Arch Mason, belonging to the chapter at Woodward, and is also a member of the Woodmen of the World camp. Both he and his wife affiliate with the Christian church, giving that organization their active support. Mr. Duncan is one of the influential, active and honored citizens of his community. He is a good business man, looking after all of the details of his affairs with care and discrimination and has achieved a very large success in life.

SHERMAN G. REES is well known in business circles of Union county as the proprietor of the Mount Fanny Mills at Cove, which are up-to-date and modern in every particular and which he has successfully conducted for the past twelve years. His birth occurred near Salem, Oregon, on the 8th of July, 1864, his parents being McDonough B. and America F. (Hall) Rees. The father was born in Butler county, Ohio, on the 10th of February, 1831, a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Griffin) Rees, both of whom were natives of Delaware. The paternal great-grandfather of our subject was a native of Wales and the Griffin family also comes of Welsh stock. The maternal great-grandfather of Sherman G. Rees took up his abode among the pioneer settlers of Ohio, as did also the paternal grandfather of our subject. Thomas Rees devoted his attention to general agricultural pursuits throughout his active business career and passed away in the Buckeye state at the age of seventy-two years. His wife lived to attain the age of eighty-two. Unto them were born twelve children.

M. B. Rees, the father of Mr. Rees of this review, was the seventh child born to his parents and spent his early boyhood days in Ohio. In 1854 he came to Oregon by way of the Isthmus of Panama, joining an older brother who had preceded him to this state and located in French Prairie. This brother passed away in Portland when eighty years of age. M. B. Rees resided in French Prairie until 1864 and in the meantime had worked at mining in British Columbia and in Idaho where he spent the winter of 1855-56. In 1864 he came to the Grande Ronde valley and located on the property now owned by George Holmes. As the years have passed he has bought and sold land to good advantage and his home ranch now comprises about one thousand acres. The period of his residence in this state covers almost six decades and he enjoys an enviable reputation as one of its prosperous and well known citizens. Though now eighty-one years of age, he still enjoys excellent health and is as active as if he were yet in the prime of life. It was in November, 1856, that he wedded Miss America F. Hall, a native of Missouri and a daughter of David Hall, who was a pioneer of Oregon. Unto them were born the following children: Zella, who is deceased; Sherman G., of this review; Edward, at home; Harry, who is a resident of Cove, this state; and Walter, who follows farming in the Grande Ronde valley. The wife and mother was called to her final rest in 1902.

Sherman G. Rees spent his boyhood and youth at Cove, Union county, where the family home had been established when he was but four months old. In 1900, in association with his father, he purchased the Mount Fanny Mills at that place, which were originally built by S. G. French in 1867. For the past twelve years he has successfully managed the mills, which have a capacity of seventy barrels and which are run by water power supplied by Mill creek, which has a fall of sixty feet. During the dry season electric power is utilized. All the machinery of the mills is of the most modern and best pattern and is kept scrupulously clean. Mr. Rees has prospered in his business undertakings and owns a handsome residence near the mills.

On the 22d of November, 1893, Mr. Rees was united in marriage to Miss Caddie B. McDaniel of Cove, her parents being E. P. and Frances (Jay) McDaniel. The latter, a native of Nashville, Tennessee, made the journey to this state by team in company with S. D. Cowles and settled in Cove, Union county, where in 1864 she gave her hand in marriage to E. P. McDaniel. The mill now owned and operated by Sherman G. Rees was purchased from S. G. French by E. P. McDaniel, who subsequently sold it to our subject. Mr. McDaniel and S. D. Cowles owned the property on which the town of Cove has been built and the former donated the site now occupied by the Episcopal church. Mrs. Frances (Jay) McDaniel was the first white woman who climbed to the top of the mountain east of Cove and it was named Mount Fanny in her honor. Unto Mr. and Mrs. E. P. McDaniel were born the following children: Samuel, who is deceased; Bruce, a resident of Portland; Mrs. Caddie B. Rees; Grace, who makes her home in Portland; and Roy and Bertie, who also reside in that city. Mr. and Mrs. Rees have one son, Sherman G., Jr., who is now attending school.

Mr. Rees gives his political allegiance to the republican party and has ably served as a member of the school board. His fraternal relations are with the Masons, the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. His entire life has been spent in Oregon and his career has been in keeping with the spirit of progress and enterprise which has ever characterized the sons of the northwest and has made possible the rapid development and growth of this section of the country.

THOMAS H. MEADOR, whose well merited reputation as a self made man and reliable citizen entitles him to representation among the leading men of Oregon, makes his home near Prairie City and is the owner of extensive land properties in that district. He was born in Campbell county, Tennessee, in December, 1835, a son of John M. Meador, whose birth occurred either in Tennessee or Kentucky. Mrs. John M. Meador bore the maiden name of Mary Mefford, and was a native of Tennessee. The family were planters and the father died when Thomas H. Meador was about eight years of age. Shortly before the father's death the family removed to Davis county, Missouri, where the widowed mother and children remained for some years. Thomas H. Meador continued a resident of that state until 1859, when he crossed the plains with ox teams to California, traveling in a large train. A guard was always stationed on the entire trip and the party manifested constant watchfulness because of the danger of Indian attack, but at length the journey was completed in safety, and after arriving in California Mr. Meador engaged in farming at Clear Lake for two years. He then started for Oregon, arriving here in January, 1862, after which he spent a few months in the Willamette valley. He next went to the diggings in Idaho but after a short time returned to the Willamette valley where he lived until 1864. He then came to the John Day valley and for one summer engaged in mining. On the 12th of August, 1864, he located at his present place of residence. He has one hundred and sixty acres in the home ranch, which is mostly bottom land under irrigation, and in addition owns altogether twelve hundred acres, which is mostly in pasture land. He has turned his attention to the live-stock business and is running cattle upon his range. His home is pleasantly located about three miles above Prairie City and one mile from the railroad, so that the advantages of town life, with its shipping facilities, are easily secured.

On the 22d of February, 1870, Thomas H. Meador was united in marriage to Mrs. Sarah A. Manwaring, nee Hunt, of Brooklyn, New York. The Hunts were among the early settlers of Long Island. Mrs. Meador died in 1898. By her first marriage she had three children who were adopted by Mr. Meador: John J., living in Eugene, Oregon; Amy Elizabeth, deceased; and Lincoln F., of Idaho. To Mr. and Mrs. Meador were born the following: Oscar and Oliver, twins, the former living at Monmouth and the latter in the John Day valley of Oregon; George T., whose farm adjoins the home ranch; Mrs. Mary E. Blinn; Edwin H.; and Emma L., at home.

Thomas H. Meador has always been interested in whatever pertains to the welfare and progress of the community and is recognized as a valued citizen. He served on the school board for many years and was at one time county commissioner. In every relation of life he has made a clean record and is a successful ranchman whose prosperity is well merited, for it is the legitimate outcome and reward of his earnest, persistent and honorable labor.

WILLIAM H. WISE is cultivating two hundred and eighteen acres of land on the Coquille river, Coos county, Oregon, and his work is carried on along lines of efficiency and of systematic methods which have already won their natural success. Mr. Wise was born in Grundy county, Missouri, on March 3, 1867, and is a son of Peter and Martha (McMichael) Wise, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Iowa. In the latter state they were married and shortly afterward moved to Missouri, settling in Grundy county about 1864. The father was a blacksmith by trade and followed this occupation in connection with general farming until 1873, when he came to Coos county and settled two miles north of Myrtle Point, Oregon, on a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres. This he began developing and for eight years carried on the work of improvement. At the end of that time he sold his property and in 1881 moved to Myrtle Point, where he gave his entire attention to the other branch of his activities, in the conduct of a modern blacksmith shop. This he conducted until 1907, when he retired from active life and moved to California, where he now resides with his son Marion, his wife having died in 1903. To their union were born eight children, five of whom are still living: William, the subject of this sketch; Laura, who married Charles Taylor, and resides on the McKenzie river; Marion, who lives in California; Adaline, the wife of Harry Hayes, of Portland; Wanetta, who married Robert Muir, of California; Anna and Delia, both of whom are now deceased; and one child who died in infancy.

William H. Wise was educated in the public schools of his native state and came to Oregon with his parents. He started in life for himself when he was seventeen years of age, working as a general laborer until 1894. In that year he rented a farm and carried on agricultural pursuits along the most modern and progressive lines and met with a gratifying degree of success for four years. He spent two years working at farming in the employ of others, and then came into possession of his wife's portion of her parents' estate, constituting two hundred and eighteen acres of land on the Coquille river. On this he now resides and is giving his entire time and attention to its improvement.

In 1892 Mr. Wise was united in marriage to Miss Mary C. Warner, who was born on the south fork of the Coquille river, January 29, 1873. She is a daughter of William and Laura (Phillips) Warner, the former a native of Indiana and the latter of Missouri. Their marriage occurred on the sea between San Francisco, California, and Empire, Oregon. They settled in Coos county, Oregon, on a donation claim known as the Roland claim on the south fork of the river and here they lived until the father's death in 1898. Mrs. Warner is still living at Marshfield, Oregon, and is fifty-nine years of age. She and her husband were the parents of four children: Mary C., the wife of our subject; John, who is now residing on the south fork of the Coquille river; Willie, of Coos county; and Fannie, the wife of Carl Albrecht, of Marshfield, Oregon. Mrs. Wise received her education in the country schools of Coos county and is a cultured and charming woman. She and her husband are the parents of eight children: Harry A., who was born in January, 1894, and who is still at home; Ruby, whose birth occurred in 1895; Lloyd H., born in 1897; Robin H., born in 1898; Grace E., whose birth occurred in 1901; Walter L., born in 1903; Laura H., in 1904; and William T., in 1908. All of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wise who are old enough to attend school have received their education in the public schools of Coos county. Mr. Wise has done useful work in the world by improving the efficiency of the enterprise with which he is connected and by making it through his labors and energies a better and more valuable farm than it was when it came into his possession.

JOEL C. STURGILL is the popular and efficient county superintendent of public schools in Gilliam county, Oregon, on the 13th of February, 1874, his parents being George B. and Lydia (White) Sturgill, both natives of Missouri. They were married in that state and there continued to reside until 1865, at which date they emigrated to Oregon, making the long journey across the plains with an ox team. They settled on a farm in Baker county, where they established their home and where Mrs. Sturgill now resides, her husband having died in 1905.

Joel C. Sturgill, the fifth of a family of eight, attended the district schools of Baker county in the acquirement of an education. On the completion of his common-school course he became a teacher and continued in that vocation in Baker county for a period of five years, after which he entered the State Normal School at Monmouth, Oregon, graduating from that institution in 1906. Immediately afterward he secured the position of principal of the high school at Condon, continuing in that capacity for the following three years. On the expiration of that period he was elected to the office of county superintendent of schools, which position he now holds.

On the 29th of May, 1901, Mr. Sturgill was united in marriage to Miss Mintie Case, a daughter of Albert and Alice Case, of Baker county. One child has been born to this union, Marguerite, who is in her first year. Mr. Sturgill gives his political allegiance to the republican party. His fraternal relations are with Bristow Lodge, No. 130, I. O. O. F., and Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 95, A. F. & A. M. He is a man who from his early boyhood days is able to count the years by constant advancement in his chosen field of labor. He is discharging the duties required by his office to the satisfaction of the people in Gilliam county and the city of Condon, in which he resides.

HENRY GRANT GUILD is well known in Vale, Oregon, where he has acted as receiver of the United States land office since June, 1910. For many years he was identified with progressive journalism in various sections of the state and was an individual force in political circles by reason of the undoubted influence which he exerted in this field of activity. He has been a resident of Oregon since his boyhood but was born in Geneseo, Henry county, Illinois, August 18, 1855. He is a descendant of an old American family, the Guilds of the United States being descendants of two brothers, John and Jacob Guild, Scotch weavers, who came from their native country and settled near Dedham, Massachusetts, long before the American Revolution. They fought during that war, Jacob Guild as a captain in the Continental army and John as a fifer. The present ambassador to Russia, Curtis Guild, Jr., is a descendant of the John Guild branch of the family. The grandmother of our subject was a member of the Grant family of Massachusetts and was born at Attleboro, in that state. The father of our subject, Henry Augustus Guild, was born in Saratoga county, New York, in 1824. His father, Henry Guild, moved from Troy, New York, to Henry county, Illinois, and was among the pioneers in the Rock River section. Henry Augustus Guild moved to Poweshiek county, Iowa, in 1856, and became identified with the political life of that section. He was twice elected county clerk, serving during the war of the rebellion. After the close of hostilities he went to San Francisco and sailed from there on the steamer Orillamme to Portland, arriving in that city with his family in November, 1873. He later settled near Cornelius and was afterward a pioneer in the Nehalem valley. He died in Portland, October 24, 1897. His wife was in her maidenhood Miss Cordelia Dutton Cook and was born in Warren, Ashtabula county, Ohio, February 20, 1829. She came to Oregon with her husband in 1873 and died in Portland on the 8th of January, 1912. She and her husband had four children: George Augustus, who was born in Rock Island, Illinois, and is now a resident of Merlin, Oregon; John Edward, whose birth occurred in Brooklyn, Iowa, and who now makes his home in St. Helen, Oregon; Carrie C., whose birthplace was Montezuma, Iowa, and who married James D. Wharton of 121 East Eleventh street, Portland; and Henry Grant. The latter attended the public schools of Grinnell, Iowa, and completed his education in the Cornelius Academy at Cornelius, Oregon. He is largely self-educated, having broadened his knowledge by constant and well selected reading. He began his journalistic career as a typesetter in the Grinnell (Iowa) Herald office and later became connected with the Washington (Oregon) Independent. He worked on this paper in the early '70s and met with such success in journalism that he was able to purchase the entire plant and edited the paper for one year. In 1880 he established the Silverton Appeal and conducted this until 1892 when he bought the Sheridan Sun. He later published the Oregon Independent at Salem. He also was editor and publisher of the Signal at Newport, and was for some time proprietor of the Bulletin at Prosser, Washington his identification with this newspaper beginning in 1903. He has now abandoned journalism and gives his attention to his duties as receiver of the United States land office at Vale, Oregon.

May 19, 1880, Mr. Guild was married, in Astoria, to Miss Martha Rebecca Parrish, a daughter of James Patterson Parrish, of Sullivan, Ashland county, Ohio. Her father was born in Steubenville, Ohio, in 1824, and died near Sullivan, Ohio, in 1876. His wife came to Oregon in the fall of 1882 or 1883 and died in Astoria in 1885. Her maiden name was Miss Mary Fairfax Hickman and her birth occurred in Barnesville, Ohio, in 1834. She was a blood relation of the prominent Hickman family in Virginia. Her grandfather, Major William Hickman, surveyed the town site of Cincinnati, Ohio. He was granted by congress a tract of land in Kentucky as a reward for his services. Mr. and Mrs. James P. Parrish had the following children: F. M., of Roseburg, Oregon; Homer C., a practicing physician of Iola, Idaho; Mrs. W. N. Barrett, residing in Hillsboro, Oregon; Mrs. F. Foster, who makes her home in Creston, Washington; Mrs. May Graves, of Elk City, Oregon; and Mrs. Guild. Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Guild became the parents of two children: Henry Hickman, born March 21, 1881, at Silverton, Oregon, who was united in marriage to Florence De Weese at Portland, Oregon, on the 20th of July, 1912, and now resides in that city; and Donald Grant, whose birth occurred February 14, 1883, at Silverton, and who makes his home at Woodland, Washington.

Mr. Guild has always given his allegiance to the republican party but reserves his independence of conviction. He was a representative in the Oregon legislature from 1905 to 1907 and held the position of United States commissioner at Prosser, Washington, from 1903 to 1904. While editor of the Oregon Independent at Salem he advocated the adoption of the initiative and referendum by the republican party. He is well known in fraternal circles of Vale, holding membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for more than twenty years. He belonged to Salem Lodge, No. 4, F. & A. M., joining this organization in 1902. He has transferred his membership to Vale Lodge, No. 142, of which he is a member at the present time.

JULIUS LARSON has for many years been known throughout Coos county as one of the most enterprising and successful residents of that portion of the state. His beautiful home is located ten miles north of Marshfield on a picturesque body of land overlooking the bay, where he is engaged in the operation of one of the best equipped and most extensive dairy farms on the Pacific coast. He was born in Norway, October 24, 1842, and is the son of John and Mary (Hansen) Larson, both of whom were natives of Norway. In their family were three children: Julius, of this review; Christian, who is the chief engineer of the California Transportation Company and resides in San Francisco; and Lena, the wife of Peter Hall, of San Francisco.

Julius Larson at the early age of five years had the great misfortune to lose his father by death and he, being the eldest of the family, when a mere child was compelled on account of the necessities of the home to assume the grave responsibilities of the care and support of the family. He remained at home until he was thirteen years of age and at that time he started in life for himself, shipping as a cabin boy on a vessel bound from Norway to Newcastle, England. From the latter port the ship on which he sailed made an extensive world voyage, touching at all of the principal commercial ports and extending its journey over a period of thirteen months, during which time Mr. Larson received as compensation for his services his board and lodging and one dollar per month, his first year's salary amounting in round numbers to the sum of thirteen dollars. After completing that trip he became a regular seaman and received for his services seven dollars per month. At the age of eighteen he shipped as an able seaman and was then placed upon the salaried list at eleven dollars per month. In 1860 he shipped from Liverpool, England, on an American vessel bound for the East Indies. In 1861, on account of the outbreak of the Civil war, he was unable to return to England and his ship put into port at San Francisco and from that city he sailed on various merchandising ocean trips until 1863, at which time his vessel was wrecked on Coos bay bar. Mr. Larson came up the bay and obtained employment with the Simpson Lumber Company, and was engaged in one of their sawmills and also in their shipyard. He continued to work at North Bend until 1865 and in that year he returned to his old home in Norway via Panama and was absent on this trip from the American western coast for one year. Returning, he reached San Francisco in May, 1866, and remained in that city until the next year, when he returned to Coos bay and settled upon a farm on which he filed a preemption homestead claim at Larson's inlet. This inlet takes its name from the fact that Mr. Larson settled there and made extensive improvements in its vicinity. Upon that original homestead he has continued to remain and there his children have been born and educated in the schools of Coos county. Mr. Larson is engaged in the operation of one of the largest and most thoroughly equipped dairy farms of this state, keeping fifty high grade cows. In addition to his agricultural and dairy interests he in copartnership with his sons, Herman and Fred Larson, has organized a dredging company and since 1905 his sons have successfully directed the interests of that enterprise, operating at the present time three large dredges in work on the river and smaller inland streams. The company takes contracts for the building of levees and the cutting of channels in the work of developing the territory into a commercial and agricultural district. Mr. Larson was among the very first to recognize the inexhaustible richness of these fertile bottom lands and to build a suitable levee to protect them from the overflow waters and thus render them valuable for agricul-

MR. AND MRS. JULIUS LARSON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

tural uses. That he was wise in making the necessary outlay is evidenced by the magnificent dairy farm which he now owns and upon which he has constructed a handsome residence and commodious farm buildings, and the continued success which he enjoys in improving year after year the fertility of the silt soils of Oregon.

Mr. Larson was united in marriage to Miss Marie Olsen, a native of Norway, in 1866, and to them eleven children have been born: Jennie, now the wife of Nels Rasmussen, of Marshfield; Herman, who is engaged in business with his father in the Larson Dredging Company of Marshfield; Elizabeth, who is married to C. C. Lightner and lives in San Francisco; Mary Ann, deceased; Phoebe, who resides at home with her parents; Julia, the wife of Henry Hunter, of Portland; Edward and Rueben, deceased; Fred, who is engaged in the dredging business with his father; Lena, the wife of A. Rogers, of Marshfield; and Lettie, the wife of William Kennedy, of Marshfield. All of the children received a public-school education and Lena took a business course.

Mr. Larson is affiliated with the democratic party but has never allowed himself to become a candidate for political office. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and himself and family are affiliated with the Lutheran church. The early years of his childhood were clouded by the loss of his father and when a mere boy he ventured out in an unknown world, making his living as a sailor, journeying far from his home and the scenes and associations of his childhood days. In spite of the adverse circumstances with which he came in contact he created favorable conditions for himself and at the time he settled in this state he counted as his capital stock the experience which he had gained in his world-wide associations, to which he added his strong will and skilled hand. Now, as his reward he is the owner of one of the finest and most highly improved farms in his section of this state. He is among the widely known and highly respected citizens of Oregon and the integrity and uprightness of his character have caused him to be respected wherever known, and most of all where he was best known.

JOSEPH TRUESDALL, a representative and respected resident of Baker, is well known as the proprietor of sale and feed stables and a horse and automobile livery. His birth occurred in Winchester, Scott county, Illinois, on the 29th of January, 1850, his parents being Samuel and Vodisa (Bell) Truesdall, of whom he was the only child. Vodisa Bell was born in Ireland and was married to Samuel Truesdall in Illinois in 1848 or 1849. In 1852 they crossed the plains to California with ox teams, and the same year Mrs. Truesdall passed away in Sacramento. Mr. Truesdall then went into what was known as the Haugtown placer mining district, where he was engaged in mining until 1855. In that year he returned to Illinois via the Nicaragua route and in the Prairie state was married a second time, there devoting his attention to farming and to the buying of all kinds of farm live stock for trade in St. Louis, Missouri. In 1859 he removed to Kansas, being a resident of that state at the time of the drought. He next removed to Iowa and there engaged in general agricultural pursuits until 1862. In that year he again crossed the plains with ox teams as captain of the Truesdall train, which comprised about forty wagons. In going through the Landers cut-off they were accompanied by the Manville and Teabeau trains, being joined by them as a matter of protection against the Indians. The Truesdall train included the following persons: B. F. Morgan, who settled on Snake river and lived there until his death in 1910; Joseph and James Koontz, well known in Grande Ronde; and the Paul, Reynolds, Buzzard and Wickersham families, all Iowa emigrants. Samuel Truesdall settled near Island City, Union county, Oregon, where he preempted and improved a tract of land but subsequently disposed of the property and removed to what was called the Iowa Fort, purchasing the land on which the fort stood. Iowa Fort was so named for the reason that a number of Iowa emigrants had settled near this point, including Cage Baker and his family, Wilson Deal and the Woodells. Mr. Truesdall successfully followed farming at the place called Iowa Fort until within a few years of his death, passing away in 1905 at the age of about eighty-two. He gave his political allegiance to the democratic organization and served as school clerk in Union for a great many years. His religious faith was that of the Universalist church, while fraternally he was identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to Lodge No. 49 at Summerville, Oregon. Throughout the entire period of his residence in this state, covering more than four decades, he was actively identified with the work of development and improvement in various ways. In 1855 or 1856, in the state of Illinois, he wedded Miss Sarah Hootz, by whom he had one son and seven daughters. Estella, the first born, died when young. Dolores, who is deceased, was the wife of Duncan McClain and the mother of one daughter and one son, who reside in Wallowa county, Oregon. Irene became the wife of Burt Courtwright and the mother of one son and one daughter. The latter married a son of Bole McAllister—a representative of one of the oldest families of Union county. Oris B., whose birth occurred in October, 1862, and who was one of the first children born in the Grande Ronde valley, now makes his home at Boise, Idaho. Ida, the widow of Wait Wade, also resides at Boise, Idaho. Her daughter, who is married, lives with her in Boise. Ofona gave her hand in marriage to John Walker and is the mother of two sons, Ray and Leo. The family reside near the mouth of the Columbia river. Lavona, living near Spokane, Washington, is the wife of S. Aiken and the mother of two sons and two daughters. Nora passed away in early life.

Joseph Truesdall acquired his education in Scio, Linn county, Oregon, under the direction of John C. Arnold, who later founded a school at Pendleton and became noted as an educator. Mr. Arnold is now deceased, his demise occurring at Pendleton. Our subject was first employed at freighting to the Idaho mining camps with the Wilson Deal train of ox teams, acting in the capacity of foreman for about two years. He then began freighting on his own account, being thus engaged until the time of the Indian war with Chief Joseph of the Wallowa country, which broke out in 1877. Mr. Truesdall was detailed as wagon master for the United States infantry from Atlanta, Georgia. It was while he was in this service that the meeting of General O. O. Howard and Chief Moses occurred at Spokane, Washington, where it was claimed that two thousand Indians gathered to attend the council. Subsequently he embarked in the livery and hotel business and in this field of endeavor has remained continuously since. His first location was in Walla Walla, whence he removed to Weston and thence to La Grande, where he met with gratifying success as the proprietor of the Golden Rule Hotel, the only first-class hostelry in La Grande. He likewise owned and conducted the St. Louis livery stables and also enjoyed an extensive patronage in this connection. Later he removed to Medical Springs in Union county and there conducted a mercantile establishment until about 1902, when he came to Baker, which city has since remained his place of residence. As above stated, he is the proprietor of a horse and auto livery and sale and feed stables. He has real-estate and other property interests and is widely recognized as one of the prosperous and leading residents of his community. At the present time he is the contractor for the Richland stage line, running from Baker daily and covering a distance of forty-five miles.

In 1873, at Summerville, Oregon, Mr. Truesdall was united in marriage to Miss Ella Shores, her father being Dr. T. W. Shores, a practicing physician and farm owner of Summerville. They had one son, Charles Edgar, who was born on the 3d of May, 1875, has been married twice and is a railroad man in Washington. Mrs. Ella Truesdall passed away about 1875 and on the 29th of March, 1876, Mr. Truesdall was again married, his second union being with Miss Eva Lewis. Her father was E. S. Lewis, a native of New York who married Miss Moore of Ohio. Coming west, they traveled via railroad to Kelton and thence by stage to Union, Oregon. Mr. Lewis, who was an agriculturist by occupation, first lived in Cove, Union county, and subsequently took up and improved a timber claim about two miles from Summerville, developing it into a productive farm. His wife passed away at what is called the Romig place near Summerville. His demise occurred about two years later at Walla Walla, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were the parents of two sons and two daughters. Lillian, who gave her hand in marriage to Isaac Vandevanter, resides in Union, Oregon, and is the mother of three sons, namely: Don, who was born on the 21st of November, 1875, and wedded Miss Mary Tucker; Wayne, born April 3, 1882, who married Miss Lizzie Briggs; and Lovern, whose birth occurred on the 20th of December, 1890. The three sons are natives of Union county. Duane Lewis resides at Baker and is employed by his brother-in-law, Joseph Truesdall. Eva is the wife of our subject. Frederick C. Lewis is a miner residing in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Truesdall have become the parents of two children, one of whom, Myrtle, died when but fourteen months old. Etta, who was born on the 29th of June, 1877, resides in Spokane and is the wife of Alexander Rest. She has been thrice married and by her first husband, Asa Sams, has one child, Myrtle, who was born in Baker on the 2d of September, 1901. Her second marriage was to Sam Birch, of Baker.

In politics Mr. Truesdall is a stalwart democrat. He served as postmaster at Medical Springs, Union county, for four or five years and also acted in the capacity of justice of the peace at that place for a similar period. He was connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for about a quarter of a century and at the present time belongs to the Automobile Club and the Commercial Club of Baker. The members of his family are all well and hearty and are comfortably situated in life in a pleasant country where peace and plenty abound.

JOHN F. REISACHER, one of the most widely known men among the eminently successful citizens of Gilliam county, is the vice president of the First National Bank of Condon, where he is also serving as postmaster and is engaged in the harness and saddlery business. His birth occurred in Portland, Oregon, on the 9th of June, 1870, his parents being John and Catherine (Porth) Reisacher, natives of Germany, who emigrated to America in young manhood and young womanhood. The father located in New Haven, Connecticut, where he was engaged in the saddlery business and where he first met and became acquainted with his future bride. Soon after the close of the Civil war he emigrated to California, where he worked in the gold fields, seeking his fortune. From the Golden state he made his way to Idaho and thence came to Oregon, locating at Portland, and for many years was identified in that city with the harness and saddlery business, from which he has since retired. However, he still maintains his residence in Portland.

John F. Reisacher was reared at home and acquired his education in the public schools of Portland. As a young man he learned the saddlery trade in that city and after completing his apprenticeship he followed the calling of his trade as a journeyman workman. He located in Condon in 1897 and in 1898 embarked in the harness and saddlery business at that place, having since continued to be prominently identified with this line of activity. He was one of the organizers of the Gilliam County Bank, which was later consolidated with the First National Bank of Condon. In January, 1911, Mr. Reisacher was elected to the office of vice president of that institution, in which capacity he continues to serve. In 1898 he received the appointment of postmaster of Condon and has served in this office continuously since.

In 1897 Mr. Reisacher wedded Miss Mary M. Hoover, of Fossil, Wheeler county, Oregon, and to this union have been born two children, John H. and Margaret R. In politics Mr. Reisacher is a stanch and enthusiastic republican and as such has been elected to the office of mayor and also to the town council of Condon. In Masonry he has attained high rank, being a member of the following organizations: Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 95, A. F. & A. M.; the Consistory, S. P. R. S., of Portland, and Al Kader Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He also belongs to Summit Lodge, No. 130, I. O. O. F., and Endymion Lodge, No. 66, K. P. Mr. and Mrs. Reisacher are members of the Order of the Eastern Star, the latter being grand officer of the state lodge of Oregon. She is also a devoted and consistent member of the Episcopal church of Condon. John F. Reisacher is indeed a man of affairs among the people of Condon and the county of Gilliam. He is closely associated with the social, political, benevolent and business interests of his county and is one of the representative and influential citizens of the state of Oregon.

C. J. LEAVITT. Among the more recently established business enterprises of Newberg but one which, however, is meeting with substantial success, is the C. J. Leavitt Realty Company, of which C. J. Leavitt was the organizer and is now serving as president. The width of the continent separates him from his birthplace, for he was born in Maine, the date of his nativity being the 8th of April, 1868. He is a son of Joseph T. and Amanda M. (Patten) Leavitt, who were also natives of the Pine Tree state, where the mother passed away in 1878. The father, however, still survives and continues to make his home in his native state. Of their family of eight children only five are now living.

C. J. Leavitt spent the period of his boyhood and youth in the east and in the public schools of Maine acquired his education. He was only eighteen years of age when he determined to try his fortune in the west, and for six months he made his home in Nebraska, after which he went to Washington. Five years were spent in the latter state and then, in 1891, he made his way to Oregon, locating in Newberg, Yamhill county. Here he was engaged for two years in the lumber business and then he took up agricultural pursuits in this county, following the same until 1909. He had been successful in this undertaking, but thinking to find more congenial occupation in the city he returned, in that year, to Newberg and here opened a real-estate office. He is now operating under the firm style of the C. J. Leavitt Realty Company, handling farms, timber and orchard tracts and city property, and also engaging to a considerable extent in insurance and loans. He has already built up a business of gratifying proportions for he has made a close study of realty values, understands the art of buying and selling and is therefore able to serve his clients to the best advantage. He has handled many important realty transfers during his identification with this line of activity and he is rapidly winning for himself a foremost place in the business ranks of Newberg.

In 1892 Mr. Leavitt was united in marriage to Miss Dollie Hardwick, who was born in Missouri, a daughter of George W. and Elizabeth (Majors) Hardwick. Her parents, who were born in Kentucky and Virginia respectively, came to Oregon in 1875, and here the father's death occurred in 1892. The mother, however, still survives and at the age of eighty years makes her home in Newberg. Mrs. Leavitt was one of two children born unto Mr. and Mrs. Hardwick, and by her marriage she has become the mother of three children, namely: T. W. and Linden G., both attending high school; and Maynard D., who is also pursuing his education.

The family hold membership in the Christian church and are held in high regard in the community in which they now reside. Mr. Leavitt is a republican in his political belief and takes that public-spirited interest in the questions and issues of the day which every loyal American citizen should feel. Aside from this, however, his attention has been given wholly to his personal affairs and in their conduct he is meeting with gratifying success for his fair dealing and honorable methods have won for him the confidence of all with whom he is associated in business relations. In private life, too, he has been accorded the respect and good will of his fellowmen and Yamhill county claims him as a valued adopted son.

JAMES E. ROBINETTE. The town of Robinette in Baker county was named in honor of him whose name introduces this review, and who for some time has been prominently connected with agricultural and mining interests in this part of the state. He was born in Cumberland, Maryland, October 7, 1852, and his parents, James J. and Maria (McElfish) Robinette, were also natives of that state. The father was of French descent and removed westward to Missouri with his family when his son James was but two years of age. Our subject therefore, was reared in that state and acquired his education in the district schools which he attended to the age of seventeen years when he left home and went to Eureka, Nevada, hoping to find good business opportunities in the northwest. He there engaged in mining for a period of nine years and afterward went to Cortez, Nevada, where he worked in a silver mine, securing the position of boss. After acting in that capacity for five years he went to Union, Oregon, in the fall of 1884 and a year later removed to Cornucopia, then in Union but now in Baker county. There he engaged in prospecting for gold for eighteen months after which he worked in the Whitney mine which was the first in that famous mining district. In October, 1887, he removed to a point on the Snake river, a mile below the mouth of the Powder river, and located where the town of Robinette now stands. It lies on the Huntington branch of the Oregon Short Line. Robinette is a thriving little town of only two years' growth. It was platted and founded by Mr. Robinette and is destined to become a place of importance for it is the distributing point for an extensive surrounding territory that includes Eagle valley, Pine valley and Cornucopia. Throughout the period of his residence in Oregon Mr. Robinette has been engaged in placer mining, spending fifteen years on the Idaho side of Snake river at Stergill Bar during which time he was very successful. He still maintains his interest in that property.

On the 16th of July, 1883, at Elko, Nevada, James E. Robinette was united in marriage to Miss Eoa Lincoln, a daughter of David Lincoln of Nevada City, Missouri. They are the parents of four children, three sons and a daughter, all of whom are living, namely: Ruby, who became the wife of C. S. Summers of Richland, Baker county, August 27, 1904, and has four children, three sons and a daughter; Earl, born in 1888; Elbert, born July 31, 1890; and Amos, born January 1, 1893. The last three mentioned are at home.

In his political views James E. Robinette is democratic, supporting the party because of a firm belief in its principles. Public office however, has had no attraction for him as he has always preferred to concentrate his energies upon his mining interests, and he is among those who, in taking advantage of the natural resources of the state in this direction, are not only winning profit for themselves but also contributing to the development and progress of the district at large.

GEORGE W. TETHEROW is one of the early pioneers of Oregon and to him belongs the distinction of being one of the men who opened the first wagon road between Wilkins prairie and Portland in 1847. He is now the only remaining member of that pioneer band which was engaged in building for public use a highway between the points above named. He was born in Iowa, April 2, 1834, and is the son of David and Ruth (Southwood) Tetherow, to whom nine children were born.

Mr. Tetherow was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools. In company with his parents he came to Oregon in 1845, crossing the great plains with ox teams, and after a period of six months of continuous travel the family finally reached Oregon and settled at Hillsboro. He remainded under the parental roof until he was twenty-eight years of age and on November 19, 1861, he removed to Josephine county, where he took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, which he later improved and afterward sold, and removed to Williams creek and there purchased a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, on which he has since continued to reside.

Mr. Tetherow was united in marriage on November 11, 1857, to Miss Elizabeth Miller, a native of Illinois, and to them nine children were born, John M., Mary, Joseph, Cynthia Araminta, Samuel I., Nancy G., Sarah Jane, Minnie M. and George W. Mr. Tetherow is a member of the democratic party and has always followed the standard of that political organization in its national and state campaigns. He is one of the highly respected citizens of Josephine county and his farm of one hundred and sixty acres located on Williams creek, is among the most highly developed and picturesque places of this portion of the state. He is known throughout the county to be a man who is always ready to lend his assistance to the advancement of any public interest seeking the improvement of his state and county. He is reliable in all his business transactions and as a pioneer citizen of Oregon he is highly esteemed as one of the most useful men of his adopted state.

FRIDOLIN DUTLI is the proprietor of the finest bakery in La Grande, and is one of the leading citizens of this community. He was born in Switzerland, December 3, 1869, a son of Max and Mary (Neff) Dutli. The father passed away in 1891, the mother surviving him and now making her home in her native land.

Fridolin Dutli was educated in the public schools of Switzerland until he attained the age of fifteen years. He then began life as a farmer, pursuing that vocation at home and then, for two years, busied himself with learning the baker's trade. He followed that business in his native country until he attained the age of twenty-one years and then emigrated to the new world and settled in Kansas, where he became a farmer. He remained on the farm which he purchased in that state for six years, then sold his land and went to Pueblo, Colorado, where again he engaged in the bakery business for a period of three years. He next removed to Cripple Creek, Colorado, and engaged in the same occupation for two years more, after which he removed to Arizona temporarily where he spent four months prospecting for the precious metals. Not meeting with the success which seemed to justify his remaining there he pressed on to Oregon and settled on a tract of government land near La Grande. He lived upon that land for four years and then purchased a bakery in the town, which is the largest and best of La Grande. Immediately on taking up his residence in the town he began to demonstrate his ability as a baker, a trade which he had thoroughly learned and in which he had wide experience, with the result that he has built up a flourishing and constantly increasing trade. His business, which is a valuable one, is not his main asset, however, as he owns valuable town property and three hundred and twenty acres of timber and farm land in the vicinity.

GEORGE W. TEATHEROW

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

On the 14th of February, 1905, in La Grande, Mr. Dutli was married to Miss Barbara Bucher, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Bucher, and they have one child, Walter. Mr. Dutli has not forgotten his many old friends and his mother in Switzerland and since coming to the United States has twice returned to the land of his nativity, making his first visit in 1900 and the second in 1910. He is independent in politics, preferring to support, regardless of party lines, such candidates as he deems best fitted for the office to which they aspire. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Elks lodge, and is affiliated with the Catholic church. He has long been regarded as one of the most desirable citizens of his community and his business experiences have demonstrated his natural ability and the skill which he has acquired in handling business details of various lines, particularly that of conducting an up-to-date bakery. He has large acquaintance throughout the community and is held in high esteem by all who know him.

THOMAS WHITING. Eastern Oregon was settled by sturdy pioneers who came from different sections of the United States and, braving the dangers of primitive travel and the perils of sickness, opened up and developed a new land in America. The qualities, which made their work lasting and their activities useful, they have passed on to their sons, who are now the citizens of Oregon and active in the promotion of its progress and prosperity. One of the earliest settlers in Harney county was Thomas Whiting, whose life was conspicuous for its activity and usefulness in the early development of this region. He was born in Somerset county, Maine, May 25, 1836, and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Whiting of that state. He received his early education in the public schools of Somerset county. He moved to California with his father in 1850 and after spending a year in that section of the country returned to Maine. In 1859 he and his father again went to California, where they engaged in business until 1874. In that year they moved to Oregon, making the journey by wagon, and arrived in the Harney valley October 14 of that year. They located on Rock Point, on the site where the town of Burns now stands. For the first winter they lived in a rude dugout with no conveniences other than a roof and a fireplace. On the 23d of March, in the following year, they located on the homestead which is now occupied by Thomas Whiting's son Schuyler, and here our subject spent his life cultivating the land and raising high-grade horses and cattle. His death occurred October 17, 1891. His wife survives him and is the oldest resident of Harney valley.

Thomas Whiting was married December 23, 1865, to Miss Ione McClintock, a native of Van Buren county, Michigan, where she was born February 8, 1847. She is a daughter of Sarah and John McClintock. Her mother removed to California in 1861, where she was joined by two of her daughters in 1863. Mr. and Mrs. Whiting were the parents of five children, Elizabeth, Schuyler, Frank, George and Ellen.

Schuyler Whiting was born in Nevada county, California, on August 14, 1868. He came to Oregon with his parents when he was six years of age. They made the journey with six horse teams and came direct to Harney valley, where they located on Silvies river, two miles north of the town of Burns, where the mother still resides. Schuyler Whiting received his early education under very primitive conditions. He received instruction from Mrs. Sally (Bates) Latham, who was the first teacher in the district. The school was held in a small stone building located on what was then known as Jim Shepherd's Knoll. Later the classes were removed into the building erected by Joe and Jim Baird which was called the Stone Mansion. Schuyler Whiting was one of a very small number of pupils and received such education as possible in an undeveloped country. He remained upon the homestead with his father who was engaged in stock-raising until the year 1877, when he purchased a small herd of horses, which were put up for sale upon the death of their owner, Jesse Cook, who had been killed by a team. His father during his life had been an extensive owner of high-grade horses. In 1879 Thomas Whiting had made a trade by which he became possessed of a blooded mare, which had been ridden by Sally Winnemuck, an Indian squaw, who had been a guide for the soldiers in this district. The mare was of Morgan breed and was the beginning of Schuyler Whiting's interest in the horse-raising business. At the time of Thomas Whiting's death in 1891 he and his son Schuyler together were running nearly four hundred head of high-grade stock, and many of the descendants of the Indian mare are in Schuyler Whiting's herd today.

Schuyler Whiting now gives most of his attention to the breeding of draft horses and in the past few years has won many blue ribbons for this grade of stock. He owns a ranch twenty miles north of Burns on a tributary of Emigrant creek and here he runs about two hundred head of high grade horses. He puts them out to pasture during the summer and brings them down to the old homestead in the winter time. He has planted the acres surrounding the house principally to barley, and has been very successful in the cultivation of this grain winning in the year 1911 a blue ribbon for his threshed and unthreshed barley.

On the 12th of April, 1911, Mr. Whiting was married in Burns, Oregon, to Miss Leota Rentfro, who was born in Champaign, Illinois, February 26, 1893. She is a daughter of M. F. Rentfro, a prominent citizen of Effingham, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Whiting are the parents of a daughter, Carrol Elaine, born May 22, 1912. Mr. Whiting is a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is well known in fraternal circles of this city. He is one of the most extensive ranchers and stockraisers in Harney county. He threshed in 1911 six thousand bushels of a high quality of grain and is constantly adding to his blooded horses. He is a progressive, prominent and successful man and his prosperity is founded on his industry, integrity and broad intelligence.

WILLIAM V. HURST. Western America is known as a country of forceful, active and energetic men. The settlers of the district are now for the most part in the second generation and the rugged strength, indomitable determination and vital ambition which the fathers put into the opening up of the new country the sons are now exhibiting in promoting its industries and developing its natural resources. William V. Hurst, owner of all the telephone lines in the Myrtle creek district, and associated with others in the ownership of the Riddle and Canyonville lines and is also proprietor of a general hardware store in Douglas county, is a native son of Oregon. The history of the foundation of his family in western America by his father is connected with the adventurous time of the opening of the California gold fields; it contains chapters filled with primitive and dangerous travel with ox teams along trails infested with Indians and made terrible by the raging cholera, and it ends with the settlement in Douglas county and the opening up of the great American northwest.

William V. Hurst was born near Oakland, Douglas county, Oregon, February 11, 1858. His parents were David and Margaret (Whistler) Hurst, the former a native of Baltimore, Maryland, and the latter of Ohio. The father crossed the plains to Oregon in 1847, driving an ox team, and located as a squatter on Calapooia creek, seven miles below Oakland and was one of the first settlers in what is now Douglas county, there being a few at Scottsburg. He subsequently took up a donation claim which he improved until 1849, when he went to California, urged by extravagant rumors of the wealth of the great gold fields of that region. After the discovery of a rich placer field made by a Mr. Ford, he and his companion, a Mr. Cox, were the first men to reach Ford bar. He spent some two years in the California gold fields and then returned to Douglas county, Oregon, where he became one of the best known men in the southern part of the state. He operated a feed yard in conjunction with his farm, which was located on the main artery in the southern part of Oregon. He owned the first threshing machine ever operated in this section of the country and probably the first machine in the state. For years he threshed all the grain in southern Oregon until his removal in 1876 to McMinnville, in order to give his children the advantage of a college education in that city. He was essentially a progressive man with a wonderful power for organizing and developing. He took a keen interest in educational affairs, believing that liberal knowledge was the best heritage he could leave to his children. He served for years as a member of the executive board of McMinnville College and was a dominant factor in the erection of the new college building. He himself contributed to the fund five thousand dollars and was personally responsible for many other subscriptions. Two of his sons, W. V. and David E., were educated in the new college, toward the erection of which their father had contributed so largely. The father of our subject was a stanch democrat politically and his opinions had great weight in the party councils. He absolutely refused to allow his name to be mentioned for any official position, although he was constantly being urged to become a candidate for the state legislature and for the office of county clerk. He removed to Salem in 1881 and in that city his death occurred three years later. His wife is still living and resides in Myrtle Creek. In the eighty-seventh year of her age she is still an active and well preserved woman and attends to all her own financial affairs.

William V. Hurst was reared at home and acquired his early education in the public schools of Oakland, later attending McMinnville College, from which institution he was graduated in 1882, with the degree of B. S. He spent the next two years in teaching school, later taking up the occupation of stationary engineer, with which he was identified for more than a quarter of a century. For several years he ran a boat on the Columbia river and in 1892 came to Myrtle Creek, where he now resides. He spent some time as a mechanical engineer for a mining company in this district, resigning this position January 1, 1909, when he established his present hardware business, which is today one of the largest and most important enterprises of its kind, being located south of Roseburg in Douglas county. His keen business instinct and power of organization have led him to become prominent in other industrial branches in this city. He owns and operates all the Myrtle creek district telephone lines, is part owner in the Riddle and Canyonville lines, and now has under his control the largest independent system in the state.

In March, 1882, Mr. Hurst was united in marriage to Miss Eva Coggans a daughter of George and Anna (Stewart) Coggans, the former at one time the proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel of Portland. He later engaged in the horse business and was massacred by the Indians in the eastern part of the state. Two of his companions died with him. The murderers were captured and brought to Willow Springs, where they paid the penalty of their crime by death. To Mr. and Mrs. Hurst were born four children, three of whom are now living: Lulu, the wife of Isadore Selig, of St. Marys, Idaho; Ninia, who married George W. Burnett, of Roseburg; and Zether, at home.

Mr. Hurst is a consistent democrat in his political views and has always been prominently identified with the public life of his section. He served for eight years as justice of the peace, first in Marion county and then in Myrtle Creek. He was city recorder of the latter city for two years and a prominent figure in local politics. He is a member of the Woodmen of the World and is identified with the Fraternal Brotherhood. His dominating personality, his power of leadership and his discriminating grasp of the details of a business situation make him today one of the leading citizens of Douglas county. There is hardly any line of commercial activity in which he is not actively interested and it is a significant fact that all of his many investments are made in local enterprises. He loves the west and believes in its future and is doing his utmost to promote its development and secure its prosperity.

IRBIN FINLEY SMITH DIVEN is one of the prominent business men of Vale, Oregon, and during the ten years of his residence in this city has gained success by reason of the honorable and upright policy which he has always maintained. He was born on the 1st of September, 1855, in Washington county, Arkansas, and is a son of Robert Macklin and Mary Jane (Killan) Diven, the former of Irish ancestry and the latter of Scotch descent. Their marriage occurred in Arkansas, May 29, 1852, and in that state the father followed general agricultural pursuits and specialized in the breeding and raising of high-grade stock. He was one of the most extensive landowners in Washington county, near Fayetteville, where the family had resided for many years. The grandfather of our subject was a slave owner but was a believer in the principles of abolition and before the Civil war had freed all his negroes. In 1860 the father of our subject sold his large interests in his native state and moved to Wise county, Texas, which was then on the frontier. He purchased land, farmed and raised cattle and horses in that section of the country until 1865, when he returned to Washington county, Arkansas, and followed the same occupations. He remained in his native state until 1870, crossing the plains to Oregon in that year. He drove teams to Nebraska City, where he sold his outfit and went on to San Francisco by rail, thence by steamer to Portland, Oregon, where he landed on the 1st of July, 1870. He bought a tract of land on Horse Heaven Ridge in Clackamas county and upon this carried on general farming for three years, disposing of his holdings in 1873 in order to remove to Baker county, in the eastern part of the state, where he located a homestead claim on Willow Creek. His land comprised one hundred and sixty acres, which he immediately began to improve and develop. He built the first rail fence in what is now Malheur county to inclose his property and there followed stock raising and general farming for many years, selling out finally in 1898. He moved to Vale and purchased city property, erected a home for himself and his wife and here he has since resided. He has passed his eightieth year and his wife is eighty-two years old. They are in the best of health, hale and hearty, and are highly respected and esteemed by all who know them. They became the parents of ten children: John Wesley, who was born in August, 1853, and died in 1855; Irbin F. S., the subject of this review; James Josephus, who was born in 1857 and died about 1868; Ambrose Preston, whose birth occurred in 1859; William Lafayette, who was born in 1862 and died in infancy; Martha Jane, born in 1864, who died at the age of thirteen years; Elizabeth, whose natal year was 1866 and who has also passed away; Ewen Wilson, who was born in 1869 and died at the age of five years; Thomas Alfred, whose birth occurred in 1872 and who has passed away; and Mary Macklin, who died in infancy. Of these Ambrose Preston is now residing in Chico, California, where he is engaged as a fruit-raiser. The father of our subject has been identified with much of the upbuilding and settlement of the western parts of America. During the Civil war he was for three years a Texas ranger, his duties being to protect the frontier against the depredations of the Comanche Indians. He is a democrat and still actively interested in public affairs. He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church and is well known in the affairs of the Masonic order. He is altogether one of the representative and substantial citizens of Malheur county, well known as a pioneer and upbuilder.

Irbin F. S. Diven received his first education at home, studying with his mother during the time of the Civil war. When he reached the age of thirteen he attended the public schools in Washington county, Arkansas, and pursued his education after coming to Oregon in Clackamas and Malheur counties, the latter then a part of Baker county. When he laid aside his books he located a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres on Willow Creek, which he improved and developed along modern and progressive lines, specializing in the breeding and raising of high-grade cattle and horses. He later disposed of this property and bought a farm near Vale, which he also sold after a short time. He went to Dayton, Washington, and purchased farm land in that vicinity and also town property, which proved a profitable investment. When he returned to Vale he sold his farm and located in the village, where he erected a fine stone building and engaged in the general merchandise business, about the year 1902. He continued the conduct of this enterprise and met with well deserved success until July, 1906, when, in association with several of his friends, he formed a corporation called the Malheur Forwarding Company, of which he was made manager and this position he occupies at the present time. He has an enviable record as an enterprising, honorable and upright business man and is esteemed by a large and constantly growing circle of friends. He owns a comfortable and commodious residence in Vale and has invested extensively in town property.

On the 13th of February, 1879, on Willow creek, Mr. Diven was united in marriage to Miss Josephine Wisdom, a daughter of John L. Wisdom, farmer and stock raiser of that section. Mrs. Diven is a second cousin to John W. and James T. Wisdom, representatives of one of the most prominent families in Baker county. She and her husband became the parents of eleven children, five of whom, four sons and one daughter, have passed away as follows: One who died in infancy;

John Macklin, who was born August 24, 1881; Thomas, whose birth occurred October 30, 1890; a son, unnamed, whose natal day was February 9, 1895; and Wilmer, who was born February 4, 1904. The following named are those surviving. Hester, who was born August 4, 1883, married Patrick Johnson, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits near Vale. They have two daughters. James Irbin, whose birth occurred April 14, 1885, married Winnie Purcell, by whom he has one son. They reside in Vale. Lewis Vernon, whose natal day was January 18, 1887, is associated with his father in business in Vale. He was united in marriage to Jessie Blair and they have one son. Minnie, born January 3, 1889, is the wife of Frederick Ewart and they make their home in Lynn, Massachusetts. Harland is attending school and is also employed in his father's store. Ernest, who was born October 18, 1892, is employed as bookkeeper by the Malheur Forwarding Company.

In his political views Mr. Diven is a consistent democrat and served for two years as assessor of Baker county, holding the office before the time when Malheur county was formed. He is well known in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having held membership in Eliam Lodge, No. 31 until it surrendered its charter. He is also a member of the Chamber of Commerce of Vale and is interested in all phases of local growth and development. His success has been won by indefatigable and unwavering promotion of worthy principles in his business life and has been attained by hard work and industry. As a man of marked ability and shrewd discrimination, combined with high standards of conscientiousness, he is representative of the qualities which in every walk of life make a man respected and esteemed more for his character than for his financial success. He has attained the latter, however, and his prosperity is constantly increasing, guided as it is by business discrimination and judgment of a high order. All the relations of his life have been equally worthy and honorable and by reason of his conscientiousness in the performance of his duties and in the results he has effected he has attained a prosperity which is a public asset.

EPHRAIM OLIVER HALL is one of the successful and energetic real-estate men of Marshfield, in which city he maintains his residence and where he has established his prosperous business. He was born in Bradley, Penobscot county, Maine, November 22, 1835, and is a son of Oliver and Sallie (Oliver) Hall. His parents were both natives of the Pine Tree state, his father being of Scotch descent. To Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hall eight children were born: Nancy, deceased, who was the widow of William J. Thompson, of Oakland, California; Sarah, Horace and Mary Jane, all deceased; Ephraim Oliver, who is the subject of this review; George, of Ceres, California; James, who lost his life in battle during the Civil war; and Mary Jane, the wife of Mr. Gloster, of Maine.

Ephraim O. Hall was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools. He started in life for himself when but a boy of twelve years, at which time he was engaged in a sawmill plant in his native state but during that time he lived at home with his parents, who were in feeble health and whose circumstances were such that the earnings of their son were needed to assist in the support of their large family. He remained with his parents and continued to contribute to their support until he attained the age of twenty years, at which time he removed to California and in that state continued to reside for a period of twenty years, during which time he spent two years in mining, after which, in company with a partner in business, he was engaged in the sawmill industry for sixteen successive years. He and his partner owned at the same time a very large amount of live stock and, being unable to conduct their milling business during the winter season, they rented three and one-half sections of land, upon which they ranged their cattle and conducted agricultural interests on a large scale in the San Joaquin valley. Later Mr. Hall sold his interest in the milling business to his partner and confined himself entirely to the operations of ranching and farming for a period of nine years, after which he entered into the contract logging business for two years. He afterward removed to Idaho and in that state built a sawmill plant for a mining company and was connected with that concern for three seasons, after which he was sent by a lumber company to Coos bay to operate a small mill for them and continued in their employ at that work for a period of ten years. He became also one of the principal stockholders of that sawmill plant. The concern later closed out its affairs, since which time Mr. Hall has been engaged in the real-estate business in Marshfield, where he owns his beautiful home located just outside of the city limits. His residence is built upon a fine site overlooking the bay. All of his other property holdings he has now disposed of, retaining only his residence and real-estate business, and to the interests of his business and his home he is giving his entire attention.

Mr. Hall was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Dayton, a daughter of Ransom and Priscilla Dayton. In her father's family were four children: Mary E., who became the wife of the subject of this review; Calvin, of California; Delia, now the wife of Dan McCoy, of Stockton, California; and one child who died in infancy. To Mr. and Mrs. Hall nine children were born: Clara Adelia, deceased; Oliver J., of Los Angeles, California; William E., who has passed away; Sadie May, now the wife of William Richard, of Marshfield; Ida Bell, who became the wife of Walter Spade, of Marshfield, and has two children, Bessie and Eugene; Charles H., living in California, who is married and has two children, Alton and Agnes; Ransom D., of Coos Bay, Oregon, who is married and has one child, May; George H., of Oakland, California; and Newton B., also of California. The mother of this family passed away on the 1st of April, 1906.

MR. AND MRS. E. O. HALL

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Mr. Hall is a republican in politics but aside from whatever political activity is required in the building up of the interests of his immediate locality, he is not especially concerned in public affairs, and he has never been a seeker of public office. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, to which fraternal society he has belonged since 1863. Mr. Hall and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Marshfield. He is a highly respected and useful citizen of the community in which he lives and a man of industrious and frugal habits of life who is vitally interested in every public measure seeking the educational advancement and moral uplift of the people of his county and state. Among all his friends and acquaintances he is known to be a man of business integrity and in all transactions and intercourse he is reliable and just.

GEORGE W. PORTER resides upon and gives his personal supervision to an excellent farm property at John Day, in Grant county. He is a well known and highly respected resident of his community and since locating here has given much attention to stock-raising. He was born in Dixmont, Maine, December 31, 1832, a son of Benjamin and Lavina (Corthell) Porter, who were also natives of that place, as was the grandfather, Isaiah Porter. The father was a soldier in the War of 1812 and in days of peace devoted his attention to general farming.

George W. Porter was reared in the place of his nativity and is indebted to its public-school system for the educational privileges that he enjoyed. In early manhood—on April 17, 1856—he wedded Caroline A. Prentiss, of Troy, Maine, a daughter of Samuel and Deborah (Wing) Prentiss, natives of China, Maine. Following his marriage Mr. Porter engaged in farming, continuing his residence in the Pine Tree state until 1871, when he started for Oregon, crossing the continent to San Francisco and the next morning taking a boat at the Golden Gate for Portland. He thence proceeded to The Dalles by train and by stage to John Day, where lived Mrs. Porter's sister and her husband, Theodore Thompson. The last named was born in Maine in 1819 and in 1845 married Lucinda Prentiss. In 1849 he went to California and in 1850 returned by ship around Cape Horn with his wife. Following their arrival on the Pacific coast they conducted a boarding house at Marysville, California, Mrs. Thompson being one of the first women in the mines of that district. In 1853 or 1854 they returned to New England, remaining until 1864, when they again left Maine for Oregon. After a few months spent in Portland they came to John Day but remained only a short time and then went to Marysville, California. Mr. Thompson was seriously injured in a mining accident and in 1873 he bought back from H. S. Gilbert the property which he had previously owned and which is now the homestead of Mr. and Mrs. Porter. Upon this place Mr. Thompson died August 30, 1874. Mrs. Thompson remained thereon until her death January 18, 1890. She willed the estate to her sister, since which time Mr. and Mrs. Porter have lived thereon save for a brief period spent at Drewsey, Oregon. For a number of years Mr. Porter engaged in the sheep industry but has given the greater part of his time to raising cattle.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Porter have been born four children: Frances H., the widow of William Geyger; Edith F., who is now Mrs. William Wiley, of Dayville, Oregon; Leslie A., residing on the home place; and Mrs. Mary A. Morgan. The parents are spoken of in terms of high regard wherever known. They have traveled life's journey together for fifty-six years. Mrs. Porter is still wonderfully preserved both physically and mentally but Mr. Porter's health is not as good as formerly. Both have gained many friends during their residence in Oregon and well merit the esteem which is uniformly tendered them.

Leslie A. Porter was born in Dixmont, Maine, June 1, 1866, but was educated in the John Day district, where he has practically spent his entire life on the old homestead. He was married December 25, 1894, to Mary Kelly, who was born in the house erected by Joaquin Miller in Canyon City in 1870, her parents being James and Catherine Kelly, who were pioneers of the Canyon City district and were natives of Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Porter have had four children, Catherine Annie, Mollie Augusta, Doris Agnes, and one who died in infancy. Leslie Porter is serving on the school board and is a stalwart champion of the cause of education. He is engaged principally in stock-raising and gives his supervision to eight hundred acres of land. He has sixty acres of very fine land in the valley and his range affords good pasturage for his stock. His creditable record adds new lustre to the untarnished family name.

JOSEPH C. HAYES is the well known and universally trusted sheriff of Morrow county, this state. His birth occurred in Lane county, Oregon, on the 4th of July, 1857, his parents being William J. and Sarah (Kapheart) Hayes. The father crossed the plains to Oregon in 1852, and the mother with her parents in 1853. Both the Hayes and Kapheart families located in Lane county, where Mr. and Mrs. Hayes were united in marriage and continued to live during the remainder of their lives. Both are now deceased, having passed away many years ago.

Joseph C. Hayes was reared in his father's home; educated in the public schools of Lane county and remained under the parental roof until he was eighteen years of age. At that time he engaged in the sheep business in Douglas county, where he continued to give attention to that industry until 1877, and then removed to Heppner, Morrow county, where he purchased a suitable ranch property and established himself in the sheep business, in which he continued until 1910. He was elected sheriff of Morrow county that year and has since discharged the duties of that office.

On the 31st of January, 1884, Mr. Hayes was united in marriage to Miss Mary Hays, the daughter of R. B. and Lucy Hays. To Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Hayes three children have been born: Olin, who is engaged in caring for the interests of his father's ranch; and Elra and Neva, both students in the public school.

Mr. Hayes is affiliated with the democratic party and in fraternal circles is known as past grand of Willow Lodge, No. 166, I. O. O. F. He is in every way qualified to hold the responsible office to which he has been elected. He is one of the well known and highly respected citizens of his portion of the state and in his business ventures he has been successful and is recognized among his associates as a reliable and trustworthy citizen of his county. It is a notable fact that he was elected on the democratic ticket by a majority of two hundred though the county is two-thirds republican.

WILLIAM COLEGROVE SAUNDERS is secretary of the Title and Trust Company of Portland. The northwest with its pulsing industrial activities is continually drawing to it men who recognize in its conditions the opportunities for the successful conduct of various business interests. Of this class William C. Saunders is a representative and has made for himself a most creditable position in financial circles here. He was born in Tioga county, Pennsylvania, September 19, 1876, and is a son of Thomas and Harriett (Colegrove) Saunders. The father was an attorney at law and in 1883 removed westward to Ramsey county, North Dakota, being the third white man to locate within its borders. He lived there until his death and was somewhat prominent in public affairs, serving at one time as county clerk.

William C. Saunders supplemented his public-school education by a course in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology of Boston. He was twenty-four years of age, when in 1900 he came to the Pacific northwest, settling first at Seattle, while two years later he came to Portland. He determined he would engage in business on his own account rather than remain in the employ of others and earnestly watched for an opportunity that would enable him to make a start. Following his arrival in Portland he became connected with the Security Abstract & Trust Company, which was later consolidated with the Portland Abstract & Trust Company, retaining the name of the former. This was effected August 31, 1903, and Mr. Saunders remained its secretary from the 29th of July, 1905, until the organization of the Title and Trust Company which was formed in 1908 with a paid-up capital of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. This company purchased the complete title plants of The Title Guarantee & Trust Company and of the Security Abstract & Trust Company. These plants, in addition to a complete systematized record of all public documents pertaining to real estate on file in Multnomah county, include a vast amount of data necessary to the proper examination of titles such as affidavits, maps, plats, surveys and other matter pertaining to titles not of public record but obtained through private sources, the accumulation of over thirty years of active business and research and comprising as thorough and complete a title plant as can be found in the United States. A certificate of title, as issued by the Title and Trust Company, is the opinion of a corps of experienced land lawyers, based on an abstract and supplementary search of the public and private records of the company and backed by ample financial strength to make good any loss in case of error. It is the simplest known form of stating the exact condition of a title and the best safeguard against loss by reason of defective titles that a buyer or mortgagee can secure. On the face of the certificate its accuracy is guaranteed to the full amount of the value of the property or mortgage it covers. Its guarantee is secured and protected by all the assets of the company, amounting to more than a quarter of a million dollars, including a special deposit of fifty thousand dollars in the hands of the treasurer of the state of Oregon which fund is held in trust by the state and is not subject to other liabilities of the company so long as there remains any outstanding liability by reason of its certificate of title.

The making of a certificate of title necessitates first a search of all public records which may have any possible bearing upon the title, as well as any and all sources of private information in the exclusive possession of the Title and Trust Company. All this information is submitted to the law department where a thorough and exhaustive examination is made. All maps, plats, indices, records, surveys, affidavits, opinions, in short any and all facts or records in the possession of the company being open to the inspection of the examiner, defects, errors or irregularities if any are discovered, are quickly analyzed. Thus the definite condition of the title is determined. A certificate of title is then issued, setting forth the amount of the guarantee the company assumes; second, a statement showing in whom title is vested as it appears from the records; and third, a summary of incumbrances, defects or irregularities, if there are any.

A certificate of title has many advantages over an abstract. Its simplicity enables anyone who can read the English language to tell at a glance exactly how the title stands. The time required to prepare and issue a certificate of title is usually much less than is taken in making an abstract and having it examined. This is especially true in cases where the attorney returns the abstract with a letter containing a list of objections and requirements, for in many cases these can be satisfied from information in the possession of this company. In making subsequent transfers no reference need ever again be made to the abstract, the examination for the extension of the certificate of title beginning where the former certificate terminated. This enables transfers to be made in a fraction of the time required by the old method. The holder of the certificate of title knows that aside from the guarantee feature he has received the benefit of an examination by capable attorneys, men upon whose final judgment the company relies, who have been especially trained by years of experience for this particular class of work. The convenience of having a certificate of title, which may be folded and put away in an envelope with other papers, is appreciated by those who have handled many of the cumbersome abstracts formerly in use. The guarantee feature gives protection to the buyer or mortgagee that he can obtain in no other way. The seller also may feel safe in executing a warranty deed when he knows the title has been examined and a guaranteed certificate of title issued by the Title and Trust Company. Economy is still another advantage, as certificates are vastly cheaper in the long run.

The handling of titles by certificates is not experimental but is a strictly modern method which has either already supplanted the abstract or is rapidly doing so in most of the large cities of the country.

It is to this business that Mr. Saunders is now devoting his energies as secretary of the company, and his efforts along these lines have established him in a foremost position among successful business men and financiers of the northwest.

In 1906 Mr. Saunders was united in marriage to Miss Elona Carner, a daughter of Alonzo Carner of Kentucky, who now resides at Castle Rock, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Saunders have one daughter, Lucille. His fraternal relations are with Willamette Lodge, No. 2, A. F. & A. M. and with Portland Chapter, No. 3, R. A. M. He also holds membership with the Sons of the American Revolution, and is also a member of the Commercial Club. He is classed with the enterprising, progressive men who are making history in the northwest and who are building along substantial lines, both in the interest of individual success and of public prosperity.

KENNETH WILLIAM McKENZIE, one of the proprietors of the leading pharmacy of Wallowa, has been treasurer of his city and is a man of wide and popular acquaintance. He was born in Summerville, Oregon, April 16, 1873, a son of Simon and Ella A. (Williams) McKenzie. The father, who was educated in Canada and reared in the drug business, removed to Kansas in 1870 and later came to Oregon, locating in Summerville, where he established himself in the drug trade. More extended mention is made of him elsewhere in this work.

Kenneth William McKenzie was educated in the public schools of Summerville, where he also attended high school for two years. He then entered Ray's College of Pharmacy at Portland and, taking a great interest in his studies, pursued them most assiduously and was graduated with honors in the class of 1903. After his graduation he was employed as a clerk in his father's store at Lostine until 1907. He then worked for one year as drug clerk in La Grande and then began business on his own account in Wallowa, where he has since remained. His store is recognized as the most beautiful as well as the best equipped pharmacy in the town.

Mr. McKenzie was married at Ilo, Idaho, October 6, 1908, to Miss Carrie T. Jarnagin, a daughter of G. H. and Hattie Jarnagin. By this union one child has been born, now sixteen months old. In his political faith Mr. McKenzie is a republican and he was elected city treasurer of Wallowa in 1909. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, his membership being in Stanley Lodge, No. 113, A. F. & A. M. He also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, Kinsman Lodge, No. 87, of which he is commander. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, being among its most efficient workers. Among the business men of Wallowa there are few if any who have met with better success or who have established a more desirable reputation than has Mr. McKenzie. His trade, which is most satisfactory, is growing year by year as the population increases and as his pharmacy becomes better known throughout the surrounding country. He takes an active interest in civic, political and social affairs as well as conducts his business interests with great care, and his acquaintance, which is an extensive one, would be a compliment to any young business man.

HEMAN J. GEER. Conspicuous among the earlier pioneers of Oregon was Heman J. Geer, who with his father's family settled in this state in 1847. The father spent the remainder of his days here on a farm which he took up as government land at Butteville, near Champoeg. Heman J. Geer settled in Union county, and his last days were spent on a donation claim which he took up near Cove, passing away in 1904. He was the father of T. T. Geer, one of the governors of Oregon, also of Judd Geer who for many years has been state fruit inspector. He was one of the first nurserymen in eastern Oregon and conducted a very successful business. Heman J. Geer was born in Zeno, Ohio, in 1828, and died in Oregon in 1904. He was a son of Joel Geer a native of Connecticut and of old colonial stock representatives of the family still living in that state. The father removed to Ohio at an early day being a pioneer of that state. Later he removed to Illinois in pioneer days and resided there for eight years, settling in Illinois at the time Harrison and Tyler were running for the office of president. In 1847 the family removed to Oregon joining a wagon train composed of one hundred teams under Captain Palmer. The journey was made without any molestation by the Indians or any difficulty worthy of note, and the father settled at Butteville near Champoeg, where he took up a donation claim upon which he remained during the rest of his life, pursuing the vocation of farming.

Heman J. Geer received a good education in the schools of Ohio and Illinois and remained under the parental roof until after he attained his majority. In 1864 he settled in Canyon City where for two years he followed the business of mining. Then, after spending two years there, he removed to Cove where he took up government land, and with the exception of two years spent in Walla Walla made his home near Cove, which remained his place of residence until his death.

Mr. Geer was married in young manhood to Miss Eliza Duncan, whose parents were among the earliest settlers of the state, coming here in 1864. She passed away February 5, 1901, aged sixty-two years. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Geer were four children: T. T., the eldest, who was at one time governor of Oregon; Theodosia, now Mrs. Joseph Jaynes; Judd; and Blaine, who is now living in Walla Walla, Washington. Mr. Geer was always a stanch republican, and took an active interest in the political affairs of the day. He was appointed deputy sheriff in 1866 under his brother, Isaiah Geer, the first sheriff of Union county. The county at that time comprised a good deal more territory than it does at present and within its boundaries were many adventurers, miners of doubtful antecedents and desperadoes, making the sheriff's duties by no means a holiday affair. His tenure of office continued for more than a year and in the performance of his duties he was never found wanting.

JUDD GEER. The present efficient state fruit inspector for the fifth district, who has served in that capacity for thirteen years, his field covering thirty-five thousand square miles and comprising the counties of Umatilla, Union, Baker, Wallowa, Malheur, Grant and Harney, is Judd Geer, who has deputies in each of the counties in his district. He was born in February, 1868, on the homestead near Cove, a son of Heman J. and Eliza (Duncan) Geer. His boyhood days were there spent and he received a good education in the common schools of the neighborhood. Remaining under the parental roof until 1898, he then purchased a farm one mile north of Cove, and upon that has since made his home. He is there engaged in the nursery business, producing all sorts of fruit trees which find a ready market in eastern Oregon. He has long since been recognized as one of the authorities on nursery subjects and for the past thirteen years has been the state fruit inspector for the fifth district. He was brought up in the nursery business and, having given a great deal of time and attention to perfecting his knowledge of fruit tree propagation and fruit-growing, he has become extensively proficient in all branches of the nursery and fruit business. He reads a great deal and by visiting other nurseries and sections of the state keeps thoroughly abreast of the times. He considers the Cove district one of the finest fields for cherry-raising to be found in the west and such fruit is very conspicuous in all of the big fairs of the state.

Mr. Geer was married in December, 1888, to Miss Mary Holtby, a daughter of John and Henrietta (Conklin) Holtby, and a native of Rome, New York. Mrs. Geer was educated in the east, having been graduated from the Whitestown Seminary of Utica, New York, and after coming to Cove was for some time principal of its schools. Two children have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Geer, Ada and Pauline, both of whom are yet at home. Mr. Geer fraternally is connected with the Elks, being a prominent member of that order. He stands very high in his community and on account of his conspicuous public connections is well known throughout eastern Oregon.

FOREST EDWARD LANG. For many years during the life of Mr. Lang he was associated with the development of the agricultural and business interests of Coos county. He was a highly respected and universally trusted man among the people with whom he came in business and social contact. Mr. Lang was born in Jones county, Iowa, in the year 1861, and was the son of Alexander and Eliza A. Lang, who were the parents of two children, the elder being Frank A. Lang, a resident of Monterey, California. He is married and has a family of six children, his business being that of a contractor.

Forest Edward Lang crossed the plains with his parents, who settled in this state in the early '60s. The family located in the Coos bay country and there he received his education in the public schools at Marshfield. Shortly after completing his common-school education he started for himself in the livery business and for a number of years afterward continued to give his attention to that enterprise. Later in life he was employed by the E. B. Dean Lumber Company, in which position he remained for eight or nine consecutive years. After retiring from his position in the office of the Dean Lumber Company he purchased the Coos Bay Steam Laundry, which he successfully operated for four years and then returned as an employe to the Dean Lumber Company and later, on account of failing health, went to California. Change of residence, however, did not bring the relief his family had hoped for and while in that state he passed away on November 9, 1899.

Mr. Lang was united in marriage to Miss Lydia Merchant, a native of Oregon and a daughter of C. H. and Mary L. (Gunn) Merchant. Her father was a native of New York and her mother of New Bedford, Connecticut, and they emigrated to this state in 1857. In their family were sixteen children: Mary A., the wife of Roland Desmond, of California; Sarah, deceased; Lydia, who married Forest E. Lang, of this review; W. A. T., of Marshfield; Robert H., of California; B. T., who resides in Oakland, California; Charles W., of Marshfield, Oregon; Francis, of Bandon, Oregon; Ella and Fannie J., deceased; John

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

FOREST E. LANG

MRS. LYDIA C. LANG.

E., of Marshfield; Etta May, deceased; March Lillie, the wife of Cramer Baltford, of Oakland, California; Albert F., a ranchman of Bandon, Oregon; James M., of Beaver Hill, Oregon; and Ruby, deceased. The father of this unusually large family died on July 28, 1907, but the mother is still living and resides with her son, B. T. Merchant, at Oakland, California. To Mr. and Mrs. Lang five children were born: Florence M., the wife of Harry Leslie, who is engaged in the grocery business in Portland; Maud, the wife of Leonard Mauzey, of Marshfield; Robert H. and Mabel A., both at home with their mother; and Frances I., who is attending school in Marshfield.

Mr Lang was a member of the republican party, loyally following the standards of that political organization in national and state campaigns but never desiring political preferment. In his religious views he was liberal, and fraternally was associated with the Fraternal Union of America. His widow and family now reside in Marshfield at No. 275 Seventh street, South. Mr. Lang during his life faithfully devoted his attention and gave freely his entire strength to the interests and comfort of his wife and children. He was a popular citizen of the community in which he lived and distinguished for his integrity of business life and upright moral character in his association with all classes of people with whom he came in contact.

WILSON J. WOODS is one of the leading and influential republicans in Baker county, Oregon, and has gained recognition in this section as a conscientious, high minded and able official. In these days of corruption it is pleasant to record his public service, which, during the seventeen years of its continuance, has been unmarred by any suspicion of evil, his energies and activities having been constantly directed to the service of the people without regard to personal ends. He is now serving his seventh term as justice of the peace and is also acting as recorder and police judge. Aside from his political activities he is also prominent in business circles of the county. He conducts a large ice and cold storage enterprise, is interested in a collection agency and deals extensively in real estate, specializing in mining and farming land, and in these directions is distinguished by the same honorable and upright qualities which mark his public life. Mr. Woods is a native of Ireland, but has been in America since he was fifteen years of age. He was born in the county of Londonderry on the 21st of June, 1856, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Hayes) Woods, natives of the Emerald isle. Their marriage occurred in Ireland and they lived in that country until after the death of the mother of our subject. In 1871 John Woods came to the United States and located in Iowa where he dealt in stock, buying and selling high-grade horses and cattle. He was successful in this line of occupation and followed it until his death. He and his wife became the parents of nine children, three of whom are deceased. Francis is the oldest son and was born July 4, 1833, in Ireland. He is now living retired in Vail, Iowa, where for many years he followed general farming. William was born August 16, 1835, and grew to manhood and died in Ireland. Thomas was born September 28, 1837, grew to manhood and passed away in Iowa. John, whose birth occurred on December 26, 1839, lives in Clarence, Iowa. He is married and had two sons and three daughters, one of whom has passed away. For many years he engaged in general agricultural pursuits but is now living retired. Richard was born May 22, 1843, and makes his home in Baker, Oregon. He is a widower and has three children: Mrs. W. H. Ellis; Mrs. Charles Palmer and William J. who is a clerk in the employ of the American Brewing Company. Elizabeth Jane, whose birth occurred May 25, 1845, now makes her home with her brother Robert in Huntington. Robert was born June 19, 1849, and is now residing in Huntington. James was born on the 2d of October, 1851, and died in Baker, Oregon, in 1908, leaving a widow. His wife was in her maidenhood Miss Spillman. The youngest son born to this union is Wilson J. the subject of this review.

Wilson J. Woods was educated in the common schools of Ireland and pursued his studies in that country until he was fifteen years of age. After coming to the United States he entered the high school of Vail, Iowa, and followed the usual course. When he laid aside his books he engaged first in farming, operating a tract of land in Iowa in partnership with his brothers, for about five years. At the end of that time he became an independent agriculturist and specialized in the raising and breeding of high-grade stock. In 1883 accompanied by his brother Robert and his sister Elizabeth Jane, he started for Oregon, traveling to San Francisco by rail and thence to Portland by water. From Portland to Pendleton he again journeyed by rail and from Pendleton to Weatherby by stage. Fourteen days were spent upon the journey from Iowa to Oregon, which can now be accomplished in three days. Upon his arrival in Weatherby the two brothers engaged in the stock raising business and carried on general farming upon Burnt river. There they remained until 1884, and were prosperous and successful in their various undertakings. In the meantime Mr. Woods had become interested in the general merchandise business, conducting a store of this character at Durkee, Oregon, in partnership with Joseph McKay. This enterprise was conducted until 1892, when our subject was appointed by President Harrison as postmaster of Durkee. He held this office for three or more years but was obliged to resign finally in order to give his entire attention to his rapidly growing stock raising business on Snake river. His residence in Huntington dates from 1894, in which year he established himself in the general merchandise business in this city. He was successful for a short time but lost his entire fortune in a disastrous fire which occurred in 1895. In the fall of the same year Mr. Woods disposed of his stock and land and started in the ice and cold storage business with, which he has been identified, meeting with increasing success since that time. He is interested in other important commercial enterprises, conducting a collection agency and a large real-estate business in Huntington. Progressive ideas and an open and liberal mind combined with personal experience in business details are the basis of his success. He is a valuable addition to his community by reason of the standards of activity which he advocates and by high personal qualities of citizenship. His business affairs, however, form only one of his many interests. He is one of the most prominent and influential figures in local republican politics at the present time, having commenced his public career in 1898 when he was elected to the office of justice of the peace. He has now served for fourteen consecutive years and is in his seventh term. His field of activity is one of the most important precincts in Baker county and has a boundary of ten square miles. It includes the junction of the Oregon, Washington Railway & Navigation Railroad and the Oregon Short Line. It extends down the Snake river parallel with the Northwestern railroad. Owing to the number of transportation companies operating in this district many criminal cases have come before Mr. Woods for settlement and he has been connected with much litigation along this line. Only one of his cases has ever been appealed to the circuit court and in this instance his decision was sustained. He has been identified with many cases in which the parties to the dispute were bound over to appear before the grand jury and almost always that body has returned a true bill. While Mr. Woods was serving as justice of the peace he was appointed by the county court of Baker county during the administration of Judge Wallace Trevillion to the position of road supervisor for part of district 16 and all of districts 17 and 18, covering an entire tract of land about forty-two miles long. While Mr. Woods held this office Union and Baker counties were divided and the Panhandle of Union county was attached to Baker. He superintended and planned the construction of the portion of the bridge at the mouth of the Powder river for which the citizens of Baker county were responsible. He also did a large amount of work in road construction and improvement in the Snake river district changing an undeveloped pack trail into a modern thoroughfare. At many places it was necessary to blast the rocks in order to widen the road and the enterprise was altogether a remarkable feat in engineering. Mr. Woods is also serving at the present time as city recorder for Huntington and this office embodies the duties of city clerk and police judge.

Our subject has been twice married. On the 5th of December, 1878, he wedded Miss Esther Angeline Archard of Marshall county, Iowa, a daughter of Rufus Hayes Archard, a prominent farmer and general merchant in that city. For several years he served as county commissioner and was representative of the highest standards of political and commercial morality. His wife was in her maidenhood Miss Angeline Simmons. They became the parents of seven children. Three sons and one daughter are now teaching school and another son is a principal in the public schools at Sioux City. After the death of his first wife Rufus Archard married again and by his second wife had two children. His son is now residing in North Dakota and his daughter in Fremont, Nebraska.

Mr. Woods' first wife passed away in Huntington in August, 1895. She and her husband were the parents of five children. Bertie died in infancy. Walter Eward was born on the 15th of October, 1882, and was educated in the Baker county schools. He married when he was twenty-two years of age Miss Curue, who has passed away. He made his home for many years in Portland and is now engaged in the mercantile business in Huntington. Della was born December 6, 1884, and for the past four years has been a bookkeeper for the Portland Tool Works Company. Josephine May was born on the 10th of June, 1887. She married R. C. Mack, who was formerly engaged in the drug business but who is now in the employ of a local railroad. The youngest son born to Mr. Woods by his first wife is Wilson Archard, whose birth occurred December 31, 1892. He was educated in the public schools of Huntington and is now active in the mercantile business in that city. Mr. Woods second union was with Miss Libby Hope, a daughter of William and Elizabeth Hope of Minnesota. Mrs. Woods is the third in a family of six children. The second child born to Mr. and Mrs. William Hope is William, who lives in Washington where he carries on general farming. Harry is a member of the police force in La Grande. He has been twice married and had two children by his first wife. Margaret married William Huddleston, a retired farmer and stockman of Frontenac, Minnesota. Mary married M. H. Williams, a capitalist of North Yakima, Washington. Emma became the wife of Perry Owens, who carries on general farming in Wallowa county, Oregon. They have three sons and two daughters.

Fraternally Mr. Woods belonged to the Queen City Lodge, of Baker, Oregon, Woodmen of the World at Baker, Oregon, but later transferred his membership to Huntington Lodge, Camp No. 120, Circle No. 213. He has been identified with this organization for the past twenty-two years. He also holds membership in Baker City Lodge, No. 978, Loyal Order of Moose, of which body he is a charter member. He is today one of the most representative, enterprising and substantial business men and politicians in Baker county. He is interested in local growth and development and does his utmost to promote the progress, upbuilding and expansion of the community in which he resides. He was for a long time president of the Commercial League of Huntington and although he has resigned this position has virtually charge of its duties, since he attends to all the correspondence relating to business of this kind. His ice and cold storage enterprise is expanding rapidly, his business amounting to twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars annually. All his ice is cut and shipped from the North Powder river about ninety miles from Huntington and several hundred tons are disposed of each year. He is an able, consistent and thoroughly upright business man and upon these qualities, combined with his industry and discrimination, he has founded a gratifying commercial prosperity. He is also a true type of the modern public official, shrewd and keen, with a knowledge of values, and appreciation of changing conditions and an ability to cope with the difficulties of modern political life. He is liberal and broad minded, anxious for his own rights and careful of those of others but unquestioned in his integrity and honorable in all his methods which are the basis of a distinct and substantial prosperity.

JAMES DANIEL LAIRD. From the age of fourteen years, dependent upon his own resources and recognizing the fact that honorable success is the outcome of unfaltering industry and perseverance, James Daniel Laird, as the years have gone by, has gradually worked his way upward and is today the owner of a valuable farm property. He is also owner of stage lines and in short is one of the prominent and well known men of his community. He was born April 8, 1859, a son of James Laird, who was numbered among the early settlers of the Brewster valley. After the Coos Bay wagon road was washed out by a flood the father helped maintain the road and the mail service. Throughout his entire life he was actively interested in public welfare and devoted much energy to keeping Coos Bay in close connection with the outside world and the onward march of civilization.

James Daniel Laird, born in Utah, has ever been interested in the welfare and development of his community and has, like his father, taken an active part in its upbuilding. His early youth was spent upon the old home farm and when fourteen years of age he started out to earn his own living, being employed at farm labor until he was thirty years of age. He then purchased three hundred and seventy-nine acres of land, upon which he remained for two years. He later sold that property and for five years rented farms, after which he purchased his present place of one hundred and sixty acres which was previously known as the William Fluke property and borders on the Coos Bay wagon road. He has practically made the place what it is today, adding thereto many improvements in the way of modern machinery and substantial buildings. He has an attractive home and ample barns and outbuildings for the shelter of grain and stock. In 1902 he purchased a stage line operating from his home to Marshfield, which he conducted for one year with the mail contract and which he then sold. In 1909, he again bought the line, took the mail contract and has operated it for the past three years. He has made his home a stage station, and there cares for the travelers on the line. He has in addition been employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company in keeping up the telegraph line between Roseburg and Marshfield for the past twenty-one years. A telegraph station is maintained in his home, his wife acting as operator.

On the 2d of June, 1881, James Daniel Laird was united in marriage to Miss Nancy Belle Harry, his stepsister, and to them have been born nine children. Binger Herman, born October 9, 1882, resides at Roseburg with his wife and daughter Gertrude. Ethel, born October 6, 1884, is at home. Eva, born July 3, 1886, is learning telegraphy and telephone operating. Mildred, born February 9, 1892, lives with her parents. Ivan C., born July 22, 1894, is the only boy in the state of Oregon who completed the eighth grade before reaching the age of sixteen years with the record of never missing school a day from the time when he started. Clifford, born July 14, 1901, and Otto Kenneth, born June 2, 1904, attend school. Carl Elsworth, born December 15, 1908, is at home, and Jesse is deceased.

James Daniel Laird is a socialist but takes comparatively little interest in politics aside from casting his vote for the candidates whom he deems best qualified for office. The cause of education, however, finds in him a champion and for several terms he has served as school director and school clerk. For sixteen years he has held membership with the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He has a wide acquaintance throughout this part of the state and his well spent life and sterling traits of character have gained for him the warm regard and confidence of the community, and placed him among those who have contributed much to the improvement of this district.

JAMES H. McHALEY, vice president of the First National Bank of Heppner, Morrow county, is also interested in the First National Bank of Canyon City and is vice president of the Morrow Milling Company. Moreover, he is one of the extensive landowners of Grant county, where for nearly a quarter of a century he conducted large stock raising interests. The importance of his business connections places him among the leading and representative citizens of his part of the state. His activities are of a character that contribute to public prosperity and the upbuilding of the different towns in which his interests center as well as to his individual success.

James H. McHaley was born in Salem, Oregon, July 1, 1857, a son of John and Sarah Russell McHaley. The father crossed the plains in 1847 and settled near Salem in which city he afterward made his home. Both the father and mother of our subject have passed away. James H. McHaley pursued his education in the district schools of Marion county until he attained the age of thirteen years, after which he followed various occupations at different points in Oregon until 1879. In that year he settled in Grant county and engaged in the stock raising business, with which he was connected for nearly twenty-five years, directing his interests in a manner that resulted in winning for him substantial success. While Mr. McHaley engaged in business in Grant county his family were residents of Heppner a portion of each year for fifteen years, this affording his daughter opportunity to attend school there. He may thus he regarded as a pioneer of both Morrow and Grant counties. He owns twenty-five hundred acres of land in Grant county but has practically retired from active business, although he is still financially interested in various enterprises, with which he also has official connection. He is a stockholder in the First National Bank of Canyon City and vice president of the First National Bank of Heppner and is also vice president and one of the directors of the Morrow Milling Company. In these connections his sound judgment constitutes a valuable element in successful management.

James H. McHaley was married in Marion county, Oregon, May 24, 1868, to Miss Mary D. Gibson, a daughter of Guyan and Sarah (Taylor) Gibson, both deceased, who were pioneers of Marion county, Oregon, and crossed the plains in 1850. To Mr. and Mrs. McHaley two children were born, Acel Angus and Dudley Dean, but both have passed away. They have an adopted daughter, Amy, who resides with them.

James H. McHaley is a prosperous, honorable and influential citizen of Morrow county, actively interested in affairs pertaining to the welfare and progress of this portion of the state. He is possessed of keen business discrimination and unusual ability. At the age of thirteen years—the time of his mother's death—he was left without a home or financial resources. He has since made his own way in the world, and entirely unaided, without friends and without money, started out to earn a living. Each step in his career has been a forward one and from one year to another he has advanced until he is today one of the wealthy residents of Morrow county. Moreover, he justly merits the American title of a self-made man, with all that the term implies concerning indefatigable industry and unassailable business integrity.

CHARLES DORA is the owner of a fine two hundred acre farm in Josephine county, near Merlin, and has one of the best peach orchards in the Rogue river valley, his fruit taking the first prize in the state fair. He was born in Canada, March 4, 1850, a son of Louis and Mary (Lebell) Dora, both natives of Canada.

Charles Dora, who is one of twelve children in his parents' family, after receiving a common-school education started out in life on his own account at the age of eighteen years, migrating to Reno, Nevada, in the vicinity of which he worked as a timber cutter for two years. He then removed to California and after working there in the sawmills for two years removed to Oregon and took up a homestead which he later sold. He afterward acquired two hundred acres of land in Josephine county and property in Merlin. He is now one of the recognized peach growers of the Rogue river valley.

Mr. Dora was married to Rhoda Chanler, now deceased, by whom he had one son, George. On July 1, 1899, he married Mrs. Julia Ann Every, who had three children by a former marriage, Queen, Richard and Allison. Mr. Dora is a republican, being one of the representative members of his party. He has long been one of the highly esteemed citizens of Josephine county, where he is known as being a business man of ability and a fruit-grower of unusual skill. All of his dealings are characterized by industry and fairness and he has a large number of close business and personal friends who greatly value their acquaintance with him.

DR. JOHN B. GREGORY is numbered among the younger members of the professional circles of Wallowa, but by close application and unremitting energy he has already won considerable prominence. He is careful and conscientious, making best use of the talents nature has given him, and he now stands among the more capable physicians of the city. His birth occurred in Alabama, on the 1st of December, 1886, his parents being John B. and Susan K. (Cain) Gregory, both of whom were natives of Alabama. The Gregory and Cain families have long been prominent throughout the south. John B. Gregory, Sr., was a minister in the Methodist Episcopal church and has filled various pulpits in the south for twenty-five years. His death occurred in Birmingham, in February, 1900, he having been pastor of the Methodist church of that city. Mrs. Gregory is still living and resides in Birmingham.

Dr. John B. Gregory was educated in the public schools and at the North Alabama Conference College, which is now known as the Birmingham College. Afterward, in 1903, he entered the Birmingham Medical College, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1907. For about a year and a half after graduating he practiced in Birmingham, but in February, 1909, came to Oregon, locating at Wallowa. At that time his uncle, Dr. V. B. Gregory, was located in this city, and he associated himself with his uncle. In November, 1910, they erected and established the Wallowa Hospital which is one of the most valuable institutions of the city. In April of the next year Dr. V. B. Gregory left Wallowa and removed to Roswell, New Mexico, where he is now located. Since his uncle's removal from this city Dr. John B. Gregory has had full charge of the hospital work and has met with a success which attests his ability and his worth to Wallowa. In the intervening three years since coming to this city he has built up an extensive practice, and because of the professional ability which he exhibits he is recognized as one of the most able and capable practitioners in Wallowa valley.

April 1, 1911, Dr. Gregory was married to Miss Margaret Boner, a daughter of G. W. Boner, then a resident of Wallowa, and a

CHARLES DORA

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

pioneer settler of the Wallowa valley. At present he is residing in Turlock, California.

In politics Dr. Gregory casts his vote with the democracy. He holds membership in Stanley Lodge, No. 113, of the Masonic order and both he and his wife are members of Jessica Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. He is also a member of the Alabama State Medical Society, the Oregon State Medical Society, the Eastern Oregon District Medical Society and the American Medical Association. His work has already proven of vital importance to the profession and the honor and success he has won are well merited.

WILLIAM FARRE, who has the distinction of being the oldest land register in the employ of the United States government in the state of Oregon, was appointed to his present position in Burns, first in 1902, and was twice reappointed, in 1907 and 1911. He has proved himself capable and efficient in the handling of the many intricate affairs connected with his office and is well known throughout the state of Oregon as an honorable and upright man. He was born on the Isle of Lolland, Denmark, in December, 1863, and is a son of Valdemar and Cathrine (Joug) Farre, both natives of that country. His grandfather, Olavius Farre, served in the Danish army and witnessed the battle of Copenhagen, April 2, 1802. In his younger days he followed the sea and in this occupation his son, the father of our subject, also was engaged for some years of his life, and held the title of captain in his youth. He was later employed as a teacher in the service of the Danish government. His wife is still living in her native country.

William Farre was the second of a family of eight children and received his education in the public schools of Denmark. This he supplemented by a course in languages and mathematics under private tutors. He remained in his native land until he was twenty years of age and in 1883 crossed the Atlantic to America. He first settled in Providence, Rhode Island, where he remained for six months. In October, 1883, he settled in Oregon, locating in Wasco county, where he engaged in the cultivation of the soil and in various other occupations for some time. Subsequently he entered the mercantile business at Antelope and continued in this for several years. He interrupted his business at Antelope by a journey to South America but upon his return home again took up mercantile life and was employed as a bookkeeper. In this capacity he remained until 1891, when he removed to Grant county as assistant to M. A. Moody, who was the administrator of the Murray Brothers estate. Mr. Farre was active in this connection until the business relating to the administration was closed up. He continued his association with Mr. Moody for some time in the management of a tract of land which the latter had bought in this section. In 1897 Mr. Farre left the employ of Mr. Moody and went to Canyon City where he engaged in mining for several years. His next position was to become manager of the Hazeltine Company at Canyon City, where he remained until 1902, when he was appointed for the first time to his present position as register of the United States land office at Burns. He has continued in this position for ten years and his record as an able, systematic and skillful land register is without equal in this section of the country. He secured his reappointment in 1907 and continued the splendid work which he had begun. He was appointed again in 1911 and is now serving his third term. His work has been systematic and thorough and marked by a shrewd appreciation of western conditions.

October 24, 1895, Mr. Farre was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Cozad, a native of California. She is the daughter of T. J. Cozad, formerly a resident of Canyon City and one of the pioneer settlers of southern Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Farre are the parents of one child, Sarah Kathrine.

William Farre is very prominent in the fraternal circles of Burns. He belongs to Burns Lodge, No. 97, A. F. & A. M., having been a Mason since 1889. He holds membership in the Royal Arch chapter at Canyon City and is a member of the A. O. U. W. in Burns, and also of the Knights of Pythias at Canyon City. He brings to the conduct of his affairs as a government official a highly trained and cultivated intellect, a mind capable of grasping details and of systematizing involved business. He has shown himself honorable and faithful in all the relations of his life.

RICHARD DANBY has been prominently engaged in the stock business in Grant county for many years and is now known as one of the representative and enterprising citizens of his section. He formerly engaged in general ranching and in the raising of all kinds of high-grade stock but is now specializing in the breeding of mules. He was born on the Isle of Corfu in the Mediterranean, in November, 1860, and is a son of Richard and Jane (Sweeney) Danby. His father was one of the prominent military men of his time. He was born in England in 1822 and began his army service at the age of twenty when he enlisted in the First East Norfolk Battalion of the Ninth Regiment and entered upon the term of service which lasted for twenty four years. He served as a color sergeant during the Indian mutiny of 1845 to 1846 and was also conspicuous for his bravery in the Crimean war of 1854-56. The last five years of his service were spent on the staff of the Household Militia. He received a number of medals for personal courage as well as other decorations for the efficiency of his military service. He was shot many times but his last years, which he spent in California, were marred by his sufferings from his old Crimean wounds. In recognition of his brave and conspicuous service an exception was made in the English laws and he received his pension from the British government during his residence in the United States. He died in 1896 at the age of seventy four years.

Richard Danby spent his boyhood days with the Ninth Regiment with which his father was identified and came to America with his parents. They located in Canada about 1869 but on account of the severe climate the father removed to California where Richard received his early education in the public schools. In 1888 he came to Oregon and located in the John Day valley where he engaged in stock-raising and general farming with much success. He is now located on the Luce homestead about two miles from John Day. His holdings are on the river and comprise five hundred acres of land which he uses principally as stock pastures and meadows. At one time during his career he engaged in general stock-raising and ran from three hundred to five hundred head of graded cattle and horses. He has, however, abandoned the general field of activity and is now specializing in the raising of mules. He has an expert knowledge of the details of his business and is constantly adding to it. He thoroughly understands everything connected with the breeding and care of stock and his success is founded upon thorough efficiency and intelligent and constant labor.

October 9, 1891, Mr. Danby was united in marriage to Miss Alma Luce, a daughter of William and Maria D. Luce. Mrs. Danby died May 10, 1910. Mr. Danby's ranch is now located on the old Luce homestead two miles from John Day and is one of the model stock farms of the district. Mr. Danby gives his political allegiance to the republican party but has never taken a very active part in public affairs. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows but beyond this connection has no fraternal affiliations. His career has always been upright and honorable and in his business activities he has always been dominated by the memory of the true and courageous life of his father and by the constant endeavor to live up to the high standard set him in his youth.

JAMES GRANT is proprietor of a fine farm of two hundred acres located on the Coquille river in Coos county, Oregon, and also owns a quarter interest in another tract of three hundred acres. He is a native son of Oregon, born in Coos county, January 4, 1873. He is a son of O. J. and Roana Grant, the former a native of Michigan and the latter of Oregon. They were married in this state, whither the father had come in 1861, making the journey across the plains with ox teams. He settled in Coos county, where he later proved up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres on the south fork of the Coquille river which was his home until his death in 1911. His wife died in 1879 and both are buried in Neal cemetery. They were the parents of three children: James, the subject of this sketch; and John and Zack, who are both residents of Coos county. After his first wife's death O. J. Grant was again married. His second wife was Miss Sarah C. Neal, a native of California, and to this union one son, Glenn, was born, who is now a resident of Coos county. The elder Mr. Grant's second wife died in 1897 and she also is buried in Neal cemetery. The father of our subject was during his life one of the prominent agriculturists of the settlement in which he resided and a well known figure in pioneer development. He was a democrat but paid very little attention to public affairs and never sought office. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in the local lodge.

James Grant received his education in the public schools of Coos county and remained at home until he was nineteen years of age. During his childhood he assisted his father in the work of the farm and early gained a knowledge of general agriculture in all its aspects. When he was nineteen years of age he started working in the logging camps in the vicinity in which he lived and has followed this line of occupation at irregular intervals ever since. At the present time he owns two hundred acres of land on the Coquille river, to which he is giving his personal supervision. He also has a quarter interest in three hundred additional acres and this tract he is also cultivating. It is located on the south fork of the Coquille river, eleven miles above Myrtle Point, and is a fertile and productive tract.

In his political views James Grant is a republican and has served for some time as a member of the school board. He belongs to Myrtle Point Lodge, No. 150, I. O. O. F., and is well known in that organization. He brings to the public phases of his life the same energy and discriminating judgment which have made him a successful farmer, and he is well known in the county in which he resides as an enterprising, public-spirited and honorable man.

JOSEPH V. WILHELM, M. D., a member of the medical firm of Miller & Wilhelm, was born in Iowa, July 4, 1877, a son of J. L. and Mary (Crocker) Wilhelm, both of whom are now living at Mattoon, Illinois. The father was born in North Carolina, and the mother in Austria, their marriage occurring in Illinois. The father made a life business of agricultural pursuits but is now living retired. His family consisted of four children, the brother and sisters of our subject being as follows: Ora L., in the government service at Washington, D. C.; Daisy, who married G. W. Ellis; and Nannie, now Sister Mary Philippa, of Servite Order.

Dr. Joseph V. Wilhelm was educated in the public schools of Shelby county, Illinois, after which he took a commercial course at Austin College at Effingham, Illinois. After completing that course he took up educational work, teaching one year. He then became a stenographer in Chicago, where he worked for one year, and then followed the same vocation for one year in Mattoon, Illinois. He was next employed in the same capacity by the government in the navy department at Washington from 1903 until 1908. While in the government service he studied medicine at the George Washington University, at Washington, D. C., from which he was graduated in 1908. He then served as interne in the University Hospital of that city, coming from there in January, 1911, to Oregon, where he took the state medical examination at Portland on January 10. Passing a satisfactory examination he immediately settled in Condon and expects to make this his future field.

He was married at Washington, D. C., September 16, 1908, to Miss Florence Morrill, a daughter of Silas H. and Mary B. Morrill. The wife lived for only one year after her marriage, passing away October 9, 1909, at Seattle, Washington. Since Dr. Wilhelm settled in Condon he has by his skill in medical practice and by his ready faculty of forming and holding acquaintances built up a very satisfactory practice. He is popular in the professional circles of the community and enjoys a most enviable reputation in business and social circles.

WILLIAM J. MILLER, M. D., a member of the medical firm of Miller & Wilhelm, of Condon, Oregon, was born in Camden, Michigan, February 1, 1880, a son of Theodore and Louisa (Biery) Miller. The father was born in Ohio while the mother's native state is Michigan, where they were married. The father followed the drug business through the years of his business activity but is now living retired.

Dr. Miller was educated in the public and high schools of Angola, Indiana, to which place the family moved when he was four years of age. After finishing high school he entered the Tri State College at Angola, from which he was graduated in 1903 with the degree of B. S. He then took up the profession of school teaching and was engaged in that line in Indiana for three years. He next came to Oregon where he taught in Lane and Grant counties for two years, after which he entered the University of Oregon and was graduated from the medical department of that institution in 1910. He spent one year as interne in the Good Samaritan Hospital at Portland and then practiced at Seaside for several months. He then came to Condon where he entered into partnership with Dr. Joseph V. Wilhelm, under the firm name of Miller & Wilhelm. In his political views Dr. Miller is a republican and although he takes commendable interest in political matters as they effect the county, state and nation, he is not a politician in the ordinary sense of the term. Since coming to Condon he has become very popular as a medical practitioner and exhibits by the success which he has in his practice the thoroughness with which he studied medicine and the aptitude which he shows for his chosen life work. He is affable in his intercourse with those with whom he comes in contact, has made many close friends and has a large acquaintance. His standing in the community is second to none and he is universally respected both as a physician and citizen.

MRS. MARJORIE TROWBRIDGE, the wife of Bradford C. Trowbridge, of John Day, is a native of Banffshire, Scotland, where she was reared and educated. Early in life she decided to come to the United States and accordingly in 1868 crossed the Atlantic with the Hall brothers and continued her journey across the American continent to Oregon, where she settled in the John Day valley. She was possessed of the true western spirit and readily turned her attention to anything she could find to do, being capable to fit into any situation. One enterprise of which she made a particular success was the hotel business in Canyon City, with which she was prominently identified for many years. The hotel which she conducted was of such a character and was run on such hospitable lines that it became famous, and as its landlady she formed the acquaintance of most of the prominent men of the state of Oregon.

Mrs. Trowbridge was first married to John Herburger and by that union were born four children: Bradford C., of Bear Valley, who is a candidate for the office of sheriff; Margaret C., the wife of A. R. O'Brien, of Marshfield, Oregon, editor of the Evening Record; and John M. and Henry F., both ranchmen of Grant county. Her second marriage was with Bradford C. Trowbridge, of whom extended mention is made elsewhere in this work.

Mrs. Trowbridge is well known in Grant county, where she has a very large circle of close personal friends. She takes an active interest in social affairs of her community and is prominent among the pioneer residents of John Day valley. The executive ability which she has always possessed has served her in good stead not only when keeping a public house of entertainment but also in the conduct of her home. She is one of the remarkable women of the county and is held in high esteem by all who know her.

ULRIC S. DODGE. Prominent among the energetic, enterprising and successful business men of Portland is Ulric S. Dodge, secretary and manager of the Pacific Stove & Range Manufacturing Company. He was born at Shinglehouse, Pennsylvania, June 11, 1874, a son of George W. and Emma (Parmenter) Dodge. The father, who was born in the state of New York, is still living at Shinglehouse, where he has been engaged in merchandising for many years. He is well known in political circles there, is a stalwart advocate of republican principles and has been chosen by his fellow townsmen to represent his district in the Pennsylvania legislature. He is prominent in Masonry, having attained the Knight Templar degree of the York Rite, the thirty second degree of the Scottish Rite and has also crossed the sands of the desert with the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

At the usual age Ulric S. Dodge began his education in the public schools and was also a high school student at Olean, New York. Starting out in the business world on his own account, he was associated with his father in commercial undertakings for about twelve years but, believing that the far west offered better opportunities, he decided to come to Oregon in 1905 and soon after reaching the Pacific coast settled at Celilo, where he became superintendent of construction of the Celilo canal. He there remained for four years, at the end of which time he became identified with the movement that resulted in the organization of the Pacific Stove & Range Manufacturing Company of St. Johns, which was established and incorporated in February, 1909, with William G. Brown, president, J. H. Cook, vice president, and U. S. Dodge, secretary. These officers still continue in their respective positions and two years ago Mr. Dodge was made manager also. They erected their present plant at St. Johns, where they employ on an average of about twenty-five men. The output of their factory is sold to dealers in Oregon, Washington and Idaho. They were the first in the northwest to build steel ranges with the exception of the penitentiary at Salem. What the state needs is more manufactories and theirs is one of the active, aggressive business enterprises which is constituting a factor for prosperity of the community as well as a source of profit for the individual stockholders.

Ulric S. Dodge was married in 1897 to Miss Mary Neil, a daughter of M. Neil, of Dayton, Ohio. Fraternally he is connected with Sharon Lodge, No. 598, F. & A. M., of which he is a past master, and also with the Pennsylvania Consistory. He belongs to the Elks lodge at The Dalles. He is a self-made man, whose success is attributable entirely to his own labors, his keen perception, his business sagacity and his unfaltering industry. He is a splendid representative of that type of men who are the real builders of the state—men who are utilizing the natural advantages and the opportunities of the northwest in founding here a great commercial empire.

JOHN H. HALL has been mayor of Freewater since 1908. During his administration of this office his services and the measures he favored and enacted have been so vigorous and advantageous to the interests of the people as to give him the reputation of one of the most capable officials in this part of Oregon. He is a native of Tennessee, born February 26, 1876, and is a son of Samuel E. and Belle D. (Maden) Hall, natives of Washington county, Tennessee, where they still reside. The father is the owner of the old Hall homestead, an estate which has been in the Hall family continuously for three or four generations.

John H. Hall was reared at home and acquired his education in the public schools of Tennessee. In March, 1898, he removed to the state of Washington, locating in Walla Walla where he secured work for a short time on the ranch of Senator Cox. Subsequently he was made the agent of the Pacific Coast Elevator Company at Hadley and continued his relationship with that company for a period of two years. At the end of this time, having severed this connection, he removed to Freewater, accepting the position of manager of the Peacock Flouring Mills and continued to be so employed until the organization of the J. L. Elain bank of Freewater. He became general business manager of this financial institution which position he retained until failing health required a change of occupation and he accordingly resigned in the fall of 1907. After discontinuing his relation with the bank he became interested in the grocery business in this city and conducted a store for one year. He then exchanged this property for a body of desirable land near town and this transaction eventually led him to devote much of his time to buying, selling and exchanging real estate and dealing in farm lands and other real property in Umatilla and surrounding counties. He owns one hundred and sixty acres of highly improved fruit land, all of which is set out in select apple trees. It is one of the largest and most valuable apple orchards, individually owned, in the Walla Walla valley.

John H. Hall returned to Washington county, Tennessee, in May, 1902, where he married Miss Laura E. Hale, a native of that state. To Mr. and Mrs. Hall two children have been born, Herbert P. and Herald H.

John H. Hall is a republican and one of the leaders of his party in local affairs. In 1908 he was elected mayor of Freewater and in this capacity he has since served the public. His administrations have been distinguished for their aggressiveness and accomplishments in the material and moral interests of the people of Freewater. During his incumbency in this office an efficient system of public water works has been installed and an electric lighting plant established. He became the leader of a movement for the purification of public morals and proceeded in a way so vigorous and uncompromising as to result in the elimination of card and gaming tables and near-beer public drinking places. With their passing the undesirable element of the population disappeared and a new era of better and cleaner life dawned upon the city. Mayor Hall has received the unqualified approval and deep gratitude of the people interested in the betterment and uplift of moral standards.

John H. Hall is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and Mrs. Hall adheres to the teachings of the Christian denomination. Both take a laudable interest in the religious life of the community. Mr. Hall manifests concern in the business development of Freewater by his membership in the Commercial Club of which he is treasurer. The beneficent principles of the Masonic craft have influenced his life's actions. He is a member of Milton Lodge, No. 84, A. F. & A. M.

John H. Hall's character and public work justly entitle him to rank high among the men of moral force of this state. In addition to services rendered the public in the conduct of city affairs, he can always be relied upon to follow or lead to successful issue any practical measure having for its object the moral uplift and betterment of the social life of his county.

JOHN J. CLINKINBEARD is one of the well known citizens of Coos River, Coos county, Oregon, where he is successfully engaged in the cultivation of a large farm of five hundred and fifty acres. He was born in Portland, Oregon, January 9, 1852, and is the son of James L. and Mary Ann (Holman) Clinkinbeard, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Missouri. The father emigrated to Oregon in 1846 and the mother

MR. AND MRS. J. J. CLINKINBEARD

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

in 1845. Shortly after their marriage they removed to Portland and later in 1853 they established their home in Douglas county where the father was engaged in farming during all his life. The mother died February 4, 1879, and the father on the same day in 1897 at the age of seventy-six years. They were the parents of thirteen children, of whom ten are living: John J., of this review; Mrs. Sarah E. Piper of Coos county, Oregon; Viola E., the wife of W. S. Vanderburgh of San Francisco, California; Mary Ellen, who is the widow of E. W. Sprague, of San Francisco, California; Susan Warren, the widow of E. T. Woodruff of Douglas county, Oregon; Lavelle F., who married Clinton Newby, a resident of Roy, Washington; Perry Elsworth, a resident of Los Angeles, California; Alice O., who is engaged in school teaching in Roseburg, Oregon; James D., of Coos county, this state; and Lucy L., the wife of Morton Woodruff of Roseburg, Oregon.

John J. Clinkinbeard was reared in his parents' home and received his education at the Umpqua Academy at Wilbur, Oregon. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-one years of age and then took up work as a surveyor in the employ of the government. In 1880 he purchased eighty acres of land located on Daniel's creek in Coos county where he lived for fifteen years. In 1900 he purchased a farm of three hundred and twenty acres to which he has made additions until he and his wife are now joint owners of five hundred and fifty acres of highly developed land located on Daniel's creek.

Mr. Clinkinbeard was united in marriage August 29, 1875, to Miss Philura Vanderburgh, a native of Dubuque, Iowa, and a daughter of John K. and Emily (Collver) Vanderburgh. She completed her education in the Umpqua Academy and was engaged in teaching school for five years. Her parents came to Oregon in 1864, settling first on the Coos river in Coos county where they purchased land and there continued to live for many years. They later moved to Lane county where the father died in 1890, at the age of seventy-four years, and the mother died in 1896 at the age of eighty-two years. They were the parents of seven children, five of whom are yet living: W. S., of California; Philura, the wife of the subject of this review; Darius W., who resides in Florence, Lane county, Oregon; Charles, also a resident of Florence; Mrs. Charlotte Hawley, who resides in Post, Crook county, Oregon; Mrs. Carrie Linsley, who resided in Florence, Lane county, this state and is now deceased; and Robert, who died at Forest Grove, Oregon.

To Mr. and Mrs. Clinkinbeard, six children have been born: George, born October 10, 1883, who has a high-school and business college education and resides at home; Anna D., born on May 15, 1885, who has a high-school education and is engaged in school teaching; Jay, born April 15, 1887, who is a graduate of the high school and resides at home; Karl S., who was born on February 17, 1889, and is a graduate of the high school; Ada, born January 3, 1891, who has a high-school education and resides at home; and Ralph, who was born February 18, 1893, and is a pupil in the high school.

Mr. Clinkinbeard is affiliated with the republican party and has been a member of the board of commissioners for Coos county. He has fraternal relations with the Masonic lodge and is a member of the Knight Templars. He is also a member of the Woodmen of the World. Mrs. Clinkinbeard and her family are members of the United Brethren church. John J. Clinkinbeard is one of the enterprising citizens of Coos county and a man who is held in high esteem by his friends and acquaintances throughout this portion of the state.

JACOB M. SCHMELTZER. Hood River is in many instances indebted to its more recently acquired citizens for a number of ably conducted business enterprises. Such a concern is the Hood River Abstract Company which was organized by Jacob M. Schmeltzer on the 1st of March, 1908, and which is located in the Heibronner building. Mr. Schmeltzer was born in Manteno, Illinois, on the 14th of August, 1878, his parents being J. Foster and Augusta (Elyea) Schmeltzer. The father's birth occurred in western Pennsylvania on the 11th of June, 1847, but at an early age he removed to Illinois where he has spent his active career largely in agricultural pursuits, and for the last twenty years followed the profession of civil engineer. The mother's death occurred when her son Jacob M. was but a child. To them four children were born: Louie, who died in infancy; Jonathan Lewis, who is residing in Manteno, Illinois; Jacob M., the subject of this sketch; and Mary Esther, who is the wife of Clayton Fletcher.

Jacob M. Schmeltzer received his education in the district school of Manteno and subsequently pursued a two years' course in the high school. After finishing his education he assisted his father on the home farm until he was about twenty-five years of age. Leaving home on the 19th of May, 1903, he set out for Oregon and arrived in Portland on the 21st of November, 1903. Instead of locating at once permanently he spent almost a year visiting various points of interest investigating the business opportunities of the state, but on the 4th of October, 1904, he took up his residence at Hood River. His first employment was with John Leland Henderson. After serving as assistant for a short time he purchased certain branches of the business and organized the Hood River Abstract Company. In addition to this business he also gives his personal supervision to a fruit ranch of which he is part owner, and which he has improved to a high degree, and is also considering the further development of another tract of almost wholly unimproved land of which he is the owner.

On the 21st of August, 1907, Mr. Schmeltzer was married to Miss Florence Lydia Sharpe, a native of London, England. Her parents never left their native land, and the father is still living there. To Mr. and Mrs. Schmeltzer one son, Jacob Stanley, has been born.

Mr. Schmeltzer casts his vote with the republican party, and in 1910 was elected to the office of county treasurer. He holds membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and its various branches including the Rebekahs; in the Knights of Pythias, and in the Artisans. He also holds membership in the Presbyterian church. In the management of whatever he undertakes he is thorough and untiring in his efforts to forge to the front and win the success which is a certain reward of intelligent labor and untiring industry. His integrity and business ability are attested by the various positions of trust which he holds, and in social, fraternal and political circles he is highly esteemed.

HON. ABNER WEED. Few men of southern Oregon and northern California are more widely known than the Hon. Abner Weed because of his extensive land holdings, his important industrial interests and his prominence in political circles. He owns twenty-one thousand acres of land in one body in Klamath county, Oregon, devoted to the raising of hay and to grazing purposes. He has operated extensively along various lines in this section of the country and his value as a citizen is widely acknowledged. He was born in Dixmont, Penobscot county, Maine, September 18, 1842, the son of Abner and Sarah (Ryan) Weed, who were natives of the Pine Tree state and belonged to old families there. They spent their entire lives in Maine, the father following the occupation of farming.

Hon. Abner Weed, the youngest of a family of eight children, resided with his parents until 1863, when at the age of twenty-one years he enlisted for service in the Civil war. Up to that time he had lived the usual life of a farm boy, taking advantage of the educational opportunities offered by the common schools. Donning the nation's blue uniform he went to the front as a member of Company C, Eighth Maine Volunteer Infantry. He served with that command until the close of the war, two and one-half years later. He participated in the James river expedition under Butler and was serving under President Grant at the time of the surrender of Lee. He did provost guard duty in Virginia until 1866, mostly at Richmond, and was continuously in active service save for a period of three months spent at home on a furlough, following a sunstroke which incapacitated him for duty.

In 1866 Abner Weed returned home, remaining a resident of Maine until 1868. He then went to Iowa, where he lived for one year, and in 1869 made his way to California. He spent about twenty years in the Sierra Nevada country, mostly in the town of Truckee, logging and working in the winters during that period. He did some contract work and worked for wages also. In 1889 he removed to Siskiyou county, California, where he has since made his home. In that county he first operated a sawmill near Sisson. He made a steady advance in that business and became one of the most prominent lumbermen of the section. About seven years ago, however, he disposed of his interests there and has since engaged in dealing in land and cattle, owning now twenty-one thousand acres of land all in one body in Klamath county. He also has about eleven thousand acres in Siskiyou county, which is hay and grazing land and a part of which is mining property. Mr. Weed founded the town which bears his name—Weed, California—and there built a sawmill, a store, a box factory and a residence. He built twenty-three miles of the California & Northeastern Railroad, now owned by the Southern Pacific Company, and forming a part of the main line through Klamath Falls. In Contra Costa county, California, he owns a ranch of sixteen hundred acres. Thus he is one of the most extensive landholders in this section.

Abner Weed was married in Maine in 1865 to Miss Rachel C. Cunningham, a native of that state and a daughter of Chandler Cunningham. The children of this marriage are: Abbie C., the wife of Alexander Albee, who lives near Weed; E. C., who was born December 31, 1874, and died in February, 1911; Eleanor, who was born in 1878 and died at the age of three years; and Horace A., who resides upon his father's ranch, is married and has two children.

He is a republican and for your years filled the office of state senator in California, while for eight years he was supervisor at Siskiyou. His fellow townsmen recognize the fact that he is capable and public-spirited and desire his services in office, yet his ambition does not lead in that direction. Fraternally he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Masons and the Elks. Whatever he undertakes he carries forward to successful completion and he is a man of sound judgment, progressive and determined, and possesses that rare perception which enables one to see the possibilities and opportunities of a situation.

JOHN B. NATTER, after many years of successful business life, is now living in his beautiful home in retirement at Heppner, this state. He was born in Austria, on the 27th of June, 1840, and is a son of Joseph Simon and Mary Marguerite Natter, both of whom passed away many years ago.

John B. Natter was educated in the public schools of Austria and at the age of fourteen he emigrated to the United States, making his first settlement in the new world at Galena, Illinois. In early life he acquired a thorough knowledge of the brewing business and while living in the state of Illinois was engaged in that industry for a period of five years. In the year 1859 he proceeded by way of the Isthmus of Panama to California, where he at once engaged in the pursuit of his vocation as a brewer and continued to be employed for five years in that occupation, after which he removed to the Boise Basin in Idaho, where he was engaged for some time in the mining industry. In 1868 he removed from that state to Portland, Oregon, where he remained for one year engaged at his trade and then removed to Albany, this state, where he continued to live for nine and a half years, during which time he was engaged in the brewing industry and later removed to Pendleton and at that place was in business for two successive years, after which he removed to California and was there engaged in the saloon business for one year. In 1882 he removed from California to Heppner in this state and established himself in the brewing business, in which he continued until 1902, when he retired permanently from business cares and is now enjoying a well earned rest after many years of successful business life. He is the vice president of the First National Bank of Heppner.

On the 22d of February, 1876, Mr. Natter was united in marriage to Miss Anna Matilda Minerd, at Seattle, Washington. To Mr. and Mrs. Natter two sons have been born, Joseph and Frank, both of whom are deceased. Our subject is affiliated with the republican party and for two years has served as councilman of Heppner. Fraternally he is identified with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, belonging to Lodge No. 358 of Heppner.

John B. Natter is one of the reliable and highly respected citizens of the county in which he lives and his business interests for many years having been so widely scattered along the Pacific coast, he was necessarily brought in contact in the ordinary course of his affairs with many of the representative business men of this state. He is known among his associates and acquaintances as a man of unquestionable integrity and unusual capabilities and as a safe and careful business man.

J. DILLON PLAMONDON, M. D. entered upon the active practice of medicine in Athena in 1900 and his success is based upon a thorough understanding of the scientific principles of his profession and varied experience in practice. He was born in Salem, Oregon, December 13, 1875, and is a son of Eugene and Mary A. (Scott) Plamondon. The father was born in the province of Quebec, Canada, and was of French ancestry. In the year 1849 he made his way westward to California by way of Cape Horn and subsequently came to Oregon. He acquired considerable property in Salem and there spent his last days, his death occurring when his son J. Dillon, of this review, was only three or four years of age. His wife, who was born in Ohio in 1850, accompanied her parents on the journey across the plains with ox teams in 1864. She is still living and makes her home in Portland. In her family were two children: Addie S., who is the wife of Henry Pape of Salem; and J. Dillon.

J. Dillon Plamondon resided in Salem with his mother until 1898 and supplemented his public-school course by study in the academical department of the Willamette University, from which he was in due time graduated. Determining upon the practice of medicine as a life work, he matriculated in the medical department of Willamette University and there completed his course in 1898. He then spent one year as house surgeon in St. Vincent's Hospital at Portland and for another year was assistant surgeon for the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company in connection with the construction work which was then being carried on in eastern Washington. In 1900 he located in Athena for general practice and has here since been so engaged. His patronage has always been large and his work has been of an important character.

In 1901 Dr. Plamondon was united in marriage to Miss Areta Barrett, a native of Athena and a daughter of Senator C. A. Barrett. Their home is attractive by reason of its good cheer and its warm-hearted hospitality. Dr. Plamondon is republican in his political views and has served as mayor of Athena for three terms, his reelections coming to him in acknowledgment of his capable service and the confidence reposed in him by his fellow townsmen. He is strongly opposed to anything like misrule in political affairs and believes that public offices should be administered for the welfare of the great majority and not permeated by narrow partisanship. While he is active and loyal in all duties of citizenship, his attention is chiefly concentrated upon his professional work and he keeps in touch with advancement in this line through his membership in the Umatilla County and the Oregon State Medical Societies.

CLARENCE E. RUSSELL, one of the most prominent farmers, stock-raisers and dairymen in Coos county, Oregon, was born in Minnesota, February 27, 1872. He is a son of William and Lucinda Russell, the former a native of England and the latter of Kentucky. They were married in Illinois and lived in that state for some time before they moved to Minnesota, where they resided for twenty-one years. At the end of that time they moved to Iowa and after a short residence in that state went to Kansas, where the father followed farming with gratifying success until 1887. In that year he established his residence in Oregon, where he remained until 1907. He then moved to California, and is now living retired near Los Angeles. He fought through the Civil war and is now in the eighty fifth year of his age. His wife passed away February 12, 1906.

Mr. Russell, of this review, is one of ten children born to his parents, eight of whom are still living. He received his education in the public schools of Minnesota and Kansas. He became acquainted in his early youth with the details of agriculture and has since followed this line of occupation. Since his marriage he has had charge of the estate of his deceased brother and has brought this property to a highly developed state. He owns a half interest in one hundred and thirty-seven acres of fertile and productive land located four miles from Myrtle Point on the south fork of the Coquille river. Mr. Russell does general farming and gives his personal attention to every department of his work. He specializes, however, in dairying and keeps a large herd of cows for this purpose. He raises his own stock and from his herd supplies his dairy and also breeds high-grade animals for the market.

In 1905 Mr. Russell was united in marriage to Miss Clara O'Brien, who was born in Indiana and came to Oregon with her parents in 1902. They settled in Myrtle Point and are still residing in that city. Mrs. Russell was the only child born to her parents and remained at home until her marriage. She and her husband are the parents of three children: Eugene, born in 1907; Lucinda, whose birth occurred in 1909; and William E., born in 1910.

Mr. Russell is a republican in his political belief but the attention which he gives to his farm prevents his taking an active part in public affairs. He and his family affiliate with the Presybterian church. He is reckoned among the prosperous and successful farmers in Coos county and is a respesentative of the modern school of agriculture. His labors have been continuously constructive and have had practical results. He understands the elements of farming and upon his detailed efficiency has built his success.

STURDIVANT BROTHERS. The stock-raising and dairying firm of Sturdivant Brothers is formed by the partnership of Malcolm E. and Charles B. Sturdivant, who own and operate eighteen hundred and forty acres of land about three miles northwest of Ukiah, Umatilla county, where they raise large numbers of cattle and horses and conduct a dairy of about twenty-five cows. Their parents, Robert and Rebecca Jane (Manlove) Sturdivant are given more extended mention elsewhere in this work in the biographical review introduced by the name of Joel W. Sturdivant.

Charles B. Sturdivant, the senior member of the firm of Sturdivant Brothers, was born in Dinwiddie county, Virginia, February 5, 1852, while Malcolm E. Sturdivant, the junior member of the firm, was born at the same place, April 5, 1859. The brothers received a meager education, as school facilities in Virginia during the Civil war were extremely limited if not practically abolished, and while in the frontier country to which the family removed later only a three months' term of school each year was held. In 1870 the brothers came with their parents to California, where the family located in Lake county. Charles B. Sturdivant, the elder brother, began farming on his own account at the age of eighteen years and about seven years later was joined by his brother, Malcolm E. Sturdivant, in a partnership relation and since that time the two brothers have conducted their business as the firm of Sturdivant Brothers. In 1880 they came to Oregon, spending the first winter after their arrival near Athena, in Umatilla county. In the spring of 1881 they went to the Camas valley, where each homesteaded a quarter section of land, three miles northwest of where Ukiah now stands. Upon this land and other tracts which they have acquired they have since made their home. Shortly after the brothers took up their homesteads the mother homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres and the brothers took up timber claims of one hundred and sixty acres each, and subsequently purchased one hundred and sixty acres from an aunt and eight hundred acres from others, making their total holdings in one body of land eighteen hundred acres. They also own a forty acre tract isolated from the main body and lying a short distance to the north. In their extensive horse and cattle raising they range their stock on the Umatilla national forest reserve as well as occupying the land which they own and their operations are so extensive that they are among the most important stockmen of the county. They are conducting a dairy in connection with their stock-raising, milking on an average about twenty-five cows. For four years, covering the period from 1898 to 1902, the brothers owned and operated a stage line from Ukiah to Pendleton for their own business accommodation.

Politically the Sturdivant Brothers are democrats and Charles B. Sturdivant served for about four years as justice of the peace and for about fifteen years as clerk of the school board, while his brother, Malcolm E. Sturdivant, served for about seven years as a member of the school board. Malcolm E. Sturdivant is a member of the United Artisans and the Woodmen of the World, while his brother is affiliated with the Mutual Artisans only. The Sturdivant brothers are among the most estimable business men of Umatilla county and have an extensive acquaintance in the community. They are energetic in the conduct of their business affairs, to which they pay the strictest attention, and their knowledge of stock handling has enabled them to achieve unusual success in a comparatively short time. Wherever known they are highly esteemed and are greatly respected by everyone in the community.

T. J. MACKIN. Associated with his brother, John R. Mackin, in business, T. J. Mackin owns a half interest in the fourteen hundred acre farm upon which the brothers reside, the old homestead of the father being included in the property which they now operate. He was born in Josephine county, July 29, 1860, a son of John and Margaret Mackin, both of whom were natives of Ireland and emigrated to the new world in 1854. They settled first in the state of New York, where they remained for four years, after which they crossed the continent and settled in Josephine county, Oregon. The father took up a homestead claim and added to it until he had four hundred and fifty acres upon which the family continued to reside until the parents' deaths, the father passing away December 6, 1879, and the mother in August, 1899. In their family were three children, of whom T. J., of this review, is the eldest. Agnes L., the only daughter, married Frank Oggier, who died in 1898, and her death occurred in 1909. They are survived by their one daughter, Margaret J. John R., who is engaged in ranching in connection with his brother, completes the family.

T. J. MACKIN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

T. J. Mackin remained under the parental roof until he attained his majority, assisting in the farm work and in the meantime acquiring a common-school education. When he became of age with the assistance of his brother he took charge of the old homestead and later the brothers added to their holdings until their present ranch comprises fourteen hundred acres, all of which is situated in Josephine county. Upon that ranch Mr. Mackin has an orchard of twenty acres, the larger portion of which is set to Spitzenburgh apple trees. He is also interested in gold mines in Josephine county, one being a quartz mine and another a placer mine. His mining property is paying handsomely and he devotes a considerable share of his attention to that branch of his business.

Mr. Mackin is democratic in his political faith and for many years has served as director of the local school board and as road superintendent. In 1892 he was a candidate for representative to the state legislature but was defeated on account of the populist landslide which swept the country the year he was nominated. He has long been regarded as one of the prominent and successful business men of his community where he enjoys an enviable reputation for integrity and honest dealing. He has a wide acquaintance throughout the county and a large number of those with whom he is acquainted are numbered among his close business, political and social friends who hold him in high esteem.

MARVILLE L. WATTS, manager for the Preston-Shaffer Milling Company of Athena, director of the First National Bank and owner of valuable ranch property in Umatilla county, is a native of the city in which he still makes his home, his birth having here occurred January 31, 1874. His parents were T. J. and Elizabeth (Naylor) Watts and he was their second child. He has always resided in Athena and in his youthful days was accorded good educational opportunities, supplementing his public-school course by study in the Weston normal school, from which he was graduated with the class of 1894. He afterward devoted two years to the profession of teaching and then resumed his studies by entering the State University, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1899. He subsequently again followed the profession of teaching and became principal of the Athena high school, but he withdrew from that connection to enter commercial circles in 1904, and took the position of bookkeeper for the Preston-Shaffer Milling Company, in which capacity he served for two years. He was then made manager and has thus been connected with the business to the present time. In the year 1911 he became a director of the First National Bank of Athena. He is the owner of a ranch of five hundred acres located north of the town, to which he gives his personal supervision.

In 1899 Marville L. Watts married Miss Jennie Anderson, who was born in Virginia, March 2, 1874, and when eight years of age came to Umatilla county with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Anderson, of Eugene. Mr. and Mrs. Watts have one child, Vernita, who was born April 8, 1901. They are widely and favorably known, having an extensive circle of friends in their city. Mr. Watts votes with the democratic party and takes only a citizen's interest in politics. Fraternally he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. His influence is always found to be on the side of progress and improvement and he has ever labored earnestly and effectively to advance material, educational and moral welfare.

W. S. NICHOL, M. D., whose business enterprise and initiative spirit are manifest in the excellent results which he achieves, is now well known as a leading real-estate dealer of Hood River. He was born in Texas county, Missouri, on the 27th of January, 1874, his parents being Licidius A. and Ruah (Mitchell) Nichol, both natives of Kentucky. They both removed to Missouri at an early age with their parents and in that state their marriage occurred, after which they located in Texas county, where the father engaged in farming and also conducted a general merchandise store in Licking. His death occurred in that town in 1879 and the mother is still residing there.

W. S. Nichol was but five years of age when his father died. He was the ninth of ten children, whom the mother kept together until they reached maturity. He received his education in the common schools of Licking and at the age of sixteen years took up the study of medicine under Dr. S. L. Mitchell, of Licking, and in the autumn of 1891 entered Marion Sims Medical College at St. Louis, Missouri. After his graduation from that institution he practiced in Houstonia, Missouri, for two years previous to removing to Knobnoster, where he practiced for six years. Subsequently he went to Oklahoma for two years and in addition to his practice also conducted a drug store, having done so in each locality where he had previously practiced. He was a registered pharmacist in four states. In 1904 he gave up his practice to come to Oregon, where he located in Bend and engaged in ranching. Subsequently he conducted a general merchandise store, which he gave up, however, when he left Bend in 1907 to take up his residence in Hood River. In this town he invested all the money he had at his disposal and extended his credit as far as possible so as to be able to purchase land. To many of his friends this seemed a rash act and he was told many times that he would never realize profitable returns from his investments. Time has proven that his confidence in the soil of Hood River county was not misplaced and today he is one of the most active buyers and sellers of Hood River orchard lands. During the last two years he has sold more orchard land and located more settlers than any one man in the real-estate business there and he has established for himself an enviable reputation which has been gained by fair business deals and by as great a consideration for the party with whom he is transacting business as for himself. He is considered one of the best judges of the value of lands in this section and his judgment is highly esteemed and eagerly sought for by all those contemplating making real-estate investments.

In 1894 Dr. Nichol was married to Miss Dora Coons, a daughter of the Rev. C. E. Coons, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Licking. To them five children have been born, three of whom survive, Walter, Ernest and Byron. Mr. Nichol's political allegiance is given in support of the democratic party and his loyalty thereto is never called into question, for he is a firm believer in the efficacy of the party principles as instruments in good government. He is recognized as a business man of marked energy and laudable ambition who seldom fails to carry to successful completion whatever he undertakes. He holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America and in the Hood River Commercial Club, whose membership is composed of the foremost citizens of the town. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and he is at present serving as Sunday school superintendent and also on the board of stewards of the church. His advice has been of great value to the church in its recent business operations and he has been one of the most prominent members of the building committee.

EDWIN W. RING. Success has come as the direct and legitimate outcome of the intelligently directed efforts and labors of Edwin W. Ring, who through the greater part of his life has been connected with lumber interests but is now living retired in Portland, where he has made his home since 1903. His attention at the present writing is given only to the supervision of his invested interests which include valuable timber lands in this state, and stock in a number of important industrial enterprises. His judgment and even paced energy have carried him forward until at the goal of prosperity he has laid down the heavier burdens of business life to enjoy a rest which he has truly earned and richly merits.

Edwin W. Ring was born in Columbia county, Wisconsin, on the 9th of November, 1853, his parents being Reuben and Sophronia (Bunker) Ring, both of whom were natives of Maine, although their marriage was celebrated in Wisconsin. The father had removed to the latter state when a young man and there he wedded Miss Bunker, and they began their domestic life in the town of Lodi, Wisconsin, where Reuben Ring followed farming and blacksmithing. In 1860 he purchased land in Wisconsin, which he cultivated to the time of his death, adding many improvements to his farm, while his fields were made to bring forth rich harvests as a reward for the care and labor which he bestowed upon them. He died in the year 1885 and his wife, surviving him, passed away in 1896. They were the parents of four children, of whom two died in infancy, while a third, Susie, passed away in 1884, at the age of twenty-eight years, leaving Edwin W. Ring, the eldest, the only surviving member of the family.

Under the parental roof Edwin W. Ring spent the period of his minority and long before he reached the age at which the law declares that a man must be self supporting and assume the responsibilities of life, he had taken upon himself the care and labor of the home farm, owing to the invalid condition of his father. He was but sixteen years of age when he thus assumed burdens that were almost too heavy for young shoulders, but with resolute spirit and firm purpose he continued his labors, directed under the advice of his father, until by the death of his parents, he came into possession of the farm, comprising one hundred and sixty acres of land. His identification with the lumber trade dates from 1872, for in that year he began dealing in lumber in connection with his farming operations. He was thus closely associated with business activities in his native county until 1903, when he disposed of his interests in Wisconsin and came to Oregon, with Portland as his destination. Here he again entered into active relations with lumber interests and his careful management and progressive spirit constituted potent factors in bringing him success. He became interested in two sawmills, which he has since sold. At the present time he owns a large amount of marketable timber in this district and also has an interest in other tracts in different parts of the state. He was at one time director of the Oregon Lumber Company, of Portland, in which he is still a stockholder; vice president of the Lewis River Lumber Company; president and manager of the Tualitin Brick & Tile Company, of Tualitin, Oregon, in which he is also interested at the present time; and president and general manager of the Oregon Timber & Lumber Company. He owns a number of city properties in Portland, beside his home, and he has made investments in other business concerns here. His financial support has been an element in the success of a number of important business affairs and more than that, his sound judgment and keen discrimination have figured largely in the prosperity of the different companies with which he was identified.

In 1884 Edwin W. Ring was united in marriage to Miss Lucy A. Sexton, who was born in Wisconsin, and is a daughter of Joseph and Sylvia Sexton, both of whom were natives of the Empire state. They were married in Wisconsin, and Mrs. Sexton there passed away during the infancy of her daughter Mrs. Ring. The father died in 1876, while on a trip in the south. He was the owner of a fine farm and throughout his entire life had followed general agricultural pursuits. Of their four children Mrs. Ring is the youngest, the others being: Mrs. Blakely, of Harrington, North Dakota; Isabelle, who died at the age of nineteen years; and Mrs. Martin, who is living in Fairmont, Nebraska.

To Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Ring have been born four children. Alta E., who was born March 22, 1889, is a graduate of St. Helen's Hall and has been liberally educated in music. Sidney H., born June 3, 1892, graduated from the Allen's Preparatory School of Portland in June, 1912. Gordon E., born April 6, 1894, is attending school; and Edna E., born January 30, 1896, is a pupil at St. Helen's Hall where she will graduate in 1913. All of these children are at home. Mrs. Ring was a successful schoolteacher for some years prior to her marriage and she is in sympathy with her husband's ambition to provide their children with every educational opportunity possible. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ring are faithful members of the Congregational church. The political allegiance of the former is with the republican party and although he has never been a politician in the office-seeking sense of the word, he has held several political positions, the duties of which he has discharged with promptness and fidelity. Fraternally he is connected with Washington Lodge, No. 46, A. F. & A. M., at Portland, and the Odd Fellows lodge, at Pittsville, Wisconsin. That he is popular in these organizations and loyal to their teachings is indicated in his being elected to all their different chairs. He has always stood for that which is progressive and honorable in business, for that which is loyal and patriotic in citizenship, and for that which is straightforward and right in man's relations with his fellowmen. In the lumber trade he made a creditable name and place for himself through the extent and importance of his business activities and the care and judgment which he displayed in their management. He started out in life without any vaulting ambition to accomplish something especially great or famous but he followed the lead of his opportunities, doing as best he could anything that came to hand and seized legitimate advantages as they arose. He never hesitated to take a forward step when the way was open and was fortunate in possessing ability and character that inspired confidence in him, the simple weight of which has carried him into important relations with large interests and enabled him at length to put aside all business cares, with sufficient property investments to supply him not only with the necessities but with the comforts and many of the luxuries of life.

KILLIS J. MARTIN is a veteran of the Civil war, being one of three brothers who served during the Rebellion. The father was also in the service for eighteen months and all survived those trying times, being honorably discharged when peace was restored. Killis J. Martin removed to Oregon in 1882, settling first in Wallowa county and later in Union county, purchasing his present property one mile from the center of Union. It is all set out in fruit trees and is producing readily under his careful management. He was born in Pulaski county, Kentucky, March 22, 1838, a son of John and Sicily Ann (Roberts) Martin, both natives of the Blue Grass state. The grandfather, John Martin, a native of North Carolina, took part in the war of the Revolution and at an early day removed to Kentucky, becoming a pioneer of that state, where he lived and died. Gideon Roberts, the maternal grandfather, also lived in Kentucky until he reached advanced age, when he removed to Indiana and spent his last years with his son. The father of our subject removed to Missouri in 1857, settling in Miller county, and there passed the remainder of his years, dying at the age of sixty-six. He and three sons served in the Union army during the Rebellion, the father joining the cavalry and the sons enlisting for service in the infantry. At the end of eighteen months of service the father's failing health compelled him to return home, after having taken part in many bloody engagements. Early in the war on one occasion the father surprised a Rebel captain, Richmond Ballou, who was one of his near neighbors, who with seven men were removing corn from a plantation. The Rebel party all escaped but Ballou's son, who failed to get on his horse in time to get away. Captain Martin ordered him to throw down his gun and surrender, but as the youth showed fight, saying that he would die first, as the captain put it, "he did."

Killis J. Martin, the eldest son in his father's family, received a common school education in Missouri, remaining with his parents until in August, 1861, when he enlisted under Colonel McClurg, in the Home Guards, in which he served for one year. The other two brothers who were in the Federal service were George and John. During his service with the Home Guards skirmishes were frequent and severe, Mr. Martin often being detailed on strenuous police duty. On August 22, 1862, he enlisted in Company E of the Thirty-third Missouri Volunteer Infantry under Colonel Clifton B. Fish. The first hard fight his company was engaged in was at Helena, Arkansas, an engagement lasting seven hours. From that city they went up the Mississippi to Memphis and thence to Gun Town, Mississippi, where they destroyed General Forrest's army, and then followed General Price through his last raid into Missouri. They then went to Nashville to assist General Thomas in destroying General Hood's army, which they did after two days of fighting. Mobile was their next objective point and Mr. Martin in company with his brother soldiers was under fire for thirteen consecutive days and nights. That was the last engagement in which he participated, news reaching them there of the surrender of General Lee, and on the 10th of August, 1865, at Benton Barracks Mr. Martin was honorably discharged with the rank of sergeant. Immediately thereafter he returned to the old homestead in Missouri, where he made his home, being there engaged in agricultural pursuits until in 1882, when he came with his family to Oregon, settling first in Wallowa county where he remained for seven years engaging in farming. He then removed to Eagle Creek Union county, and made that his home for ten years, meeting with fair success in business. He next purchased his present property one mile from the center of Union, his residence being inside the city limits. He has fifteen acres of fine fruit land and lives in a commodious and modern two-story house.

Mr. Martin was married in February, 1859, to Margaret Henderson, a native of Tennessee and a daughter of James Henderson. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Martin were born seven children, namely: John, who passed away in January, 1882; William, engaged in mining in California; Annie, the wife of Charles Rich, of Rupert, Idaho; George Milton and Oliver, also residents of Rupert; Rachael, who married Connell Cox, of Ontario, Oregon; and Arthur, making his home in California. After the death of his first wife Mr. Martin was married in June, 1899, to Miss Mary L. Michelroy, a native of New York.

While a resident of Missouri Mr. Martin was elected and served for two terms as sheriff, filling that office acceptably for four years. When he was first elected in 1868 there were delivered to him seven murder indictments. He succeeded in arresting two of the murderers but the others, who knew him, left the country and were never apprehended. In recounting his experiences as sheriff in those early days when the country was full of undesirable characters Mr. Martin says that his experiences in the war were not to be compared with what he encountered as sheriff. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and both he and Mrs. Martin are members of the Eastern Star. Mr. Martin also belongs to the post of the Grand Army of the Republic, of which he is an active member. He is one of the most excellent citizens of Union, is a man of intelligence and a great reader, keeping posted on the affairs of the times. He is respected by all who know him and much esteemed by his many friends.

PHILIP GLOVER. Among the early settlers and highly honored citizens of Marion county is Philip Glover, who resides on his farm, which is situated one mile north of Sublimity, on the Silverton road. His birth occurred in Warren county, Missouri, March 4, 1829, and he is the son of Philip and Sarah (Countz) Glover. The father, of English descent, was a native of Maryland and when a young man came to Missouri, where he followed the occupation of farming and was justice of the peace. He served in the War of 1812. In 1849, with a train of forty wagons, of which he was the captain, he crossed the plains, being en route six months and having some trouble with the Indians. He located in Marion county, Oregon, in the Waldo hills, where he took up a donation claim which he improved from the wild state and, putting up a double log house, he resided there until his death in 1874. The mother was a native of Missouri, of German descent. In their family were nine sons and three daughters, the order of their births being as follows: William, Rebecca and Maria, all of whom are deceased; Philip, of this review; Samuel and James of Spokane, Washington; Pate, of Portland, Oregon; John, a resident of Spokane, Washington; Louisa, an infant, George and Nick, all of whom are deceased.

Philip Glover was educated in the common schools in Missouri and remained at home until nineteen years of age. Subsequently he was employed as a farm hand for one year and then came to Oregon with his parents, where he worked on a farm for a while. In 1852 he decided to take up a donation claim and while looking for a site for the same he saw three deer on a rise of land under an oak tree about three-quarters of a mile north of Sublimity and, being a great hunter, he decided to locate there. Accordingly, he laid his claims and settled on this tract, where he later built the house in which he now lives and which is located about fifty feet from the tree under which he saw the deer. He has put up the best of improvements and now owns three hundred and fourteen acres of excellent land and is engaged in general farming. He is an excellent marksman and has killed many deer, elk, bear and other game.

On the 17th of November, 1853, Mr. Glover was united in marriage to Miss Delilah Edmunson, a native of Missouri, born in 1838, and a daughter of Rufus and Nancy (Patton) Edmunson, both of whom were natives of Missouri. The parents crossed the plains in 1849 and located in the Waldo hills on a claim which they improved but later sold, going to California, where they both died. In their family were eight children: Delilah, now Mrs. Glover; John and Thomas, deceased; Dick, of California; Hugh, deceased; William, of eastern Oregon; Emma, now Mrs. Fletcher, of California; and Albert, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Glover have become the parents of fourteen children: Louisa, the deceased wife of L. A. Loomis, of Pacific county, Washington; Henry, of eastern Oregon; Amelia, the wife of Theodore Conick, who resides on the coast; John, of Stayton, Oregon; Arthur, of Salem; Frank, at home; George, who resides on the home farm; Margaret, Charles, Ollie, Jesse and Gracie, all deceased; one who died in infancy, and Ellen G., the wife of L. S. Lambert, of Stayton.

In politics Mr. Glover is a democrat and he has served as constable and as road supervisor. He was a candidate on that party's ticket to the state legislature but the democrats were in the minority. He and his wife are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, and fraternally he is identified with the Grange. Having now resided in Marion county for over sixty-one years and on his present farm over fifty-nine years, Mr. Glover has witnessed the change of the country from the primitive to the present state and has been a strong factor in the development of his own community.

ANSON F. POLEY, D. D. S. One of the prominent citizens and extensive landowners of Wallowa county is Dr. Anson F. Poley, who was formerly engaged in the practice of dentistry in Portland, but is now living retired in Enterprise, where he devotes his entire attention to looking after his prop-

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

PHILIP GLOVER

MRS. PHILIP GLOVER

erty interests. He possesses unusual foresight and sagacity and has dealt extensively in real estate in this section of the state, his judicious investments having numbered him among the substantial business men of the town. He was born in Virden, Illinois, on the 21st of February, 1869, and is a son of Benjamin F. and Nancy G. (Groves) Poley, the father a native of Sangamon county and the mother of Macoupin county, Illinois. Soon after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Poley located on a farm in Sangamon county, where they resided until 1884. In the latter year the father removed to Alabama, where for four years he was engaged in the lumber business. He then returned to Illinois, continuing to reside there until October, 1889, when he came to Oregon, settling in Lostine, Wallowa county. Here he engaged in ranching and milling until 1905, when he retired from active business and has ever since made his home with his children, the mother having passed away in March, 1899.

Dr. Poley passed the greater part of his boyhood and early youth on the home farm in Illinois, obtaining his education in the common schools of that state, his course being completed upon his graduation from the Virden high school in the class of 1889. He subsequently pursued a business course in the Bushnell Commercial College at Bushnell, Illinois. Following the completion of his work there he joined his people in Wallowa county and for three years thereafter was expert accountant for the M. & M. Company of Enterprise, having charge of their accounts at Wallowa. Evincing strong desires to take up a professional career, he then withdrew from their employment and returning to Illinois, matriculated in the dental department of the Northwestern University at Chicago, being awarded the degree of D. D. S. from that institution in 1896. For two years thereafter he followed his profession at various points through the east and west and in 1898 joined the tide of gold seekers going to Alaska. He remained in the north for a year, prospecting for the precious metal, but as his efforts were not rewarded by any unusual good fortune he returned at the end of that time to the States, locating at Portland, where he opened an office and engaged in the practice of his profession. He remained there for six years, and as his skill and ability became recognized succeeded in building up a gratifying practice. The long tedious struggle however, to attain this practice which practically every professional man has to undergo before success gives fair return for long years of study and hard work proved very trying to Dr. Poley, stirring him to activity in another field of endeavor. Enterprising and possessed of excellent executive ability with strong powers of organization, he did not find the opportunity to exercise his best talents in his profession and while engaged in practice he made some very judicious investments in real estate throughout this state, and in 1905 he decided to retire from his profession and give his entire time and attention to the development of his realty interests. He owns some valuable city property in Portland and divides his time between that city and Enterprise. In addition to his holdings here he has twelve hundred acres of irrigated land on Prairie creek in Wallowa county and large tracts in Crook, Lake and Grant counties.

Dr. Poley was married in 1905 to Miss Edith Gilbert, a daughter of Samuel E. Gilbert, a prominent business man of Portland. Dr. Poley is a member of the Christian church, while his wife is affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal denomination. Fraternally he is affiliated with Wallowa Lodge, No. 82, A. F. & A. M., and he also belongs to Jessica Chapter, No. 68, O. E. S, of Wallowa. Dr. Poley is very fond of travel and spends a great deal of his time in that manner, having his affairs so arranged that it is possible for him to absent himself for long periods without affecting his interests. He has met with remarkable success, owing to the fact that he possesses the greatest gift that can be bestowed upon a man of enterprise and ambition: the faculty to recognize through his appreciation of past conditions and knowledge of present circumstances the opportunities of the future. He has exercised this gift to his own benefit, trusting implicitly to his intuition, as a man of sagacity and strong convictions always does.

WILLIAM GLASSON lives retired at Hermiston, where he has made his home since November, 1906. He was for some time connected with the confectionery business here and is still the owner of valuable property from which he derives a good annual income. His birth occurred in Cornwall, England, September 13, 1852, his parents being William and Emma (Roach) Glasson, residents of England, where the father spent most of his life as an engineer although in early manhood he followed farming.

William Glasson was third in order of birth in a family of eight children and had two sisters who came to America. His youthful days were spent at home and he acquired a fair English knowledge in the public schools. Shortly before he attained majority he crossed the Atlantic to the United States, landing at New York on the 7th of July, 1873. He then went to live in New Jersey with his sister Mrs. Emily George, who had preceded him to this country, and he remained with her until the following May. The reports which he heard concerning the western country pleased him and in May, 1874, he made his way to Colorado, where he worked in silver and gold mines until 1880. He then went to Florence, Colorado, where he was employed in a stone quarry for a time and later he removed to San Juan county, Colorado, where he remained for a few months. Subsequently he returned to Florence, living there until 1900, and during the period of his residence there devoted his time and energies to ranching, merchandising and other business pursuits. On leaving that locality he took up his abode in Portland, Oregon, but in March, 1901, left the Rose City for Umatilla county. He established a confectionery business at Echo, where he remained until November, 1906, when he sold out and came to Hermiston where he erected the first business block of the town—a structure which occupies a plat of land twenty-five by sixty feet in area and is located on Main street. In that building he opened a confectionery establishment, which he conducted until June, 1909, and then purchased a lot and erected thereon a comfortable home in which he now lives. He was one of the first residents of the town, living here before the reservoir was started. He still owns the concrete building on Main street which bears his name but he is living practically retired, merely giving his time and attention to the supervision of his invested interests, which are bringing to him a good financial return.

In Colorado in 1876, William Glasson was married to Miss Maggie E. Belcher, who was born in South Wales in May, 1856, and went to Colorado with two brothers. Mr. and Mrs. Glasson have one son, Clifford R., who is an oil well driller and resides at Florence, Colorado. William Glasson is a self-made man and one who deserves much credit for what he has accomplished, as he came to the new world with little capital, possessing, however, resolution, determination and perseverance. These qualities have stood him in good stead as the years have gone by, bringing him at length to the goal of success so that his holdings are now sufficient to enable him to live retired. His business methods have ever been thoroughly reliable as well as progressive and he thus enjoys the high regard and confidence of all who know him.

W. J. STRONG is one of the foremost citizens of the town of Myrtle Point and has been engaged in the cultivation of a fine farm in this vicinity for many years. He has gained recognition among his associates as an able and public-spirited man and his life has been a distinct influence in the progress of this section of the state. He was born in Yamhill county, Oregon, December 17, 1866, and is a son of Lewis and Catherine (Wimer) Strong, the former a native of Missouri but who later removed to Iowa. Mr. Strong's parents married in the latter state and crossed the plains to Oregon in 1863. They were among the pioneer settlers in this state and lived for some time in Yamhill county where their son William was born. They moved to Josephine county and subsequently to Phoenix, Jackson county, where the father operated a flour mill for a number of years. He was well known in commercial and business circles of that district and was one of the foremost of the pioneer settlers of Oregon. When he left Phoenix he went to Ashland where he engaged in the same line of business, operating a flour mill, known as the Farnum Mill for a short time. He later returned to Josephine county, located on a ranch and later added to his activities by the purchase of a flour mill. In 1889 he sold his holdings in Josephine county and removed to Coos county, buying a farm on the south fork of the Coquille river which he operated until he came to Myrtle Point. He is now living in the latter city and is prominent in commercial circles, conducting an implement store, and is one of the prosperous merchants of Coos county. He owns a comfortable and commodious home in Myrtle Point and is also the owner of one hundred and eighty acres of land in this vicinity. He has acquired a comfortable fortune which he always invests judiciously in local enterprises and is extensively interested in Myrtle Point city property. He and his wife are the parents of nine living children: James F., now a resident of Coos county; W. J., the subject of this sketch; Mrs. Lucy Jones, Henry A., Mrs. Viola Warner, and Lewis, Jr., all of whom reside in Coos county; Mrs. Alberta Floyd of Douglas county, Oregon, and Mrs. Allison Neal, of Coos county, who are twins; and John C., who makes his home in Coos county.

W. J. Strong entered the public schools of his native state and pursued the usual course of study until he laid aside his books. He was associated with his father for some years until his marriage at the age of twenty-nine, at which time he began the operation of a farm and was identified with agricultural pursuits for a short time. He farmed long enough to become familiar with the most scientific and progressive methods of tilling the soil and familiarizing himself with all the intricate details connected with the farm. He later engaged in the milling business for eight years. At the end of that time he took up his residence in Coos county, bought ninety-four acres of fertile land near Myrtle Point and has been successful in this district since that time, his farm work being carried on along practical and scientific lines and has always been productive of good results, so that a fair degree of success has rewarded his labor. He has invested at various times in town property in Myrtle Point and maintains a beautiful and commodious home in that city.

In 1896 Mr. Strong was united in marriage to Mrs. Warner Brown, a daughter of Calvin Warner of Coos county, whose parents were among the pioneer settlers of this district and her father was one of the leading men in the section until his death. Her mother is still living and maintains her residence at Myrtle Point. Mrs. Strong received her education in her native section of Coos county and is the oldest of a large family, all of whom with one exception are living. She is a devout adherent of the Presbyterian faith and with her husband is a regular attendant of the church in Myrtle Point.

Politically Mr. Strong gives his allegiance to the democratic party and has always been greatly interested in the welfare of his native section. He has never sought public office but has never refused to do his duty in this line when his fellow citizens called upon him. He is serving at the present time as a member of the Myrtle Point city council and is influencing the deliberations of that body along progressive and worthy lines. He belongs to the Woodmen of the World and is a member of the Grange.

Mr. Strong is one of the leading and foremost farmers in Coos county. He is a valuable and representative citizen and has gained prominence among his friends and neighbors.

EDWARD B. MORELOCK is one of the useful men of eastern Oregon, having maintained his residence for some years past at Elgin. His inherent characteristics, as well as his iron constitution, have qualified him to act as the guardian of peace between the lawless element, always present in a new community, and that other body of industrious, law-abiding citizens who become the real foundation and builders of well ordered civic society. His fame for many years, as a terror to evildoers, has been well established throughout Oregon. Having served in the official capacity of town marshal for a term of years at Summerville and at Elgin, sufficed to convince people of evil intent that any locality in which Mr. Morelock lived was a dangerous and unhealthy place in which to ply the arts of their trade. He was born in Sullivan county, Missouri, May 25, 1845, a son of Enoch B. and Susan (Limebaugh) Morelock, both of whom were natives of Tennessee. They were married in their native state and shortly afterward, in 1843, they removed to Sullivan county, Missouri, where Mr. Morelock established his home. Shortly after taking up their residence in that state, he was elected as the first sheriff of Sullivan county. He was a man of fearless courage in whose hands the safety of property and life throughout the county, could be entrusted with every assurance of diligent and efficient protection. He was killed while in discharge of his duties as sheriff, at a time when he was conducting the sale of some property given into his hands by the court, for that purpose. The owner of the property, being outraged over the due process of law, sought revenge by taking the life of Mr. Morelock, whose only offense was that he was one of the officers appointed by the court to conduct the sale. Mrs. Morelock, some years later, was again married, the name of her second husband being Mr. Stewart. To Mr. and Mrs. Morelock, five children were born, of which the subject of this review was the youngest.

Edward B. Morelock remained at the home of his parents, receiving his early education in the common schools of the district in which he lived. He remained at home during all the early years of his life, caring for the interests of his mother and the remaining members of the family and was so engaged at the time of the opening of the Civil war. In 1863, he enlisted in Company K, Thirty-ninth Missouri Regiment, Volunteer Infantry, and followed this command for a period of one year, at the expiration of which time, he received his honorable discharge and immediately thereafter reenlisted in Company K, of the Forty-second Volunteer Infantry, remaining with this regiment until peace was established between the north and the south. His history as a soldier is one of unusual interest, because of the constant active service of his command at the front, during the most destructive period of that conflict. He was engaged in nineteen pitched battles, one being the battle of Franklin, in which he had seven cousins shot down, on both sides of the fighting line. He followed the fortunes of his regiment in camp and march and field, through days of rest and battle strife, until the 27th of March, 1865. On that day, he received his honorable discharge at Nashville, Tennessee, and was mustered out of service. Upon his return from the war, he at once prepared to change his residence and for that purpose sought his home on the far Pacific coast. He crossed the plains with an ox team to Oregon in 1865, starting on that journey May 15 of that year, and reaching his destination on October 9, making his first location in the Grande Ronde valley, where he purchased three hundred and twenty acres of school land, and upon it built a log cabin for his home. In his removal to a new country for the purpose of bettering his conditions, he was not unmindful of his mother and she was a member of one of the little emigrant parties who formed the company that traveled across the plains with him and during the remainder of her life, she found a welcome home at his fireside. Here, on this original location, Mr. Morelock remained for a period of seventeen years. During that time, he continued to develop and improve his land and engaged in farming and stock raising. In 1882, he removed to Summerville in this county, where he engaged in an independent business, with which he was connected for eleven years. During his residence in this place, he was elected to the office of town marshal. Such was the condition of community life at that time in Summerville that a man of Mr. Morelock's physique, experience, and courage, was required to establish recognition and supremacy of civil law in the common conduct and order of business and social affairs in a self-respecting community. At the time of his election, that part of Oregon was infested to a disturbing degree with irresponsible, lawless characters, who in pursuit of sensation and crime, were accustomed to ride into the villages and settlements and create havoc by their methods of "shooting up the town" and terrorizing the people. Mr. Morelock took charge of the situation in the interests of the people and common decency and in a short time, succeeded in breaking up these traveling bands and resident irresponsible marauders. Having established a condition of peace and safety for the people, he found it to his advantage to again change his residence, and removed to Elgin in this county, where he remained for a period of fourteen years. On reaching Elgin, he found that his reputation as town marshal had preceded him, and the conditions of society being practically the same in Elgin, he was called by the people to the office of town marshal of that place, and by pursuing the same fearless methods he soon accomplished for the people of Elgin a result as thorough and satisfactory as he had brought about in Summerville. After maintaining his residence for fourteen years continuously in this town, he, in 1907, removed to Portland, where he was engaged in business for the following four years, and returning to Elgin in 1911 he became one of its permanent citizens. Here he has continued to live and he has been engaged in the occupation of an auctioneer. This, together with the necessary attention required to be given to his various business interests, has commanded his entire time and attention. Mr. Morelock has a reputation as an auctioneer as far-reaching as that of his ability and fearless methods in handling renegades and criminals.

Edward B. Morelock was married to Miss Rebecca J. Harris, a native of Sullivan county, Missouri, on July 17, 1864. She is a daughter of Joseph and Mary Ann (Sturgill) Harris, both natives of North Carolina. Mrs. Harris died in 1899 and Mr. Harris June 4, 1912, at the age of ninety-one years, having crossed the plains with Mr. Morelock in 1865, settling in Union county, Oregon, where he passed the remainder of his days. The marriage of our subject occurred shortly after he had attained his nineteenth birthday, Mrs. Morelock being at the time sixteen years of age. To this union thirteen children have been born, eleven of whom are still living, and to this family circle have been added twenty-four grandchildren in direct line of descent. The surviving children of Mr. and Mrs. Morelock are: Martha C., wife of William Russell of Elgin; William M., with the Elgin Forwarding Company; Mary S., wife of Elliott Smith of Elgin; James K. P., mayor of Wallowa, Oregon; John W., on the Portland police force; Tilden H., with the Joseph Forwarding Company, of Joseph, Oregon; Albert Lee, chief of the fire department of Elgin, Oregon; Cora May, wife of William Childers, of Portland, Oregon; Emma C., wife of William Christensen, of Portland, Oregon; Roy L., member of the fire department, of Boise City, Idaho; and Leonard Ray, at home.

Mr. Morelock is affiliated with the democratic party, and is one of its progressive liberal adherents. Three of his six sons, however, cast their vote with the republican party. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M. lodge of Summerville. Edward B. Morelock is one of the men whose names will long be remembered in the history of eastern Oregon. He has lived a life of great usefulness and must always be counted one of the important factors in the enforcement of law and order, in this portion of the state. He has given liberally of his services to the public for this purpose, and at the same time provided a competence for his declining years. He bears an honored name wherever known and is always to be relied upon to give his support to the advancement of all measures looking to the improvement and continued peace among the people of his state and county.

JOHN MESSERLE is one of the well known and enterprising citizens of Catching's Inlet, where he owns a well located ranch upon which he maintains his home. He was born in Berne, Switzerland, December 1, 1856, and is the son of Gottlieb and Elizabeth (Yonker) Messerle, both of whom were natives of Switzerland. In 1860 the father emigrated with his family to America and settled in Iowa, where he continued to live for seven years, after which he crossed the plains to Oregon, settling first in Coos county, where he resided for four years. He then moved to California and in that state his death occurred when he was seventy-seven years of age. The mother is still living at the age of eighty years and maintains her residence in San Francisco with her daughter. To Mr. and Mrs. Messerle six children were born: G. L., who operates a wholesale and retail grocery establishment in Eurake, Oregon; John, of this review; Elizabeth, the wife of Frank Langley, of San Francisco, California; Rosa, the wife of George Mossler, of San Francisco; Nellie, the wife of Captain Oscar Anderson, also of San Francisco; and Fred, of Marshfield.

John Messerle was reared in his father's home and at the early age of twelve he started in life for himself, working at various occupations for many years. In 1882 he engaged as a marine engineer, an occupation to which he has since devoted his entire time, his work having been largely on ocean and bay steamers. He at one time owned two hundred and twenty acres of land at Catching's Inlet, six miles from Marshfield, but recently disposed of that property at the handsome figure of twenty-thousand dollars. Mrs. Messerle is at present the owner of a residence and thirty-six acres of land near the old family homestead. She also owns a valuable business lot at North Bend, Oregon.

On July 3, 1887, Mr. Messerle was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Eckhoff, who was born in North Bend, October 31, 1866, and is the daughter of Charles and Rhoda Eckhoff, the former a native of Holstein, Germany, and the latter of Baltimore, Maryland. The father was by occupation a sailor and as mate on board ship he reached the western coast at a very early date, settling in 1866 at Coos Bay, and he there purchased the land upon which now stands the city of new North Bend. On that land he established his home and continued to live there until his demise on May 11, 1911. The mother is still living, at the age of seventy years, and resides at North Bend. To Mr. and Mrs. Eckhoff twelve children were born: Margaret, now Mrs. John Messerle; Mrs. Edwin Baker, residing near Myrtle Point; Mrs. C. A. Painter and Mrs. Thomas Rooke, both of whom reside at North Bend; Mrs. William Forest, residing at Larson Inlet, Coos county; Mrs. Robert Nichols, of Hammond, Oregon; Mrs. Annie Cronkhite and Charles Eckhoff, both of whom reside at North Bend; Belle, deceased; Lillie, at home; and Mrs. Elsie Forest and Mrs. Freda Bentley, both residents of North Bend. To Mr. and Mrs. Messerle five children were born: Levi, who died in infancy; Fred G., born December 9, 1890, who married Miss Josephine Collver and resides at Catching's Inlet; Marrietta, born February 20, 1894; Rose M., born April 16, 1896; and George Washington,

JOHN MESSERLE AND FAMILY.

PUBLIC LIBRARY
AND

born February 21, 1899. The three younger children reside at home with their parents.

Mr. Messerle and his family are all members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Catching's Inlet. He is a republican in politics. Mr. Messerle is one of the well known citizens of Coos county and a man whose integrity of character and industrious life have gained for him the consideration and respect of all his acquaintances and associates.

DANIEL SOMMER is among the very first of the early pioneers of Elgin, Union county, Oregon. In that city he built the first store, in which he opened the first merchandising business in the place, since which time he has been intimately associated with the civic growth and development of Elgin, having been a member of the first council upon the organization of the town. He is one of the large landed proprietors of eastern Oregon and, now living in practical retirement, maintains his residence in the city of Elgin. He was born in the province of Alsace, France, on the 1st of January, 1850, his parents being Joshua and Henrietta (Marks) Sommer, who were likewise natives of that province and country. Joshua Sommer was a prominent dry-goods merchant in the city of Schirhoffen, Alsace, where both he and his wife passed away.

Daniel Sommer was reared at home and received his elementary education in the common schools of his native land. Later he added to his educational store a thorough business course by attending the Portland Business College. At the age of eighteen he emigrated to the United States, reaching New York on the 22d day of July, 1868. In that city he spent but a brief three weeks, when he continued his journey westward, traveling by way of the Isthmus of Panama, and after spending three weeks in continuous travel by water and land he made his first stop in the far west in San Francisco, arriving in that city in time to be numbered among the sufferers from the earthquake which occurred in 1868. He remained in San Francisco but two weeks and then removed to Portland, Oregon, at which place he spent but a short time, removing from there to eastern Oregon. He went direct to La Grande, at which place his brother was engaged in business, being the junior partner in the mercantile firm of Boskowitz & Sommer. Here he obtained employment as clerk in his brother's establishment and continued with this firm for the next four years. In 1873 he engaged in business for himself, forming a copartnership with M. Bloch under the firm name of Bloch & Sommer. This firm opened a general merchandising business, which was successfully maintained until 1874, when it suffered destruction by fire, the event being known as the "big fire" in the history of La Grande. The fall following this unfortunate loss he entered into copartnership, in Summerville, with his brother Aaron and his brother-in-law, Leopold Baer, under the firm name of Sommer & Company, the business being that of a general merchandising establishment. Mr. Sommer was made the general manager of this business, continuing his partnership with the firm for a period of two years, at the expiration of which time the company was discontinued. Eight months later he reopened the business as sole owner of the establishment, the store being located at the original site occupied by the former company. Here he continued to do a successful general merchandising business for the following eighteen or twenty years. In the year 1885, being aware of the rapid development of this portion of Oregon, he built the first store building in Elgin and opened a merchandising house as a branch of his Summerville business. This store he subsequently sold to Fine & Patten, who on taking over the property built for their convenience a new building in which to conduct their business. This stock and building Mr. Sommer was later obliged to take over in order to liquidate the unpaid balance of the original purchase price agreed to be paid him by Fine & Patten. Early in the '90s, immediately after the railroad had reached Elgin, Mr. Sommer removed his Summerville stock to Elgin and discontinued his Summerville store. In 1895 he sold his Elgin business, including the real estate, to E. E. Crossen and removed to La Grande, where he resided for the following ten months only and then returned to Elgin, in which place he soon after established his two sons, J. D. and J. A., in the mercantile business, which they successfully conducted until 1910 when they closed out their entire stock. On retiring from the business J. D. Sommer engaged in life insurance and J. A. Sommer established himself as an agriculturist. Since 1895 Daniel Sommer has given his time and attention to his varied properties located in Elgin and throughout the county of Union. Among his many business enterprises he is the owner of a very fine ranch, on which he makes a specialty of raising high-grade general purpose horses. He is one of the largest property owners in Elgin and his entire real-estate holdings approximate in round numbers between twenty-seven hundred and three thousand acres of very choice agricultural lands in Union county. Mr. Sommer was one of the dominant factors in the organization of the Elgin State Bank, which later was reorganized and is now doing business under the name of the First National Bank of Elgin. Of this institution he has been a member of the board of directors since its organization.

In 1875 Mr. Sommer was married to Miss Rachel Wertheimer of La Grande, Oregon, by whom he had three children: Julius D., engaged in the life insurance business with headquarters at La Grande; Joshua A., who is a farmer and stock raiser of Union county and maintains his residence in Elgin; and Henry S., who makes his home in Elgin and is likewise engaged in farming and stock raising in Union county. The mother died in 1905. In 1908 Mr. Sommer was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Amelia (Half) Risser.

Mr. Sommer is affiliated with the democratic party and is numbered among the liberal, progressive members of that organization. In local political matters he considers the character of the man and the principle involved and gives his support to the man of his choice regardless of party lines. He has served at different times as member of the town council of both Summerville and Elgin and has the distinction of being one of the members of the first town council upon the organization of both of these thriving cities. In March, 1912, Mr. Sommer was elected mayor of Elgin, the term of office to expire in March, 1913. His fraternal relations are with the following organizations: Elgin Lodge, No. 98, A. F. & A. M.; Portland Consistory, No. 1, A. & A. S. R.; and Orion Lodge of the Knights of Pythias at Elgin. Both he and his wife are members of the congregation Beth Israel of Portland. In all his business ventures Daniel Sommer has been uniformly successful. He has a thorough knowledge of the French, German and English languages, having perfected himself in a knowledge of the last named after coming to the United States. His name is associated with many of the most prominent and enduring business enterprises throughout Union county and he is known as one of the successful agriculturists and stockmen of eastern Oregon.

J. WICKHAM, who is the efficient assessor of Hood River county, Oregon, was born in Iowa on the 4th of January, 1855, his parents being S. J. and Hannah (Conner) Wickham. The father was born in Ohio on the 12th of June, 1825, and passed away in Iowa in June, 1904. The mother, whose birth occurred in 1831 in the Buckeye state, died in 1882. Throughout his life the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits in which he met with a good measure of success. His removal to Iowa occurred in 1847.

J. Wickham received his early education in the common schools of Iowa and subsequently attended Western College at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, for a short time. He removed to Oregon in 1883, settling in Umatilla county. Six years later, in the fall of 1889, he removed to Hood River county and purchased a farm. He resided there until 1910 when he was elected county assessor. At the present time he has about twelve acres planted as an apple orchard and eighteen acres prepared for general cultivation. He brings to his office unusual ability and quick appreciation of values and details.

On November 3, 1878, Mr. Wickham was married to Mary Windsor, whose birth occurred in Kansas, January 30, 1858, and who is a daughter of James and Catherine (Walker) Windsor, who are engaged in agricultural pursuits. To Mr. and Mrs. Wickham five children were born: Laura, who is the wife of H. A. Cummings of Hood River valley; Nellie, who is the wife of F. H. Taylor, an agriculturist of Hood River county; James L., who is living on the home ranch; Mary, who is married to F. Densmore of Hood River county; and Ray, who is still living at home.

In politics Mr. Wickham gives his support to the republican party in the local councils of which he is prominent. In 1905 he was elected to the office of county assessor and he has since held similar offices, being elected on his party's ticket. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and also holds membership in the Knights of Pythias. Because of his interest in the welfare of his community and because of his ardent support of any measures tending to civic improvement or development, he is accounted one of the most valued citizens in his community, and holds the respect and regard of those who have placed their trust in him by electing him to various offices. In the discharge of the duties of his present office he is both conscientious and honorable, working for the good of his county rather than personal advancement.

W. C. BOATMAN, who is the capable and enterprising clerk of Wallowa county, is the first native son of the county to be elected to any of its public offices. He has also served in the combined office of county recorder, clerk of the county court and clerk of the circuit court. His birth occurred December 23, 1881, near Lostine, which was then a part of Union county. He was the son of Marshall K. and Irene E. (Wood) Boatman, the father a native of Missouri and the mother of Polk county, Oregon. Marshall K. Boatman crossed the plains to Oregon in 1859 with his mother and brother, John Boatman, the father having died in Missouri. They located in the Willamette valley, north of Salem, in Marion county, where they remained about one year, when the mother married William H. Wood, and shortly afterward they removed to the Alsea valley, in Benton county, where they resided until 1881. In the meantime Marshall K. Boatman had wedded Miss Irene E. Wood, who was a daughter of William H. Wood and, therefore, a stepsister to her husband. In 1881 both families removed to what is now Wallowa county, then a part of Union, locating near Lostine, where Mr. Boatman engaged in farming and stock-raising, with which he was prominently identified up to the spring of 1908. At that time disposing of his stock but retaining his land, which comprises about seven hundred and twenty acres, he retired from active life and has since been spending his time in Portland and Tulare county, California, his wife having passed away August 14, 1911.

W. C. Boatman was reared under the parental roof and acquired his education in the common schools, and then completed a course at the Portland Business College, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1900. Soon after as a bookkeeper he entered the employment of F. D. McCully & Company, general merchants, who operated stores at Lostine, Joseph and Flora, Mr. Boatman being connected most of his time with the Lostine store. In July, 1904, he was appointed deputy county clerk of Wallowa county, in which capacity he served for four years, and in 1908 was elected county clerk and in 1910 was reelected to the same office.

On January 3, 1906, Mr. Boatman wedded Miss Helen Bell, the daughter of William T. Bell, who now lives retired in Enterprise. He was formerly identified with merchandising and for several years was county treasurer of Wallowa county, also serving as postmaster at Enterprise. Mr. Boatman is identified with Wallowa Lodge, No. 82, A. F. & A. M.; with Enterprise Chapter, No. 30, R. A. M.; and both he and his wife are members of Wallowa Chapter, No. 50, O. E. S. He also belongs to Lodge No. 94, K. P., and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Lostine. Mrs. Boatman is an active worker in the Presbyterian church. Mr. Boatman is a man of pleasing personality, genial in manner and obliging in disposition. His popularity as a public official is evidenced by the fact that both in his election in 1908 and in his reelection in 1910 to the office of county clerk, he was placed in his position without opposition, notwithstanding the fact that he is a democrat in politics and that the county nominally has a republican plurality of five hundred votes. Although a young man still, his sterling integrity, native ability and honorable business methods have won for him a leading place among the citizens of his county.

P. L. PHELAN. Lumbering with its affiliated industry of sawmilling is among the representative occupations of the northwest and the men who are developing and promoting large enterprises along these lines are progressive and influential forces. P. L. Phelan has given his energies and activities for many years to the operation of a large sawmill in Coos county near Myrtle Point and his yearly output is a valuable addition to the resources of his section. He was born in Nova Scotia, March 19, 1861, and is a son of William and Susan (Crouse) Phelan. His father was a native of Ireland and his mother's birth occurred in Nova Scotia where they were married and where they both passed away. They became the parents of ten children, seven of whom are still living: Alicia, the wife of Charles M. Firth of Liverpool, Nova Scotia; James W., a resident of Maldin, Massachusetts; John R., who makes his home in Liverpool, Nova Scotia; P. L., the subject of this review; George A. and Mrs. Judson Young, who also make their home in Liverpool, Nova Scotia; and Mrs. Charles Smith of Mahone Bay, Nova Scotia. The children of Mr. and Mrs. William Phelan, who have passed away are: Mrs. Charles Holden, the eldest daughter, who died at Shelburn, Nova Scotia; Margaret; and Elizabeth, who died in childhood in Nova Scotia.

P. L. Phelan attended the public schools of his native country and received a good business education. He pursued his studies until he was seventeen years of age and at that time engaged in the lumber business in Nova Scotia and later in the states of Washington and Oregon, continuing in that business for twenty years. His activities as a resident of Coos county have always been connected with the lumber industry. When he came to Oregon there was only one sawmill in Myrtle Point and this plant was the first of its kind erected in that vicinity. It had been in operation only a few years when Mr. Phelan purchased it and has since operated it with constantly increasing success. The enterprise is known as the Myrtle Point Mill Company and the output of the concern amounts to thirty-five thousand feet of lumber every ten hours. Mr. Phelan is also the owner of a block of land inside the city limits of Myrtle Point. He is an ambitious and energetic man with the power of organization and an ability to direct his subordinates, and his success has resulted from his constant application to business and his honorable commercial methods.

February 28, 1894, Mr. Phelan was united in marriage to Miss Rose Nasburg, a native of Empire city, Coos county, Oregon, and a daughter of John and Alice Nasburg, pioneer settlers of this state. Mr. and Mrs. John Nasburg settled in Coos county in 1872 and the former was one of its prominent and representative citizens during his life. He served his state in the Indian wars of Oregon and died in 1910 at the age of eighty years. His wife is still living and is in the sixty-third year of her age. Mr. and Mrs. Nasburg were the parents of four children, three of whom are still living: Sarah, the wife of Henry Reynolds of Portland, Oregon; John, who is in business in Florence, Oregon; Rose, the wife of our subject; and one child who died at the age of two years. To Mr. and Mrs. Phelan have been born two children: Preston, whose birth occurred in Marshfield, Oregon, July 21, 1902; and Rosemary, born in the same city, November 16, 1909.

In his political affiliations Mr. Phelan is a consistent republican. He holds membership in Myrtle Lodge No. 78 A. F. & A. M. and also belongs to the Knights of Pythias. He has filled all the chairs in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and in the Woodmen of the World. He has been prominently identified with fraternal circles of Myrtle Point for many years and his affiliations along this line form one of the important interests of his life. Mr. Phelan is upright and honorable in his private life, wise, energetic, and alert in his business capacity and his sterling citizenship is of a brand which is rapidly becoming representative of western America.

THOMAS F. JOHNSON, who is serving as sheriff of Hood River county, is one of Hood River's prominent citizens. He was born in Boone county, Kentucky, eighteen miles south of Cincinnati, on the 8th of March, 1873, his parents being J. L. and Martha (Miller) Johnson, both of whom were also natives of Boone county, where their births occurred in 1845 and 1844 respectively. The father served in the Civil war with the Kentucky volunteers, as did the mother's brothers. The father was a manufacturer and dealer of tobacco. He spent his life in his native state until he removed to Oregon in 1905, three years after his son Thomas F. took up his residence in this state. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson fourteen children were born, eight of whom survive: Fannie, the wife of G. D. Johnson, of Arizona; Ida, who is married to Douglas Moore, of Kentucky; Sallie, who is the wife of J. K. Carson, a resident of Hood River; Eleanor, who is married to Edward Creighton, also of Hood River; Thomas F., the subject of this sketch; Nora Belle, who is residing at home; Lucy Grant, who is living in Hood River; and Virginia, who also makes her home with her parents.

Thomas F. Johnson received his education in the common schools of Kentucky and upon his father's tobacco plantation acquired his first experience in active employment. Until the age of fifteen years he was employed in a tobacco warehouse but after that time took up farming and later owned and operated a sawmill in Kentucky. In 1902 he purchased a fruit farm of seven acres in Hood River county, which was wholly unimproved, but under his wise and efficient supervision it has been brought under a high state of cultivation and at the present time is set out to apples and pears. These trees are from one to six years old. He also built a modern and commodious home upon the property where he resides and he carries on his farming operations and also his business in the town. In 1908, 1909 and 1910 he served as warehouse fruit inspector of the Fruit Grower's Union in Hood River. Among fruit growers he is known as a man of scientific knowledge and ability and his sound judgment has been one of the strong factors in the development of the agricultural interests in Hood River.

On the 6th of December, 1897, Mr. Johnson was married to Miss Narcissus Reynolds, a daughter of William and Martha (Leach) Reynolds, of Kentucky. In their native state the parents carried on agricultural pursuits for many years. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson four children were born: Charles and Julius, who are both attending school; James; and Thomas F.

Mr. Johnson gives his political support to the republican party because he believes its measures and policies are most conducive to good government. He holds membership in the Knights of Pythias and in the Baptist church. In 1910 he was elected to the office of sheriff of Hood River county and he is at present discharging the duties of that office. In his political duties he displays a conscientious regard for both party principles and public welfare and in his business activities he is one of the strong factors in the progress and development of the community.

CONRAD MINGUS. From 1868 to the time of his death, which occurred on the 25th of May, 1900, Conrad Mingus was a resident of Oregon. He had already had several years of experience as a western man, having previous to that period been a resident of California. He was imbued with that spirit of enterprise which is characteristic of this section of the country and he contributed in no small measure to the work of general progress and improvement, while his efforts as an agriculturist resulted in the conversion of an old donation claim into richly cultivated fields. He was born in North Carolina, on the 6th of May, 1822, and was a son of Jacob Mingus, who died in that state. Conrad Mingus spent his youth under the parental roof and when about twenty years of age started out in life on his own account. Leaving North Carolina, he went to Missouri where he lived for several years, and then removed to Kansas. He was a brick mason by trade, following that occupation in the two states, but in 1849 he joined the long procession that was slowly wending its way over the plains to the gold fields of California, and for some time thereafter he worked in the mines. He then turned his attention to teaming and freighting and still later engaged in farming in Solano county.

While residing in California, in 1862, Mr. Mingus was united in marriage to Miss Lavina Dollarhide, a daughter of Jesse Dollarhide, who crossed the plains from Iowa to California in 1861. The couple began their domestic life in that state but in 1868 removed northward to Oregon, settling in the Rogue river valley in Jackson county, two and a half miles north of Medford. The place was an old donation claim known as Heber Grove, having been entered by Mr. Heber. Mr. Mingus resided on this farm until 1888 and during that period a notable change occurred in its appearance. Wild land was converted into rich fields that annually yielded golden harvests; fences were built; modern machinery introduced; and the progressive methods of the present age were followed. The years brought Mr. Mingus success as the result of his sound judgment and well directed efforts and in 1888 he retired with a handsome competence saved from his earnings. Taking up his abode in Ashland, his remaining days were there passed and he ever enjoyed the respect and good will of those among whom he lived.

As the years passed by the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mingus was blessed with a family of four children, namely: Francis M., residing at Grangeville, Idaho; Dr. Everett Mingus, a physician and surgeon of Marshfield, Oregon; Clara, who married W. A. Aitkin, of Medford, Oregon; and Daisy, the wife of Fred Robley, of Clackamas county, this state. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Mingus has continued to make her home in Ashland, where she has many warm friends. She belongs to Alpha Chapter, No. 1, of the Order of the Eastern Star. Mr. Mingus was a valued and representative member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Jacksonville Lodge. He was always loyal to its teachings concerning mutual helpfulness and brotherly kindliness, being ever ready to extend the hand of assistance to one in need. His political allegiance was given to the democratic party and he kept well informed on questions of the day but did not seek nor desire office. He had traveled life's journey for seventy-eight years when called to the home beyond, and the record he made through that entire period was one which commanded the confidence and high regard of all who knew him. There were no exciting chapters in his life record and no spectacular phases but he always did his duty faithfully, performing any task that devolved upon him in a public or private relation and it is such citizens who constitute the real strength of a community.

CONRAD MINGUS

THOMAS CARRICK BURKE. The fifth son of Charlemagne had a great-grandson who, as governor of his father's towns, was called John DeBurgh. Thus the origin of the name Burke. One of John DeBurgh's offspring was Harlowen DeBurgh, who married Harlette, mother of William the Conqueror. Third in descent from this pair was Adelm who married Agnes, daughter of Louis the Seventh of France. Their son, William DeBurgh, entered Ireland with a commission from King Henry; and, during his lurid career there, the family was transplanted to Irish soil. William's wife, Isabella, was the daughter of Richard the Lion Hearted. They left a son Richard, who rivalled his father as a freebooter. He changed the name further to Bourke. His grandson, Richard, is known as the Red Earl. This warrior trampled under foot English and Irish alike, until his victorious banner waved from every castle in Ireland. His daughter married the King of Scotland—Robert Bruce. The life of the Red Earl ended in a monastery, in 1326, where he entered as an Augustinian friar. His youngest son, Edmund, was afterwards seized by his kinsmen, incased in a weighted sack and hurled from the cliffs of Partry into the lake. From the murdered Edmund, descended the Burkes of Munster, who, for generations, fought the Burkes of Connaught, when there was no other fighting to be had. The separation of the tribe into these two clans is marked, even today, by the spelling of the name in their original seats—in Mayo, Bourke; in Galway, Burke. Edmund's son, Thomas, was the father of Thomas the Red, who founded the monastery of Mayone in 1460. On the altar, in that ancient pile, his tomb, decorated with the Burke Arms, may still be seen. The early monasteries of Ireland were the seat of the world's learning; and students, including Alfred the Great, flocked to them from England and the continent. Generations of invasion followed, during which the monasteries were suppressed; and, through it all, where fighting was thickest, were the Burkes. In 1635 the Earl of Stafford, by intrigue, secured for Charles the First, all the lands and titles of the Bourkes of Connaught; and, a few years later, what remained to the Burkes of Munster, was confiscated by Cromwell. Space forbids, nor is it important, to follow this genealogy down to the present. It is marked by statesmen, scholars, prelates, buccaneers and long lines of Irish rebels. The family names of John, Richard, Thomas, William and Edmund follow the trail. During the barbarous centuries that succeeded the landing of William DeBurgh, in Wexford, whether as chieftains on land, or pirates on the sea, the Burkes played a man's part, as they understood it; and, when they went in for piety, there, too, they went with all their might. In crime and virtue, in song and story, in church and state, in peace and war, the name is written high in the annals of the British Isles.

John Burke and Mary Ryan were reared in that beautiful section of Ireland surrounding the old abbey of Holy Cross. They came to America about the middle of the last century, were married in New York and had three children, who were born and grew to manhood in Iowa—Richard, "Tom" and John. When these boys were, respectively, nine, seven and five years old, their mother died and their father entered the Union service. Soon after, the war closed; but three years elapsed before his return. He then rescued the lads from a hired parentage and provided them with a kind stepmother and with brothers and sisters of this second union. In 1907, at the age of eighty-four, he succumbed to a surgical operation at Rochester, Minnesota. His widow occupies the old home at Sigourney, Iowa. Her own son, Edmund, is in charge of the business of the International Harvester Company in the north country, with headquarters at Fargo, and all her other children are filling positions of responsibility.

Of the first three, Richard graduated from the Iowa State College with the class of 1878, served for a time in a county office at Sigourney and then embarked in journalism at What Cheer and Oskaloosa Iowa towns. In 1883, he married Menza Rosecrans, niece of General Rosecrans, and is now living at Moscow, Idaho, where he represents an old line insurance company, as general agent for the state. He is the father of four sons and two daughters, Henry, "Tom," William, John, Mary and Ada.

John remained on the farm until his father retired from it. He then took a course in law at the University in Iowa City, after which he settled in North Dakota, where he rose to the head of the bar. He is now serving his third term as governor of that state. The delegates from North Dakota to the late national convention at Baltimore were pledged to him for president but on first roll call, he released them to Governor Wilson. He afterwards narrowly escaped the nomination for vice president. His wife and three children, Elizabeth, Tom and Marion make his home life ideal.

Thomas Carrick, or "Tom," as he is familiarly called, was the second, or middle, one of the three. He was born in Marion Iowa, December 15, 1856, graduated from the Iowa State College in the class of 1881, with the degree of B. S., and from the Iowa law school at Des Moines with the class of 1884. He at once entered the practice of his profession at the Iowa capital and continued it for sixteen years with a few broken intervals. In 1888 he was elected judge of the municipal court of Des Moines. In 1890, he was reelected to the same position. On retiring from office, he secured a passport from James G. Blaine then secretary of state, anticipating possible trouble abroad and went to Ireland, where, for six months, he roamed among the haunts of his ancestors. In the meantime, he attempted to portray in a series of letters to the Saturday Review of Des Moines, the effort, at that time, of Parnell, backed by John Redmond, to re-enter parliament against the opposition of Gladstone and the Irish clergy. But his heart was involved in the memories and traditions that still linger around the old home of the Burkes, where the murmuring waters of the Suir fill with fairy voices the ruins of Holy Cross Abbey. A branch of the Burke family still lives there. After his return to America, so strong was the ancestral call that, in 1893, he announced his desire to go, as consul, to Belfast; and, immediately, the democracy of Iowa united in a petition to President Cleveland, urging him for the place. Long after, it was learned that the Belfast consulate had been previously pledged.

On October 5, 1898, he married Frances Striegel, at Burlington, Iowa. She was the daughter of a Bohemian mother and German father. Her phenomenal record in the Chicago Musical College had been followed by study in Vienna with that maker of the world's great artists—Leschtizky, and a series of concerts after her return from Europe in 1896. She was a young woman of unusual charm and a pianist of the first rank. For more than a year after their marriage, they lived in Des Moines. In 1900 they came, temporarily, to Baker City, where they gradually anchored, and have since established a home. They have two children, Joselyn, aged eight and Thomas Carrick, Jr., aged four.

Since his removal to Oregon, although a member of the bar of the state, the subject of this sketch has followed the fortunes of mining—which first lured him west. He is interested also in lands and timber. He is president of the Oregon branch of the National Mining Congress; and, vice president for Oregon, of the national organization. By appointment of Governor West, he is a member of the state board of immigration; and, by election, president, also, of that body. He was the first to advocate and was active in helping to establish the Des Moines system of government by which the name of his adopted town was changed from Baker City, to Baker, when it led all the other cities of the state in taking on the commission plan. In politics, the democratic party, with which he has always affiliated, meets his views more nearly than any other. He is a democrat in the broadest sense, believing that, however, men may differ in attainments, mental or material, one man is as good as another if he is ethically as sound and has equal regard for the rights of others. He is a progressive in the current movement to bring the government, in all its branches, nearer the suffrage of the people; and, he insists, that women are included under that head. He was chairman of the Oregon delegation to the Baltimore convention; where, from first to last, he was one of the most intense fighters among the Wilson leaders.

All religions, he holds, are, and always have been, purely systems of belief; and that inasmuch as absolutely nothing is, or ever has been known of a future life, one man's opinion, in regard to it, is entitled to as much credit and respect as another's. That on a subject where all are, now, and always have been equally ignorant, the pity of it is, that, in contentions over it, millions of the human race should have perished and that the record of these tragedies should stand, in the name of the Almighty, on the darkest page in history. He believes that simple toleration and kindness toward our fellow mortals and a helping hand extended indiscriminately to them in the only life of which there is any earthly knowledge, has the advantage over all professional systems of belief, in bringing its reward without the intervention of death, or the possibility of doubt.

His social attachments are confined to his home and friends, outside of which, the big open lodge of humanity is, the only one to which he belongs. His indifference to small society customs and his general non-conformity mark him, perhaps, as strongly individual. An optimist always, his faith in men and in the ultimate triumph of right has survived many a shock—he remains an optimist.

B. B. RICHARDS is engaged in dealing in wheat in Athena where he also acts as an insurance agent. He was born in Polk county, Oregon, November 25, 1873, and is a son of James and Amanda (Simons) Richards, who were natives of Blue Springs, Missouri, where they were married in 1849. Their wedding journey was the long trip across the plains to Oregon behind a plodding ox team, which was at length completed and after which they settled in Polk county, twelve miles from Salem. James Richards secured an old donation claim of a half section of land and began the development of that property, upon which he and his wife resided until called to their final rest, his death occurring when he was sixty-three years of age, and that of his wife when she was fifty-three years of age. He had always followed farming and his life's experiences were such as usually fall to the lot of pioneers. He had nine children: James, living in Corvallis, Oregon; George, a resident of Portland; Ralph, whose home is in Granite Falls, Washington; Walter, who lives near Rock creek at Klondike; Ella, the wife of Henry Funk, of Salem; B. B., of this review; and three who are deceased, John, Harden, and David.

B. B. Richards was left an orphan by the death of his parents in his early childhood, after which he resided with his elder brother while acquiring his public-school education. He remained on the old homestead until about 1888 and the experiences of farm life gave him an excellent training for his duties of later years. He supplemented his public-school course by six years' study in the State University at Eugene, from which he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in the class of 1898. He afterward spent a year in the employ of a lumber firm in California and then came to Umatilla county, where he engaged in teaching school for two years. He next began buying and selling wheat and has since engaged in that business, which, owing to his capable management, has proved a profitable source of income to him. He is in addition agent for a number of old reliable insurance companies and this branch of his interests is proving remunerative to him. He has been justice of the peace and city recorder of the city of Athena for the past seven years and was the first city recorder of the town of Helix and drafted all of that city's ordinances when it was incorporated.

On the 16th of February, 1909, B. B. Richards was married to Miss Eva J. Rider, a native of Wallowa county, Oregon, and a daughter of William and M. Mattie Rider. Her father is deceased and her mother resides in Athena, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Richards have one daughter, Helen Elene, born April 14, 1912. They have a pleasant home in Athena and are prominent residents of the town. Mr. Richards is an exemplary representative of the Masonic lodge and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. His political allegiance is with the republican party. As city recorder his work is carefully and systematically done and as justice of the peace he renders decisions which are strictly fair and impartial, winning him "golden opinions from all sorts of people."

P. S. ROBISON is farming two hundred and fifteen acres of land three miles below Myrtle Point, on the Coquille river, Coos county, and has attained a gratifying degree of success in his chosen occupation. He was born in Cole county, Missouri, April 10, 1858, and is a son of Samuel and Lucina (Lampson) Robison. The father was born in Pennsylvania, in 1805, and the mother in Ohio, in 1819. They were married in Missouri and were among the earliest settlers of that state. They remained there until 1871, in which year they came west to Oregon and settled in Josephine county. Two years later they moved to Coos county and in 1873 the father took up a homestead claim in the Fishtrap valley where he cultivated the soil until his death, in 1892, in the eighty seventh year of his age. After his demise his wife made her home with her youngest daughter and died when she was eighty six years old. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Robison were the parents of eight children: Franklin R., who is now farming a part of his father's homestead; R. C., who makes his home near Portland, Oregon; C. T., of the Fishtrap valley; P. S., of this review; Mrs. Martha Able, who resides near Corvallis, Oregon; Orvilla and John R., both of whom are deceased; and George Texas who died in February, 1912.

P. S. Robison is almost entirely self educated. He attended school for less than a year but by intelligent reading has broadened his knowledge until he is now a well informed man. He remained with his parents until he was twenty three years of age and then started in active life for himself. He followed logging for four years and then married, afterward farming his father's homestead, which he managed efficiently and brought to a high state of development. In 1896 he purchased fifty-five acres of land on the Coquille river which formed the basis of his present large agricultural enterprise. He has at various times in his career added to his holdings until he now owns two hundred and fifteen acres of land, well improved and highly developed.

He has been successful from the beginning. He learned the rudiments of agriculture by personal experience and hard work upon his father's farm and at an early day became acquainted with the most approved methods of soil cultivation and with the detailed information of the management of an up to date farm. He makes his dairy, which he has conducted since 1892, one of the important branches of his enterprise and at the present time is milking thirty-seven cows for dairy purposes. He devotes seventy acres of his land to pasturing forty-five head of high-grade cattle and is known as an expert judge of thoroughbred stock. He sold his dairy products to the first creamery ever built in Coos county.

In 1883 Mr. Robison was united in marriage to Miss Laura Hoover, a native of Minnesota and a daughter of Aaron Hoover, who came to Oregon in 1875 and lived in this state, near Norway, until his death. Of the children born to Mrs. Robison's parents four are still living: Andrew, of Alameda county, California; Mrs. Susanna Myers, who lived in Norway, Oregon, and who passed away July 2, 1912; Willis A., of Bandon, this state; and Laura, the wife of our subject. Mrs. Robison's father died July 4, 1881, and was survived by his wife until November 11, 1906. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Robison have been born ten children: Caleb C., who is still at home; Beulah O., the wife of Clarence Schroeder, of Coos county; Walter S., who also lives with his parents; Leola, who married Ray Lewis, and is farming on the Coquille river; Franklin Roy and Lucina, both of whom are living at home; Beunice and Burnice, twins, who are now fourteen years of age; Florence, who is twelve years of age; and Glen L., who is eight years of age. Of these children all have attended the public schools of Coos county. In his political views Mr. Robison is a democrat but liberal in his interpretation of the party's doctrines. He is well known in public affairs in Coos county and is the nominee for the office of county representative which he secured without any effort upon his part. He has served for a number of years as a member of the local school board and is interested in educational expansion. Fraternally he belongs to the Grange and has been a member of the Masonic lodge for thirty two years. The year he joined the Masonic order he was made master of his lodge. In 1902 he was again elected to that office and served for two years, then served for a similar period as lecturer. Again he served two years as master but has since declined official honor. He has devoted the principal part of his life to agriculture and has attained a degree of success which is entirely the product of his own labor and which is inseparable from intelligent and specialized industry.

CHARLES H. BARTHOLOMEW, owner of a farm of four hundred and forty acres on Little Butter creek, is numbered among the most substantial agriculturists and esteemed citizens of Morrow county. He was born in Elmwood, Illinois, on the 13th of December, 1877, his parents being Alba and Mary (Coe) Bartholomew. The father's death occurred at Heppner in 1903 and the mother who survives him still resides in that town.

Charles H. Bartholomew was brought from Illinois to Oregon by his parents in February, 1884. He acquired his education in the common schools of this state, first at Milton, where he resided with his parents for three years, and subsequently at Sand Hollow. When he was twenty-seven years of age he removed to the farm on Little Butter creek where he is now residing and where he owns four hundred and forty acres, one hundred and fifty-two of which is under irrigation. He devotes its energies to alfalfa-growing and stock-raising and feeds a herd of two thousand sheep. The results of his energy and labor are shown in the highly improved condition of his property and the modern and substantial buildings with which it is equipped. His business ability and close application have gained for him rank among the progressive agriculturists of the county. His ranch is situated twenty miles from the railway station.

On the 27th of October, 1901, Charles H. Bartholomew was married to Miss Phebe Thomson, a native of Butter Creek and a daughter of O. F. Thomson, deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew three children, Mary, Fay and O. F., have been born. His many sterling traits have won Mr. Bartholomew high regard and he is numbered among the honored and representative citizens of Butter Creek.

CHARLES KING is the owner of a tract of one hundred and twenty-seven acres of land, constituting one of the best improved farms in Washington county. His birth occurred in Germany on the 23d of January, 1838, his parents being John A. and Margaret King, both of whom passed away in that country when forty-eight years of age. Unto them were born three sons and three daughters, of whom one son and two daughters are now in the United States.

In May, 1860, when a young man of twenty-two years, Charles King crossed the Atlantic to the United States, first locating in California. From St. Joseph, Missouri, with three companions from Europe, he had started across the plains on foot, carrying a blanket and a small amount of provisions but no money. He began the journey in June but did not arrive at his destination until October and was often on the point of starvation, hardly expecting to reach California alive. After working in a sawmill there for two years he came to Oregon, settling at Granite Creek or the north fork of the John Day river, where he operated a gold mine. In 1866 he removed to The Dalles, there remaining for two years. On the expiration of that period he came to Washington county, here taking charge of a timber tract which he had previously purchased. He developed the property into a splendid farm and cultivated the land for ten years before disposing of it. Subsequently he bought his present farm of one hundred and twenty-seven acres, which at the time it came into his possession was entirely unimproved and was covered with timber and brush. Since that time he has developed one hundred and ten acres thereof, now owning one of the most highly improved farms in the county. At present the land is worth three hundred dollars an acre. In its cultivation Mr. King has won a gratifying measure of success, being numbered among the prosperous and representative citizens of the community.

Mr. King has been married twice. In 1868 he wedded Miss Agnes Augusta Campbell, a native of Illinois and a daughter of John and Elizabeth Campbell, by whom she was brought to Oregon in 1852, when but three months old. Both Mr. and Mrs. Campbell died in Portland. Their children were twelve in number, namely: James, Thomas, Rachel, Charles, Mrs. Agnes A. King, Theodore, Elizabeth, Alice, Theodore, Wilbur, Ida and one who is deceased. By his first wife Mr. King had seven children, as follows: Thomas Herbert, who resides on the homestead place; Fred, living in Portland, Oregon; Annie Lulu and John B., both at home; George William, who is married and operates part of the homestead place; Margaret, who makes her home in Alaska; and Rosa, who is married and resides in Idaho. The mother was called to her final rest in 1897. Mr. King was again married, his second union being with Mary Osterhamer, by whom he has one daughter, Louisa.

In politics Mr. King is a staunch democrat but his aspirations are not in the line of office seeking. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Catholic church. He has now been a resident of Oregon for a half century and has participated in the wonderful work of development which has been undertaken and accomplished during that period. In an analyzation of the character and life work of Charles King we note many of the characteristics which have marked the German nation for many centuries—the perseverance, reliability, energy and unconquerable determination to pursue a course that has been marked out. It is these sterling qualities which have gained for our subject success in life and made him one of the substantial and valued citizens of Washington county.

WILLIAM E. HANSON, who is residing in Hood River, is efficiently discharging his duties as county clerk of Hood River county where he has resided since 1908. His birth occurred on the 12th of February, 1877, in Wisconsin, his parents being Fred and Martha (Nelson) Hanson, both of whom were natives of Denmark. The father's birth occurred on the 28th of March, 1840, and in 1866 he came to America at which time he settled in Wisconsin where his death occurred in 1910. Throughout his life he followed agricultural pursuits, and at the present time his widow is residing on the Wisconsin farm. Her birth occurred in September, 1855. To them four children were born: James C., who is residing in Soo, Michigan; William E., the subject of this sketch; Mary A., a resident of Wisconsin; and Carrie, the wife of Fred Kardell, of Wisconsin.

CHARLES KING

William E. Hanson received his education in the common schools of Wisconsin and graduated from the New Lisbon high school in the class of 1896. Subsequently he took up a two years' course in the normal school at Stevens Point, Wisconsin, and later engaged in teaching for three years before coming to Oregon in 1902. After his arrival in this state he taught school for two years, and has also been employed in the county clerk's office in The Dalles for a year. In 1908 he returned from spending a year in eastern Oregon and took up a homestead in Hood River county. Before proving up the claim, however, he had an opportunity to sell to good advantage and he disposed of the property and settled in Hood River where he was engaged as deputy clerk from September, 1909, until January, 1911. In the autumn of 1910 he was elected county clerk, and he still holds this office.

In 1909 Mr. Hanson was married to Miss Harriet Marden, a daughter of John M. and Harriet (Reed) Marden, residents of this state. The father, who lived retired at The Dalles, until his death in March, 1912, came west with the gold seekers in 1849, and after residing in California for a short time removed to Oregon where he was one of the early settlers.

Mr. Hanson gives his political support to the republican party and is a firm believer in the policies and measures as set forth by the administrative and executive bodies of that organization. He holds membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, an organization in which he is both active and influential. In his political, social, fraternal and business relations he has ever been found honorable and willing to give his best ability to any measures which may prove conducive to public welfare and development. Both he and his wife have won a circle of friends in Hood River which is almost as extensive as their acquaintances.

WILLIAM HARRISON REEDER, who was formerly an agriculturist of Umatilla county, Oregon, is now living retired in Tacoma, Washington. His birth occurred near Eureka, Illinois, on the 8th of August, 1851, his parents being Daniel A. and Eliza K. (Crossley) Reeder, who went to San Francisco in the early '70s and subsequently made the trip to the Willamette valley in Linn county by boat. They remained there for two or three years before settling in Umatilla county, where they resided after 1877. The father's death occurred in 1891, when he was sixty-one years of age. His active career had been given to agricultural pursuits and at the time of his death he was residing on the ranch near Helix. They were the parents of seven children: William H., of this review; L. B., who resides in Portland; W. C., who makes his home in Spokane; J. E., a resident of Tacoma; Allie Bostwick, deceased; Flora Elizabeth, who married C. M. Ely, of Tacoma; and Rhoda Bott, of Pendleton.

After the Reeder family took up their residence in Umatilla county William H. Reeder began to identify himself with the agricultural life of the district. At first he assisted his father upon the home farm and subsequently farmed the three sections of which he was the owner at the time of his retirement. Since that time this property has been managed and operated by his sons C. A. and O. H. His life has been one of intense activity and the success which he has won well shows his worth as an agriculturist. The farm is now being cultivated and improved as profitably and as ably as it was at any time during the father's ownership. The two ranches which were most recently acquired are planted almost entirely to wheat but ninety acres is given over to raising alfalfa. In 1904 Mr. Reeder removed to Tacoma, Washington, where he has since resided.

Mr. Reeder was married to Miss Alice A. Leedy, who is one of the pioneers of Linn county, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Leedy. To Mr. and Mrs. Reeder three children have been born. C. A., the eldest, born August 2, 1880, is living on the home farm. He was married to Miss Myra Owens and to their union two children, Claude William and an infant have been born. O. H. is also engaged in agricultural pursuits, his birth having occurred on the 9th of May, 1882. To his union with Maude Gholson one child, Leonore, has been born. Avalena Laverne who concludes the family makes her home with her parents.

Mr. Reeder won the success which is his by hard, persistent work which will always tell in the development of the soil of this rich agricultural district. He was one of the early farmers in this state and as such deserves great credit for the opening up of the farming districts of Umatilla county. Few men have won greater success and none have more sincerely won the regard and respect of their fellowmen. He belongs to that class of representative citizens who came to the west with the determination to find in a new and growing country the success which perseverance, labor and energy merit. He became one of the substantial agriculturists and his life history may well serve as a source of encouragement and inspiration to others, showing what may be accomplished when one has the will to work.

FRANCIS C. McKENZIE, city recorder at Hermiston where he has filled other public offices including that of justice of peace, was born in Circleville, Pickaway county, Ohio, November 3, 1885. On account of his services in the latter capacity he is popularly known as "Judge McKenzie." His parents are Leo

M. and Margaret E. (Ward) McKenzie, natives of the Buckeye state, who live in Pickaway county, where they have resided since their childhood. The father is a farmer and stock-raiser and his well directed labors have brought him substantial success.

Francis C. McKenzie is the fifth in order of birth in a family of ten children, four sons and six daughters. He is the youngest of the sons and was reared and primarily educated in the place of his nativity, supplementing his preliminary studies by a course in St. Gregory's Seminary at Cincinnati. He pursued a course in shorthand and bookkeeping at Circleville and afterward accepted a position as stenographer and bookkeeper in Columbus, Ohio, where he remained for a year. He afterward spent six months on a ranch in North Dakota and in 1905 arrived in Aberdeen, Washington, where he became connected with the Aberdeen Bulletin. He remained with that paper for a year and on the 7th of March, 1907, went to Pendleton, Oregon, where for two years he acted as manager of the Pendleton Tribune. He removed to Hermiston to accept the position of bookkeeper for the Newport Land & Construction Company and has since been actively and prominently identified with the business affairs and public interests of this city. In July, following his arrival here, he was appointed city recorder and on the 7th of December, 1909, was elected to that office. He was reelected on the 5th of December, 1911—a fact which indicates how capably he had discharged his duties during his first term. In November, 1910, he was elected justice of peace in which office he still renders decisions that are strictly fair and impartial. He acted as assistant postmaster in the year 1911 and has discharged the duties of the various public offices to which he has been called, with ability, promptness and fidelity.

On the 5th of November, 1908, Francis C. McKenzie was married in Umatilla county to Miss Georgia L. O'Daniel, a native of this county and a daughter of George R. and Alice O'Daniel, who are residents of Pendleton. Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie have two sons: George Francis and Raymond Gerald. The family occupies a pleasant and attractive home which Mr. McKenzie owns. He is a member of the Catholic church and fraternally is identified with the Woodmen of the World, while politically he is a republican. A young man, he has made a creditable record for one of his years and the sterling qualities he has already displayed argue well for success in the future.

THOMAS WILKINSON has been identified with stock-raising and has engaged in agricultural pursuits in Oregon since 1864. He has a fine farm and location and is marketing a large number of hogs annually. He was born in Peoria county, Illinois, January 24, 1837, a son of Jacob and Matilda (Cox) Wilkinson, the father having been born in Jackson county, Ohio, in 1807, and the mother in Ross county, that state, in 1808. The grandfather, Jacob Wilkinson, was a native of North Carolina and removed to Ohio at an early day, becoming a pioneer of that state, where he died while yet a young man. His son Jacob removed from his native state of Ohio to Illinois, where he settled in Peoria county, and later went to Missouri where he remained for six years, after which he returned to Illinois. He went to Nebraska in 1859, being a pioneer of that state, and after residing there until 1864 removed with his wife and eight children by ox team to Oregon. Emigrants at that time were having trouble with the Indians but Mr. Wilkinson and his family were not molested. He settled in High valley, a part of Grande Ronde valley, and lived there the remainder of his life, passing away in 1893 at the age of eighty-seven years. The mother died also in the same year, attaining the age of eighty-five years. While living in Oregon the father was engaged in the raising of cattle and horses, preferably the former. In his family were nine children, six sons and three daughters, four of whom survive: Thomas, of this review; Andrew, a resident of Union; Merritt, living in southern Oregon; and Elisa, the widow of Warden Hathaway.

Thomas Wilkinson spent his boyhood in Illinois, where he received a common-school education, and remained in that state until the removal of the family to Missouri. He has been engaged in breeding live stock and in general agricultural pursuits for many years, annually raising a large number of hogs from which he derives a profitable revenue. His farm is well improved with a comfortable residence, a spacious barn and other buildings, and is in a high state of cultivation.

Mr. Wilkinson was married November 27, 1879, to Miss Lydia Rundall, a native of Nebraska and a daughter of Henry and Hannah (Radley) Rundall, who removed to Oregon in 1876. To Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson have been born four children: Matilda N., Mary Ettie, Jacob Henry and Phillip Edgar. Mr. Wilkinson is well preserved and for one of his years with intelligent understanding manages his enterprise in a modern and progressive way. He is a good citizen and greatly respected by all who know him and esteemed by a large number of friends and acquaintances.

HOMER ISHMAEL WATTS is one of the respected and influential citizens of Athena, Umatilla county, Oregon, where he is successfully engaged in the general practice of law. He was born at Athena, January 1, 1879, and is the son of Thomas J. and Elizabeth (Naylor) Watts. In 1851 the father crossed the plains with ox teams to California from Missouri and after spending a short time in the Golden state he returned to Missouri. In 1853 he again removed to California, where he was engaged in the gold-mining industry for a number of years. In 1870 he moved to Umatilla county, Oregon, and there established his home and has since continued to reside. Mr. Watts was united in marriage in Missouri in 1871 to Miss Elizabeth Naylor.

Homer I. Watts was reared at home and received his elementary education in the public schools of Umatilla county. Later he was for some time a student at the Weston State Normal School, after which he completed his studies at the Monmouth State Normal School, from which institution he was graduated in 1897. He later completed a special course of study at the Throop Polytechnic Institute of Pasadena, California, being graduated in 1899 with the degree of C. E. He later entered the University of Oregon and after completing the required course of study was graduated from that institution with the degree of A. B. in the class of 1903. He then further pursued his university studies at Harvard, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1907 with the degree of LL. B. He then engaged in farming and also in the general practice of law, in which he has since continued.

On October 7, 1905, at Portland, Oregon, Mr. Watts was united in marriage to Miss Jennie J. Gaines. Mr. Watts belongs to the Sigma Nu college fraternity and is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. He is one of the useful and respected citizens of Umatilla county and a man whose abilities as a lawyer are recognized throughout his portion of the state. His unusual educational acquirements justly entitle him to a distinguished place among the capable and progressive men of Oregon. He is always ready to give his support to the encouragement and advancement of any measure of public interest intended to improve the educational and civic interests of the people of his county and state.

I. W. HOPE. Through successive stages of business development and progress I. W. Hope has worked his way upward to a prominent place in agricultural and financial circles and at the same time has been a potent force in the political life of the community. He was born in Viroqua, Vernon county, Wisconsin, on the 28th of September, 1861, a son of George W. and Emeline (Williams) Hope, natives of Virginia and Ohio respectively. He is descended from old southern families which were established in Virginia at an early day, his grandfathers, Peyton Hope and Richard Williams, having both been born in that state, while Benjamin Williams, the great-grandfather on the maternal side, was also a native of the Old Dominion. The grandfathers were early pioneers of Ohio, the Williams family going to that state previous to the removal of the Hope family, Richard Williams being but a lad at the time. In early manhood he took up his home in Wisconsin. George W. Hope, the father of our subject, died while serving as a soldier in the Civil war. He enlisted in Company A, Twenty-fifth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel Jeremiah Rusk, and passed away in 1863, having become ill during the Vicksburg campaign. Later his widow took her family to Kansas, where she has since made her home, now residing at Norton, that state.

Of the four children born to his parents I. W. Hope is the youngest. It was during his early childhood that removal was made to Kansas, and in that state he acquired a good education, completing his training in a private school. When fourteen years of age he accepted employment in order to help pay the expenses of his education, and he remained a student until eighteen years of age, when he put aside his text-books and went to Colorado, joining his brother M. G. Hope, who had the year previous preceded him and with whom he has since been closely associated in business interests. They remained in Colorado for only a year and then spent a similar period in Idaho, after which, in 1883, they came to the Vale district in Malheur county, Oregon, and homesteaded a farm two miles south of Vale. That remained their home until 1887, in which year the county was formed and M. G. Hope, having been appointed postmaster of Vale, took up his residence in that town. In the following year I. W. Hope again joined his brother and they opened a small store which, however, they subsequently enlarged from time to time until it became one of the important and prosperous enterprises in the community. On January 1, 1902, they sold that business, having in the meantime acquired considerable property and other important business interests which demanded their attention. They were interested in the establishment of the First Bank of Vale, now known as the United States National Bank, of which M. G. Hope was practically the organizer and the first vice president. They held the stock of that institution for about a year, after which they sold out and gave their attention to their stock-raising and farming, in which they had always been interested to a more or less extent since coming to Oregon, engaging extensively in the raising of cattle. They erected the Hope building, the first modern stone structure in Vale, of which they are still the owners. In October, 1910, they purchased the controlling interest in the United States National Bank, which is the outgrowth of the First Bank of Vale and in which they had formerly been interested. M. G. Hope is the president of the bank, to the duties of which office he gives his entire time and attention, while I. W. Hope is serving as vice president. The latter, whose labors in connection with the administration of the bank's business are not so arduous, gives the greater portion of his time to the brothers' outside interests. They now own four fine ranches in various sections of Malheur county, having in all about three thousand acres, and of these two farms are leased to renters. I. W. Hope gives his personal attention to the operation of the other two and raises large quantities of grain and hay, also keeping a number of horses. He is one of the really big men of the district, the importance of his various interests placing him foremost among the most prosperous and substantial business men of the county.

I. W. Hope was married in March, 1890, to Miss Lilly Gellerman, a daughter of Fred Gellerman, who came to Malheur county in 1878. By this union were born five children, namely: Norma, a student of Pacific University, at Forest Grove; and Erma, Mazie, Bernice and Hazel, all attending school.

Not only in business but in those other interests which go to make up the life of a community Mr. Hope has been a potent factor. In his fraternal relations he is an Odd Fellow and a Royal Arch Mason, being first master of the latter lodge under dispensation. He gives his support to the republican party and few have attained greater prominence in the political circles of Malheur county than Mr. Hope. He served on the school board for many years, has been councilman for several terms and is the present mayor of Vale, while in 1895 he was elected representative from Malheur county to serve in the state legislature, to which position he was reelected in 1897, serving throughout two terms. As chief executive of the town he is giving his fellow citizens a businesslike administration, performing his duties with an efficiency which indicates that the choice for the position was well made. Progress has ever been the keynote to his career, being a stanch champion of advancement along material, intellectual and political lines, recognizing that each has its place in the scheme of the world.

M. G. HOPE, president of the United States National Bank of Vale, occupies a foremost place in financial circles of Malheur county, and his various other interests give him prominent rank among the well known and prosperous citizens of his district. He was born on the 31st of August, 1859, in Vernon county, Wisconsin, a son of George W. and Emeline (Williams) Hope. He was the third child in order of birth, and in the public schools of Kansas he acquired his preliminary education. Later he pursued a two years' course in a private school and then had the advantage of a year's study in Bryant & Stratton Commercial College of St. Joseph, Missouri. About 1880 he went to Colorado, where a year later he was joined by his brother, I. W. Hope, of whom extended mention is made above. From that time the brothers have been continuously associated in business and today are the owners of extensive and valuable property throughout Malheur county. In 1910, in connection with his brother, Mr. Hope purchased the controlling interest in the United States National Bank, formerly the First Bank of Vale. He had practically been the organizer of that institution and served as its first vice president, but disposed of his original interests therein after about a year. He is now the president of the bank and to its management and control gives his entire time and attention. The bank now occupies commodious quarters in the fine new Drexel Hotel building, are elegantly and substantially furnished and equipped with all of the latest banking facilities. It is capitalized for seventy-five thousand dollars with a surplus of twenty-five thousand dollars, and its other officers are: I. W. Hope, vice president; J. P. Dunaway, cashier; and B. W. Mulkey, assistant cashier.

Mr. Hope has been married twice. On the 13th of January, 1888, he wedded Miss Emma High, a daughter of Francis and Sarah J. High, and unto them were born three children: Leslie, a graduate of the Pacific University; and Bessie and George M., both attending school. The wife and mother passed away on the 22d of December, 1904, and for his second wife Mr. Hope chose Miss Ora Smith, of Portland, Oregon, whom he married on the 5th of February, 1907. They have become the parents of one son, Paul.

Fraternally Mr. Hope belongs to the Knights of Pythias and to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and in the latter order he has passed through the various chairs, and he is also a member of the encampment. He has never sought political preferment, his interests rather centering in his home and his business, although he takes a public-spirited interest in all those issues which affect the state and nation. As president of one of the well known and substantial moneyed institutions of Malheur county he has come to be widely known in financial circles and his outside interests place him among the representative and influential men of his district.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN ROSS was one of the early pioneers of Oregon and during life he was identified with many of the business enterprises of Coos county which became the stepping stones marking the progress of that county from an uninhabited wilderness to a prosperous and well populated district in the state of Oregon. He was born November 27, 1827, in Spencer county, Indiana, and was the son of Evan and Catherine (Ashby) Ross, who later removed to Iowa, where the father died at the age of forty-five years. The mother afterward removed to Oregon, where she passed away in 1882, at the age of eighty-eight years, in Coos county. They were the parents of fourteen children, of whom only two are living: Mrs. Bonebrake, the widow of Josiah V. Bonebrake, of Coos county, Oregon; and Mrs. Louisa Hodson, the widow of Jonathan Hodson, of Coos river, Oregon.

Benjamin Franklin Ross was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of Marion county, Iowa. He was by trade and occupation a mason and devoted his attention to the business of his craft until 1850. In that year he emigrated to Oregon, crossing the great American desert with ox teams, settling first in Jackson county and later in Coos county. He was one of the first twenty-five white settlers in that portion of the state and was one of the first to build a residence in this county. On reaching Oregon he took up a donation claim in Lane county and later removed to Coos county, where he settled in 1851. To him belongs the distinction of having built the first hotel in Empire, which he operated for several years and he was also the builder of the first house of that place. He later engaged in the butcher business at

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR
TILDEN

B. Frank Ross

R. Elisabeth Ross

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

Marshfield, and in 1864 settled upon his homestead on Ross Inlet where he continued to reside until the time of his death which occurred March 15, 1912. During the years of his life as a farmer he was also engaged in raising stock of which he made a specialty. At the time of his death he left a landed estate consisting of three hundred and twenty acres of highly improved agricultural land and was also interested in various gold mines in Coos county.

Mr. Ross was united in marriage September 10, 1864, to Miss Rhoda E. Bonebrake, a native of Iowa, her birth having occurred April 19, 1842. She is the daughter of Jacob and Lavina (Drollinger) Bonebrake, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of North Carolina. They celebrated their wedding in Indiana, where they lived for many years and then removed to Iowa, being among the first settlers of that state and there continued to reside until 1862. In that year they removed to Oregon where they established their home and continued to live during the remaining years of their lives, the mother having died in October, 1883, and the father in 1894. They were the parents of seven children, five of whom are still living: Cynthia A., of Stockton, Kansas; Rhoda E., the widow of the subject of this review; John W., a resident of Coos county Oregon; Mrs. Josephine Riggs, of Marshfield, Oregon; and H. S. Bonebrake, who resides on Ross Slough, Coos county, Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Ross became the parents of one son, George F., who was born December 13, 1865, and who is engaged in farming on the old homestead. He was united in marriage to Miss Lucy Black, the daughter of Henry and Sarah (McGee) Black, both of whom were natives of Missouri and who emigrated to Oregon in 1864, and at present are living at Marshfield in Coos county. To Mr. and Mrs. George F. Ross three children have been born; George F., Jr., born on July 29, 1905; Mary E., who was born September 30, 1907; and Robert Everett, whose birth occurred February 25, 1912.

Mr. B. F. Ross gave his political support to the democratic party but was liberal in the exercise of his franchise. He was one of the veterans of the Rogue River Indian war of 1854, and a devout member of the United Brethren church. He was a man highly respected by all his friends and associates and for many years was a prominent citizen in the community in which he lived. Mrs. Ross now resides with her son George. The death of Mr. Ross brought loss not only to his family but removed from the state one of its early pioneers who had accomplished much for the business and agricultural development of what is now one of the richest sections of Oregon.

WILLIAM McQUOWEN, when a lad of five years made the long and arduous trip across the plains and yet has a vivid remembrance of various incidents of the journey. Throughout all the intervening years from 1862 to the present time he has been a resident of the northwest and since starting in life's work on his own account has engaged in farming and stock-raising, being today the owner of three hundred and twenty acres of valuable land in the vicinity of Baker, Oregon. He was born June 21, 1857, in Henry county, Iowa, his parents being Jacob and Mary (McMurran) McQuowen. The father was of Scotch descent and the mother was a representative of an old Pennsylvania family but was reared in Iowa, to which state she was taken by her parents when quite young. It was there that she gave her hand in marriage to Jacob McQuowen and unto them were born six children, three sons and three daughters, of whom William was the eldest. The others were: Lydia, now deceased; Martha, the wife of Frank Emery, a resident of Haines, Oregon; Thomas, who was born in 1865 and is living in Umatilla county; Alexander, who is married and owns a farm in the Powder river valley, near Baker; and Elva, the wife of John H. Hammond, of Haines, who is the owner of both town and farm property in that locality. The father of these children died ten or twelve years ago, at which time he was making his home about eight miles west of Baker in the Powder river valley. The mother still survives. They had crossed the plains to the northwest in 1862, making the long journey in a prairie schooner or covered wagon drawn by oxen and arriving in the Powder river valley in September. They lived at Auburn until 1863 and then went to the Idaho mines but returned to Baker county in 1864, the father securing a claim near Pocahontas. This he improved and thereon made his home to the time of his demise, and since his widow has lived with her children. She is now eighty five years of age and is remarkably well preserved physically and mentally.

Becoming a resident of Baker county in early boyhood, William McQuowen pursued his education in the schools of Pocahontas and his business training was that of the fields. He early became familiar with the best methods of sowing and planting, of cultivating the soil and caring for the harvests, and he has always continued in farming and stock raising. In this he has been very successful and is today the owner of a well improved farm of three hundred and twenty acres valued at not less than one hundred dollars per acre. He also has a tract of eighty acres of timber land and upon his place are commodious buildings for the shelter of grain, stock and farm machinery. His home, too, is pleasant and attractive and all of the equipments upon the farm are thoroughly modern. He raises good grades of cattle and horses and his stock constitutes an important feature of his annual income.

About 1905 Mr. McQuowen was married in Baker, Oregon, to Mrs. Annie (Elliott) Behm, the widow of John Behm. She was the only daughter of William Elliott, a prominent stock raiser and farmer. Mr. and Mrs. McQuowen have one son, Orrel, born in October, 1908. Mrs. McQuowen was the mother of four daughters by her first marriage. Nellie, who married William Thomason; Leliah, the wife of Robert Boyce; Ada, who married Edward Case; and Mary. Her sons-in-law are all farmers and stock-raisers and all live in Baker county.

Mr. McQuowen is republican in his political affiliation. He is fraternally connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, holding membership in Baker Lodge, No. 25. Having practically spent his entire life in Baker county, he is well and favorably known here and his sterling traits of character and worthy accomplishments have given him a creditable position as a business man and citizen.

W. E. BROWNELL, M. D., a physician and surgeon of Elgin, was born in Corning, New York, June 27, 1843, the son of Seeley and Louisa (Cook) Brownell, both of whom were natives of the state of New York. The father was also a physician and surgeon, being a graduate of a medical college, and for ten years practiced in Bath, New York. In 1849 he removed to Chicago, Illinois, going by sleigh as far as Buffalo, New York, and thence by the lakes to Chicago. There he engaged in the practice of his profession until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he volunteered as a surgeon in the service and died while in the army, at Memphis, Tennessee, in 1864.

W. E. Brownell was reared under the parental roof and acquired his early education in the public schools of Chicago. At the outbreak of the Civil war he became a member of the Ellsworth Zouaves of the Illinois State Guards, which as a body were mustered in the Nineteenth Illinois Regiment. At the expiration of their three months' enlistment Mr. Brownell reenlisted in the First New York Light Artillery, Battery G, and served with that command until the close of the war. His first enlistment was April 12, 1861, and his final discharge was July 24, 1865. He took part in twenty-four engagements, among them being the battles of Gettysburg, Antietam, Malvern Hill, and the seven days' fight in the White Oak swamps. He was wounded in the battle of Gettysburg and at other times during his service he had two horses shot from under him. After his return from the war he engaged in the hotel business in Chicago for a short time but met with very severe financial loss. In the fall of 1872 he entered Bennett Medical College of Chicago, from which he was graduated in the class of 1875. Following his graduation he practiced in Chicago for a short time and was there also engaged in the drug business. Later he went to Wheaton, Illinois, where he remained until 1880. In that year he removed to Ketchum, Idaho, where he practiced for one summer and then came to Oregon, arriving here in the fall of 1880. He first located at Echo, in Umatilla county, where he followed his profession for ten years. At that time he also conducted a drug store and for eight years was postmaster of Echo. In the fall of 1890 Dr. Brownell came to Elgin, where he opened up a drug store and for fifteen years carried on an active and extensive practice. For the past six or seven years he has largely confined his interests to office practice and now only drives to some of his old patients. However, he is still conducting the drug store, which has a large and remunerative trade.

On the 21st of November, 1883, Dr. Brownell was married to Miss Sarah E. Garrett, a daughter of John D. and Eunice (Stark) Garrett, who came to Oregon from Illinois in 1847. They crossed the plains with ox teams, their wagon train being commanded by Joel Palmer. They located in Clackamas county, where they took up a donation land claim, near which Mrs. Brownell was born. Later the town of Milwaukie was located on a portion of this claim. Mr. Garrett died in Acton, Umatilla county, December 13, 1889, at the age of seventy-nine years, and Mrs. Garrett passed away in 1893, at the age of eighty-one, in Elgin, where she was making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Brownell.

Fraternally Dr. Brownell is a member of Elgin Lodge, No. 98, A. F. & A. M.; of Oregon Consistory, No. 1, A. & A. S. R.; and both he and Mrs. Brownell belong to Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 52, O. E. S. The Doctor also belongs to Nathan Baker Post, No. 44, G. A. R., and Mrs. Brownell is a member of the Pioneer Society of Oregon. Almost thirty-two years have come and gone since he arrived in Oregon and during that time he has been an interested witness of and a cooperant factor in the many changes that have here occurred. He has ever taken an active interest in the general advancement and the public welfare and both in the professional and the social world he is one of the well known men of Union county. He has ever been an extremely busy and successful practitioner and his upright life has made him highly honored by all who know him. Both he and Mrs. Brownell are active members of the Methodist Episcopal church and he is also a trustee of the same.

ROBERT A. MASTERSON, who has spent practically his entire life in the Sunset state, has for the past thirteen years resided on a farm of twenty-nine acres, within a half mile of Richland, where he raises fruit and alfalfa and engages in dairying. His birth occurred in Jackson county, Missouri, on the 20th of January, 1851, his parents being William and Eliza (Bradley) Masterson. The family is of English descent and the parents of our subject were married in Missouri, where they resided for many years. William Masterson was a millwright, contractor, farmer and slave owner. In 1851 he crossed the plains with ox teams in the Masterson train, of which he was captain and which included his brother, Robert Masterson, Walker Young and Robert Campbell, who settled near Eugene, Lane county, Oregon, which was the destination of the train. William Masterson first located near Springfield, Lane county, but later disposed of his property there and took up his abode near Eugene. Again selling out, he settled in the vicinity of Soda Springs, where his demise occurred about 1876, when he had attained the age of about seventy-six years. His widow spent the remainder of her life with her son James at Elgin, Union county, this state, passing away about 1886. Mr. and Mrs. William Masterson were the parents of seven sons and four daughters, including James, an agriculturist by occupation, who wedded Miss Blanchard in Union county and makes his home at Elgin, that county. He has one son and one daughter. Daniel, a blacksmith residing in Boise, Idaho, first married Miss Alice Minor, in Cove, Union county, Oregon, by whom he had one son and one daughter. Following her demise he was again married, in the Boise valley of Idaho, and by his second wife has four daughters. George Masterson is deceased. Robert A., is the subject of this review.

In the acquirement of an education Robert A. Masterson attended the public schools of Eugene, Oregon. When about twenty-two years of age he left the parental roof and engaged in the stock business, raising cattle and horses in Wallowa county, this state. He there took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, which he improved and afterward sold, removing to the Eagle valley, Baker county, Oregon. He resided in the Wallowa country for about twenty-six years and was successful in all his undertakings there. In 1877 and 1878, he participated in the war against the Indians led by Chief Joseph, volunteering and serving as a member of Captain John Creighton's company. The settlers found it necessary at that time to build forts in order to protect themselves against the active hostility of the red men.

For the past thirteen years Robert A. Masterson has resided on a farm of twenty-nine acres within a half mile of Richland, which is finely improved and devoted to the raising of fruit and alfalfa. He gives much attention to dairying and finds this a profitable source of income, shipping his cream to Walla Walla, Washington, where there is a ready market. Careful management of his business affairs have won him a gratifying measure of success and he is recognized as one of the substantial citizens of his community.

On the 26th of June, 1876, in Cove, Union county, Oregon, Mr. Masterson was married to Miss Maria Reese, of English descent. Her father, George Reese, was at that time a stockman of Wallowa county. Both he and his wife are deceased, having passed away in Union county. They had three sons and eight daughters and of these two sons and four daughters still survive. The sons engage principally in farming and stock-raising. Robert and Jefferson Reese reside near Medical Springs in Baker county. The latter is married. Hannah, living at Walla Walla, is the wife of Frank Foley, by whom she has two sons and one daughter. Sarah, who lives near Joseph in Wallowa county, is the wife of James Wright and has six daughters. Martha, the wife of Hilery Mitchell, has one daughter and resides at St. Johns, Oregon. Maria married the subject of this sketch. To Mr. and Mrs. Masterson have been born six children, two sons and four daughters. Ida, living in the Eagle valley, is the wife of John Chapman, an agriculturist by occupation, by whom she has one son. Edna, living in Baker City, is the wife of Thomas Rich, who is employed as clerk in a store. Lillie, who gave her hand in marriage to W. A. Gillette, resides on a fruit farm in the Eagle valley. Sadie, living on a farm in the Eagle valley, is the wife of George Gordon, by whom she has one son. Jesse, a fruit farmer of Wallowa county, married Miss Angie Owensby and has one daughter. Earl lives at home. Robert A. Masterson provided his children with excellent educational opportunities and they have become honored and esteemed residents of their respective communities.

Mr. Masterson is a democrat but does not consider himself bound by party ties at local elections, casting his ballot for the man or measure that he deems will best conserve the general welfare. In former years he was connected with the Maccabees. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Christian church. He has gained honor and respect through his upright and honorable business career and through his faithful discharge of his duties and has won the warm friendship of those whom he has met through his kindly spirit, his generous disposition and his many sterling traits of character.

GEORGE BENJAMIN WOODWARD, who is residing near Adams, Oregon, was born in Umatilla county, near his present home, on the 27th of February, 1887. He is a son of Moses and Laura (Fletcher) Woodward, whose births occurred in Ohio on the 23d of July, 1832, and in Illinois on the 13th of July, 1851, respectively. The father crossed the plains in 1851, when he was nineteen years of age, with his parents, Elijah and Aurelia (Adams) Woodward, settling in the Willamette valley, where they resided until their deaths. The donation claim upon which they located after their arrival in this state was their home throughout the remainder of their lives. The Adams family, from which the subject of this review is descended, has been of national prominence, two of its members being President Adams, and in more recent times, William Adams, a second cousin of G. B. Woodward, was president of the Union Theological Seminary.

Moses Woodward settled in Umatilla county in 1872, but previously passed through the country with sheep, en route to the mines. He resided with his parents in the Willamette valley until after his marriage in 1872, when he located near Adams and engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1901. In that year he removed to Walla Walla, Washington, where he resided until his death, which occurred on the 13th of October, 1910. At that time he was the owner of seventeen hundred acres of land, which is now being cultivated by his two sons. These two large farms are some of the most highly productive and valuable land in the section. His widow is still residing in Walla Walla. By their union three children were born: Casper, who is residing on the home place; Eva A., who is living with her mother; and George B., the subject of this sketch. The father was an active member of the republican party and did much to further its interests throughout the state. He held membership in the Christian church and was one of its most benevolent and charitable members. During the early years of his life he encountered many of the hardships and difficulties which confronted every early settler in this region, but later he enjoyed the reward which these labors brought him, and the prosperity which he enjoyed at the time of his death was due entirely to his own efforts and conscientious labor. He was one of the wealthy men of Umatilla county and was very prominent.

George B. Woodward acquired his education in the common schools of Walla Walla, and later was a student in the Whitman College of Walla Walla, graduating from the same in the class of 1908 with the degree of B. S. He gained his first experience in agricultural pursuits on his father's farm, and it being one of the best developed places in the section was an admirable place to acquire experience in farm work. He is at present residing upon six hundred and forty acres of his father's estate which is located five miles northwest of Adams and is an able successor in its management. He resided in Walla Walla until his marriage, which occurred on the 18th of January, 1911, his union being with Miss Lula Isora Lienallen, whose birth occurred in Adams, Umatilla county, on the 12th of February, 1890, and who is a daughter of J. and Lucy I. (Adcock) Lienallen.

Mr. Woodward is a very active and progressive republican, and because of his keen appreciation of the advantages of a vote carefully cast he frequently votes for man and measures rather than according to the dictates of the republican party, which he realizes is, like the many other large political parties, frequently dominated by machine. He holds membership in the Christian church and also in the Farmers Union. He is one of the youngest agriculturists in Umatilla county, but he has so taken hold of his farm work that he has already given ample assurance that his property will not only continue in its present productive condition but will also advance as the science of agriculture advances.

SYLVESTER M. WERTZ, of Josephine county, Oregon, is a prosperous agriculturist residing near Williams on a one hundred and sixty acre farm which he purchased after obtaining title to a one hundred and fifty acre tract which he homesteaded. He makes a specialty of raising cattle and marketing hay, in which connection he has met with success. He was born in Pennsylvania, February 14, 1859, a son of Franklin and Martha E. V. (Bearley) Wertz, both of whom were natives of the Keystone state. They moved first to Illinois and at an early day came to Utah by horse team and later went to California, staying one year, and came to Oregon in 1869. They are both still living at Rogue River, Jackson, Oregon, being seventy-seven and seventy-three years of age, respectively.

Sylvester M. Wertz was reared in Pennsylvania and Oregon, receiving a common-school education in those states. He remained at home until he attained the age of eighteen years, when he began earning his own living by working at various occupations, including stage driving and cattle herding. He then took up a homestead of one hundred and fifty acres which he set about improving and cultivating and later purchased one hundred and sixty acres more, all of which he is operating. He has his land well improved and makes a specialty of raising cattle and hay.

Mr. Wertz was married, June 8, 1884, to Miss Lelia Carpenter, a native of Montana, and unto them have been born seven children: Sylvester, Lester, Virginia, Phillip, Ben, Isaac and Ralph. Mr. Wertz is a republican in his political faith and being a prominent man in his community, has served as school director. He belongs to the Dunkard church of which he is a consistent and active member. He is one of the substantial and respected men of his community and possesses a reputation for strictest integrity, being straightforward in all of his dealings. He is a business man of capability and one of the valuable citizens of the community in which he resides.

GEORGE H. UPTHEGROVE, United States commissioner and secretary of the Umatilla River Water Users' Association, makes his home in Hermiston and during the period of his residence in this part of the state has become well known as a progressive, enterprising citizen, whose practical efforts accomplish good results. He was born in Valparaiso, Indiana, June 21, 1880, a son of H. J. and Lucia (Hawkins) Upthegrove, who were natives of Pennsylvania and Indiana, respectively. The father died in Valparaiso in July, 1910, when sixty-four years of age. He had been reared in his native state and at the time of the great Chicago fire in 1871 was living in that city. He was there engaged in the hardware business, but lost all he had made through the conflagration. Later he became the founder of the Upthegrove Sporting Goods Company at Valparaiso, Indiana, which is still in existence. At the time of the Civil war he valiantly espoused the cause of the Union and served for three years as a member of the Seventy-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry. On one occasion he was taken prisoner, but after being incarcerated for a month at Andersonville was exchanged. He was twice wounded and suffered all of the hardships of war, but never faltered in patriotic devotion to his country. His widow still survives him and is now living in Valparaiso.

George H. Upthegrove is the only surviving member of a family of three children. He remained with his parents in the middle west until 1906 when he came to Hermiston, Oregon. He has held the position of secretary of the Umatilla River Water Users' Association for the past five years and for one year has been United States commissioner,

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

SYLVESTER M. WERTZ

MR. AND MRS. FRANKLIN WERTZ

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

to which office he was appointed for a seven years' term by Judge Charles E. Wolverton, United States district judge. The appointment came to him January 17, 1911. He is faithfully discharging the duties of his positions and in addition he gives his personal supervision to a tract of one hundred and twenty acres of land which he owns under the Umatilla project.

In 1901 occurred the marriage of George H. Upthegrove and Miss Estelle M. Croup, a native of Pennsylvania, who was reared in Walla Walla, Washington, where her parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Croup now reside. Mr. and Mrs. Upthegrove have two children, James G. and Georgia M. In politics Mr. Upthegrove is a republican and keeps well informed on all questions and issues of the day. Fraternally he is well known as a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and also of the Knights of Pythias lorge in which he is a past chancellor. His religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal church and his entire life has been guided by its teachings. He stands for all that tends to promote the interests of the individual and the community at large and his influence is always given on the side of justice, progress and improvement.

HERMAN ROTHCHILD, one of the most prominent and influential citizens of North Powder, having served as the first mayor of that place, has an extensive acquaintance throughout Oregon, particularly in Union and Baker counties. He is successfully conducting a mercantile business in North Powder and enjoys an excellent trade. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, July 11, 1858, and is a son of Abraham and Hannah (Frank) Rothchild, both of whom are now deceased. His father was a merchant of Wurtemberg.

Herman Rothchild attended the public schools of his native land until he attained the age of ten years and then entered the high school, in which he was a student until he was fifteen years of age. He then began serving in the German army, with which he remained until honorably discharged. In early manhood he emigrated to the new world and for six months resided with an uncle in Shelby county, Kentucky. In March, 1883, he came to Oregon, going to Pendleton, where a cousin, Samuel Rothchild, now residing in San Francisco, California, then lived, being associated in business with John E. Bean. He entered the employ of his cousin, with whom he remained until May 7, 1885, when he removed to North Powder, where another cousin, Joseph Barrett, was conducting a business in partnership with H. O. Gorham, a pioneer of that section. The cousin was in poor health and it was Mr. Rothchild's intention to assist him in business but his condition was much worse than he had anticipated and the cousin died a week later in a hospital at Portland. He then planned to assist in closing up the business of the firm but was persuaded to remain in partnership with Mr. Gorham, the firm becoming Gorham & Rothchild in July, 1885. Mr. Rothchild assumed active management at once and under his able direction a very successful business has been carried on. The firm occupies a very substantial stone building, the upper story being devoted to the purposes of the Odd Fellows lodge. For many years they handled farming implements but now carry on general merchandising.

Mr. Rothchild has had a notable political career. He was elected in 1906 a member of the state legislature and in spite of the facts that he is a democrat and that the republicans usualy carry the county by a majority of about seven hundred, he was elected by a small plurality. He had opposing him for the election an independent democrat, a socialist and a republican nominee. He was the only democratic member of the house of representatives in 1906 and when that honorable body convened he, in a humorous speech, nominated himself as speaker of the house and stated that he had the support of every democratic member. Mr. Davey, of Salem, a republican, was elected speaker and voted by way of compliment for Mr. Rothchild for that position. During his term in the legislature Mr. Rothchild, being the only democrat in the house and also a Hebrew, was featured very extensively in many of the Oregon papers, especially in the Jewish journals, which resulted in his mails during that time being very heavy. He was the first mayor of North Powder and served for two terms. His tenure of office might have been longer but as he is opposed to three terms he declined further nomination. He is at present the city treasurer of North Powder, a position which he has held for four years. He has also served for two terms as school clerk. Fraternally he is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge, having occupied all of the official chairs in the local organization. He has also been the recipient of the veteran's badge in testimony of the fact that he has for twenty-five years been an Odd Fellow in good standing. He is also a member of Baker lodge of Elks. He is a progressive, up to date man, generous to a fault, genial, bright and intelligent, and greatly respected by all classes. He is a gentleman of the highest order and a business man of more than ordinary ability.

L. S. BENTLEY, who is residing upon the two thousand acre tract of land which he rents near Pendleton, was born at Modesto, Stanislaus county, California, on the 28th of August, 1882, a son of R. H. and Cordelia (Tedford) Bentley. The former was a native of Illinois and the latter of Missouri. They were married in Missouri before crossing the plains about 1860 and located in California where they are now residing. Their home is in Stockton, where they have lived since they retired from their extensive ranch about seven years ago.

L. S. Bentley is the next to the youngest in a family of eight children. He received his education in the district schools of California and at the same time assisted his father with the duties on the ranch. He resided there until 1905, when he came to Umatilla county and engaged in ranching independently. At present he is renting two thousand acres of land, which he devotes to wheat growing, and so successful has his labor been that he usually harvests about forty bushels to the acre. Although he is one of the younger agriculturists in the locality, he is proving his worth as an extensive grain grower by the scientific methods and careful management which are seen in his undertakings.

On the 11th of February, 1906, Mr. Bentley was married to Miss Minnie Hanshaw, whose birth occurred in Modesto, California, on the 16th of October, 1882, being a daughter of Alexander Hanshaw. He has never sought to figure prominently in public life, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his agricultural pursuits, and he has won a creditable measure of success, his diligence constituting an important element in his prosperity.

CHARLES ELLIOTT DAVIS is a member of the well known firm of Davis Brothers, owners and proprietors of the Mountain View Stock Farm, located near North Powder, Oregon, on the North Powder river, where the firm is engaged in general farming and stock-raising. Mr. Davis was born in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, September 18, 1855, and is the son of J. E. and Rachel A. (Romaine) Davis, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of New Jersey.

J. E. Davis came to Oregon in 1874, making the journey to the western coast by way of the Union Pacific Railroad in part, then up the river to Umatilla and thence by stage to what is now Union county. After spending some time in looking over the territory he decided that it was a suitable place to establish his home and with that end in view he returned to Wisconsin, and later in the year effected a permanent settlement in Union, Union county. On his second journey to Oregon he traveled by way of San Francisco and from there by stage to the Grande Ronde valley, where he purchased a suitable habitation for his family, who followed him in 1876, making the journey by rail to Kelton and thence by team to the Grande Ronde valley. He had been for many years an employe of the Northwestern Fur Company, his business being that of buyer of all kinds of merchantable furs, and on settling in Oregon he continued his relation with the company, devoting his time entirely to this special line of work. At the time he settled in Oregon the primeval forests were filled with a great variety of fur-bearing animals and Mr. Davis was frequently able to ship to his concern two ton and a quarter of fur pelts per annum. The skins, purchased from pioneer trappers and Indians, included mink, otter, muskrat, lynx, martin, black and gray fox, wolverines and bears, and of these varieties several hundred pelts were included in each shipment.

Charles E. Davis was associated with his father in business and gave his attention to the buying of furs outside of the locality in which the family lived. His dealings were largely with the Indians in the more remote portions of northwestern and central Oregon and during his business intercourse with the red men he had a very wide acquaintance and friendship among them. Many of them even to this day, in recognition of their old-time friendship and business dealings, pay Mr. Davis an annual summer visit. He was engaged in the fur business during the uprising of the Umatillas and Nez Perce Indians and during that time, which extended over a period of two years, he was necessarily unable to accomplish very much in the fur business among them. He did, however, in company with his partner, Erwin Fraser, make numerous trips into the mountains, regardless of the disturbed condition of the Indians. In making these expeditions he of necessity kept a very sharp outlook upon the movements of the savage, but returned in safety without having encountered any serious difficulty. A detailed history of his experience with the Indians during the two years of the Nez Perce war is one of the sealed chapters in the life of Mr. Davis and he seldom refers to those pioneer events. One occurrence, however, is here recorded in memory of his partner at the time, Jim Davis, who was killed by the Nez Perce Indians at Wallowa in the fall of 1878. In 1877 Mr. Davis purchased a farm in Union county, which is now within the city limits of Union. During the winter of each year he devoted himself to the buying of furs and in the summer time to the improvement and cultivation of his farm. He later sold that property to the state to be used as the site of an asylum for the insane. The state later changed its purpose and used the property as an agricultural experiment station, the soil being particularly rich and well adapted for such purposes. Some time later he and his two brothers, A. B. and E. W. Davis, in company with Joseph Wright, built a flour mill of one hundred barrel capacity and successfully operated it for a period of twelve years, during which time E. W. Davis was engaged as head bookkeeper of the concern. They also purchased a farm in 1883 on the North Powder river near North Powder, and continued to buy adjoining properties until they obtained title to one thousand acres of rich agricultural land, well suited in every way to general farming and stock-raising. In addition to their land they also own the water right on the North Powder river, where they have installed a suitable head gate and other necessary equipment used in the construction of a modern irrigating system, by which they are able to supply the necessary water required in the cultivation of a very large farm. They raise a large amount of wheat, oats, barley and alfalfa and all of the crops grown on their farm are used in feeding their own stock. As breeders and raisers of stock they make a specialty of registered stock only, keeping Durham cattle, Poland China hogs and Percheron draft horses, the present head of their Percheron stables being "Jene Bart," purchased by them at the handsome price of three thousand dollars. The three Davis brothers and Joseph Wright, in addition to their milling interests, also engaged in general merchandising under the firm name of Wright & Davis Brothers for six years, after which time the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Wright taking the mercantile business and the Davis brothers the mill.

On October 31, 1888, Mr. Davis was united in marriage to Miss Virginia Benson, a native of Oregon and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Rounds Benson. She is a sister of George Wright Benson. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the parents of three children, Kenneth, Charles Elwin and Richard Benson.

For the past thirty years Mr. Davis has been a member of the Masonic lodge. Mrs. Davis is a member of the Eastern Star and also belongs to the Carnation Club, the Ladies Aid Society and the Woman's Relief Corps. Mr. Davis as a joint owner of the Mountain View Stock Farm is widely known, the farm being one of the largest, best equipped and most scientifically conducted of its kind in the country. In 1911 it produced sixteen thousand bushels of grain upon the cultivated land in addition to a large amount of forage used in the feeding of their stock. All the food is weighed and after feeding the weight of stock is taken. This method enables them to determine as nearly as modern scientific methods can the actual cost of both food and stock and so obtain with the greatest possible accuracy the net annual profits in the operation of their business. The Davis Brothers rank among the most successful, reputable and enterprising citizens of Oregon.

A. B. Davis, one of the owners of the Mountain View Stock Farm, was born in Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin, October 2, 1865. He was united in marriage in 1893 to Miss Rhoda Riggs, a native of Baker county, Oregon, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Riggs. Reuben Riggs, her paternal grandfather, came to Oregon in 1851 and located in Powder valley, being one of the earliest settlers in that district. He built the first sawmill in northeastern Oregon, located on the North Powder river. Her father was born in 1850 and died in 1886. Mrs. Davis is a niece of C. W. Slocum, now living in Vancouver, British Columbia, to whom belongs the distinction of having built a number of military forts in Oregon during its territorial period. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the parents of four children, Edna, Merton, Bruce and Walker. Mrs. Davis takes a lively interest in art and is herself an artist of great merit, her paintings having received favorable recognition by able connoisseurs at various times. Mr. and Mrs. Davis own and occupy a beautiful residence, located in the center of a block in the northwestern section of the city of Union. They are valued members of the community in which they live and are always identified with every measure of a public nature looking to the further educational and social advancement of their city.

MATTHEW W. MITCHELL. Among the prosperous farmers and fruit growers of Union county Matthew W. Mitchell occupies a prominent place. He is the owner of six hundred and forty-two acres of fine land, a large part of which is in a bearing orchard. He is a popular man of the community and in 1876 was elected to the Oregon state legislature, where he made an excellent record.

He was born in Jackson county, Missouri, November 13, 1843, a son of Frederick and Rebecca (Hill) Mitchell, the former a native of Richmond, Virginia, while the latter was born near Appomattox Courthouse, Virginia. The parents were married in their native state and in the '30s removed to Illinois. They later removed to Missouri, journeying thither from Illinois by team. In 1852, in company with a large party of emigrants, they drove across the plains to Oregon, settling near Milwaukie. The party had no trouble with the Indians during the trip and upon entering the state of Oregon, passed through the Grande Ronde valley and on to the place where they settled. They brought with them a herd of one hundred cattle, twenty-two horses and a Canadian pony. The first winter being a severe one, all of the cattle except eleven perished and of their eleven yoke of oxen only one ox survived. The horses all died, the Canadian pony alone surviving. In the spring following their settlement near Milwaukie they journeyed up the Lookingglass to a point ten miles west of Roseburg, where they settled and made their home for ten years. They then removed to Big Meadows, on the Rogue river, where the father lost all but thirty-two head of his stock. He then traded his land in the Lookingglass valley for cattle, bringing them to the Grande Ronde valley and settling at what was then known as the Toll bridge. He was keeper of that bridge for a number of years, and, being a man of energy and ambition, purchased land in various sections of the valley, which afterward increased materially in value. In his family were ten children, six sons and four daughters. He passed away in 1888, at the age of seventy-nine years and eleven months.

Matthew W. Mitchell, the third son in his father's family, spent his boyhood and young manhood under the parental roof. He was given a common-school education and after attaining his majority took a two years' course in the Roseburg Academy. He then engaged in teaching, continuing thus employed for about six years in Douglas and Union counties. Subsequently he entered the stock-raising business but later traded his stock for land and also purchased land from his younger brother, J. M. Mitchell, making that his home until 1909. Being interested in a cheese factory at Cove, he then removed to a thirty-one acre tract of land connected therewith, which he owned. This land is located within the northern limits of Cove and upon it Mr. Mitchell has since made his home. He also owns five hundred and eighty acres two miles north of Cove, one hundred and ninety-one acres of it containing a bearing orchard. Of the remainder about two hundred acres is suitable for fruit growing, the rest being farm land of value. He lives in a fine modern home, beautifully situated, the valley stretching out in front of it, presenting a magnificent prospect.

Mr. Mitchell has been married three times. His first wife passed away, leaving a daughter four months old, who is now Mrs. Lilly Brown. In 1893 Mr. Mitchell married Mrs. M. J. Russell, a widow, whose maiden name was Matilda J. St. John, a second cousin of ex-Governor St. John, of Kansas. In 1876 Mr. Mitchell was elected to the Oregon state legislature and served with entire satisfaction. He has been for a number of years a member of the school board and a clerk of that body. He is a man of sterling integrity, unusual business ability, and possesses in a rare measure those traits of character which make for good citizenship.

SHERMAN B. CUTLIP is one of the well known farmers of Coos county, located one mile from the mouth of Daniels creek where he is engaged in the cultivation of a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. He was born in Coos county, July 29, 1870, and is the son of Abraham and Harriet (Cook) Cutlip, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Iowa. They celebrated their wedding in Ohio and later moved to Iowa where they continued to live until 1852. In that year they crossed the plains to Oregon, settling in Willamette valley and there continued to reside until 1865, at which time they moved to Coos county where the father of the subject of this review took up a claim of one hundred and sixty acres, located on the south fork of Coos river. He with his family lived on that property for ten years, after which he sold out and settled on Daniels creek where he filed upon a homestead and there continued to live until he retired from active business life. Sometime after his retirement he lived in Douglas county and later removed to California, and died at the home of his son Sherman, in July, 1910, his wife having completed her earthly pilgrimage in 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Cutlip were the parents of seven children: Mark D., a resident of Coos county, Oregon; Almira, the wife of William Bonebrake, a resident of Coos county; Matilda, who is the wife of Alvin Smith, of Coos county, Oregon; Sherman B., the subject of this sketch; Roselie and Leonard, both deceased; and one who died in infancy.

Sherman B. Cutlip was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of Coos county. At the age of twenty-one years he started in life for himself and worked at various tasks for a number of years. In 1894 he purchased his father's old homestead on which he has since continued to live and has been engaged in dairy farming and cheese making and also in the raising of stock. His farm is finely improved and is located one mile up from the mouth of Daniels creek in Coos county.

On July 4, 1891, Mr. Cutlip was united in marriage to Miss Annie Laura Smith, who is a native of Coos county and the daughter of Nathan and Emily (Hobson) Smith, of whom a more extended mention is made in another part of this work. To Mr. and Mrs. Cutlip seven children have been born: Nathan S., born April 12, 1892, who resides at home and is attending high school; Guy A., who was born December 13, 1893, and is a student in the high school; Lorenzo, who was born February 29, 1896; Blanch E., who was born April 19, 1898, and is pupil in the public schools; Louis J., born May 20, 1901; Mary M., whose birth occurred July 15, 1907; and Robert S., born October 22, 1908. Mr. Cutlip is affiliated with the republican party and has his fraternal relations with the W. O. W., of Marshfield and with the Knights of Pythias lodge. He and his family are members of the United Brethren church.

Sherman B. Cutlip is one of the successful agriculturists of his part of Coos county, and is a man esteemed for his enterprising and industrious life and is numbered among the desirable and useful citizens of his county and state.

FRANK GILLIAM, former mayor of Heppner, a director of the First National Bank and also of the Morrow Milling Company, and formerly for two terms treasurer of Morrow county, is a successful and honored son of Oregon. He is the senior member of the firm, Gilliam & Bisbee and with his partner, L. E. Bisbee, owns six hundred and forty acres of land. Mr. Gilliam was born in Clackamas county, Oregon, November 29, 1854, a son of Jasper J. and Rose Gilliam. The parents crossed the plains from Illinois in 1852 and settled in Clackamas county, Oregon, where the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits until the time of his death, which occurred in 1862, the mother passing away in 1869.

Frank Gilliam was educated in the district schools of the Willamette valley until 1870, when he removed to Umatilla county. After remaining there a short time he settled in Morrow county, being employed at various occupations until 1887, when he engaged in the hardware business with a Mr. Coffey. After a time the latter sold his interest in the business to T. H. Bisbee, Sr., the firm name becoming Gilliam & Bisbee. Mr. Bisbee died in 1902 and his son, L. E. Bisbee, then assumed his father's interest in the business and has since remained in partnership with Mr. Gilliam. In addition to their hardware interests they also own a section of land. Mr. Gilliam is a director in the First National Bank of Heppner and is serving in a like capacity in connection with the Morrow Milling Company.

At Heppner, November 1, 1882, Mr. Gilliam was united in marriage to Miss Effie Wright, a daughter of Albert and Julia Margaret Wright, pioneer settlers of this state. To Mr. and Mrs. Gilliam five children have been born: O. V., who is following the profession of nursing; Leonard; Clinton, who married Hazel Carr; Earle; and Hazel, the wife of Charles Vaughn.

Politically Mr. Gilliam belongs to the republican party, of which he is an active and prominent member. He was one of the first county commissioners of Morrow county, appointed by Governor Moody and was also one of three commissioners appointed by Governor Moody to build the state road from Heppner to Monument, Oregon, a distance of fifty miles and on which ten thousand dollars was expended. He served as treasurer of his county for two terms and was formerly mayor of Heppner; an office which he has occupied eight or ten times. In November, 1910, he was elected county treasurer of Morrow county, his term of office expiring December 31, 1912. He is a candidate for reelection for the third time. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, belongs to the Shrine, and is also an Elk. Mr. Gilliam is one of the most prominent men of Morrow county, being known by practically all of its residents. He is greatly respected and has an unusually large number of close business, political and social friends by whom he is most highly esteemed.

S. B. CUTLIP AND FAMILY

JOSEPH E. TRIPPEER is the proprietor of a fine meat market in Cove and is doing an extensive business, purchasing all of his own butchering stock and curing all of the meat which he sells. He was born in Peru, Indiana, December 6, 1856, a son of John and Sarah Trippeer, the father being a native of Ohio while the mother was born in Indiana. The grandfather, John Trippeer, was born in Newark, Ohio, and removed to Indiana at a very early day when the Indians were plentiful along the Wabash river. He followed agricultural pursuits and owned a large farm, spending the remainder of his life in the Hoosier state. The father acquired the homestead and spent practically all of his life on the old farm. However, he removed to Missouri at one time and there purchased land upon which he lived for five years, after which he returned to the homestead. The farm is now owned by Benjamin Wallace, the circus manager and owner, who makes it his winter quarters. Near the Trippeer homestead in Indiana was an Indian settlement where the last chief of the tribe, Gabe Godfrey, recently died. The father of our subject was a prominent man in his community and for eight years was a school trustee. He also served as the sheriff of his county for a considerable period. In his family were five sons and four daughters, of whom our subject was the eldest, eight of the number still surviving.

The youth of Joseph E. Trippeer was spent on the old Indiana home farm and he received a common-school education in that state. When he was eighteen years of age he began to earn his own living, driving a team for his uncle who operated a large lime kiln and shipped his product to various points. He continued in his uncle's employ for two years. In 1876 he removed to Missouri, where he and his father purchased a farm on which they lived for five years, after which they returned to Indiana. In 1881 Mr. Trippeer migrated to Oregon and settled about forty-five miles south of The Dalles, where he engaged in farming. He continued in that occupation for five years, then spent a year in various sections of the state, after which he returned to Indiana. In 1887 he again came to Oregon and settled in Cove, which has since remained the place of his residence. After farming for one year he became engaged in the butchering business and has built up an excellent trade. He has a fine store with all of the latest equipment. Everything is conducted along modern lines and arranged in a tasteful way. He buys on the hoof and does all of his own killing, cures and smokes all of the hams and bacon which he handles and does a business of about twenty thousand dollars a year.

Joseph E. Trippeer was married, December 16, 1880, to Miss Alice Alexander, a native of Missouri and a daughter of William Alexander, who is now passing his declining years with Mr. Trippeer and his family. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Trippeer have been born two children: Herman, living at Walla Walla, Washington; and Eva, the wife of Robert French, of Cove. Mr. Trippeer is a democrat in politics and was elected mayor of Cove in 1901 and was reelected in 1906, 1908 and 1910. He is fraternally connected with the Maccabees, being a prominent member of that organization. He is one of the substantial business men of his town and community and bears an excellent reputation among his many acquaintances. He is an up-to-date citizen, always casting his influence on the side of those movements proposed for the benefit of the town.

RALPH A. HOLTE is one of the up-to-date, progressive young business men of the west. He is the cashier and general manager of the Bank of Stanfield, at which place he maintains his residence. His birth occurred in Ellendale, North Dakota, on the 23d of March, 1886, his parents being Nels T. and Rosa (Arneson) Holte, the former a native of Norway and the latter of Wisconsin. Nels T. Holte emigrated to this country when a young man of twenty two years of age. He reached America a stranger in a strange land, without funds and with no knowledge of the English language. His sole purpose in leaving his native country was to better his condition materially, hoping that he might some day find himself possessed of an independency and a business of his own. With a strong determination to accomplish his purpose, he manfully braved the difficulties of the new country as they were presented to him each in their order and has striven to accept from each new trial some lesson which might serve as capital for his further advancement. He spent his first year as a common laborer in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Subsequently he removed into the west and made his first permanent location at Ellendale, North Dakota. Of this place he was one of the early pioneers. Here he engaged in the undertaking and furniture business and made to his gratification and to his credit as well, he has been unusually successful in his venture. During his residence in Ellendale he has been called to direct the funerals of more than eighteen hundred people. He is a trusted man throughout his entire community and for a period of two years has served in the office of town councilman in the village of Ellendale. In politics he is a republican enthusiastic and loyal, always doing his duty as a citizen in the maintenance and advancement of the civil interests of his county and state. He is a member of the Commercial Club of Ellendale and in every respect one of the foremost, prosperous and representative business men of his locality.

Ralph A. Holte was reared at home and educated in the public schools and also at the State Industrial School at Ellendale, North Dakota, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1904. Following his graduation he was employed in his father's store for a period of one year, after which time he was made the assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Ellendale. In this capacity he proved his adaptability to the business of banking and by devoting his entire time and energies to this work he became proficient in all the varied phases of the banking business. In 1910 he resigned his position in the bank at Ellendale to accept the cashiership and general management of the Bank of Stanfield and he is at present identified with this financial institution.

In 1908 Mr. Holte was married to Miss Georgia A. Ling, of Fargo, North Dakota, and to this union has been born one child, Helen Maurine. He is a republican in his political affiliations and at present is the custodian of the city funds of Stanfield. He has also served as a member of the town council of Ellendale, North Dakota. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to Ellendale Lodge, No. 13. Mr. Holte fairly represents in his business and social standing the highest type of the progressive young men of his times. Before entering upon his business career he was highly favored with educational opportunities and after completing his school years he at once engaged in the battle of life with an earnest purpose to succeed in a way that would not only be an advantage to the community in which he might live but a credit to himself and an honor to his father. His responsible position in the bank at Stanfield is a guarantee of the confidence and esteem in which he is held by the business men of his county and a prophecy of his continued usefulness in his chosen field of service.

REV. A. MACKENZIE MELDRUM, pastor of the Christian church of Athena, was born in Ayreshire, Scotland, September 6, 1876, his parents being Andrew and Isabella (Smith) Meldrum. The father, who is a stonecutter by trade, is still living in the land of the hills and heather but the mother is deceased.

The Rev. A. Mackenzie Meldrum is one of a family of nine children and pursued his education in an academy and college of his native country. He was not the first of his family to cross the Atlantic, his sister, Mrs. Theresa Craig having come to the new world in 1888. Following the arrival of the subject of this review, his brother, John M. Meldrum, a ranchman of Union county, Oregon, sailed for the United States in 1895. A. Mackenzie Meldrum was a youth of about eighteen years when he left home and crossed the briny deep to the United States, after which he became a student in the University of Kentucky, entering that institution in 1897. He was graduated therefrom with the class of 1902 and soon afterward went to Melbourne, Australia, where he engaged in evangelistic work for three years. He traveled with an artist companion, Charles H. Gould, on the La Ventura, a yacht three hundred feet long with eleven feet beam and six and a half tons displacement. They explored twelve hundred miles of barrier reefs and hundreds of islands along the route to New Guinea. They spent over two years in making the trip, cruising southern waters until they encountered a cyclone, after which they traveled by other means. During this period Mr. Meldrum lectured and did evangelistic work in the principal cities of Australia. He has traveled extensively since reaching the age of fourteen years, visiting thirty-seven different countries. After passing through the cyclone previously mentioned he and his companion proceeded to the Philippines and afterward to China and Japan, Mr. Meldrum lecturing in the Japanese capital. Subsequently he went to Korea, traveling all over that country and also across Manchuria and the Chinese empire. He then went to Ceylon, visited South India, spent some time in Calcutta and afterward went to Thibet. Traveling through India, he stopped at all of the larger cities, made his way to Bombay, thence to Arabia and afterward to Egypt and other points in Africa. He visited the Holy Land and various parts of Europe, gaining an accurate and wide knowledge of many of the different countries on the face of the globe. He studied the characteristics and customs as well as the history of the people and wherever he went utilized his opportunities for sowing the seeds of Christian faith.

In March, 1908, the Rev. Meldrum came to Oregon and accepted the pastorate of the First Christian church of Pendleton. Later he returned to Scotland for his bride and while absent the church was burned, together with Rev. Meldrum's library and a valuable collection of curios which he had picked up on his travels. It was on the 2d of September, 1908, in Scotland, that he wedded Miss Helen Scott Crockatt, a native of that country. He returned to Pendleton and was instrumental in bringing about the erection of a beautiful stone church of that city which was built at a cost of about forty thousand dollars. In March, 1910, he came to Athena as pastor of the Christian church, thinking that in this smaller field of labor he would find opportunity for a much needed rest. Each Wednesday evening he gives illustrated lectures concerning his travels. Mr. and Mrs. Meldrum are the parents of two children, Coralyn and Isobel Helen, both of whom were born in Umatilla county.

It would be almost tautological in this connection to enter into any series of statements as showing Rev. Meldrum to be a man of broad scholarly attainments and wide general information, for these have been shadowed forth between the lines of this review. He is moreover a man of deep sympathy, keenly appreciative of life's opportunities and of the difficulties and obstacles which confront the individual. He readily extends a helping hand, speaks an encouraging word and thus aids his fellow travelers upon the journey of life.

J. T. WILLIAMSON is one of the substantial and influential men of La Grande and his city, which has one of the finest water systems in the state, is in no small degree indebted to him for its installation, it having been conceived and built during the time he was a member of the city council. He was for many years an efficient county official, serving in different capacities, and is now a successful real-estate dealer and attorney, making a specialty of land law.

He was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, March 17, 1851, a son of Thomas and Susan (Birkmire) Williamson, both natives of Belfast, Ireland. His grandfather, John Williamson, also a native of Belfast, lived and died in his native city. The marriage of the father and mother was celebrated in Ireland and in 1834 they emigrated to the new world, settling in Philadelphia. Later they removed to Iowa, where they resided until 1859, when they took up their abode in Missouri. In 1862 they started for Oregon, joining a wagon train composed of twenty-eight teams and vehicles. They had no serious trouble during the journey and arrived in the Grande Ronde valley September 7, 1862, the father settling upon a farm which is now included within the city limits of La Grande. He followed farming during his entire lifetime and passed away in 1884. In his family were six children, of whom one died in infancy, three sons and two daughters surviving.

J. T. Williamson, the youngest member of the family, spent his early childhood in Philadelphia and his early boyhood in Iowa and Missouri, where his primary education was gained. Later he accompanied his parents to the Grande Ronde valley, where he attended school, subsequently becoming a student in the old Christian College at Monmouth. After laying aside his text-books he engaged in mining in Sparta, Union county, and later in the Seven Devils and Cornucopia districts. He met with only ordinary success as a miner, which business he followed until 1880, with the exception of a few years spent as sheriff and as an employe in the land office. In 1880 he was appointed deputy sheriff, which office he acceptably filled until 1886. He was then connected with the United States land office as chief clerk from 1890 to 1895, after which he established his present business. He has made a specialty of land law and has been an extensive operator in real estate. In 1898 he went to Alaska, residing for a time in Cook's Inlet. He returned to Oregon in the fall but spent the following two summers in Alaska, following mining with only moderate success.

On December 8, 1887, Mr. Williamson was married to Miss Winnie Wilkinson, who was born in La Grande, a daughter of John Wilkinson, one of the early pioneers of the valley, who built the first flouring mill. To Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, ten children have been born, six of whom are living: Naomi, who is a graduate of the Oregon State University at Eugene and is now engaged in teaching, making a specialty of elocution; Joseph and Lowell, also graduates of the Oregon State University; and Ellis, Kenneth and Robert, all attending high school.

Mr. Williamson was for four years a member of the city council of La Grande and while a member of that body championed the installation of the magnificent water system of his city, which system is one of the finest of its kind in the state, and during the time of its construction he gave a great deal of his time and attention to looking after the details of its installation and is justly entitled to be called "the father of La Grande's waterworks." He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and is universally regarded as one of the most valuable and aggressive men of his town. He has an extensive acquaintance, is doing an excellent business and is greatly respected by the entire community.

MILES SHEEIRN, of Rainier, was born in Essex county, New York, January 1, 1837, a son of John and Anna (Cochran) Sheeirn, both of whom were natives of Belfast, Ireland, in which country they were reared and married. Coming to America in 1835, they settled in the Empire state and afterward became residents of Iowa, where the father entered a large tract of land and developed an extensive stock ranch, of which he was proprietor for several years. In 1849 he removed to Minnesota, where he conducted a large live-stock ranch, making his home there until his death. He was killed by a horse on the 1st of January, 1863, and his wife, surviving him for more than thirty-four years, passed away in March, 1897. In their family were ten children, of whom five are yet living: Miles, of this review; Mary, the wife of James Hendrin, now of Pipestone county, Minnesota; Matilda, the wife of John Soles, of St. Paul, Minnesota; Anna, the wife of James Low, of Slayton, Minnesota; and James, also living in Slayton.

Miles Sheeirn spent his youthful days under the parental roof, accompanying his parents on their removals to Iowa and to Minnesota. Following the outbreak of the Civil war, however, he enlisted, becoming a member of Company G, First Minnesota Cavalry, with which he served from 1862 until the close of the war in 1865, when he was honorably discharged at Fort Snelling, Minnesota. He then returned home and in order to promote his education again attended school for a year. In 1867 he removed to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, and went into the lumber camps, being thus engaged until 1887. That year witnessed his arrival in Rainier, Oregon, where he established a lumber business, continuing in that line until 1893. He next turned his attention to the real estate business and is now the owner of a half block on which stands the Grand Hotel, the first floor of that building containing four store rooms. He also owns and conducts a fine saloon and his property includes one of the attractive residences of the city.

Mr. Sheeirn has been married twice. In 1875 he wedded Miss Mary Ragin and of the children of this marriage, John is living in Oregon and Ellen, the wife of D. J. Leary in Minnesota. The wife and mother died in Ashland, Wisconsin, in 1883, and on the 20th of June, 1890, Mr. Sheeirn was joined in wedlock to Miss Mary E. Gault of Spokane, Washington. They have become the parents of three daughters: Alice, the wife of Arthur Lupion of Rainier; Frances M., a graduate of the high school; and Mary E., at home. Mr. Sheeirn is a member of the Catholic church and also holds membership with the Knights of Pythias, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Improved Order of Red Men. He has great appreciation for the social amenities of life and enjoys the comradeship of the members of those fraternities. By indefatigable labor and judicious investment he has won the creditable financial position which he now occupies.

ANDREW LUN is the owner of a fine farm of three hundred acres, located near North Powder, on which he grows principally hay and oats. He has on his farm an artificial lake of about twenty acres, from which he annually sells large quantities of ice. The lake is filled from North Powder river. He has also engaged quite extensively in the stock business. He was born in Wenersborg, Sweden, September 7, 1853, a son of Olaf Lun, who was also a native of that country and a farmer by occupation but also followed other lines of business.

Mr. Lun received his education in the country of his nativity, later attending a military academy. Previous to coming to the new world he was for some time in the employ of a railroad owned by the government of Norway, to which country the family had removed. In 1880 he emigrated to America, first settling in Canada, where he spent one summer east of Winnipeg. In the fall of the same year he removed to Minnesota, where he resided for two years. He then went to Beaver Canyon, Idaho, where he engaged in lumbering. He remained there for two and one-half years and then continued his journey westward to the Pacific coast, spending a year in Seattle, Portland, Montana and other sections of the west. In the summer of 1886 he settled in North Powder and was here engaged in the lumber business until 1892, when he purchased the fine farm of which he is now the owner. In the same year that he bought his farm he constructed an artificial lake, over about twenty acres of land, and engaged in the ice business, having since that time sold annually from eight thousand to fifteen thousand tons of ice. He furnished ice to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and supplied numerous customers along the line of that road until 1911, when he sold his entire output to the Pacific Freight Express Company. He has engaged extensively in the raising of fine stock and was one of the first men in his district to import thoroughbred stallions, the first one, Hayward, being brought to this country in 1893. Ten years later he imported another, "Walleur," and has raised large numbers of Percheron horses, selling principally to buyers from the coast cities. He was very successful in capturing first prizes for his animals at the fairs at which he exhibited. He has also raised thoroughbred Hereford cattle quite extensively. His stock-raising enterprises have been somewhat intermittent, however, as he is now for the third time engaged in that business. He was the first man of his district to sink an artesian well, his house being supplied with water from the same. In 1907 Mr. Lun erected his present fine residence, a two and one-half story building of modern type, and his farm, which is finely improved and extremely fertile, is one of the notable agricultural properties of the community.

In 1880, in Norway, Mr. Lun wedded Miss Hedvig Anderson and to them four children were born: Agnes, Emma, Lillie and Arthur. The wife and mother died and Mr. Lun later married Mrs. Ada May Amison, of New Orleans, Louisiana. They are the parents of two children, Andrew Hibbard and Iris Hundern, twins.

Mr. Lun is greatly interested in educational matters and for many years has been a member of the school board of his district. He is a member of the Masonic order, belonging to the York and Scottish Rites and also to the Shrine. He has for twenty-five years been a member in good standing of the Odd Fellows, being the recipient of the pioneer's badge, indicative of his long membership in that order and as an appreciation of his loyalty to the principles of Odd Fellowship. He is one of the most respected farmers and business men of the community and is greatly esteemed by a large number of people with whom he is intimately acquainted.

JESSE K. LOWE is the proprietor of one of the most up-to-date and completely stocked furniture stores in Florence. He was born in Kansas, March 10, 1877, and is a son of Samuel E. and Harriet Lowe. His parents were both natives of Illinois and in that state they were united in marriage, established their first home and continued to live there until 1870, at which time they removed to Kansas and settled near Sterling. In 1886 the family removed to Oregon, and made its first settlement in this state at Yaquina bay, where they remained for three years and then removed to Independence, Polk county, where the father purchased a farm, upon which he moved and continued to reside until 1893, after which he removed to Lane county and filed upon a government homestead located on Fiddle creek, where he continued to live for a period of five years, after which he removed to Glenada. The mother died in 1903, and the father is still living at the age of sixty-six years. To Mr. and Mrs. Lowe were born thirteen children: Kittie, deceased; Bertha, the wife of J. H. Jones, of

JESSE K. LOWE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

Bruneau, Idaho; Lucy, who is the wife of G. M. Howell, of Montana; Robert, of Glenada; Jesse K., Lida, who became the wife of F. C. Vader and resides in Lewisburg, Oregon; Nellie, the wife of William Plowman, of Adna, Washington; Leroy, who resides in Florence; Hattie, the wife of S. C. Morris, also of Florence; Elmer and Wilmer, twins, still at home; Bessie, now the wife of F. E. Monroe, of Florence; and George, at home.

Jesse K. Lowe was reared in the home of his parents and educated in the public schools of this state. He remained under the parental roof until thirty years of age, when he engaged in business for himself, his first venture being that of owner and proprietor of a meat market in Florence. This he operated for one year only, after which he disposed of his property and immediately thereafter engaged in the furniture business, to which he added a general real-estate business, and to these interests he has since given his undivided attention. He is the owner of valuable real estate in Portland and also in Wauksha City, Washington, and in Florence, Colorado. He is also heavily interested in various mining industries in the state of Idaho.

Mr. Lowe is affiliated with the republican party, but is in no sense seeking political preferment either in his county or state. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Florence, having twice filled all of the chairs. He is still a single man, but nevertheless associates with all the social and benevolent institutions of his city and is a man of public spirit, ready at all times to give the benefit of his influence to the advancement of political or social measure designed to improve the conditions of the people in his county and state.

HENRY RINGSMEYER is the owner of a valuable ranch of two hundred and fifty acres located two miles from Dayville, where he is successfully engaged in the raising of high-grade stock. He is one of the capable citizens which Germany has provided Grant county, his birth having occurred in Prussia in 1863. His parents are Frederick and Mary (Mollen) Ringsmeyer, who are still residing in Germany, where the father has always followed the carpenter's trade. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Ringsmeyer numbered nine children of whom our subject is the eldest.

Henry Ringsmeyer was reared at home and given the advantages of a common school education, after which he learned the shoemaker's trade, but never followed it. He was a youth of only eighteen years when he took passage for the United States, arriving in Cleveland, Ohio, on the 23d of May, 1881. After a residence there of two years he continued his journey westward to Oregon, arriving in the John Day valley in May, 1885. For six years thereafter he devoted his energies to teaming, but at the expiration of that time he began raising stock, meeting with such excellent success that two years later he purchased his present ranch, then the property of James Brackett. It is splendidly located and well adapted to the purpose for which it is being used. The entire tract is under irrigation, the greater part of it being bottom land, which produces an excellent quality of hay, in abundant quantities. Mr. Ringsmeyer is raising a high grade of cattle, sheep and horses, the heads of his herds being registered, and he is meeting with prosperity. He is a very practical man, of enterprising and progressive ideas, and exercises good judgment and intelligence in the direction of his business, which is being developed in a systematic and capable manner.

At Canyon City, Oregon, on the 15th of October, 1891, Mr. Ringsmeyer was married to Miss Amelia Le Bret, a daughter of Jules Le Bret, one of the pioneer merchants of Prairie City, of which he was also postmaster for about twenty years. He figured prominently in the progress and development of Grant county until his death, which occurred in 1887, at the age of fifty-four years. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ringsmeyer, as follows: Mary; Millie, who is deceased; Frederick, also deceased; Jules; Ettie; and Leah and Henry, who have also passed away.

The life record of Mr. Ringsmeyer is another substantial proof of the fact that success comes from enterprise and diligence quite as often as from favorable circumstances, and the most commendable achievements are those which are won through individual effort.

MARK M. GILKISON is a son of Union county, where he has lived during the greater part of his life, although he followed ranging and logging for a time in other states. He is now conducting a successful business in North Powder and is a popular man in the community. He was born in North Powder, May 31, 1871, the son of James and Mary (McFadden) Gilkison, the former a native of Zanesville, Ohio, while the latter was born in Illinois. The father removed with his parents from Ohio to Illinois and in the latter state he married Mary McFadden. In 1864 they removed to Oregon, the journey being made in company with a large party of settlers bound for the west. The father first took up his abode on Wild Horse creek, near Pendleton. After remaining there for two years he removed to the vicinity of North Powder, where he took up a government section of land, four miles west of the town. He later acquired additional land, making his holdings aggregate some seven or eight hundred acres, one hundred and sixty acres of which comprised some of the finest bottom land in the valley, the rest of his farm being used mostly for pasture. He followed general farming pursuits, raising wheat, oats, barley, rye and hay. He was a substantial citizen and a successful farmer, and resided on the old homestead until his death, which occurred on the 7th of March, 1911, at the age of seventy-three years. Of his children eleven are living, the subject of this review being the fifth in order of birth

Mark M. Gilkison spent his boyhood on the homestead and received his education in the district schools. His first business was that of riding the range and logging, at which he spent about eight years, a part of that time residing in California and other states. During those days he had many thrilling experiences such as were incident to the range and logging business in the early days. In 1901 he began blacksmithing and about two years later purchased the shop of J. E. Carroll in North Powder, having since then successfully conducted that business.

Being an influential and able man, he served very efficiently as a member of the city council. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, taking an active interest in the affairs of that order. Mr. Gilkison is a man of more than ordinary intelligence and ability and is physically a fine specimen of manhood. He is greatly respected by all who know him and is a leader in the community.

GEORGE ELMER MONTAGUE, who resides at Condon, Oregon, was elected to the office of sheriff of Gilliam county in the fall of 1910. He was born in Davis county, now Geary county, Kansas, on the 31st of March, 1875, his parents being George W. and Mary L. (Yates) Montague, who were natives of Kentucky and Missouri respectively. His paternal grandfather, George Montague, was born in New Jersey in 1810 and was a member of the city council of Maysville, Kentucky. In 1843 he removed to Van Buren county, Iowa, and shortly afterward was elected to the state legislature. For several years he acted as justice of the peace of Van Buren county, and in 1849 he joined the memorable procession of gold seekers and became a miner in the early days of mining in the Golden state. The parents of our subject were married in Kansas, where they had removed with their parents at an early date. On reaching his majority George W. Montague engaged in farming in the state of Kansas and was prominently identified with the agricultural interests of that part of the country until 1882. Early in the summer of that year, in company with his family, he crossed the plains by mule team and in the fall arrived at Baker City, Oregon, there spending the following winter. Immediately after reaching Baker City he secured the contract for building a log schoolhouse on Beaver creek. After the building was completed he was engaged as a school teacher of that district for a term of three months. In the spring of 1883 he removed to Walla Walla, Washington, at which place his brother was at that time living, having preceded him into the western country by twenty-nine years. He remained in Walla Walla until the fall of 1885, when he returned to Oregon and spent the winter in The Dalles. In the spring of 1886 he moved to Gilliam county, where he maintained his residence during the remainder of his life. On his arrival here he filed on a timber culture claim, and his oldest daughter entered a homestead claim on which the family settled and later made their home. He was for some years engaged in the sewing machine business, while his sons looked after the interests of the ranch, carrying on farming and the cattle business. He was four times a member of the government census commission for his county—in 1880, 1890, 1900 and 1910. He was a veteran of the Civil war, serving for three years as a member of Company F of the Sixth Kansas Cavalry. For twenty consecutive years he acted as commander of Arlington Post, Grand Army of the Republic. In politics he was a republican and during his active years he occupied a distinguished position as the leader of his party's interests in Gilliam county and was one of the representative men of his section of the state. His wife died January 15, 1899, and he closed a long and useful life on October 22, 1910, both passing away at their home in Gilliam county.

George E. Montague was reared at home, acquiring his education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. In early life he became one of the main factors in the conduct of his father's farm and in 1901 he filed on a homestead located on Eightmile creek, near the postoffice of Montague, which bears the family name. On securing his homestead he moved at once upon the place and engaged in farming and stock-raising which pursuits he has steadily followed ever since. In the fall of 1910 he was elected to the office of sheriff of Gilliam county and in the spring of 1911 removed from his farm to the city of Condon, the county seat of Gilliam county, where he assumed the duties of his office. Mr. Montague is still unmarried but is nevertheless an influential man in the business and social activities of the city and county in which he lives. He is a member of Morgan Lodge, No. 191, I. O. O. F., of Morrow county, and also belongs to Endymion Lodge, No. 66, K. P. He is a republican in politics, following in the footsteps of his father, and is known throughout Gilliam county as one of the reliable and efficient leaders of his party.

PLEASANT L. SMITH. Special mention is due Pleasant L. Smith, one of the successful farmers of Union county. He is the owner of five hundred acres of land one and one-half miles south of North Powder and by his well directed labors has attained influence and affluence. He was born in Lawrence county, Missouri, March 11, 1851, a son of Alexander and Elizabeth (Harper) Smith, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Illinois. The father removed from Tennessee to Missouri in early manhood, his wedding being celebrated in the state of his adoption, where he engaged in farming and spent the remainder of his life. Two of the father's brothers, W. H. and Josiah Smith, were soldiers in the Civil war, the former belonging to the Fourth Missouri Cavalry, while the latter was a member of the state militia. Alexander Smith was a strong Union man and the family were always loyal to the stars and stripes. In his family were nine children, of whom the subject of this review was the fourth in order of birth.

Pleasant L. Smith spent his boyhood days in Missouri, where he received a common-school education. At the age of nineteen years he and his brother Josiah removed to Boise City, Idaho, and engaged in mining, operating some claims which they located on the Snake river and meeting with a success which only about equalled ordinary miner's wages. They worked for other miners a part of the time they spent in Idaho, remaining in that business about seven or eight years, during which period they spent some time in the quartz mines of Utah. In 1878 Mr. Smith settled in the Powder river valley in Oregon, where he purchased state land three miles south of North Powder. After developing that land he sold it and settled about one and one-half miles southwest of North Powder, in Baker county, on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres. He afterward bought four hundred acres of railroad land adjoining his homestead and sixty acres of timber land. He has developed his farm, it now being all under water right, drawing its supply from the North Powder river. He raises large quantities of hay and alfalfa, having produced on one hundred and sixty acres as many as seven hundred and four tons of hay or four and one-half tons per acre annually. The larger part of his holdings is devoted to pasturage. In 1902 Mr. Smith removed to North Powder and purchased a home there, where he has since resided with his family. They have an artesian well on their city property, which was drilled to a depth of three hundred and four feet.

Pleasant L. Smith was married on July 3, 1876, to Miss Mary A. Tanner, a native of Tooele county, Utah, and a daughter of Thomas and Susannah (Elsey) Tanner who were among the early pioneers of that state. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith two children have been born: Clara S., now Mrs. Randolph W. Parker, of Wolf Creek; and Pleasant Della, now Mrs. Sidney Gibbs, of North Powder. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs are the parents of two children, Vesta Ione and Roscoe Lisle.

Mr. Smith, who is among the most successful farmers of his community, is indebted for his success only to his own industry, sound judgment and well directed efforts. He is republican in politics and has been for many years actively interested in educational matters and served for several years as school director. He is one of the substantial men of his county and enjoys an extensive acquaintance, being held in high esteem by a large number of friends.

P. A. McPHEE, who has been engaged in the hotel business at various times since 1867, was born in Lancaster, Ontario, Canada, on the 14th of August, 1850, his parents being Alexander and Hannah (Campbell) McPhee. They were both natives of Scotland but came to Canada shortly after their marriage. They spent the remaining years of their lives in Canada, where the father's death occurred when he had reached the venerable age of ninety-six years, and the mother's at the advanced age of eighty-four years. The father was a cabinet-maker by trade and was a mechanic of more than ordinary skill. He had five children: Mary, of Belleville, Ontario; Daniel, of St. Paul; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Robert Strahan, of Belleville, Ontario; Hugh, a resident of Belleville; and P. A., the subject of this review.

P. A. McPhee received his education in the country schools and until he was fourteen years of age remained at home upon the farm, where he proved a willing assistant in all farm operations. After leaving home he stopped for a short time at Leavenworth, Kansas, where he accepted employment as night clerk in the Brevort Hotel. About 1867 he removed to Wyoming and began railroading until the work on the Union Pacific railroad was completed. Subsequently he removed to Sweetwater and during the excitement in the spring of 1869 became sheriff of Sweetwater county. He served for four terms before becoming connected with a hotel in Ogden, Utah, which he conducted for two years, beginning in 1878. Later he went to Idaho and engaged in the hotel business, having been connected with the Hot Springs Hotel. He also served as deputy sheriff there, and afterward resided in Neihart, Montana, for about two years, at the end of which time he went to Cantley, British Columbia, during the excitement of 1892-3. Previously he had had some exciting experiences with Indians in Wyoming, such as were frequent in the pioneer life of that state. In 1898 he removed to Spokane, Washington, and conducted the River-view Dining Room, which is one of the most popular restaurants in the city. The following year he came to Oregon, locating in Grant county. He conducted a hotel which he built in that county, for four years, when it was destroyed by fire and Mr. McPhee turned his attention to mining projects. He had several prospects in view and he was employed in promoting them for some time. He was postmaster of Austin for one year before he removed to Portland, where he was employed in various ways. Finally he leased the Bingham Springs resort and conducted that place for two years. It now belongs to the city of Portland and twenty thousand dollars has been given for its improvement. Mr. McPhee is its manager and is an efficient promoter of the undertaking. Since 1867 he has been identified with the hotel interests of the northwest. During these years he has made the acquaintance of a large number of those people who travel through this part of the country and he has helped to bring the standard of hotels to the state of perfection which they have reached.

In 1873 P. A. McPhee was married to Miss Jennie L. Kidder, whose birth occurred in New Hampshire, and who is a daughter of A. N. Kidder. Mr. and Mrs. McPhee had two children, both of whom are deceased. Mr. McPhee is a democrat and he has frequently taken an active part in political circles of the communities in which he has resided. During the fourteen years he has lived in Oregon he has become one of its most enthusiastic admirers and most ardent supporters. Association with him means expansion and progress and he is prominent in those circles where ability and intelligence are regarded as essential attributes to success.

SHERWOOD WILLIAMS is cashier of the State Bank of Imbler and the originator and president of the Fruit Growers Mutual Association of La Grande and the Eastern Oregon Fruit Growers Association. He is a young man of unusual ability and popularity, having an extensive acquaintance. Like most of the Celtic race, being of Welsh descent, he is musically inclined, which adds to his value as a citizen. He was born in Chester Hill, Ohio, February 17, 1880, a son of Oliver W. and Sarah R. (Larkin) Williams, the father a native of Ohio and the mother of Pennsylvania. The grandfather, Caleb A. Williams, was the first member of the family to visit Oregon, migrating here in the '80s, settling in the old town of La Grande, where he engaged in farming. His wife, Rebecca (Terrell) Williams, was a leader in the Friends church. She was a native of Pennsylvania and belonged to one of the prominent families connected with the Friends Society in that state. Oliver W. Williams and his family became residents of Oregon in 1890, settling at La Grande, where the father engaged in farming and also conducted a mercantile business in that town for a number of years. He also handled real estate as an auxiliary to his other business endeavors, being successful in his various undertakings. He was a prominent citizen of the community and served as a member of the city council for a number of years, passing away in 1904 at the age of fifty-five years. His widow is still living in La Grande. In their family were four children, namely: Mabel O., the wife of P. A. Robbins, of Santa Barbara, California; Thomas L., an employe of Ladd & Bush, bankers, of Salem; Sherwood, of this review; and Raymond O., a student of the University of Oregon.

Sherwood Williams was educated in the schools of La Grande and was graduated from the high school of that place in May, 1898, standing high in his class. In August of the same year he entered the employ of the La Grande National Bank, an institution with which he remained until 1910, serving in the capacity of assistant cashier. He has for many years been interested in fruit lands and fruit-growing and owns a bearing orchard near La Grande, comprising fifteen acres. He is raising principally Roman Beauty, Jonathan, Yellow Newtown Pippin and Gano apples, these varieties being considered by him the best adapted to climate conditions in that section. After leaving the employ of the La Grande National Bank he organized the Fruit Growers Mutual Association of La Grande, its object being to conserve the interests of the orchardists by systematizing the business, keeping in touch with the markets and inducing the growers to work collectively instead of individually. The organization has proved very successful and has saved the fruit growers of the La Grande district a great deal of money and added materially to their profits. He next interested himself in a similar organization of more magnitude and in 1911 organized the Eastern Oregon Fruit Growers Association, which bids fair to be an equal success. Mr. Williams was elected president of both organizations and continues to hold this office. He has a controlling interest in one hundred and forty acres of orchard land, one hundred acres of which he has sold on easy terms in small tracts. These tracts he has been planting to fruit and is caring for them for the purchasers, the land being situated adjacent to Imbler. Recently he has in company with Mr. Cleaver organized the State Bank of Imbler, of which Mr. Cleaver is president and Mr. Williams cashier. The bank has a capital stock of twenty-five thousand dollars and is doing a very satisfactory business.

Sherwood Williams was married, February 10, 1904, to Miss Nellie F. Grandy, a native of La Grande and a daughter of Ben W. Grandy, a prominent pioneer of that city. Unto this union have been born two children, Helen Grace and Jean. Fraternally Mr. Williams is a charter member of the local lodge of the Modern Woodmen of America and has held all of the official chairs of that organization. He is among the most popular young business men of Union county and his ability is such as to give promise that he will become one of the most valuable citizens of that section. He has been successful in all of his business undertakings, makes many friends and holds them, and his standing in the community is of the highest order.

WILLIAM DE VENY, a chiropodist of Portland, was born in Henry county, Illinois, near Annawan, December 18, 1852, and comes of French descent. His ancestors came from France at the time of the religious persecution there. His parents were Timothy and Jane (Willett) De Veny, and his paternal grandparents were William and Anna De Veny. Both father and grandfather were born in Pennsylvania near Pittsburg, while the mother of William De Veny of this review, was a native of Indiana.

William De Veny was only nine years of age at the time of his mother's death. He acquired his education in the district schools but his opportunities were very limited, for at the time of his mother's death he went to live among strangers and was accorded few school privileges. At times, however, he did chores upon farms for his board and the opportunity of pursuing his studies in the district school through the winter months. From the time of his mother's death he never had a home of his own until he made one for himself. In his youth and early manhood he followed farming and later he took up the study of chiropody, being today manager of the Scientific Chiropodist School, which was incorporated in 1911 and which teaches a process that was developed by Mr. De Veny about thirty years ago. He entered upon the practice of chiropody in the year 1873 in Nebraska, to which state he had removed in 1871, being connected with farming interests there for about two years. Nebraska was at that time a frontier district and in early days Mr. De Veny became acquainted with such men as Buffalo Bill, Wild Bill, Buckskin Sam, California Joe and other famous scouts of the time. That he greatly resembles the Nebraska rancher, scout and statesman is evidenced in the fact that almost every day strangers address him as Buffalo Bill, and Colonel Cody himself called Mr. De Veny "Buffalo Bill of Portland" when the Colonel was last a visitor to this state. During the period of his residence in Nebraska he was actively interested in contests over election of the county seats of Adams and Clay counties, and in 1886 was again a factor in the agitation which arose concerning the location of the county seat in Grant, Kansas, Haskell and Stevens counties. In the meantime he continued in the practice of his chosen profession until 1893, when he removed to Portland, Oregon, from Lincoln, Nebraska. In the present city of his residence he has continuously practiced chiropody, standing at the head of the profession here. He took up his abode at Montavilla, one of the attractive suburbs of the city. For five years the situation was often a difficult one but at the end of that time conditions took a turn for the better. Mr. De Veny became closely associated with the work of public progress and improvement, being especially active in all efforts to build a better Montavilla. He was instrumental in organizing the Montavilla Board of Trade, through which was secured a water supply from Bull Run. Later he was prominent in the movement to secure the annexation of Montavilla to the city of Portland and to his efforts is directly attributable the widening of East Galisson street to eighty feet. Again he became a leader in movements to secure better street car facilities, also railway siding on the O. R. & N. in Montavilla, extending fifteen hundred feet and improved an adequate water system, an electric light system supplying both arc and incandescent lights and fire department, with all modern equipments and greater school facilities. In much of this work Mr. De Veny has been a leader, standing at all times for progress and improvement. In much of this he has had strong opposition but he was reared upon the frontier, where he had learned to wage war with ungenerous nature for all that he had secured and the fact that he was early thrown upon his own resources had also developed an independent and self reliant spirit. All these things combined to make him rather enjoy the contest for Montavilla's improvement—contests that resulted eventually in victory. Throughout all this period he has either been president or secretary of the Montavilla Board of Trade, through which most of the improvements of the city have come.

WILLIAM DE VENY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

On the 18th of December, 1879, Mr. De Veny was married at Cross Roads, in Adams county, Nebraska, to Miss Martha R. Ellis, who was born in La Salle county, Illinois, January 18, 1853, a daughter of Caleb and Emeline (Lamphere) Ellis, the former a farmer, who was a native of Jefferson county, New York, and the latter a native of Massachusetts. Mr. and Mrs. De Veny have become parents of three daughters and three sons: Maud Pearl, now the wife of Levi J. Goodenough, of Adams county, Washington; Estella May; Flossie Etta, the wife of Fred Hartley, of Portland, Oregon; William Hastings; Dwane, of Portland; and Florello Delevan.

In politics Mr. De Veny has always been a stanch republican, being today associated with that branch of the party known as "standpatters." For a long time he held membership with the Montavilla lodge of Odd Fellows. He now belongs to the Woodmen of the World, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the United Artisans, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Knights of the Maccabees, the American Yeomen, the Improved Order of Red Men and the Degree of Honor, in nearly all of which he has held the highest offices. Mr. De Veny has ever been fearless and faithful in support of what he believes to be for the right and for the best interests of the community at large. He has never been content with what he has accomplished at any one point of his career but has regarded this rather as the starting point for still larger or higher attainments. The spirit of progress has been manifest as strongly in his relations with public affairs as with private interests and few men have done as active, effective and beneficial work for Montavilla as has Mr. De Veny.

GEORGE J. CURRIN is a prominent and prosperous citizen of Morrow county, residing at Heppner, in the vicinity of which he and his sons own a twenty thousand acre sheep ranch, being extensively engaged in sheep-raising. He served in the state legislature in 1893 and is now a member of the city council of Heppner. He was born in Clackamas county, Oregon, October 6, 1850, a son of Hugh and Diona (Young) Currin, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Indiana. The father crossed the plains to Oregon in 1845, the mother arriving in the state two years later. Their marriage occurred in 1849 and both are now deceased.

In the district schools of Clackamas county George J. Currin pursued his early education and for two years, from 1871 to 1873, was a student in the State Agricultural College at Corvallis. He first engaged in conducting a ranch and a country store in Clackamas county, being in the store for fifteen years. In 1888 he came to Morrow county and settled near Ione, where he made a business of wheat growing. In 1902 he sold out and took up his residence in Heppner, later, in 1904, purchasing a ranch of twenty thousand acres near the town and he has since been extensively engaged in sheep-raising with his two sons, Hugh C. and Edward R. Currin.

In Clackamas county, June 4, 1875, Mr. Currin was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth J. Forbes, a daughter of Edward Forbes, and by this union nine children have been born: Agnes, now the wife of W. G. Wilcox; Jessie, the wife of W. Benefiel, of Sherman county; Hugh C., married Kate Brosman; Edward R., living on the ranch; Lilly, who is engaged in teaching school; Nettie E., who resides on the ranch; Mabry, who is a graduate of the State Agricultural College and is now engaged in teaching school; Mary and Virginia, who are still in the Heppner schools.

In earlier life Mr. Currin was a democrat and served in the state legislature, representing Clackamas county as an active member of that honorable body, and he is now serving as a member of the city council of Heppner. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained the thirty-second degree, and also belongs to Lodge No. 358, B. P. O. E. Mr. Currin is extensively and favorably known throughout Morrow and Clackamas counties and also on account of his services in the state legislature has an extensive acquaintance in all parts of Oregon. He is one of the most substantial and honored citizens of his community, being regarded as a man of unusual business ability and one whose advice on almost any subject is worthy of credence.

E. D. GARN is one of the substantial farmers of Union county, owning and operating three hundred and twenty acres of fine level land near Imbler, on which he raises large quantities of wheat and from seventy-five to one hundred hogs each year. His farm requires no irrigation and is one of the fine agricultural properties of the community. He was born in Sandusky county, Ohio, in 1843, a son of Martin and Catherine (Croyle) Garn, the parents both being natives of Pennsylvania. The grandfather, John Garn, was born in Holland and upon emigrating to America at an early day he settled in Pennsylvania. The parents of our subject were married in the Keystone state and in the same year they settled in Ohio upon a farm which the father cleared and cultivated, making his home thereon until his death, which occurred when he was eighty-seven years of age. His son Chancy is now living upon the old homestead.

Of the seven children born unto his parents E. D. Garn, of this review, was the third in order of birth. He spent his boyhood days in Ohio, where he received a common-school education and remained upon the home farm until 1864. Then in company with his brother Ephraim he went to Atchison, Kansas, by rail, where each bought three yoke of cattle, and after equipping their wagons with necessary commodities, joined a party comprised of seventeen wagons bound for the far west. The party was composed almost entirely of young men going west to seek their fortunes, there being but one married couple in the company. They were detained at the Big Sandy creek, in Colorado, for two months, owing to trouble which the Indians were causing along the westward trail. After that long delay they continued their journey and although the Indians did not molest them the savages watched the emigrants for a distance of two hundred miles, being visible almost daily on the ridges surmounting the road which they traveled. The last seen of the Indians were signal fires supposed to have been a call for assistance from other tribes. At the Little Blue river Mr. Garn's party passed a government outfit of seventy-five wagons, the Indians having stolen the mules and set fire to most of the equipment, which was yet burning when the west-bound party passed. None of the party, however, had been killed. Upon reaching Green river in Utah a terrible snow storm, with exceptionally cold weather, overtook the party in November and there their stock was all frozen or starved to death. The members of the party, however, made their way to Salt Lake City where they passed the winter, then in the spring of 1865 started for Montana, first going to Virginia City, where Mr. Garn engaged in freighting. He continued in that business for seven years, operating between various mining camps. He had no trouble with outlaws but there were many such characters in the country and on one occasion a stage coach just ahead of him was held up and robbed by them. He afterward went to Wyoming and remained there for about eighteen years, being employed during most of that time as a carpenter and builder. After that he settled in Oregon in the Grande Ronde valley, where he lived for two years in Cove, after which he purchased half of his present farm three-quarters of a mile west of the depot at Imbler. In 1908 he purchased another quarter section adjoining his original purchase, making his present holdings three hundred and twenty acres of fine land. He devotes his attention principally to raising wheat, and feeds from seventy-five to one hundred hogs each year for the market.

E. D. Garn was married December 27, 1870, to Miss Nancy M. Eldridge, a native of Michigan, whose father died when she was an infant. Her mother who married again removed to the west when her daughter was two years of age, settling in Oregon. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Garn have been born four children, as follows: Catherine M., the wife of Edward Murcheson, residing in Walla Walla, Washington; J. M., living on the homestead; Bertha B., the wife of David Osborne, of Umatilla county; and Guy E., of Napa, California.

Mr. Garn has been much interested in educational matters and has been a member of the school board. He has also served as road commissioner for four years. He is a careful and conservative business man, owning a magnificent piece of agricultural property, which lies almost as level as a floor. The soil is of great fertility and the crops which it produces annually under his careful management are very satisfactory. He has an extended acquaintance in the county and has long been regarded as one of its successful citizens.

JAMES CLAUDE INGLE, engaged in the cultivation of alfalfa has a fine orchard and garden as attractive features of his place, and was born in the John Day valley of Oregon, May 17, 1880, a son of William and Juha (Bibler) Ingle, the former born in South Carolina, in 1837, and the latter in Ohio, in 1854. The parents were married in Illinois, whence William Ingle started with a pack train for California. At an early age the father was taken by his parents, Daniel and Annie (Sharp) Ingle, to Darke county, Ohio, and in the schools of that state pursued his education. He later went to Illinois and there engaged in farming and stock-raising for four years. In 1859 he crossed the plains with horse teams to California. On the trip the Indians stole about four hundred horses from the party, leaving them hardly a sufficient number to haul their wagons. After spending some years in California William Ingle came to Oregon, where he at first homesteaded land. He afterward sold that property and purchased school land a half mile west of Mount Vernon. Prior to his death he had acquired five hundred and sixty acres upon which he successfully engaged in the raising of horses and cattle. He was a man of remarkable energy and enterprise and was one of the earliest settlers of the John Day valley. To William Ingle were born the following named: Laura F., now Mrs. Lemon; Mrs. May Tracy; Mrs. Clara Aldrich; Mrs. Stella Camblin; George Benton; James Claude; and Mertise.

James Claude Ingle spent his school days in the John Day valley and lived on the old homestead to the time of his marriage, on the 4th of April, 1900, to Miss Annie McKenna. Following his marriage he purchased his present property a half mile below Mount Vernon, comprising one hundred and twenty acres, of which eighty acres are under cultivation and are irrigated. He raises large quantities of alfalfa, has a fine orchard and also produces a large amount of vegetables. He makes a specialty of Early Rose and Burbank potatoes and recently took from seven acres four hundred sacks of potatoes in a single season, all of the highest grade. He cultivates raspberries on an extensive scale and his alfalfa fields are unsurpassed. He is a member of the Mount Vernon Improvement Club. He belongs to a corporation, which has put in a ditch carrying one thousand inches of water. He has a fine modern residence and his farm is one of the splendidly improved properties of this section of the state. Its excellent appearance is due entirely to his energy, careful management and progressive spirit.

J. Claude Ingle married Miss Annie McKenna, of the John Day valley, a daughter of Alexander McKenna, and their children are Dollie Alice and Ethel Mae.

GEORGE BENTON INGLE. The name of Ingle in Grant county has come to be a synonym for progressive farming and all that this term implies finds exemplification in the work of George Benton Ingle, who was born in John Day valley, August 20, 1877, and like his brother, whose sketch appears above, fitly represents one of the old pioneer families of this section of the state. After he had mastered the branches of learning taught in the public schools near his father's home he attended the Binkey-Walker Business College and subsequently remained on the old homestead until the death of his parents. He recently sold two hundred and forty acres of his land but retained over two hundred acres for further use. He has a large amount of his land under irrigation and raises as fine crops as are produced in this part of the state. His farm has a beautiful and strictly modern residence upon it which would be a credit to the suburbs of any of the larger cities. It is commodious and of attractive style of architecture and is supplied with all modern conveniences. Upon his property is a cut stone over-ground cellar and everything about his farm indicates practical and progressive methods intelligently applied. He raises grain, timothy, wild hay and garden products, as well as many kinds of fruit, and each brings to him a substantial return for he gathers good harvests. Mr. Ingle is a member of the Mount Vernon Improvement Club, in keeping with his public-spirited interest in the welfare and upbuilding of this portion of the state.

GEORGE L. CLEAVER is one of the enterprising and successful citizens of Imbler, where he is engaged in the banking business, being at present the president of the State Bank of Imbler, and he is also one of the principal stockholders in the Thronson Fruit Company of Union county. He was born in Page county, Iowa, September 18, 1871, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cleaver, the former of whom was for many years successfully engaged in the practice of medicine in Iowa.

George L. Cleaver was reared at home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. He later attended Simpson College of Iowa after which he engaged as an employe in a bank at Malvern, Iowa, and there continued until 1899. He then removed to Colorado Springs, where he accepted a position as trust officer for the Colorado Title & Trust Company, which position he continued to hold until 1904. In that year he removed to Oregon and accepted a position as assistant cashier for the La Grande National Bank, and as secretary of the George Palmer Lumber Company, with which he continued until 1907. He then organized the Eastern Oregon Trust & Savings Bank, of which he became the first cashier, holding that position until 1909, when the bank was sold to the United States National Bank of La Grande. During his time of service with the Trust & Savings Bank, as above described, he organized the Cove State Bank, of which he was the first president. In 1908 he became interested in orchard development and in company with his associates purchased the Thronson Fruit Company. The property owned by the company consists of two hundred and forty acres of land located on what is known as the Sand Ridge, between Alicel and Cove. He later sold his interest in this company and purchased two hundred and twenty acres of land located near Imbler, of which one hundred acres was planted to apple trees in full bearing and known as the Causey orchard. This orchard has been carefully investigated by Dean A. B. Cordley, who in a lecture before the Chautauqua assembly represented the property as the finest orchard in the northwest. Such an opinion from an authority so high as Dean Cordley has put the stamp of "par excellence" upon that particular orchard and has also given the Grande Ronde valley a place on the map of Oregon as being in every way suited to the successful growing of commercial orchards. In the spring of 1911 he planted one hundred and sixty acres of commercial orchard to winter apples and will subdivide that part of his holdings and sell orchards in small tracts to the investing public. These orchards are all being scientifically cared for and are under the most skilful and experienced management. The varieties planted in these orchards include Rome Beauty, York, Imperial, Yellow Newton and Wagner. The subdivision consists of fractional lots containing five acres each, having convenient roadways and abundantly supplied with irrigation service. Each separate tract thus constitutes in every respect an ideal commercial orchard. In 1912 Mr. Cleaver organized the State Bank at Imbler, of which he is the president, and that financial institution is meeting with deserved and gratifying success.

In August, 1898, Mr. Cleaver was united in marriage to Miss Helen H. Bykit, a native of Red Oak, Iowa, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Bykit, the father being one of the successful and well known bankers of Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Cleaver are the parents of two children, John Francis and Walter S., and they also have two adopted children, Marvel R. and Helen R. Mr. Cleaver is a member of the board of trustees of Willamette University at Salem, and he and his wife are members of the Methodist church of Imbler. He is numbered among the most enterprising and useful citizens of Union county. He is a man of wide experience in financial affairs and has demonstrated his ability as an organizer of successful business ventures, all of which are now substantial factors in the development of his portion of the state.

FRED TIMMERMANN is one of the highly respected and retired citizens of Marshfield, this county, in which he has spent the major portion of his active years. He is a native of Germany, his birth having occurred in that country, August 27, 1840, and is a son of John and Lena Timmermann, both of whom were natives of Germany. His father spent his active years as officer on a sloop and he and his wife passed away many years ago in their native country. They became the parents of three children: Hugh, who died in China; Fred, the subject of this sketch; and Gustave, who passed away in this country.

Fred Timmermann emigrated to America at a very early period in his life and while yet a young man established his home in Marshfield, this state. In 1873 he returned to his native country and in the spring of that year he celebrated his wedding and immediately thereafter returned to Marshfield and became engaged in the business of rafting saw logs to the lumber mills in that state. He continued in that business for a period of five years, after which he engaged in the butcher business in company with B. F. Ross at Marshfield, and continued in that connection for the five succeeding years, after which he purchased seven hundred acres of fine agricultural land, upon which he carried on diversified farming and stock-raising for seven years. In 1898 he disposed of that property and has since lived a retired life in Marshfield.

In the spring of 1873, Mr. Timmermann was united in marriage to Miss Louisa Schroeder, who was a native of Germany, and to them three children have been born: Albert and Mary, both of whom died in infancy; and Max A., born in 1881, who is married and engaged in the boatbuilding business at Marshfield. The last named received the benefit of a public-school education and is a graduate of the high school of Marshfield, and also a graduate of a business college. In his family are two children: Gale, now seven years of age; and Dolph, who is three years of age. Mrs. Fred Timmermann passed away on the 5th of December, 1904.

Mr. Timmermann and his family are members of the Episcopal church of Marshfield. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is known among his associates as a man of absolute intergrity in all business transactions and during all the years of his residence in Coos county he has been recognized as one of the industrious and valuable members of the society in which he has established his home.

W. T. LESTER, now engaged in the real-estate business at Burns, Oregon, is well known in that city as a man with firm faith in the future greatness of the northwest, with a discriminating knowledge of the land values of this section and as a citizen whose activity and industry have done much to further the commercial and agricultural development of southern Oregon.

He was born in Sedalia, Missouri, March 7, 1879, and is a son of Thomas J. and Sally (Camp) Lester. The father was a native of Virginia, where his family has been prominent for three generations. It was originally of English and Welsh stock and was founded in America by the great-grandfather of our subject, who came from Wales and settled at Fredericksburg, Virginia. His son removed to Missouri at an early date. Joshua Lester, a great-uncle of our subject, went to San Antonio, Texas, where for many years he conducted a large hotel which bore his name. In the maternal line the family has also been prominent in the southern states for many years. Mr. Lester can recall his great-grandmother who bore the name of Camp. She was of Irish and English extraction and was eighty-five years of age when Mr. Lester was a small boy. Her son also removed to Missouri. Both the Lesters and the Camps were prominent planters in the south and took a large number of slaves

MR. AND MRS. FRED TIMMERMANN AND SON

NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

to Missouri when they moved there in 1844. At that time Thomas J. Lester, the father of our subject, was only eight years of age. He spent his youth in his parents' home and remained in Missouri all his life, engaged in farming and stock-raising. When the Civil war broke out he liberated his slaves and served in the Federal army as a member of the Home Guard. The Camp family were represented in the Civil war by the grandfather of our subject, who served under General Price.

W. T. Lester is the eldest of four children. He spent his boyhood and youth in his parents' home and was educated in the public schools of Sedalia, from which he was graduated in the year 1897. When still a young boy he engaged in farming on shares for two years. At the expiration of that period he entered Scotten College at Greenridge, Missouri. His father died in 1889, at the age of fifty-three, and when his mother remarried Mr. Lester started out for himself. He remained in Missouri until the year 1900, when he removed to Washington and took up a homestead claim fourteen miles northwest of Lind, where he engaged in the cultivation of wheat on an extensive scale. At first he operated only his own homestead but gradually as he succeeded he added to his property and kept a large amount of land constantly under cultivation in wheat until 1907, when he sold out at a large profit. Subsequently he conducted a large freight livery and transfer business, which he eventually sold. He made a journey through southern Oregon for the purpose of finding a suitable location and later returned to Burns, where he established his present real-estate business. His energy, industry and appreciation of values gained him immediate success in this line. He now has charge of a large amount of property in Harney county and in the surrounding country and has gained a prominent place in business circles in Burns. He owns five hundred and sixty acres of land, which he is now improving and developing with a view to irrigation in the near future.

On the 18th of February, 1905, Mr. Lester wedded Miss Dora E. Webb, who had been his playmate in early days in the south. She is a daughter of John Webb, a prominent citizen of Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Lester are the parents of one child, William Milburn. Mr. Lester has been extremely successful in the real-estate business. His prosperity is founded upon his shrewd grasp of the opportunities offered by a new and developing country and his individual success in Harney county has been an important item in its progress.

JAMES I. JOY, who lives retired in Walla Walla, Washington, was born October 8, 1849, in Morgan county, Ohio. His parents were Samuel and Mary (Boggs) Joy, the father a native of Ohio, and the mother of Pennsylvania. The father passed away March 16, 1910, and the mother in 1895. In their family were ten children, seven of whom are now living. They are: Charles, Warren, Sarah, Emma, Rena, Juliet and James I., of this review.

The last named received his early education in Ohio, remaining in his native state until he was fifteen years of age, when he removed to Andrew county, Ohio, where he resided five years. Subsequently he went to Colorado and spent fourteen years in that state, working at general labor and farming. He then repaired to Oregon, settling in Umatilla county on a ranch of four hundred and eighty acres, six miles from Helix. He was there engaged extensively in wheat growing, meeting with much success. He resided on his ranch in Umatilla county until 1906, when he retired from active life and moved to Walla Walla, Washington, where he now resides in his beautiful home on Fern avenue.

On the 24th of October, 1873, Mr. Joy married Miss Ella Slane, who was born September 16, 1854, a daughter of Andrew and Lorena (Allander) Slane, the father a native of Ohio, and the mother of Pennsylvania. The parents removed to Colorado in 1859 where they continued to make their home. In their family were nine children, of whom two are deceased. Those living are: Samuel, James, Andrew, and Daniel, all of whom are now residing in Colorado; Jennie, of New Mexico; Rachel, of California; and Ella, who is now Mrs. Joy. To Mr. and Mrs. Joy have been born five children, all of whom are living. Frederick, the eldest, resides in Shoshone, Idaho. He married Miss Alma Files, and they have one son, Irvin. Lorena is now Mrs. Benjamin Stanton, of Shoshone, and she has three children, Lora, Cecil and Marion. Grace wedded Mr. William Nuckols, and resides near Helix. Ruby is at home with her parents. John, who completes the family, lives in Shoshone.

In his political views Mr. Joy is a republican. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Joy has ever been active and energetic, and is a man of high honor, having many friends and acquaintances. He was very successful in his farming interests, and is now able to live retired, enjoying the fruits of a well spent life.

OTIS CAMPBELL, now serving as county assessor of Gilliam county, was born in Arkansas on the 1st of May, 1874. He is a son of Henry H. and Elizabeth (Brown) Campbell, who were natives of Kentucky and Iowa respectively. They were married in Iowa, to which state the father removed at an early date. Henry H. Campbell was a carpenter and for many years gave a large part of his time to his trade. He, however, became identified with the educational interests of the state as a teacher in the public schools and for a long period continued in that vocation, filling up the interim between terms at his trade as a carpenter. As an educator he had a place among the foremost men of that class in the state of Iowa. Early in the '70s he removed to Arkansas, where he engaged in farming, and in 1889 he removed with his family to Washington, locating in Goldendale, where he remained but a short time, when he went to Blockhouse. There he now has his residence, living a retired life and enjoying a well earned rest after a long pilgrimage of ninety-two years. He is still a well preserved man and actively interested in community affairs. He has always been a democrat in politics but never an office seeker. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is one of the influential men of this section of the state. His wife died in 1906 at the age of seventy-seven years.

Otis Campbell was reared at home, acquiring his education under the watchful tutelage of his father and in the public schools of the district in which the family lived. At eighteen years of age he started out in life for himself, securing a position as laborer in a sawmill in Klickitat county, Washington, where he remained for three years. The succeeding five years he spent as a farmer in Klickitat county and in 1901 he removed to Gilliam county, Oregon, where he became the driver of the stage from Arlington to Condon. This position he held until the railroad reached Condon in 1907. At the termination of his services as stage driver he was employed as deputy sheriff of Gilliam county, in which position he remained for a period of two and a half years. In 1908 he was elected county assessor and entered upon the duties of his office in January, 1909, in which position he is still retained as one of the county's most reliable and efficient officers.

On the 1st of January, 1909, Mr. Campbell was married to Miss Elfie Surte, of Arlington, Gilliam county. She is a member of the Baptist church. Mr. Campbell is in politics a democrat but enjoys the confidence and good will of the members of the other political organizations of his county. He was elected to his present office on the democratic ticket by a majority of one hundred and eighty-nine, which is a high compliment to Mr. Campbell as Gilliam county is known throughout the state as one of the banner republican counties of Oregon. He is a member of Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 95, F. & A. M., and also belongs to Mount Adams Lodge, No. 95, K. P., of Centerville, Washington. He is a highly respected and influential man, having the confidence and esteem of his acquaintances and exercising a wholesome and beneficial influence upon the social, business and political interests of his state.

C. M. COLLIER, sheriff of Grant county, who makes his home in Canyon City, was born in Auburn, Androscoggin county, Maine, June 29, 1859, his parents being Samuel and Nancy M. (Berry) Collier, who were also natives of the latter place. Grandfather Moses Collier was a native of Massachusetts and a representative of an old Colonial family. The great-grandfather, Samuel Berry, participated in the Revolutionary war and was with Arnold on his invasion into Canada, acting as guide or pilot for the expedition. He had trouble, however, with the man who afterward proved to be a traitor to his country and on one occasion threw him into the camp fire and stepped on him. The father of Mrs. Nancy M. Collier was a prominent citizen of the section in which he lived, owning a large farm, a grist mill, a sawmill and other property, which established him as one of the leading business men of his community. The paternal grandfather of C. M. Collier died of typhoid fever when thirty-seven years of age. His son, Samuel Collier, was engaged in farming and made his home in Maine throughout his entire life. He was reared in Auburn but in 1865 removed to Hartford, Oxford county, where he carried on general agricultural pursuits until his death in 1884, when he was fifty-seven years of age.

C. M. Collier is an only son and had but one sister. He spent his school days in Hartford, Maine, and in 1879 he started out in the business world as an employe in a sawmill and box factory in Turner, Maine, which was conducted by C. F. Willard. There he worked until January, 1884, when he secured a clerkship in a store in Livermore, Maine. On the 7th of April, 1884, however, he came to Oregon, making his way to Baker county. He worked in the Bonanza mine until the fall and then purchased an interest in the Picks mine, in the Green Horn district of Grant county. He was interested in that property until 1896, when he sold out to good advantage. He had an interest in the Phoenix mine of the same district, which he also sold at that time. He then went to Prairie City in the John Day valley, purchased a ranch and added to that property a tract of one hundred and sixty acres. He afterward purchased five hundred and sixty acres, and later eighty acres, all from Joseph Marshall. He also purchased an eighty-acre tract of timber land. He has one of the best properties in the valley. From the time when he located here to the present he has engaged in raising stock and now has over five hundred head of cattle. He at one time had eighty horses but is reducing the number. His stock-raising and ranching interests have ever been carefully, systematically and therefore successfully conducted and in addition to his ranch property he owns a two-thirds interest in the Bent creek placer, consisting of one hundred and sixty acres which he purchased in 1901. It carries gold and has been successfully worked.

On the 18th of September, 1895, Mr. Collier was married to Miss Ella Daley, of Canyon City, Oregon, who was born in 1864 and died in June, 1901. She was a daughter of Eugene Daley, a pioneer miner of this district. Their children are Calvin J., Mary J. and Charles D.

C. M. Collier is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. He has many friends in that society and is known far and wide as a representative and worthy citizen. In June, 1908, he was elected sheriff of Grant county and in 1910 was reelected on the democratic ticket, receiving also the indorsement of the republicans. He has proved himself an efficient officer as well as a successful business man and he may well be classed among the leading citizens of eastern Oregon.

FRANK P. CHILDERS, the present sheriff of Union county was born in Scotland county, Missouri, August 15, 1858, the son of James P. and Mary (McDowell) Childers. The father was born in Richmond, Virginia, and was a son of Robert Childers, who left England and went to Kentucky, where he resided until his son James was two years of age, when he removed to Missouri. The mother, Mary McDowell, was the daughter of David McDowell, who moved from Kentucky to Missouri, where he was engaged in farming and horse raising. James P. and Mary (McDowell) Childers were married in Missouri and settled on a farm there. At the time of the gold excitement in California, James McDowell crossed the plains to that state and engaged in mining, in which he was very successful. He then returned to his family in Missouri and was engaged extensively in farming until the beginning of the Civil war. During the war he lost all of his property and in 1865 he crossed the plains with his family and settled in the Grande Ronde valley, in Oregon, where he resided on a rented farm for five years and then homesteaded a tract of one hundred and sixty acres on the northern end of Summerville prairie, where he resided the rest of his life. He was a great lover of fine horses and engaged extensively in raising them. In politics he was a strong democrat. Before coming west he and his wife were members of the Christian church but they later united with the Methodist church. They were very hospitable and their home was a common meeting place for all the residents of the community, the father being known as "Uncle Jim Childers." He died on his claim, at the age of seventy-three, and his wife also passed away a few years later, at the same age. In their family were the following sons: Thomas, who preceded his parents to Oregon; John; James; George; Cyrus; and Frank P., of this review, who were with their parents while crossing the plains; Charles, who died on the plains and is buried near the Platte river; and Henry, who was born in Oregon and died at the age of two years.

Frank P. Childers was seven years of age when his parents came to Oregon and he was reared and attended the district schools there. After his school days he engaged in stock-raising and farming, residing on one place five years, and then took up a homestead north of Summerville, where he lived until he left the farm and engaged in the livery business at Island City. Later he came to La Grande and established a livery barn and also engaged in the butchering business. In 1895 he was elected city marshal of La Grande, which position he held for five years. In 1905 he was made sheriff of Union county, in which capacity he is now serving.

In 1876 Mr. Childers was united in marriage with Miss Mary Adler Baker, a native of Iowa and a daughter of John and Margaret (Goodman) Baker, who crossed the plains from Iowa in 1862 and settled in Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Childers have become the parents of six children: Della, who is the wife of Fred Wagner, a barber, of La Grande; Clive, who is captain in the Salvation Army; Wallace, of Portland; Jessie, who died at the age of sixteen; Myrtle, of La Grande; and Ruth, who died at the age of six years.

In politics Mr. Childers is a democrat, and fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to La Grande Lodge, No. 16, in which he has filled all the chairs. In Union county he has organized two lodges, the Elgin and Cove. He also is a member of La Grande Lodge, No. 433, B. P. O. E.; Aerie No. 59, of the Eagles; and La Grande Lodge, W. O. W. His wife is a member of the Order of Rebekahs. While acting as city marshal Mr. Childers made a most commendable official record and won the good-will of all the residents of La Grande, and now in discharging the duties of sheriff of Union county he acts without fear or favor, always accomplishing whatever he undertakes, for he possesses resolution, perseverance and reliability, all of which make him a most excellent public official.

WILLIAM FIDELAS WATSON has since 1906 been engaged in agricultural and horticultural pursuits and in the promotion and development of irrigation projects, through which these arid lands are reclaimed and converted into productive tracts. Mr. Watson was born in Elmira, California, April 21, 1881, his parents being Samuel Robert and Christiana (Smith) Watson, who were married at Elmira in 1880. Two years later the mother died and in 1906 the father passed away, leaving William F. Watson the only survivor of the family for he was an only child. His father had been engaged principally in farming, and in 1862, in company with his brother Jonas Watson, had come to Oregon with a herd of cattle which they drove from Albany to Auburn, Oregon, where they sold them to Henry Fuller, one of the old cattle dealers of the state. They remained a short time in Auburn and then returned to California where Samuel R. Watson engaged in farming and stock raising. Later he visited his son in Oregon and died in his home at Condon, Gilliam county, in the spring of 1906. The uncle of our subject, Jonas Watson, passed away in California several years ago. On the maternal side William F. Watson was connected with the Smith family which was founded in California in 1852, having gone there from Canada. They became pioneers of Solano county and there the grandmother of Mr. Watson passed away in 1885 while the grandfather, surviving her for about twenty years, died in Oakland California, in 1905.

On starting out in life for himself William F. Watson engaged in farming in Sherman and Gilliam counties, giving his attention principaly to the raising of grain. Since 1906 he has been engaged in agricultural and horticultural pursuits and in irrigation work in connection with the reclaiming of a large body of land east of and adjoining Baker City, Oregon, known as the Sunny Slope benchland. By turning water on this tract it has been transposed into a fine agricultural and horticultural district in which are now to be seen many fine little homes, and on which the settlers raise an abundance of cereals, vegetables and fruits such as grow in this latitude. Before irrigation was introduced here all this district was considered a desert, practically worthless, but today it sells for from one hundred to two hundred dollars per acre. Mr. Watson is one of the directors of the Baker Irrigation Company of which he has been assistant manager, and also a director of the Sunny Slope Nursery Company, of which for several years he has been manager. His various business interests are carefully conducted, and well formulated and wisely executed plans are bringing him success.

In October, 1903, occurred the marriage of William Fidelas Watson and Miss Mary E. McDowell, a daughter of John C. McDowell, an Oregon pioneer who resided at St. Paul, Marion county, and removed to California where his death occurred. Her mother, who bore the maiden name of Margaret Connor, was born in Minnesota, and from that state came to St. Paul, Oregon, her parents being pioneers there. She has one sister who lives in Minnesota and another, Mrs. James B. Carr, who is a resident of Portland. Mrs. Watson has a brother, George McDowell, who lives in California, and two brothers, E. J. and Charles McDowell, who live in Portland. To Mr. and Mrs. Watson have been born three children: John George, whose birth occurred December 12, 1904; Mary, born November 18, 1906; and Francis, born in October, 1910. The family have a pleasant home in Baker, Oregon, and the parents are communicants of the Catholic church there. Mr. Watson belongs to the Knights of Columbus. He is a democrat although not a man of pronounced political views, preferring to vote as his judgment dictates without regard to party ties.

JOHN M. TETHEROW. Actively associated with business interests at Grants Pass is John M. Tetherow, whose activities are of a varied and important nature. In fact, many business enterprises profit by his business ability, his keen discernment and his unfaltering enterprise and he is prominent among those who are shaping the history of this city. He is today the vice president of the Josephine County Bank, is president of the Grants Pass Hardware Company, is the owner of an extensive machine shop and garage and has commercial, mining and financial interests in California. He was born in Douglas county, Oregon, about five miles north of Roseburg, September 30, 1858, and is a son of George W. and Elizabeth (Miller) Tetherow, the former a native of Burlington, Iowa, and the latter of St. Joseph, Missouri. Burlington, however, was but a tiny hamlet at the time of the father's birth, which occurred in a tent on the site of the present populous city. The father and mother of John M. Tetherow crossed the plains with their respective parents, the latter in 1844 and the former in 1849. Their destination was Douglas county and after living there for some years George W. Tetherow removed to Lane county. He assisted in cutting the first roads into Portland and was otherwise closely and actively associated with the pioneer development of his part of the state. He took up a claim on Jump Off Joe creek, of which he became owner about 1864. He then sold that property when about twenty-four years of age and went to his farm on Williams creek. Through the greater part of his life he has been identified with mining interests of the northwest but is now practically living retired. His wife passed away about sixteen years ago. In their family were nine children, of whom four are yet living: J. M.; Mrs. Jane McLaren, of Harney county, Oregon; Samuel, of Williams, Oregon; and George, living at Grants Pass.

The fact that his parents lived in mining districts made John M. Tetherow intimately acquainted with pioneer history in the northwest. He remained at home until 1884, living on Jump Off Joe creek, and in that year went to Siskiyou county, California, near Etna Mills. He engaged in farming for ten years and then went into the mines. He was interested in the famous Highland mine, the best property of that kind in the section in which he lived, and from its sale he cleared one hundred thousand dollars. In August, 1909, he came to Grants Pass and has since been closely and prominently associated with its business interests. He was one of the original directors of the Josephine County Bank and has continuously served as its vice president, doing much to establish its policy as a safe, conservative moneyed institution. He also purchased the present buildings and established the machine shop and Fashion garage on H street. This is a two-story brick structure, seventy by one hundred feet, and is occupied entirely by the garage and shop. In the conduct of this business Mr. Tetherow has a partner—his brother-in-law, William H. Taylor. He is likewise the president of the Grants Pass Hardware Company, in which he owns more than one-half of the stock. He also owns the building which that company occupies and he is still interested in a number of mining properties in California which promise good returns. He is likewise the owner of a grocery store at Redwood City, California, and he was one of the organizers of the Mount Shasta Bank at Fort Jones, California, in which he still holds stock.

In 1887 Mr. Tetherow was married to Miss Caroline Taylor, who was born in Siskiyou county, California, February 3, 1868, a daughter of George H. Taylor, now deceased. Two children have been born of this marriage: Effie, who is the wife of H. L. De Armon, an attorney of Medford, Oregon; and De Ett, who is the wife of J. L. Coburn, a grocer of Grants Pass. They also have an

JOHN M. TETHEROW

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

adopted daughter, Charilla, who is being educated in the convent at Medford, Oregon.

Mr. Tetherow belongs to the Knights of Pythias fraternity and to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a man of excellent business judgment and of unfaltering industry. He will allow no obstacles to brook his path if they can be overcome by persistent, earnest purpose and indefatigable labor. He knows that success is not to be had for the asking but that it may be attained through diligence and determination. He has, therefore, employed those qualities and is today well established among the most successful and representative citizens of Grants Pass.

ALLEN O. ADAMS, who since November, 1903, has served as postmaster of Cascade Locks, was born at Ashtabula county, Ohio, September 5, 1842, a son of Benjamin and Mary (Hall) Adams. The father was a native of Connecticut and removed to the Western Reserve in Ohio, when a young man and spent the remainder of his life there. He was a shoemaker by trade, which work he followed in the winter, and farmed during the summer. He died when his son, Allen O., was only five years of age. The mother, Mary (Hall) Adams, was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, in 1818. At the age of sixteen she removed with her widowed mother to the Western Reserve in Ohio. In the family were five sons and four daughters and they were all reared in Ohio. One of the sons later removed to Virginia and fought on the Union side of the Civil war. Another went to Missouri and was on the Confederate side in the same war. After her husband's death, Mrs. Mary Adams resided in Ohio until 1862, when she removed to Grant county, Wisconsin, remaining there until her death. There were four children in her family: Horace, who died in infancy; Mrs. Luthera A. Maynard, who died in 1909; Allen O., of this review; and Almond H., of Oaks Dale, Washington.

Allen O. Adams remained in his native state until he was sixteen years of age, when he went to Minnesota, and later to Grant county, Wisconsin. There in May, 1861, he joined the army, enlisting in Company G, Second Wisconsin Infantry. He served until November 1861, when he was honorably discharged on account of physical disability. He then went to St. Charles, Minnesota, and was there engaged in the mercantile business for thirty years. Subsequently he went to Elmira, New York, and was in the portrait business with his brother-in-law, H. M. Duggett for fifteen years. In September, 1903, he came to Cascade Locks, and on November 20th of that year he was made postmaster, which position he is now so ably filling. During the first year spent here he had charge of the Wind River Lumber Company store and since then he has been bookkeeper and cashier of the same.

In 1870 Mr. Adams wedded Miss Cornelia Z. Smith, who was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, in 1849. She was a daughter of A. S. and Zernah (Shephard) Smith, the father a native of Vermont, and the mother of Canada. Both parents were reared in St. Lawrence county, New York, and the father passed away there. The mother died in Elmira, New York, in 1911. For several years the father was a well known surveyor in the Adirondack regions of New York. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Adams are four children: Myra L., now the wife of W. V. Hutchinson of Cascade Locks; Mary E., the wife of Charles L. Cook of the same place; Herbert S., railroad agent and postmaster at Underwood, Washington; and Allen O., Jr., who is also in Underwood.

Mr. Adams is a republican in politics, and he has ever taken an active interest in local party work. He was twice candidate for the state legislature in New York. Socially he is a Royal Arch Mason and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, belonging to the Hood River Post. He is an active worker in the Methodist Episcopal church. In his varied business relations Mr. Adams has ever won the regard and admiration of his associates. He has always been deeply interested in the work of public progress and improvement, and he especially deserves mention as an honored soldier of the Civil war.

DE WITT C. BROWNELL, who has been interested in the agricultural development and political activities of Umatilla county for many years, was born in San Joaquin county, California, on the 11th of August, 1851, a son of Russell Gideon and Malissa Cynthia (Call) Brownell. The father's birth occurred in Dayton, Ohio, July 17, 1818, and the mother was born near Sandusky, in 1830. Russell Gideon Brownell was reared near Michigan City, Indiana, and served in the Mexican war. After the military chapter in his career he spent his life principally in California, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits and also in the freighting business. His death occurred at California, April 6, 1895, when he was nearly seventy-seven years of age. The mother passed away in Stockton, California, in 1888, when she was fifty-eight years of age. To them five sons and five daughters were born, of whom De Witt C. is the third in order of birth. One daughter died three years ago. Duane R. Brownell, the eldest son, was born in Utah, on the 25th of December, 1849, while the parents were crossing the plains from Missouri to California. Throughout the greater part of his active career he has been engaged in mercantile enterprises. He came to Umatilla county shortly after the Lewis and Clark Exposition and at once opened the meat and grocery business which he is at present conducting. He has been three times married. In April, 1911, he was appointed postmaster.

De Witt C. Brownell was reared in the place of his birth and remained there until he became twenty years of age. The next three years he spent in Sacramento and San Joaquin counties, and in 1874 he went to northern California and engaged in the sheep business in Lassen county. Previously, in 1871, he had begun the study of law under Charles Poulk and Judge Buckley at Stockton, California. He continued studying law until financial difficulties forced him to forego his studies and he entered into partnership with his brother Duane R. in the sheep business, which occupied his time and attention from 1873 to 1878. Disposing of his sheep at the end of that time, he entered the mercantile business with his brother at Bieber, Lassen county, California, and was thus engaged for three years. In 1882 he was admitted to the bar, having again taken up the study of law for several months previously. He practiced for fourteen years in California and Klamath Falls, Oregon, having come to this state in 1888. After 1896 he gave his attention to real-estate transactions for some time. In 1897 he departed for Alaska but after arriving at Portland was induced by capitalists to engage in irrigation projects on the Deschutes river. Accordingly, he made plans for putting in the necessary filling and for making other preparations for the undertaking. He spent two years in furthering this project but before it was completed the company gave up the idea of finishing it. Mr. Brownell had made extensive surveys over about four hundred thousand acres which is now being irrigated. In 1900 he came to Umatilla county, where he has since made his home, at first residing on Butter creek for about three years but later removing to Umatilla. He came here in the interest of irrigation and has improved the land with an abundance of water. His attention has been almost wholly given to the development of the soil, which he has turned from arid land into highly productive and fertile fields. Pendleton capitalists assisted him in developing the irrigation resources of Umatilla county and organized what is known as the Columbia Valley Irrigation Association, formed for the purpose of securing the water rights of the Umatilla river. They believed that this would encourage the government reclamation development and one of the results of that undertaking was that the government sent engineers to the county. Mr. Brownell purchased the interests of the Minnehaha Irrigation Company, which owned ditches six miles long leading to where Hermiston now stands. This irrigation line affected about fourteen hundred acres of land. He also purchased fifteen hundred acres of arid land which was to be irrigated by the Three Mile Fall Ditch Company, who had an irrigation line three miles in length. Mr. Brownell carried on all the work according to his own ideas and reorganized the company under the name of Brownell Ditch Company. At present it has four miles of completed ditch with necessary collateral to reclaim all lands lying east of the city of Umatilla and extending four miles up the river and between the north ditch and the Columbia river. At the present time he is giving his whole attention and energy to the development of this country. He has also given some of his time for the past ten years to the government plans for developing this section.

On the 16th of February, 1879, Mr. Brownell was married to Miss Clara Alice Bassett, whose birth occurred in Illinois, on the 10th of November, 1858, and who was brought to California by her parents when she was very young. She is a daughter of Isaac Wilson and Sarah V. (Ormsbee) Bassett. To Mr. and Mrs. Brownell six children have been born: Don Carlos, who resides at Hermiston; Llewellyn, who is at home; Cyril G., who is residing on the ranch of our subject; Robert, who makes his home in Umatilla; Clara Beatrice; and Eva Malissa.

In politics Mr. Brownell gave his support to the republican party until 1896, when he became a firm and enthusiastic supporter of the principles and policies advocated by William Jennings Bryan. He is thoroughly progressive in all of his political views and has always taken an active interest in the issues of the day. In 1896, when he left the regular republican party, he was one of several men from southern Oregon who organized the silver republican party. He was associated in political affairs with William Renn, Frank Williams and Jonathan Bourne, and they brought about the fusion ticket of 1898. In local politics Mr. Brownell has been equally active. In 1889 he helped organize the city government of Linkville, now Klamath Falls. Subsequently he served as recorder of Klamath Falls for two years. He also aided in the organization of the Commercial Association, which suggested the change of the name to Klamath Falls. For over two years he served on the state republican committee from Klamath county. In 1892 he was forced to leave that county and take up his residence at Grants Pass, having been ordered to do this by his physicians so as to give himself the advantages of a more salubrious climate. In 1894 he was elected a delegate to the republican state convention with the Hon. Robert A. Booth, Harry Miller and F. A. Chaucer from Josephine county and served on the committee on platform. Its presentation was not favorably received and the republican state convention refused to give it consideration in 1894. In religious faith Mr. and Mrs. Brownell are members of the Presbyterian church and are very active workers in its circles. For the past five years he has served on the school board. Mr. Brownell is one of the influential men of his community and has a host of friends, whose confidence and respect are a tribute to his sterling worth. By a life of activity and usefulness he has fairly earned the honorable position accorded him.

S. F. SHARP, M. D., who has practiced his profession in Athena since 1879, is a physician of Umatilla county and one of the prominent practitioners of that section of the state. He was born April 4, 1847, in Holmes county, Ohio, the son of John and Catherine (Thompson) Sharp, both of whom were natives of Ohio, where they lived and died. In their family were nine children, four of whom are still living.

Dr. Sharp received a good education in the schools of his native state, after which he entered Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1870. He began the practice of his profession in Shanesville, Ohio, where he continued until 1879, when he removed to Umatilla county, Oregon, settling in Athena and in that city he has succeeded in building up a very satisfactory practice.

In April, 1881, Dr. Sharp was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Frazier, a native of California and a daughter of Wiley and Rebecca (Baird) Frazier. The father is deceased but the mother still survives and is residing in Pendleton. Dr. and Mrs. Sharp are the parents of four children: Alta W.; Katherine R. and Carrie B., both of whom are engaged in teaching school; and Lawrence G.

In his political views Dr. Sharp is a democrat but he has never been an office seeker. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic order and the Odd Fellows, belonging to Lodge No. 73 of the latter organization. He is likewise a member of Lodge No. 29, K. P., and Lodge No. 171, W. O. W. He also has membership relations in the Tribe of Ben Hur, while Mrs. Sharp is a member of the Degree of Honor, the Woodcraft and the Rebekahs. The family reside in a pleasant home which they own in Athena, where the Doctor also has three other lots. Having long been a resident of that place, he has formed an extensive acquaintance throughout the county where his successful medical practice has won for him great popularity and a splendid standing in the community. He is one of the men of whom Umatilla county is proud and as he takes a lively interest in civic, political and social affairs of the community he is a particularly valuable citizen.

EUGENE G. NOBLE, who is engaged in the harness supply business at Heppner, Morrow county, is one of the prominent and valuable men of his township. He held the office of county treasurer for six and one-half years, is well educated and one of the substantial citizens of the community. He was born in Salem, Oregon, December 3, 1871, the son of George and Mildred (Gray) Noble. The parents, who were early pioneers of this state, are both living and since 1872 have resided in Heppner.

Eugene G. Noble was educated in the public schools of Heppner and afterward spent two years as a student in Monmouth College. After finishing his course there he returned to Heppner and purchased the business which he is at present conducting with much success. He has a large local and also an extensive catalog business, being widely known in harness and saddlery circles.

Mr. Noble was married May 30, 1894, at Monmouth, Oregon, to Miss Myra I. Smith, a daughter of Rufus and Irene Smith. In his political faith Mr. Smith is affiliated with the democracy and as he has always been a prominent man of the community and regarded very highly by his political and other friends, he served as county treasurer of Morrow county for the unusually long period of six and one-half years. He is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge and also belongs to the Elks. There are few if any of the sons of Oregon residing in Morrow county who are more highly respected than Mr. Noble. Having for many years been connected with the business and political interests of his county, which he has thoroughly at heart, he has become popular among all classes and is universally regarded as one of the leading citizens of the community.

IBRA R. SNOOK. Among the men in public offices who deserve mention for their faithful and efficient work is Ibra R. Snook, who is now serving as recorder of Union county. He was born December 3, 1870, in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, the son of Wilson and Jane (Ebersole) Snook, natives of Pennsylvania. The family is of German descent, the great-grandfather, Solomon Snook, having been born in that country and came as a young man to America, settling in Pennsylvania. Isaac Snook, the grandfather, and his wife, Sophia (Swanger) Snook, were both natives of Pennsylvania and were the parents of six children: Wilson, who is the father of Ibra R. of this review; Henry, now residing in Pennsylvania; Holmes, of South Dakota; Amos, of Montana; Lizzie, deceased; and Calvin, of North Dakota. The mother, Jane (Ebersole) Snook, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ebersole, natives of Virginia. In their family were seven children: Randolph, of Missouri; Cecilia, of Indiana; William, of Missouri; Wilson, of North Carolina; Jane, now Mrs. Snook; Mary, deceased; and Luther, of Missouri. Wilson and Jane (Ebersole) Snook were married in Pennsylvania and remained in that state until 1884, when they removed to Missouri. They became the parents of eight children those besides our subject being: Emily, at home; Hubbah, who is the wife of C. Humphries, city recorder of La Grande; Alice, a postoffice clerk; May, now Mrs. J. D. Smart, of Missouri; Grace, a teacher at Elgin, Oregon; Walter, of Missouri; and Irene, now Mrs. Leslie Fleming, of Missouri.

Ibra R. Snook attended the public schools in Pennsylvania until he was fourteen years of age, when his parents removed to Missouri and in that state he became a student of Westminster College. After his school days he followed the occupation of farming in Missouri until 1898, when he came to Oregon, settling at La Grande, where he engaged in the sawmill business. On January 26, 1905, he lost his right foot in a railroad accident. In the same year he was elected to the office of city recorder on the independent ticket, a position which he filled for three years. Subsequently he was elected on the republican ticket to the office of county recorder, in which capacity he is now so efficiently serving.

Before leaving Missouri, Mr. Snook was united in marriage with Miss Frances Herring, a daughter of G. C. and Lucy Herring, who came to Missouri from Virginia in 1837. Mr. and Mrs. Snook have become the parents of four children, Marjorie, Gideon, Marion and Ruth, all of whom are in school. Mr. Snook is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America. In discharging the duties of his official position he has achieved success through honorable effort, untiring industry and capable management. He is recognized as an obliging public official who guards safely the trust imposed in him, his courtesy being unfailing and his integrity above question.

FRANK S. JOHNSON is extensively engaged in hop raising as a member of the J. W. Seavey Hop Company, of Portland, cultivating a number of farms in the production of that product. He is thus identified with an industry which has been a large source of revenue in the northwest and few are as thoroughly and accurately informed concerning hop growing as he. A native of Beloit, Wisconsin, he was born December 21, 1869, and is a son of P. K. and Sarah (Anderson) Johnson. The father was a native of Norway and grew to manhood there, during which period he learned the carpenters' trade. He came to America about 1861, attracted by the reports which he had heard concerning the business opportunities and advantages of the new world. He located first in Wisconsin, where he engaged in carpentering and about a third of a century ago he came to Portland, where his first work was on the postoffice. For about two years he was identified with building operations and then, with the capital which he had saved as a result of his industry and careful expenditure, he purchased a farm of one hundred and thirty acres near Silverton. To the development and improvement of that property he gave his attention until about five years ago, when he left the farm and returned to Portland. His death occurred a year later, while his wife died in 1910. P. K. Johnson was one of the first hop growers in Marion county, demonstrating the possibility of the production of that crop in this part of the country. He reaped from one hundred to two hundred bales of hops annually which was considered a very large yield for those days. In politics Mr. Johnson was a republican and was recognized as one of the active leaders of the party in this district. He was always interested in the vital political questions and issues of the day and served for one term as a member of the legislature, although he was not a politician in the usual sense of office seeking. Unto him and his wife were born eight children: John, who is now living in Portland; Andrew M., who died about twelve years ago; Frank S.; Edward S., who makes his home in Silverton; Anna, the wife of Dr. A. S. Esson, living at The Dalles; Albert O., a civil engineer, connected with the Oregon Electric Company; Ellen, the wife of J. J. Thurston, of Monmouth; and Dr. Sherman P. Johnson, whose home is in Tacoma, Washington. The parents were both members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Frank S. Johnson was reared upon the old home farm near Silverton and the public schools afforded him his educational privileges, save for the course which he pursued in the Portland Business College. In his boyhood he became interested in the subject of hop-raising on his father's farm and throughout his entire life he has continued in that business, now producing about two thousand bales of hops each year on farms owned by the J. W. Seavey Hop Company. He has been engaged in dealing in hops for about fifteen years and about five years ago entered into his present partnership relations under the style of the J. W. Seavey Hop Company, of Portland. They are today the most extensive hop producers in Oregon, their business exceeding in volume and importance that of any other growers in the state. Mr. Johnson cultivates hops according to the most modern and scientific methods. He has made a close study of the soil best adapted thereto and has also studied the care of the vines and the handling of the product.

Mr. Johnson was married to Miss Mina A. Perry, a daughter of T. W. Perry, of North Yamhill. Both he and his wife were natives of England but were married in Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson now have an interesting little son, Max Robert, four years of age. Laudable ambition has actuated Mr. Johnson in all his business affairs and determined purpose has led him to accomplish what he has undertaken, until now he is well known as one of the more prosperous residents of his part of the state.

GAIL S. NEWSOM, M. D., is a physician with an extensive practice, residing in Athena, and with his brother is the owner of a five thousand acre stock ranch in the vicinity. The Doctor also owns several pieces of real estate in Portland. He was born in Prineville, Oregon, September 7, 1881, a son of S. J. and Sarah J. (Simpson) Newsom. The father was a native of Illinois while the mother was born in California. The family became early pioneers of Oregon, migrating to that state in the latter '40s, where the father took part in the Indian war in 1851. The parents are still living in Prineville. In their family were three children: John D., now of Denver, Colorado; Dr. Newsom, of this review; and S. J., Jr., who is residing at home with his parents.

Dr. Newsom received a good preliminary education in the schools of Oregon, after which he entered the State University and graduated from the medical department of that institution in 1904. Immediately after his graduation he began practicing at Arlington, where he remained one and a half years, and had charge as surgeon of the Oregon Central and Columbia River Railroad. He then removed to Portland where he remained until 1910, after which he settled in Athena, where he has since been successfully engaged in the practice of his profession.

Dr. Newsom was married in 1907 to Miss Marie Pelland, who was born in St. Paul, Minnesota. To them has been born a son, Charles Maxwell, whose birth occurred Sep-

FRANK S. JOHNSON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

tember 12, 1908. The Doctor is a member of the Elks lodge and the Knights of Pythias. He is a successful practitioner, having a broad knowledge of materia medica and possessing a skill which has given him a high reputation in the community. He has built up a fine practice which is constantly growing with his increasing acquaintance, and he ranks with the most popular of professional and business men of the town.

B. D. CLEMONS. The first man who settled where Athena now stands and who built in that place the first blacksmith shop in 1878, is B. D. Clemons. He conducted his shop for fifteen years and then purchased a feed mill which he is still running. He was born in Massachusetts in 1842, was reared in the east, where he received a common-school education and later removed to Chicago, where he resided for several years. He then removed to Kansas, where he remained until 1876, when, crossing the plains with teams, he settled in Walla Walla, Washington, and two years later came to Umatilla county, where he has since resided. He was the pioneer resident of Athena and his first efforts at improvement are still visible in the town which he founded.

B. D. Clemons was married August 20, 1870, to Miss Emma Middleton, and to their union two children, Frank and Poka, both deceased, were born. The wife also passed away, November 10, 1876, and Mr. Clemons again married, his second union being with Miss Clara E. White, the wedding being celebrated December 5, 1888. His second wife is a native of Washington county, Iowa, and came with her parents to Oregon in 1875. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Clemons five children were born: Kezia F., the wife of Ed Kitter, of Umatilla county, Oregon; Joseph, who is married and lives in Athena; Eva R., the wife of W. L. Kidder, of Spokane, Washington; Howard, at home; and one who died in infancy.

Mr Clemons is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Lodge No. 80, of Athena. In his political views he is a republican. The Clemons family are among the most estimable people of Athena where from the very inception of the town Mr. Clemons has been identified with its business interests. He is a patriotic and optimistic citizen, takes an active interest in everything which affects the public good, and owing to his genial disposition and companionable nature is very popular. Owing to his early settlement in the community he is acquainted with practically every man, woman and child in the place and his counsel is sought by many who have reason to thank him for his words of encouragement and advice.

I. M KEMP, of Weston, was born at Red Oak, Iowa, August 22, 1872, and is a son of W. H. and Rachel (Miller) Kemp, who were natives of Aurora, Illinois, where they were reared and married. About 1865 they removed westward to Iowa and from that state went to Boise, Idaho, and then a year later to Athena, Oregon. At the present time they reside near Portland. The father devoted most of his active life to farming and carpentering and is now living retired.

I. M. Kemp is one of a family of three sons and three daughters and his youthful days were spent under the parental roof, where he was early trained to recognize the value of industry and integrity as salient features in business success. He acquired his education in the country schools and afterward worked for two years in the First National Bank of Colton, Washington. He then took up the occupation of farming, which he followed near Pullman, Washington, for four years and in the fall of 1896 he returned to Athena, where he accepted the position of bookkeeper in a bank. He was also assistant cashier of the same institution and so continued until the fall of 1907. In June, 1908, he came to Weston to fill the office of cashier of the Farmers Bank and the success of this institution is attributable in no small measure to his efforts.

In 1893 occurred the marriage of I. M. Kemp and Miss Emma Mraz, a native of Salem, Oregon, and of Bohemian parentage. They have three daughters, Lucille, Iris and Dorothy. Mr. Kemp is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. The greater part of his life has been spent in the northwest and he believes that this part of the country has before it a wonderful future.

WILLIAM H. SWITZLER, who is engaged in the lumber business and also conducts a ferry at Umatilla, has been a lifelong resident of this county, his birth having occurred in Pendleton, September 15, 1878. He is a son of John B. and Mary (Smoot) Switzler, both of whom were natives of Missouri. They crossed the plains at an early date, the mother locating in California. The father was but seven years of age when he came west with his father and settled at Switzler Sloughs, opposite Vancouver. Later he went to California, where he was married. He subsequently removed to Montana, and established a pack train service between Umatilla, the head of navigation, and various places in Montana and Idaho. He was thus engaged for several years before he went to Portland which he did previous to his removal to Umatilla county, where he went into the ranching business with two brothers, William and John, under the style of The Switzler Company. He owns seven hundred head of horses, although at one time he had several thousand. In Oregon and Washington the Switzler brothers formerly owned about twenty thousand head of horses. At one time they sold eight thousand head to the Linton Cannery, for two dollars and fifty cents per head. They have always specialized in horses, although they handled some cattle. In 1900 John B. Switzler sold four thousand head of horses in Douglas county, Washington, and he has been disposing of his stock since that time as rapidly as possible. He has real-estate interests in Walla Walla, Umatilla, Portland and Canada. He resides at No. 337 East Ninth street north, in Portland but his business interest are largely in Umatilla and eastern Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. John B. Switzler four children were born: Delia, who is the wife of C. R. Farrell, of Sunnyside; Minnie, the wife of Frank Sharpstein, of Walla Walla, Washington; William H., the subject of this review; and Evelina, the wife of H. N. Dryer, of Umatilla.

William H. Switzler passed his youth and boyhood in a manner similar to that of the average country boy of the west, attending school for a short time and assisting his father in whatever way he could. He is associated in business with his father and for the past year and one-half has owned and operated a ferry which plies the river between Umatilla and Plymouth, Washington. He has also been identified with the lumber business for the past four years. He owns a small ranch across the Columbia river in Washington but his residence is in this county, where he has lived all his life. He displays the same keen judgment in raising and dealing in horses which won his father such remarkable success and his ability is already well recognized. He maintains a careful oversight and general supervision of his lumber interests.

On the 15th of June, 1910, William H. Switzler was married to Miss Ellen O'Connell, a daughter of Joseph O'Connell, deceased. He is recognized as one of the substantial citizens of Umatilla county, and deserving of the high reputation which he has gained for himself there.

SAMUEL L. SPENCER, the owner and manager of the Athena Opera House and the proprietor of several pieces of property in the town, as well as an eighty-acre farm in Texas, was born in eastern Tennessee, May 20, 1845, the son of Samuel and Edith (Nelson) Spencer, both of whom were natives of North Carolina. The parents removed to Tennessee at an early date and in 1863 went to Texas, where both passed away. They had a family of thirteen children, of whom eleven are still living.

Samuel L. Spencer received a common-school education and at the early age of sixteen years enlisted in the Eleventh Georgia Infantry, Company D, serving three years in the Confederate army and participating in numerous engagements. At the expiration of his three years' service in the Confederate army Mr. Spencer crossed the line and enlisted under the stars and stripes, becoming a member of Company H, of the Twelfth Tennessee Cavalry and serving on that side until the close of the war. He continued to reside in Tennessee until 1870, when he removed to Texas and there lived until 1891, working at the blacksmith's trade. He then came to Oregon and settled in Athena, where he has since resided. He engaged in his trade and built the Athena Opera House but in 1905 retired from active labor. He is now the owner of an eighty-acre farm in Texas and has four houses and lots and a blacksmith shop in Athena.

In 1863 Mr. Spencer was married to Miss Mary Sinyard, a native of Tennessee and a daughter of Thomas and Catherine (Bearden) Sinyard, natives of North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Sinyard were the parents of fourteen children, three of whom are living. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer had a daughter, Mary L., who was born October 8, 1869, and died October 5, 1871.

Mr. Spencer is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Lodge No. 80, F. & A. M., and both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, being actively engaged in the work of that denomination. Mr. Spencer is and has long been prominent as a citizen and popular in the circles which he frequents. He is extensively known and universally respected and the standing of his family in the community is most excellent. He has been active in municipal and other affairs which affect the prosperity of his town and may always be counted upon to assist to the extent of his ability in the promotion of all enterprises for its upbuilding and advancement.

GEORGE W. GROSS, the popular and efficient mayor of Athena and one of its most valued and progressive men, has been a resident of that place since 1901. He was born in Dallas county, Iowa, March 10, 1857, a son of Andrew and Sarah (Shafer) Gross, the former a native of Baden, Germany, and the latter of Pennsylvania. The father emigrated to America with his parents in 1837 and the family settled in Ohio, where they resided until 1850, when they removed to Dallas county, Iowa. In that state the mother passed away in 1858 and in 1863 the father removed with his family to California, crossing the plains with horse teams. They resided in the Golden state, however, for only a year and then removed to Linn county, Oregon, where they resided until 1871, when they came to Umatilla county, there remaining until 1878. In that year the father returned to Linn county, where his death occurred January 28, 1910, at the age of eighty-three years. He was twice married. By his first union six children were born and by his second marriage he became the father of eight children.

George W. Gross remained at home until he attained his majority and then began farming in 1878, choosing Umatilla county as the field of his operations. He continued in that vocation until 1901, when he came to Athena and here he has since resided. He, however, retains his farm of six hundred and forty acres, which is an extremely valuable property.

In 1880 Mr. Gross was married to Miss Jennie Morgan, a native of Lane county, Oregon, and a daughter of John and Sarah (Stanley) Morgan, who emigrated to Oregon in 1852. Her parents are both deceased, the mother passing away in 1878 and the father's death occurring in 1882. They were the parents of nine children. Mr. and Mrs. Gross have become the parents of four children: James F., who is married and resides in Umatilla county; Eva M., the wife of Arthur Douglas, of the same county; Lulu B., who married L. H. Reed, of Umatilla county; and George W., who was born on December 14, 1892, and died February 12, 1893.

In his political views Mr. Gross is a democrat and is at present serving as mayor of Athena. Fraternally he holds membership in Lodge No. 73, I. O. O. F., at Athena, having filled all of the chairs in that order. He also belongs to the Woodmen of the World, while Mrs. Gross is a member of the Rebekahs. Since his identification with Athena he has been one of the progressive and optimistic citizens of that place. Possessing great faith in its future, he has always been prominently identified with and a supporter of all movements calculated to promote the interests of Athena and community. He has formed an extremely large circle of acquaintances whose respect and esteem for him are very marked. He is of a genial and companionable nature and in his social, fraternal and business relations instantly commands the respect and confidence of those with whom he comes in contact. Few men if any in the city are more popular and he is one of whom any community may be justly proud.

JOHN WESLEY WALDEN. In the list of the leading citizens of La Grande is John Wesley Walden, who is successfully serving in the official capacity of chief of police. He was born July 25, 1858, in La Salle county, Illinois, the son of John W. and Hannah (Elliott) Walden, the father a native of New York and the mother of Michigan. The parents were married in Michigan in 1854 and the father was engaged in farming in Lenawee county of that state until 1863, when he purchased horses and started overland for California but was killed on the way by Indians. The mother was left with two children: John, of this review; and one daughter, Phoebe, now deceased. In 1865 the mother was again married, her second union being with Eugene Knapp, and in 1872 they moved to Cloud county, Kansas.

John W. Walden received his early education in the district schools. He was fourteen years of age when he removed to Kansas and he resided in that state until 1883, when he came to Union county, Oregon. For one year thereafter he was engaged in the implement business and then for four years was employed in railroad work. Subsequently he was elected constable at Union and later deputy sheriff, under Sheriff Derring, which office he filled for four years. Thereupon he came to La Grande, entering the police department as patrolman, and one year later was elected night chief, in which capacity he served for two years. He was then made chief of police, which position he is now filling.

In Kansas, in 1882, Mr. Walden was united in marriage with Miss Florence Delp and they have become the parents of three children: Claud and Ralph, both of whom are engaged in railroad work; and Ernest, who is in school. Mr. Walden is a man of indomitable courage, sterling integrity and honesty of purpose, who has never spared himself in any way when the safety of the community was at stake. He has been in sheriff and police work for twenty-one years and has had many interesting experiences with cattle and horse thieves and lawbreakers in general and as a result of some of these he now carries four bullets in his body. He has ever discharged his duties with marked ability and fairness and is considered a most loyal and public-spirited citizen. In his political views Mr. Walden is a republican, and fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and with the Knights of Pythias.

HARRY D. GRAY, a well known grocer of Pendleton, who is also interested in various other local enterprises, is descended from one of Oregon's earliest pioneers and represents the third generation of his family to have been identified with the development of the state. He was born in Astoria, Oregon, on the 11th of December, 1872, his parents being J. H. D. and Laura W. (Bell) Gray. His father was a native of Lapway, Idaho, his birth there occurring in 1839, and a son of William H. Gray, who first came to Oregon in 1836, having crossed the plains with Missionary Whitman and his party. Looking over the country, William H. Gray decided to locate here permanently. He returned to Utica, New York, for his bride and soon after his marriage they started west, arriving in Idaho, whence they subsequently removed to Clatsop county, Oregon. There for many years Mr. Gray engaged in agricultural pursuits, being one of the pioneer ranchers on the Clatsop plains. Later he became a resident of Astoria, where he passed his latter days, his time being largely engaged in writing a history of Oregon. J. H. D. Gray began his business career as a steamboat man and at one time was the owner of a large line of boats on the lower Columbia, but he subsequently withdrew from this and was appointed pilot commissioner, and very capably discharged the duties of this office for two years. He began his public career as state senator from Clatsop county, serving in this capacity for two terms, following which he was elected county judge. He passed away in 1902, at the age of sixty three years, but the mother, Laura W. Gray is still living and now makes her home in Portland. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gray, six of whom lived to attain maturity. Mrs. Gray is a native of Missouri, but she has long resided in Oregon, having crossed the plains with her father, John C. Bell, in 1854.

At the usual age Harry D. Gray entered the public schools of Astoria, passing through the successive grades until he was graduated from the high school, completing his education by a year's study in the State University at Eugene. After leaving college he returned to Astoria and began earning his own living, his first year in the business world being spent in steamboating on the Columbia river. At the expiration of that time he decided to engage in sawmilling and in 1893 acquired stock in the Clatsop Mill Company, continuing to be actively identified with this company, in which he is still financially interested, until 1907. Withdrawing from his position, in the latter year he came to Pendleton and together with two of his brothers, Charles E. of Portland and William of Spokane, bought the grocery store of F. S. Younger & Son. Mr. Gray immediately assumed the management of this enterprise, which has prospered from the very first and they are now doing an excellent business. Their receipts have shown a marked advance from year to year and their trade is constantly increasing, as they carry a full line of groceries of standard quality. The business is conducted in accordance with the methods followed in every progressive mercantile concern, it being the policy of this firm to treat their patrons with the utmost courtesy and consideration and as a result they number among their customers many of the leading families of the town.

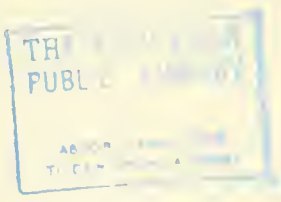
The political allegiance of Mr. Gray is given to the republican party and he has always taken an active interest in all municipal affairs. While residing in Astoria he was vice president of the Young Men's Republican Club, and he is now a member of the board of directors of the Pendleton Commercial Club, in the work of which organization he takes an enthusiastic interest. He gives his support and cooperation to every progressive movement and was one of the organizers of the Round-up Association and served on the board of directors for two years. His fraternal connections are confined to his membership in the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, while he maintains relations with the lumbermen through the medium of his membership in the Hoo-Hoo's. Although he has been a resident of Pendleton for less than five years, Mr. Gray has become recognized as a most worthy acquisition to its commercial fraternity, not only because of the capable manner in which he is directing his own interests but owing to the efficiency he has manifested in all of his public and business transactions.

JOHN F. CARSTENS. For years Oregon figured as one of the leading lumber states of the entire country and this position she rightfully maintains today, but as time passed on there has been given abundant proof of her possibilities in other directions. Farming and fruit-growing can be followed with equal profit and the soil seems adaptable to all of the usual products of the field and orchard. Acre after acre in Oregon is today being brought under the plow and the work is attended with excellent results. Among the good farming properties that are being developed in Washington county is that owned by John F. Carstens, who is the owner of one hundred and seventy acres of land of which seventy acres is under a high state of cultivation. Mr. Carstens was born in Indiana, February 5, 1865, a son of Fedda and Henrietta (Dealwater) Carstens, both of whom were natives of Germany. They were married in Indiana, coming to America about 1854, and settling in the Hoosier state, where Mr. Carstens followed the occupation of farming in the vicinity of Creston, Lake county. Here they lived until the spring of 1870. They then came to Oregon, establishing their home near Hillsboro, Washington county, where they remained for three years and then removed to Banks. Mr. Carstens continued to engage in tilling the soil until 1887, when with the comfortable competence which he had acquired from his previous labors he retired and removed to Hillsboro, where he remained until his death in 1904, having for three years survived his wife, who died in 1901. In their family were ten children of whom six are yet living, namely: A. C., residing in Banks, Oregon; H. C., of Roy, this state; Sophia, the wife of H. I. Smith, of Forest Grove; John F., of this review; Henrietta, the wife of Clayburn Williams, of Rainier, Oregon; and Emma, who became the wife of Walter McKinney, who passed away at Hillsboro, Oregon, leaving a widow and one child. Those who are deceased are: L. F., whose death occurred at Banks, this state, when he was forty-nine years of age; Pearl, the youngest of the family, who passed away in 1886 at the age of ten years; and two who died in infancy.

John F. Carstens, while born in the middle west, has spent the greater part of his life on the Pacific coast, having been brought to Oregon when a little lad of five summers. Here he was reared and early became familiar with the task of plowing, planting and harvesting. His education was acquired in the public schools and when not busy with his text-books he worked in the fields. On attaining his majority he began farming on his own account upon a part of his father's land, continuing its cultivation for six years, or until 1893. He then removed to Hillsboro, where he operated a planing mill and sawmill and also conducted a general lumber business for seven years. He then returned to the farm on which he spent the succeeding year, and next took up his abode on a farm which he had purchased in 1889. It is situated near Banks and to its development and improvement he is now devoting his time and energies with the result that he has placed seventy acres of the one hundred and seventy-acre tract under cultivation and is fast reclaiming and improving the other. The equipment on his property is good and includes substantial buildings and well improved machinery such as facilitates the work of the fields. His methods are at once practical and progressive and annually he harvests good crops as a reward for the care and labor which he bestows upon his land.

As a companion and helpmate for life's journey Mr. Carstens chose Miss Nettie Stephens, whom he wedded April 5, 1887. She was born in Washington county, Oregon, a daughter of William and Ann (Delashman) Stephens, who were natives of the east but became pioneer residents of Oregon and have been actively and helpfully interested in its upbuilding, spending much of their time in Washington county, their home being now at



JOHN F. CARSTENS

MRS. JOHN F. CARSTENS

Forest Grove. In their family were seven children: Ida, the wife of William Allen, of Columbia county, Oregon; Clara, who passed away at the age of twenty-seven years; Mrs. Carstens; Edward, of Buxton, Oregon; and A. L., Charley and Fred, also residing in Buxton.

Mr. and Mrs. Carstens had two children, but the younger, Arley, who was born April 24, 1895, died August 31, 1896. The surviving son, Clell B., was born March 22, 1890, and was married to Miss Alta Inkley, a native of Nebraska, who in 1906 came to Oregon with her parents, who are residents of Washington county. They have one child, Burl, born April 1, 1911.

John F. Carstens is a republican in his political views but does not hesitate to uphold the principles in which he believes, his position never being an equivocal one. He does not seek office, however, for his time and attention are fully occupied with his business and other interests. His social nature finds expression in his membership in the Knights of Pythias lodge of Hillsboro and with the Maccabees at Greenville, Oregon. For more than forty years he has been a witness of the growth of the state and is proud of what has been accomplished here. At all times his influence has been on the side of improvement and Oregon has no more loyal representative and advocate than John F. Carstens.

WILLIAM THOMAS OSBURN. Several years before gold was discovered in California, when it was the hope of securing homes and utilizing the opportunities of the far west that brought the settler to the Pacific coast, William Thomas Osburn took up his abode in Oregon, having traveled across the plains with pack horses in 1845. He was born near Paoli, Indiana, January 18, 1823, and was only eight years of age at the time of the death of his father, Thomas F. Osburn. The mother passed away in 1851. In early life William T. Osburn went to Iowa and when he was twenty-two years of age he became imbued with the spirit of adventure and started for the northwest. Oregon City was then the only place where there was any development to speak of in the state. Mr. Osburn remained there until June, 1847, when he took the trail with pack horses for California, arriving in that state toward the end of July. On the discovery of gold in 1848 he turned his attention to mining on the middle fork of the Sacramento river and met with good success. In the fall of 1849 he again crossed the plains to Indiana, where he remained for two years, but in 1851 again came to the coast, traveling with pack horses to Portland, Oregon, which was rapidly coming to the front as the principal trading point of the Willamette river. In February, 1852, Mr. Osburn again went to Indiana and there invested his capital in quite a large bunch of cattle, with which he once more started out for Oregon. While on that trip he had several encounters with the Indians, who, however, ran away when he and his party showed fight. Mr. Osburn took his cattle to the head waters of the Siuslaw river where there was splendid pasture and plenty of range. In the spring of 1853 he sold his stock and again went to Indiana. While there he was married and with his bride came to the coast. On that trip he also brought a bunch of cattle, traveling over the Oregon trail and settling on Camas prairie in Lane county, where was to be found the best grass in the country. For five years he continued there and then purchased a farm on the river road about eight miles below Eugene. In 1861 he took up his abode in that city and became identified with its manufacturing and industrial interests as the owner of a flour mill and sawmill. Eventually he disposed of that business and purchased a stove and hardware store which he conducted until 1865, when he sold out and purchased the residence that he occupied from 1866 until the time of his death.

It was at Paoli, Indiana, that Mr. Osburn was married to Miss Sarah Sherod, a native of Virginia, and they became the parents of four children: Curran D., who was a physician but is now deceased; Owen, a resident of Roseburg, Oregon, where he is engaged in the drug business; Grant, who has also passed away; and William F., who is proprietor of the Hotel Osburn, at Eugene.

Mr. Osburn was not only prominent as a business man of Lane county but was also widely known in other connections. He was a member of the first city council of Eugene and in his younger days was an active, energetic citizen, whose cooperation could always be counted upon to further progressive public movements. He was a charter member of the first Masonic lodge created in Oregon, this having been established in Oregon City, in 1845. He died at Eugene, January 21, 1905, and was buried under the auspices of the Masonic order, being the oldest Mason in the state at that time in years of continuous connection with the craft.

W. T. HILL, whose identification with the state of Oregon and its interests dates from 1878, was a citizen of Umatilla county, from that time until his death, June 7, 1903. He was a prominent and successful farmer and stock raiser owning three hundred and twenty acres of land. He was born in Illinois in 1834 or 1835, and settled in Iowa at an early day. He resided in that state until 1878, when with his family he crossed the plains, coming to Umatilla county, where he took up a homestead and railroad land to the amount of three hundred and twenty acres, which by careful cultivation and thorough improvement he developed into valuable property. His father was a soldier of the Revolutionary war and also served in Indian wars.

Mr. Hill chose as his life companion and helpmate Miss Delilah Coleman, who was born in Illinois, a daughter of James and Sarah (Reed) Coleman, both natives of Ohio. Her parents went to Illinois shortly after their marriage and later removed to Iowa, settling in Wapello, where they lived for many years or until their deaths occurred. Unto them were born a family of ten children, whom they educated and gave good training. To Mr. and Mrs. Hill were born ten children: Heaton, deceased; Turpin, a resident of Grass Valley; Oscar, of Malheur county, Oregon; Mary J., at home; Reed, of Athena; Ida M., the wife of C. H. Downing, also residing in this city; Perry S., of Yamhill county; Jerome, living at Alba, Washington; Carrie B., the wife of Frank Rodgers, of Pendleton; and one who died in infancy.

Mr. Hill was a progressive, successful farmer and stock-raiser and by his well ordered life and many good qualities formed a very large acquaintance among the better class of people of Umatilla county. His widow has recently sold the homestead for twenty-five thousand dollars and is now living in Athena, where she owns a beautiful home and four lots. Her eldest daughter is making her home with her and they are well and favorably known in the community. The exemplary life of W. T. Hill left an indelible impress upon the community and his passing was regretted and mourned by all who knew him. His was a life of industry, energy and integrity and his labors were fruitful of much good in the section where he resided and he left his widow and family well provided for.

HENRY CLAY ELMS has for almost a third of a century resided in Baker county and now makes his home in Unity. He was born in Washington county, Arkansas, on the 20th of April, 1859, and represents old southern families. His paternal grandparents were Jonathan and Cidy (Bradley) Elms, natives of North Carolina, the former born in 1809 and the latter in 1811. They were the parents of Edward O. Elms, whose birth occurred in North Carolina, in 1832. With their family they removed westward to White county, Tennessee, about the year 1834 and Edward O. Elms there remained until 1851, when he became a resident of Arkansas. There he met and married Rachel L. Newman, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Newman, who had removed from Alabama to Arkansas at an early period in the settlement and development of the latter state. The death of Mrs. Rachel Elms occurred December 27, 1859, and her husband, long surviving her, passed away in February, 1892. They were the parents of two children, Mary Ann and Henry C. Elms.

The latter spent the period of his boyhood and youth at home and on the 11th of April, 1880, left the parental roof in company with Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Lawrence and their two children, James E. and Martha Lawrence, and a family by the name of Smith. They were en route for the far west and experienced many of the hardships and privations that came to the travelers across the plains, but though the journey was a long and difficult one they at length arrived safely in Baker City, Oregon, on the 1st of July. Here Mr. Elms began mining but followed that pursuit only a short time. In January, 1881, he entered the employ of J. K. Carlile and in 1882 taught school in Baker county. In 1894 Mr. Elms located on his present property near Unity, consisting of three hundred and twenty acres of fine ranch land.

On the 27th of December, 1881, he married Miss Fannie A. Carlile, the daughter of his employer. She was born in Lane county, Oregon, June 28, 1867, and was but four years of age when, in 1871, she accompanied her parents to Baker county, where she has since lived. Her father, James K. Carlile, was one of the prominent and influential pioneers of Baker county, closely associated with the development and progress of this region. He was born in Washington county, Arkansas, in 1829, and crossed the plains to California in 1853. He had for ten years resided on the Pacific coast when he came to Oregon in 1863. Here he married Angy Glachley, who belonged to one of the early families in the vicinity of Eugene, Oregon, her people having come from Ohio, among the first to settle in that part of the state. Mrs. Carlile died in the year 1876 and for three decades was survived by her husband, who departed this life on the 6th of March, 1906. To Mr. and Mrs. Elms have been born six children, of whom five are living: Charles E., who was born in what is now Malheur county, Oregon, February 26, 1886; Myrtle C., born at the same place on the 8th of March, 1888, who is a teacher in the public schools; Onie P., born in Malheur county, June 25, 1891; Bertha A., born in Baker county, July 25, 1895; and Henry Franklin, who was born in the same county, January 7, 1898. James Carlile, born November 10, 1893, died in March, 1894.

Mr. Elms is a democrat, has been prominent in the councils of his party and has been a member of the county central committee for many years. In 1886 he was nominated for state representative on the democratic ticket from what was then Baker county and in 1890 was nominated for the same office from Malheur county. He is a member of the Nonpareil Circle of the Woodmen of the World. For almost a third of a century he has followed ranching in this county, owning and cultivating a valuable tract of land, which by his labors has become a well developed property, equipped with modern improvements and conveniences such as are incident to a model farm of the twentieth century.

MARK MOORHOUSE is the sole owner of a general real-estate and insurance business operating under the name of The Mark Moorhouse Company, located at Pendleton, in Umatilla county. He was born on Prospect farm, Umatilla county, December 8, 1881, and is a son of Major Lee and Mrs. Moorhouse, of whom an extended review is published elsewhere in this work.

Mark Moorhouse was reared at home and received his education in the public schools of Umatilla county. After having passed through the lower grades he later was graduated from the high school at Pendleton with the class of 1898. Following his graduation he secured a position in the Pendleton Woolen Mills as shipping clerk and in that occupation he continued for two years. He then entered the employ of Frank B. Clopton, who was operating a general real-estate and insurance business in Umatilla county. In 1904 occurred the organization of the Commercial National Bank of Umatilla and Mr. Moorhouse obtained a position as bookkeeper in that institution at that time. In 1905 he associated himself in the real-estate business with Frank B. Clopton under the firm name of Frank B. Clopton & Company, dealers in real estate, insurance and lands, continuing to devote his attention to the business of the firm until 1909. In the month of July of that year he purchased Mr. Clopton's interest in the business, which he has since successfully operated under the firm name of The Mark Moorhouse Company.

In November, 1907, Mr. Moorhouse was united in marriage to Miss Blanche Horn, of Umatilla county, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Horn. The father is one of the prominent farmers of Umatilla county and a pioneer stage man of eastern Oregon. Mr. Moorhouse is a member of the republican party, and fraternally is a member of Pendleton Lodge, No. 288, B. P. O. E., and Damon Lodge, No. 4, K. P. He also belongs to the Pendleton Commercial Club and is exhibition manager of the Pendleton Round-up Society. Mr. and Mrs. Moorhouse are members of the Episcopal church, and he is one of the vestrymen and also treasurer of the church in which he holds membership. Mark Moorhouse is one of the well known, enterprising and useful citizens of Umatilla county. His integrity in all matters of business has secured for him the confidence of the investing public and public opinion places him among the very desirable members of the community in which he lives.

WILLIAM A. BROWN, who has been proprietor and manager of the Hotel Pendleton for seven years, is one of the well known hotel men of the northwest. His birth occurred in Savanna, Illinois, on the 2d of February, 1872, his parents being John and Mary (Ross) Brown, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of England. The parents were brought as children to Illinois by their parents and were married in that state. The father's death occurred in Savanna about 1887. The mother is now residing in Lincoln, Nebraska. During his active career the father was an agriculturist until the last few years of his life when he was engaged in the hotel business in Savanna. In the family were ten children, two of whom are deceased. One son, John Brown, is a resident of Cheyenne, Wyoming, and is managing the Inter Ocean Hotel. He is also proprietor of the Normandie Hotel and is a retail cigar dealer.

Until he was eighteen years of age William A. Brown resided at home, attending public school during the winter and working during the summer. Later he became night clerk in a hotel at Savanna, and at the age of nineteen was conductor of a dining car running out of Minneapolis, Minnesota. Subsequently he returned to Savanna and became day clerk in a hotel. After remaining in that position for a short time he was employed as manager of the restaurant in the Union depot at Omaha, Nebraska, and later removed to Laramie, Wyoming, where he was steward of The Thornburg Hotel. He acted as cashier and manager of the hotel for a time. He was next transferred to Cheyenne, Wyoming, and was in charge of the hotel operated by the Union Pacific Railway Company. After his resignation he went to Alaska in 1898, but one year later returned and located in Ogden, Utah, where for six months he managed the hotel in the Union station. He was next employed by the Pullman Company to take charge of the dining car running out of Ogden. After several months he became manager of the hotel at Pocatello, Idaho, and subsequently was employed for about two years as dining car conductor by the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. Later he took a half interest in the Hotel Pendleton, and at the end of two years became sole proprietor and is now manager and proprietor. For the last seven years he has been thus engaged. During his entire career in the hotel business he has had ample opportunity to become acquainted with many of the restaurant and hotel managers and owners in the west. He has given the best satisfaction in his various positions because he seems to possess an innate ability of so catering to the trade which is accorded him that his services are invaluable in connection with the operation of any hotel or restaurant. Courteous and genial in manner and with a high regard for the rights of others, he has won for himself an immense popularity, which is one of the essentials to the successful hotel man. His various undertakings have netted him good profits, and he is the lessee of the Hotel Pendleton but also owns a section of land in Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

In 1902 Mr. Brown was married to Miss Lottie M. Smith, a native of Iowa and a daughter of Mrs. M. E. Smith, of Portland, Oregon. No children have been born of this union. Mr. Brown is a Mason, being a member of the Mystic Shrine of Portland. He also holds membership in the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. A stranger's estimate of the progressive and enterprising spirit of a town is frequently based upon the hotels which it affords. Because of the up-to-date and popular hotels which Mr. Brown has managed it may be considered he has contributed in no small degree to the prestige enjoyed by the towns in which he has been in business.

FRED A. LIEUALLEN, M. D., is a physician residing in Pilot Rock, Umatilla county, Oregon. He is a native son of Oregon and of the county of Umatilla, his natal day being November 6, 1880. His parents are James Thomas and Lucy J. (Adcock) Lieuallen, the former a native of Missouri and the latter of Oregon. James T. Lieuallen, who came to this state in the year 1865, is now a resident of Adams, Umatilla county. Unto him and his wife were born nine children, all of whom survive.

Fred A. Lieuallen was reared at home and educated in the academy and at the State University at Eugene. On the completion of his studies in the university at that place he became a student of medicine in the University of Oregon at Portland, from which department he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in the class of 1905. Immediately following the completion of his medical studies at the university he was associated in the practice of medicine with Dr. Cole at Pendleton. At this place he remained for one year. He afterward removed to Helix, where he was engaged in the practice of medicine for one year. He then changed his location, moving to Huntington, where he spent seven months as local physician for the railway. In 1908 he established his permanent residence at Pilot Rock and is now in the enjoyment of a large and lucrative practice.

In November, 1908, Dr. Lieuallen was united in marriage to Miss Myrtle B. Hawks, a native of Washington and a daughter of Robert O. and Mary (Duger) Hawks. The father still survives and makes his home at Pendleton, but the mother has passed away. Unto Dr. and Mrs. Lieuallen has been born one daughter, Barbara, whose natal day was May 5, 1910.

Dr. Lieuallen is affiliated with the democratic party, consistently voting with this great political organization in its national, state and county campaigns. His fraternal relations are with Lodge No. 93, F. & A. M.; Lodge, No. 288, B. P. O. E., of Pendleton; Lodge No. 22 of the Improved Order of Red Men; and the Knights of Pythias. Mrs. Lieuallen is a member of the Presbyterian church. Dr. Lieuallen's work as a physician in his chosen field absorbs all of his time and attention, and to this work he has consecrated his life and abilities. His practice has steadily increased since he became a resident of Pilot Rock and to it he is devoting his undivided attention.

JAMES MATHEW HINDMAN, chief operator, and manager of the telegraph office at Umatilla, was born in Stockton, Kansas, January 10, 1880, a son of S. A. W. and Loretta (Sleeth) Hindman. The father was born in Kentucky and the mother is a native of Indiana, where their marriage occurred. They removed to Iowa after their marriage, where they resided until 1878, when they took up their abode in Kansas. The father died in that state in 1888, when he was fifty-three years of age. The mother who survives him resides in Stockton. S. A. W. Hindman was an agriculturist throughout his active life and had nine children of whom James M. is the youngest.

James M. Hindman resided at home until he was eighteen years of age, attending the public schools and later pursuing the course offered by the high school at Stockton. After he completed his education in 1898 he went to Montana and worked as section hand until 1900. In that year he learned telegraphy, and has since followed that occupation, working throughout the northwest. He has now been at Umatilla for four years and is chief operator and manager of the telegraph office here. That his services have been entirely satisfactory is amply indicated by the fact that he has continued in his position for four years.

In 1906 James M. Hindman was married to Miss Estella Jobson, of Billings, Montana. He gives his political allegiance to the republican party and has served in the city council. He is a young man who has already gained an enviable position in telegraphic circles and his industry and determination—his dominant qualities—augur well for a successful future.

FELIX CURRIN. One of the few farmers in Oregon who have in the interest of agriculture conducted extensive experiments in growing grain, grasses and forage plants, is Felix Currin, a highly respected, successful and active farm operator living near Cottage Grove. He was born in Henry county, Missouri, July 14, 1847, a son of John and Margaret (Swift) Currin. The father was born in Grayson county, Virginia, March 2, 1816, and was descended from Irish ancestry. His father, the grandfather of Felix Currin, was active in politics and although busy with agricultural pursuits served as a member of the state legislature for eighteen years. In his official capacity he acquitted himself with distinction and was efficient and popular in his public service. In his family were eight children, and his death occurred when his son John was but three years of age. The latter remained on the old homestead until he attained the age of twenty years, receiving his education in the public schools of Virginia. Shortly after attaining his majority he was appointed sheriff of Carroll county, that state, an office which he filled with satisfaction to his constituents and distinction to himself. After leaving the sheriff's office he removed to Missouri, where he pursued farming as a vocation and where he was married. He resided in that state until 1853, when by ox team he came to Oregon and settled in Lane county, where he took up a donation land claim of three hundred and twenty acres about four miles east of Cottage Grove on the banks of the Row river. He became in Oregon, as he had been in Virginia, an extremely active farmer and added to his landed holdings until he owned eight hundred acres. Upon this farm he labored early and late, bringing it under a fine state of cultivation and erecting handsome buildings and other needed improvements until it became one of the fine farming properties of that section. He made a specialty of raising Durham cattle in addition to conducting a diversified system of farming. He belonged to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and was for many years a prominent member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church. Politically he had always been an adherent of the principles and practices of the democratic party, having taken a lively interest in all public matters. His death occurred August 13, 1908, and his wife

THE [illegible] K
PUBLIC [illegible] RY

MRS. FELIX CURRIN

FELIX CURRIN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

survived until December 27, 1909, both at the time of their death having nearly reached the ninetieth milestone on life's journey. In their family were seven children, as follows: Serephina, deceased; Felix, of this review, and William, Ann, John, Lavenia and Martha, all of whom have passed away.

Felix Currin was but six years of age when he came to Oregon with his parents and remained with them throughout almost their entire lives. He received a good common-school education and assisted his father with the duties incidental to his extensive agricultural operations until he attained the age of thirty years, when he was married. Later he removed to eastern Oregon, where he lived for five years, after which he returned to the old homestead near Cottage Grove and made his home with his parents until they passed away. He has devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits and is now the owner of a valuable farm of seven hundred and fifty acres on which he carries on general farming and stock-raising. The last named has proved a very important branch of his business activity and in that direction he has met with most gratifying success. He believes and has proven that hogs can be raised more cheaply in this territory than anywhere in the world and he has profitably handled the Duroc, Poland-China, Berkshire and Chester-White breeds. He also makes a specialty of Roan Durham cattle, of which he has a fine herd, and owns an excellent flock of Cotswold sheep which annually yield a fleece which brings most substantial returns. In the cultivation of his fields he is a true exponent of diversified farming and his ranch produces all varieties of farm and horticultural products. At his own expense he has for years conducted extensive experiments in the raising of various crops, hoping to be able to improve on the varieties commonly raised in this state. His experiments have been conducted on a large scale and under government supervision. He has planted and raised on his experimental farm fifteen hundred kinds of grasses, grains and forage plants and owns the most extensive exhibit in the state of Oregon. When the western governors' special train toured the eastern states recently Mr. Currin furnished the greater part of the exhibit on the Oregon car attached to that train. As an agriculturist he has greatly distinguished himself and his efforts for the betterment of farming conditions and crops have been productive of much good.

Mr. Currin laid the foundation for a happy home life of his own through his marriage to Miss Rosetta Craighead, who was born in Henry county, Missouri, a daughter of Robert and Stachy (Johnson) Craighead. Her parents came to Oregon in 1875 from Johnston county, and in their family were four children, of whom Mrs. Currin was the youngest in order of birth, the others being as follows: John, a resident of Springfield, Oregon; Matilda, the wife of Ed Jones, of Cottage Grove; and Manda, living in eastern Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Currin have become the parents of six children, namely: John, deceased; Ida, the wife of William Chapman, of Union county, Oregon, by whom she has three children, George, Otto and Osie; George, a farmer of Cottage Grove, who is married and has two children, Ivan and Pearl; Lynch, living at home with his parents; Osie, who married Vernon Fields, a telegraph operator of Cottage Grove; and Homer, attending school at Cottage Grove.

Mr. Currin has an extensive acquaintance and he is highly esteemed by all the prominent farmers of Oregon as well as by the scientific and particularly the agricultural exhibitors of the state. In his political views he is a democrat, although he has not paid a great deal of attention to political matters, preferring to confine his efforts to his farming pursuits and to the betterment of the agricultural and allied interests of Oregon. He has never been an office seeker and has never held a public office. He is a member of the State Grange and Cottage Grove Commercial Club, in both of which he is prominent and popular.

J. W. ETTER is the general manager of the Pilot Rock Mercantile Company, which is the largest mercantile house in this portion of Umatilla county. Its business management is entirely under the supervision and direction of Mr. Etter and in addition to this he is the owner of four hundred and forty acres of land, to which he gives his attention. This is a beautiful body of land located adjacent to Pilot Rock. Mr. Etter was born in the state of Missouri on the 3d of April, 1861, his parents being G. W. and Mary Ann (Cotton) Etter, both of whom were natives of Tennessee and who moved to Missouri at a very early date. In that state they established their home and spent the remaining years of their lives. Eleven children were born to this union, nine of whom are still living.

J. W. Etter remained at home until he was twenty-four years of age. He was educated in the public schools of the district in which his parents lived. After attaining his twenty-fourth birthday he began his independent career and in starting for himself he engaged in agricultural pursuits, becoming one of the representative farmers of the state of Missouri. He remained in his native state until 1901, but during this year he moved to Umatilla county, Oregon, where he remained but a short time and then returned to Missouri. Taking up his residence again in his native state, he remained until 1906. In this year he changed his vocation, becoming interested in the farm implement business and having his headquarters at Versailles. He eventually sold out and returned to Umatilla county, Oregon, where he purchased a farm and established his home. He remained thereon but one year, as he had an opportunity to dispose of the same within a year's time after making the purchase at a figure representing twice his original investment. His faith and confidence in Oregon lands was greatly stimulated by the fortunate outcome of this transaction and he purchased four hundred and forty acres in Umatilla county, which are still in his possession. The farm is situated only eighty rods from the city limits of Pilot Rock. It is a highly improved piece of land and one of the most desirable farms in this section of Umatilla county. In addition to managing this magnificent farm, Mr. Etter is also the general manager of the Pilot Rock Mercantile Company. In this merchandising concern Mr. Etter is also one of the large stockholders. He is likewise a stockholder in the Pacific Coast Fire Insurance Company.

In 1884 Mr. Etter was united in marriage to Miss Amanda Kidwell, a native of Missouri and a daughter of William and Martha Kidwell, both of whom were born in Tennessee. The father passed away in Missouri while the mother survives and makes her home with her children. Mrs. Etter was one of a family of nine children, seven of whom are still living. Mr. and Mrs. Etter have two children: Bertie M., the wife of George F. Campbell, of Umatilla county; and Lonnie E., who is still at home.

Mr. Etter gives his political allegiance to the democracy but has never sought office as a reward for his party fealty. He is a member of the official board of the Presbyterian church of Pilot Rock, to which his wife also belongs. He is a man widely known throughout the northeastern portion of the state of Oregon. He has been uniformly successful in his business adventures and is a man of unusual business ability.

LOUIS SCHOLL, JR., city treasurer and justice of the peace of Echo, is also engaged in the real-estate business. He is a popular man in the community and has served his city for three years in the capacity of mayor. He was born in Waseo county, Oregon, March 24, 1867, a son of Louis and Elizabeth (Fulton) Scholl. The father, who was born in Germany emigrated with his parents to the new world when a boy, the family settling in Missouri, in which state the mother of our subject was born. In 1852 the father left Missouri and crossed the plains to Oregon, settling near The Dalles. He was a civil engineer and drew the plans for the old fort at The Dalles, near which he made his home for many years and where his death occurred. The mother crossed the plains with her parents in 1847 and also settled at The Dalles. She is still living and resides at Walla Walla, Washington. In the family were four children: Carl, a resident of Walla Walla, Washington; Louis, Jr.; Bismarck and Mary, who died in infancy.

Louis Scholl, Jr., attended the common schools and later took a course in a business college. He remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority and then engaged in farming and stock-raising for some time. He also followed surveying and for four years held the office of county surveyor of Adams county, Washington. He spent four years in the mines of British Columbia and in 1897, in company with his brothers and father, built a flouring mill at Walla Walla, Washington, with which business he remained connected for six years. In 1904 he came to Echo, where he has since resided, having been for many years justice of the peace and also serving as mayor for three years. He has also held the position of city treasurer and in all his official connections he has distinguished himself by efficient service. He is now successfully engaged in the real-estate business.

In 1909 Mr. Scholl was married to Mrs. M. S. Jones, of Echo. He has two stepdaughters, Eugenia C. and Esther M., both of whom are attending high school. Mr. Scholl was reared a democrat and has always remained loyal to that political faith. He is connected with the Masonic order, belonging to Umatilla Lodge, No. 40, of which he is the treasurer. He and his family have a wide circle of acquaintances in and around Echo, where they own considerable property, and are prominent in business, fraternal and social circles. Mr. Scholl is numbered among the leading citizens of his town and enjoys the confidence and esteem of all with whom he comes in contact.

HERMAN ROEHLK, who is the owner of one section of very valuable land, devoted to wheat growing, near Pendleton, was born in Germany, on the 19th of October, 1865, a son of Joachim and Wiebke Roehlk. The parents came to Oregon soon after their arrival in America and spent the remainder of their lives in Umatilla county. To them three children were born: Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, deceased; Herman, the subject of this sketch; and Mrs. Bertha Lorenzen, of Pendleton.

Herman Roehlk acquired his early education in the schools of his native land but in 1883 left Germany to locate in the United States. He lived for one year in Iowa, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits before coming to Umatilla county, Oregon, where he rented land after having been employed as a farm hand. About 1899 he began farming independently and homesteaded one quarter of a section of land about five miles from his present place. He began work here with a determination to succeed and with that persistency of purpose and untiring industry which are salient characteristics of his race he soon had one of the most profitable farms in the county. As fast as he was financially able to do so he added to his property and at present he is the owner of one section, all the land being highly improved and being well equipped with a very modern and commodious home and substantial outbuildings. He engages principally in wheat raising and it is in this that he has won his remarkable success. He has never regretted his determination to leave his native land, for in America he has found the opportunity which he sought and has risen from an inferior position to one of prominence and independence.

In 1899 Mr. Roehlk was married to Miss Margaret Rohwer, whose birth occurred in Holstein, Germany, on the 2d of December, 1878, and who came to this country in 1893.

By their union four children have been born, Alvina, Helen, Edward and Edith.

Mr. Roehlk gives his support to the republican party and in religious faith is a Lutheran, holding membership in the Lutheran church of Pendleton. He has never sought to figure prominently in politics or fraternal circles, preferring to give his undivided attention to his agricultural pursuits, and thus he has become one of the enterprising and substantial farmers of his adopted country.

FRED ARDELL PHELPS. The commercial history of Hermiston would be incomplete without reference being made therein to the mercantile interests of Fred Ardell Phelps, who is one of the active partners in the Umatilla Storage & Commission Company, Inc. He is a native of Tioga county Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred September 19, 1864, his parents being Charles Walter and Catherine (Whitaker) Phelps. The parents were born in Pennsylvania, January 3, 1843, and November 23, 1847, respectively. They resided in their native state until 1875, when they came to Oregon. They made their home in this state for about twenty-five years and subsequently removed to California, where the father's death occurred in 1900. Throughout the greater part of his life before coming west Charles Walter Phelps engaged in the lumber business near Mansfield, Tioga county, Pennsylvania. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted for service from Tioga county. He fought in the battle of Gettysburg, this being the most important engagement in which he participated. After the war he brought his family west and as members of the Pacific colony they located at Hood River, where only seven families resided at the time of their arrival. He there took up a homestead and developed it until he became a railroad contractor. He also conducted a boarding car for over three years during the construction of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's line. Later he engaged in the agricultural implement business at The Dalles. His industry, perseverance and integrity always gained him the regard and respect of those with whom he came in contact and he firmly established himself in the industrial circles of this section. In politics he was always republican. To Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Phelps seven children were born: Melvin, who resides in Baker county, Oregon; Fred A., the subject of this sketch; Lida the wife of S. H. Frasier, of Glen Ellen, California; Gilbert W., a well known jurist; Thomas H., of Grant county; Kate May, who became the wife of Irwin Rule, of Berkeley, California; and Grace Myrtle, who is married to Frank Hudson, of Shasta county.

Fred A. Phelps grew up under the parental roof, attending the district schools during the usual term and assisting his father when not busy with his text-books. Later he became a student in the academy at The Dalles. He remained at home until he attained his majority, when he entered upon independent industrial pursuits. He first engaged in the stock-raising business and later conducted a large fruit farm in Wasco county. He was also for a time a general merchant at Granite and Sumpter in the mining district. He has been identified with mining interests for the past twelve years. He and his brother H. W. in partnership with E. W. McComas and W. J. Clark organized and incorporated the Umatilla Storage & Commission Company in 1909. Since its inception Mr. Phelps has been its general manager. He devotes that part of his time which this interest does not demand, to his fruit ranch, which he is operating according to modern and scientific methods.

On the 8th of November, 1890, Fred Ardell Phelps was married to Miss Leila Miller, whose birth occurred at Eagle Mountain, Idaho, October 10, 1874, and who is a daughter of Charles S. and Mary Elizabeth Miller. To Mr. and Mrs. Phelps two children have been born, Merle and Maude. In politics Mr. Phelps is a republican and in religious faith he is a Congregationalist. Fraternally he holds membership in the Knights of Pythias lodge. His manly qualities, earnest purpose and honorable conduct have given him an enviable place in public regard, and his enterprise in business is winning him substantial advancement in commercial circles.

RALPH WARREN HOYT. There is no greater stimulus to individual activity and enterprise than that which is found in the life history of such men as Ralph Warren Hoyt, who has worked his way upward from a humble position in the business world. Having a newspaper route in his boyhood days and thus supplementing the little salary which he received in minor positions, he gradually won promotion by his worth and ability until he was made cashier of the Merchants National Bank, from which position he resigned January 7, 1910, thus completing twenty-seven years with this bank. Born in Portland, July 9, 1864, he is a son of Henry Lafayette Hoyt, who went to California in 1849 and came to Portland in 1852. The Hoyts came of Puritan ancestry and settled in Massachusetts and Connecticut, being descended from Lieutenant Stephen Hoyt, who fought at the battle of Bunker Hill and also at Saratoga at the time Burgoyne surrendered his troops. To the same family belonged Richard Hoyt, who served in the Fortieth Infantry in the War of 1812 and died in Portland, Oregon, July 4, 1866. Hoyt street of this city was named in his honor. Coming to Portland in pioneer times, the Hoyts were closely identified with the river interests. All of them, with the exception of George W. Hoyt, who was clerk for the Oregon Steamship & Navigation Company for many years, were steamboat captains. Captain Henry Lafayette Hoyt, father of Ralph Warren Hoyt, formerly owned the steamer Multnomah, one of the first boats on the Willamette river. He was also United States shipping commissioner for many years and likewise filled the office of deputy collector of customs. He wedded Miss Mary Louise Abbott Millard, a daughter of Dr. Justin Millard, one of the early settlers of Oregon, who with his family crossed the plains in 1852.

In the public schools of Portland Ralph Warren Hoyt pursued his education until graduated from the high school with the class of 1882. In the morning and evening hours during a part of his school days he was employed by C. C. Morse, who was engaged in the picture and music business. Following his graduation he entered the employ of H. S. Rowe, agent for the Oregon River & Navigation Company at the Ainsworth dock and at the same time distributed the Morning Oregonian. On the 7th of January, 1883, he accepted the position of janitor and messenger in the Willamette Savings Bank, which in 1886 was converted into the Merchants National Bank. He still continued to carry papers until about 1890 and in the meantime was making steady progress in the bank, working his way upward through different positions to that of cashier and investing from time to time in bank stock until he is now largely interested. His fidelity to the interests of the bank, his capability in the discharge of specific duties and his enterprising spirit contributed in large measure to its success. Moreover, his record is a notable example of the fact that merit and ability will come to the front anywhere, for the newsboy with his paper route of a few years ago became an active factor in the conduct of the business and in the active management of one of Portland's strong moneyed institutions. As the years have passed he has become an investor in other corporations, in a number of which he also has voice in the management.

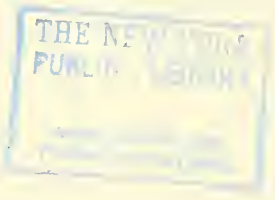
On the 21st of January, 1893, in this city, Mr. Hoyt was married to Miss Edith M. Neilson, the youngest daughter of Captain W. W. Neilson, who came across the plains in 1852. He was a steamboat man, owning several boats and barges on the Willamette river, and was a splendid representative of that class of worthy pioneers who became the builders and promoters of the great northwest, utilizing its natural resources in the development of trade and commerce. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt have been born two daughters, Kathryn and Louise, who are still living, while one child died in infancy.

Aside from his connection with banking Mr. Hoyt has taken active part in public affairs which have left and are leaving their impress upon the development of city and state. He served for six years as a member of the Oregon National Guard and for four years filled the office of county treasurer, to which position he was elected on the republican ticket. He is doing splendid work as president of the Portland Rose Festival. His humanitarian spirit is manifest in his cooperation with the Portland Newsboys Association, of which he is treasurer. He was also treasurer for several years of the Oregon Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. Fraternally he is connected with Willamette Lodge, No. 2, F. & A. M., and has attained the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite while in Al Kader Temple he has crossed the sands of the desert with the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Court of Honor and holds membership in Portland Lodge, No. 142, B. P. O. E.; Chinook Tribe of the Improved Order of Red Men; and Portland Camp of the Woodmen of the World. He also belongs to the Commercial Club, the Arlington Club and the Apollo Club, which is a male chorus. His principal diversion has been music. He organized an amateur band of which he was leader for many years and has been organist in city churches for about twenty-five years. Music has always been a source of recreation to him and he has utilized his native talents in this direction to stimulate and promote musical interest in the city. The various practical elements of public progress receive his indorsement and he has labored earnestly and effectively toward the upbuilding of a greater and more beautiful city, cooperating in plans and projects for the commercial growth and for its achievement along aesthetic lines.

DANIEL JACKSON BOLLENBAUGH. The principal industries of southern Oregon are mining and farming. The mines of the section are rich in gold and other valuable minerals. The farms are fertile, well cultivated and afford prosperity, and the men who are operating and controlling the well cultivated fields and the rich ore deposits, are active factors in the development and progress of what is destined to be one of the greatest states in the Union. Daniel Jackson Bollenbaugh is prominent in both these lines of occupation. He was born in Ohio, April 9, 1831, the son of Moses and Sarah (Miller) Bollenbaugh, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Pennsylvania. After their marriage they moved to Iowa and in that state passed the remainder of their lives.

Daniel Jackson Bollenbaugh was educated in the common schools of Iowa, and remained at home until he was twenty-one years old. In 1852 he crossed the plains with ox teams, spending six months on the journey, and located first in Salem, Oregon, where he stayed for one year. At the expiration of this period he came to Douglas county and has been active in the affairs of this district ever since. In June, 1854, he took up a donation claim near Canyonville, located upon his holdings, improved and cultivated the soil and also erected many new buildings and added to his equipment at different times during his career and bought adjoining fields until he now has under his control nine hundred acres of land. At the time Mr. Bollenbaugh secured possession of his holdings, they were in an entirely unimproved and undeveloped condition and consisted mostly of timber lands. These he cleared and cultivated, made many changes along scientific lines until he is now the owner of one of the largest and most modernly equipped farms in Douglas county. He makes a specialty of stock-raising and keeps on hand a fine herd of graded cattle, to the care of which he gives his personal supervision. He also has important interests in the mines of Douglas county and is actively operating a placer gold mine upon one section of his farm.

MR. AND MRS. D. J. BOLLENBAUGH



THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

In 1853 Mr. Bollenbaugh was united in marriage to Miss Kathryn Jane Swarts, a native of New York state, and a daughter of Simon Swarts, and they are the parents of nine children: Simon; George; Mary, the wife of Hymilas Wright; Albert; Sarah, the wife of Thomas Low; Hattie, who married John Catching; Henry; Lorenzo, who died at the age of nineteen years; and Printha, the wife of R. L. Blackburn. The mother of these children died November 16, 1897. She was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church and to this faith her husband still adheres. Politically Mr. Bollenbaugh gives his allegiance to the republican party, and takes an intelligent interest in the affairs of his community. He has never sought public office, but is keenly interested in the cause of education and has served on the local school board for a number of years. Mr. Bollenbaugh worked in the commissary department during the Indian war in 1855 and 1856, but on account of his family could not enlist to go out with a regular military company. He is one of those active, prosperous and scientific farmers who are doing so much to make the harvests of this country better in quality and more abundant.

ALBERT C. HUNTINGTON, who since 1863 has resided in La Grande, was formerly closely identified with commercial interests here but is now living retired save for the supervision which he gives to his investments. His rest is well earned and is the fitting crown of a life of usefulness that has brought him to his eighty-first year. He was born near the Kennebec river, in Kennebec county, Maine, September 21, 1831, his parents being William and Mary (Cunningham) Huntington. He comes of a family whose lineage has been traced back through seven generations to Simon Huntington, who was born in Norwich, England, and was married there to Miss Margaret Baret. They sailed for America in 1633, but he died while on the voyage, leaving five children, William, Thomas, Christopher, Simon and Ann. The widow with her family settled at Roxbury, Massachusetts, where she was again married, her second union being with Thomas Stoughton. Later she removed to Windsor, Connecticut. Her son, William Huntington, married Joanna Bagley and in 1658 he received a grant of five hundred acres of land from the crown. He died in 1689. His three children were John, James and Mary. Of these John Huntington was born in Amesbury, Massachusetts, in August, 1643, was married in 1665 to Elizabeth Hunt and died in 1727. In his family were nine children, Hannah, Mary, Elizabeth, Hannah, Sarah, Susanna, William, Samuel and Deborah. William Huntington, the son of John and Elizabeth (Hunt) Huntington, was twice married, his first union being with Mary Goodwin, whom he wedded in 1708, and after her death he was married in 1725 to Mary Colby. Their children were John, Lydia, Mary, Sarah, Deborah, William, Timothy and Judith. Timothy Huntington was born August 3, 1721, and after the death of his first wife, Mrs. Sarah Huntington, he wedded Betsy Jewell. He died in 1811. His children were William, Timothy, Thomas, Mary, Benjamin and John. Benjamin Huntington, born in 1766, died in 1845, at the age of seventy-nine years. He had for many years been a resident of Kennebec, Maine. His family numbered the following named: Sarah, Timothy, Joseph, William, Ann, Elizabeth, Benjamin, Daniel and Judith.

William Huntington, the father of Albert C. Huntington, was born in Litchfield, Maine, August 23, 1792. He followed the occupation of farming and also engaged in milling. He wedded Mary Cunningham, who died April 13, 1870, while he passed away October 11, 1854. Their children were: William; Samuel; Ann; Josiah; Judith; Benjamin; Emma; Daniel, who died at the age of one year; Elizabeth; Albert C., of this review; Ellen; and Delia.

Reared in Maine, Albert C. Huntington acquired his education in the public schools of that state and remained at home until January 20, 1854, when, at the age of twenty-two years, he started for California. Leaving New York on board ship, he went by way of the Isthmus of Panama and thence to San Francisco. For seven years he engaged in prospecting and mining in the Golden state and in 1861 came to Oregon, settling in Portland. Soon afterward he went to Walla Walla, Washington, and thence to the mines of Idaho. In 1862 he returned to Oregon but again went to Walla Walla and later to Boise. In the fall of 1863 he came to the Grande Ronde valley, settling in La Grande, where he engaged in the furniture business until 1880, meeting with good success in that line. He then traveled over the country with teams, selling pianos and organs, and was thus connected with the music trade until 1894. As he has prospered in his undertakings he has invested in real estate and in 1886 he erected the Huntington block. He is the owner of several other buildings and valuable property in La Grande, where he still makes his home, having lived retired here since 1894.

In 1863 Mr. Huntington was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Helen Baker, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Rowland) Baker and a sister of Macaga Baker. Mrs. Huntington died in 1905. By her marriage she became the mother of four children. Edith, the eldest, is the wife of George H. Currey, of La Grande, where he is engaged in the real estate business but was formerly a well known newspaper man. Mr. and Mrs. Currey have three children: George Huntington, born 1892; Helen Clare, born 1894; and Albert R., born 1899. Walter, the second of Mr. Huntington's children, died at the age of eight years. Mary and Dora both died in infancy. Mrs. Huntington was a leader in church and social circles in La Grande and took an active and helpful interest in all that pertained to betterment along social and moral lines. She was a very talented woman and her influence was ever a potent element for good. She held membership in the Methodist church and cooperated heartily in various branches of the church work. Mr. Huntington also belongs to that church and he holds membership in La Grande Lodge, No. 16, I. O. O. F., in which he has passed all the chairs. He has ever manifested a citizen's interest in politics, keeping well informed on the questions and issues of the day since casting his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln. For many years he was a member of the city council of La Grande and exercised his official prerogatives in support of various works of public improvement. In all business, political and social relations he has been true to high and honorable principles and has never faltered in choosing between right and wrong, ever endeavoring to follow a course that his judgment and conscience have sanctioned.

CALVIN U. GANTENBEIN. Presiding as circuit court judge from the fourth judicial district and recognized as one of the eminent representatives of the legal profession in Portland, Calvin U. Gantenbein was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on the 22d of March, 1865, a son of John Gantenbein, D. D., M. D., and Mary Jane (Schwable) Gantenbein. He was a lad of nine years when in 1874 he accompanied his parents on their long journey to the northwest by way of the Panama route, becoming a resident of Oregon. He attended the public schools of Philadelphia and of Portland between the years 1871 and 1875, and then became a student in Bishop Scott Academy, which he attended until 1878. In the latter year he matriculated in the Royal Charles Gymnasium at Stuttgart, Germany, and was graduated therefrom in April, 1885, on the completion of a seven years' course. He afterward spent several months of the same year in the College de France, at Paris, and was graduated from the law department of the University of Oregon in June, 1891, at the head of his class after two years devoted to study in that institution. Immediately following his graduation, he was admitted to the bar at Salem, and in the practice of law has made continuous progress, his ability gaining him recognition as one of the foremost lawyers at the Portland bar. Preparing his cases with great precision and care, he has presented his cause in a cogent and logical manner that has held the attention of the courts and jurors and has won for his clients many favorable verdicts.

In the year of his admission to the bar, Judge Gantenbein enlisted as a private in Company G, First Regiment of the Oregon National Guard, thus serving from the 8th of July, 1891, to the 19th of May, 1892. He was then elected to the captaincy of Company H of the same regiment and so continued until August, 1894. On that date he was promoted to the rank of major and served until September 22, 1897, when he became lieutenant-colonel, holding that rank until honorably discharged on the 25th of May, 1898. He was appointed major of the second regiment of the Oregon United States Volunteer Infantry on the 7th of May of that year and so continued until the 7th of August, 1899, thus responding to the call for troops for the Spanish-American war. He was also made a member of the board of claims against the United States government. Resuming active connection with the National Guard, he was adjutant general for the state of Oregon from the 1st of November, 1899, to the 31st of August, 1903. On the 25th of July of the same year he was elected colonel of the Third Infantry of the Oregon National Guard and so continued until November 14, 1906. He served as vice president of the Interstate National Guard Association in 1902; was certified as eligible for colonelcy in the United States Volunteers under the "Dick Act," July 19, 1905, certificate valid until March 22, 1920. In 1899 he was tendered an appointment as justice of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands but declined. On the 2d of July, 1906, he became judge of the circuit court of the state of Oregon for the fourth judicial district and has since sat upon the bench, his decisions being characterized by a masterful grasp of every problem presented for solution.

That Judge Gantenbein is honored by the profession is indicated in the fact that he was chosen vice president of the Oregon State Bar Association. In his law practice he was associated with James N. Davis and Arthur L. Veazie from 1892 until 1901 and was afterward a partner of the latter until elected to the circuit bench. He has been dean of the law department of the University of Oregon since 1903 and is a capable instructor, having won a creditable reputation in educational lines in early manhood when he served as professor of Latin, Greek, German and French in the West Chester State Normal School of Pennsylvania from 1885 until 1888. In the latter year he became instructor in German and Latin in the Portland high school and so continued until 1892, when he entered upon the active practice of the law in this city.

Judge Gantenbein was married on the 18th of October, 1899, to Miss Winifred Watson, a daughter of Judge James Finley Watson. They are the parents of four children: James Watson, Mary Ellen, Calvin Edward and John Flint.

The judge is a member of several of the prominent social and club organizations of the city, including the Commercial Club and the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club, of which he is a life member. He has attained to the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite in Masonry and is in hearty sympathy with the beneficent spirit of the craft. He renders assistance in benevolent movements through his membership in the German Aid Society and the Swiss Aid Society. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and in connection with the interesting military chapter in his life history it is worthy of note that he was presented a medal, authorized by act of congress and approved June 29, 1906, for military service in the Spanish war and Philippine insurrection. Judge Gantenbein is a man of strong individuality, at once forceful and resourceful, his ability calling him to leadership in the various lines into which he has directed his activities. He stands at all times for that which is progressive in community life and helpful to the individual and is accorded the honor to which his upright life and successful achievements justly entitle him.

C. L. NEWCOMB, conducting an up-to-date meat market in Pilot Rock, was born in Iowa on the 10th of October, 1860, his parents being John L. and Mary (Kelley) Newcomb, the former a native of New York state and the latter of Illinois. John L. Newcomb died in Nebraska many years ago but his widow still survives and now makes her residence in Idaho. They were the parents of seven children, all of whom are still living.

C. L. Newcomb was reared at home and received his early education in the public schools. He remained with his parents until twenty-two years of age. After leaving home he worked as a painter for some time. In 1883 he removed to Pendleton, Oregon, where he remained until 1891, during which year he went to Idaho, where he spent two years. At the expiration of that time he returned to Umatilla county and located at Pilot Rock. Here he built his residence and later engaged in the butchering business, to which he has since given his entire attention.

In 1889 Mr. Newcomb was married to Miss Mina Bissitt, a daughter of C. R. Bissitt. To them have been born three children, namely: Delbert L. and Hattie M., both of whom reside with their parents; and Lester, deceased.

In politics Mr. Newcomb is affiliated with the republican party, of which he is a loyal and enthusiastic supporter. Fraternally he is identified with the Improved Order of Red Men. He is one of the live business men of Pilot Rock, ready at all times to lend his influence and material assistance to the advancement of all measures affecting the material and moral welfare of his county and state.

GRANT BUCHANAN is a prosperous agriculturist of Umatilla county, owning a valuable farm of one hundred and sixty acres on Butter creek, sixty acres of which is under high cultivation and well irrigated. He is a native of Albia, Iowa, where his birth occurred on the 18th of July, 1862, his parents being Robert and Sarah (McBride) Buchanan. The father was a native of Lexington, Kentucky, and the mother of North Carolina. They removed to Iowa with their parents in pioneer days and located within a half mile of Albia. Their marriage occurred there before they went to Kansas in 1882. The father's death occurred in Garnett, Kansas, in February, 1885, when he was sixty-three years of age. The mother died while she was residing in Oregon with her daughter in 1889. Throughout his active life the father followed agricultural pursuits.

Grant Buchanan was the youngest in a family of nine children. He resided with his father until the latter removed to Kansas in 1882. His education had been acquired in the district schools and upon his father's farm he had gained his first experience in farming. While improving and cultivating that property he became interested in the occupation and determined to make it his life work. After the death of his father in 1885 he came to Oregon and after being employed for five years in Heppner on W. O. Miner's stock ranch he was married and located on his present farm of one hundred and sixty acres, sixty of which is irrigated. At the time he took up the property it was all sagebrush and wholly unimproved. Neither house nor outbuildings had been erected upon it. By perseverance and industry he improved the condition of the farm so that he now has one of the most valuable properties on Butter creek. He devotes his land to alfalfa growing and fruit raising and also feeds stock during the winter. A commodious residence and ample barns and outbuildings indicate that Mr. Buchanan has up-to-date ideas as to the comforts and conveniences which may be enjoyed by the farmer. To whatever department of agriculture he has given his attention he has shown a judgment and energy that have steadily increased the annual income from the place and added to its value.

On the 11th of October, 1891, Mr. Buchanan was united in marriage to Mrs. Mollie McBee, the widow of Charles McBee and a daughter of Simon Warren. To Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan one son, Fred, has been born. He is at present attending a business college in Pendleton.

Mr. Buchanan cooperates in all movements for the material, intellectual and moral progress of the community and is recognized as one of the foremost business men of the county, his agricultural interests placing him in a prominent position in industrial circles.

THOMAS JAQUES is a merchant of Pilot Rock, specializing in hardware, and is one of the representative and successful men in that line. He was born in Brown county, Illinois, on the 21st of November, 1854, his parents being W. H. and Mary (Chenoworth) Jaques, who were natives of New York and Kentucky respectively. They removed to Illinois at a very early date and in the year 1856 went to Missouri, where they spent their remaining days. Unto them were born twelve children, six of whom are still living.

Thomas Jaques was reared under the parental roof and received his early education in the public schools. After completing his elementary studies he took a collegiate course. At the age of twenty-two he started in life for himself and engaged in farming in the state of Missouri for a period of eleven years. On selling out his interests in Missouri he removed to Nebraska, where he engaged in contracting on the construction of the Burlington & Missouri River and Rock Island Railroads for two years. He then removed to Kansas, in which state he remained for one year, at the expiration of which time he went to Nevada, where he also spent one year. Subsequently he came to Oregon, making his first stop at Portland, in which city he lived for one year only. In 1892 he removed to Pendleton, Oregon, where he continued to live for five years, after which he was engaged in farming for six years in Umatilla county. At the end of that time he found himself possessed with sufficient means to make an investment and accordingly purchased a farm near Pilot Rock in Umatilla county. In 1907 he embarked in the hardware business in Pilot Rock, in which he is now engaged, giving to it his entire time and attention. He carries a large and complete stock of well selected hardware. His place of business has an extensive reputation throughout Umatilla county. He also owns three hundred and twenty acres of land within one mile of Pilot Rock.

In 1876, in Missouri, Mr. Jaques was united in marriage to Miss Maria Triplet, a native of that state and a daughter of Andrew J. and Sarah A. Triplet, both of whom are deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Jaques have been born eight children: Mary I.; Winifred T.; Eva B.; Bessie; Vera; Georgie M.; Edna M., who is deceased; and George D.

Mr. Jaques is a republican in politics, following the party on all its national, state and county issues, and he is at present a member of the educational board of Pilot Rock. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to lodge No. 165 at Pilot Rock, in which he has filled all of the chairs. He attends the Christian church. Mr. Jaques' business career is not only gratifying to himself from the standpoint of success but he is also one of the model and representative business men of the county, and his hearty cooperation is always relied upon and never found to be wanting in the advancement of all public interests looking to the betterment of the educational and moral well-being of his county and city.

MAJOR HUGH F. BARRON. In the varied relations of life Major Hugh F. Barron ever commanded and deserved the good-will of those with whom he came in contact and Jackson county knew him as one of her most valued and honored citizens. He belonged to that class of men who while promoting individual success contribute to public progress. His business interests were of an important character yet he never allowed them to monopolize his time to the exclusion of active participation in matters of progressive citizenship. In fact his life was well spent and the sterling traits of his character gained for him the high regard of those who knew him. Born in Lee county, Virginia, August 28, 1827, he was a son of Nathaniel G. and Anna (Collier) Barron, who spent their entire lives in Virginia and were members of early families of that state. Both the Barrons and Colliers were slave holders and were quite wealthy, but at the outbreak of the Civil war freed all of their slaves. Major Barron spent his youthful days on the old home plantation and the common schools afforded him his educational privileges. He was a young man of twenty-four years when in 1851 he went to California, crossing the plains with ox teams in company with his mother's brother. They remained in California, however, for but a brief period and then proceeded northward to Jackson county, Oregon, where they arrived in the fall of 1851. Here Major Barron, James Russell and James Gibbs took up three claims of one hundred and sixty acres each, cornering on each other, and they built a house where the properties joined. They there conducted a hostelry known as the Mountain House, and they conducted their business affairs, including the development of their land, in partnership for some time. In the fall of 1853, however, Mr. Gibbs was killed by an Indian. Subsequently Major Barron acquired the claims of both of his former associates and made extensive purchase of other lands until he owned four thousand acres, becoming the owner of one of the finest farms in all Jackson county. It is situated in a beautiful little valley at the head of Hill creek, and he also had access to the outside range for his cattle. He was for years extensively engaged in the cattle business but in later years sold his cattle and handled sheep and goats. That undertaking proved very profitable and he so prospered as the years went by that he was able to leave his family in very substantial circumstances. All this did not come, however, without earnest and discriminating effort, and in the early days he was forced to undergo many of the hardships, privations and trials of pioneer life. There was constant danger of Indian attack and he went through two of the Indian wars, that of 1851-53 and that of 1858. He persevered, however, in the face of difficulties that would have utterly discouraged and disheartened many a man of less resolute spirit and he again and again proved his worth in matters of citizenship as well as in business connections.

Major Barron was a stanch republican in politics but was never an aspirant for office. He took a great interest in educational matters and served for several terms as a member of the school board, ever proving a loyal friend to the cause of education. In fact he stood for all that meant progress and improvement in the community and cooperated heartily in every movement for the public good. He recognized, too, what might be accomplished and as the years passed his life constantly broadened in its usefulness and activity.

On the 18th of March, 1856, Major Barron was married to Miss Martha A. Walker, a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Fruit) Walker, who were natives of Kentucky. The father died in Illinois and the mother with her family crossed the plains with ox teams from Lee county, Iowa, to Oregon in 1853. She made her home with her son Minns, until the marriage of her daughter Martha A., to Major Barron, when she took up her home with them and remained with them until the time of her death in 1872. Mrs. Barron still

HUGH J. BARRON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

resides on the old home place. She is a lady of many excellent traits of character and accomplishments. Unto the Major and Mrs. Barron were born four children, as follows: Alice A., the wife of G. S. Butler, of Ashland, Oregon; and Edgar B., George W. and Homer W. The home farm has been divided between the children and the sons are now cultivating the land. In addition to her own children Mrs. Barron has reared two children of a niece, Genevieve and Edmund Roberts. The former is the wife of a Mr. Goodwin, of Medford, Oregon, and the latter also resides in that place. The death of Major Barron occurred December 4, 1904, resulting from an accident. The front wheel of the wagon in which he was riding came off and he was pitched forward, striking his head on a rock which killed him instantly. He was a man of sterling character, upright and honorable in every relation, and was one of the most influential residents of his part of the state. Jackson county numbered him among her best known citizens. He was seventy-seven years of age at the time of his demise and his death closed a life record that was characterized by many notable qualities. Justice, integrity, helpfulness were among his strong traits. While he prospered in business he was never one to take advantage of the necessities of another in any trade transactions and his persistency of purpose and unfaltering energy were the qualities that brought him success. He held friendship inviolable and was always loyal to those to whom he gave his personal regard.

GEORGE McGAUGHEY is the popular proprietor of an up-to-date livery and feed stable in Pilot Rock, Umatilla county. He was born in Kentucky on the 12th of October, 1850, his parents being William and Elizabeth (Cornwell) McGaughey, also natives of the Blue Grass state. They moved from Kentucky to Illinois in 1861 and spent the remaining years of their lives in the Prairie state. Unto them were born nine children, as follows: John, who is a resident of Illinois; George, of this review; Mattie, the wife of Judge Bean, of Salem, Oregon; and six who have passed away.

George McGaughey was reared at home and received his education in the common schools. He remained with his parents until fourteen years of age and on leaving home moved to Texas and was there employed for a period of five years on a stock ranch. He then removed to St. Louis and accepted the position of locomotive fireman in the employ of the Vandalia Railway Company. At this work he remained until he was promoted to the position of locomotive engineer in 1876. For the following twenty-two years Mr. McGaughey, as an engineer in the employ of this company, kept his hand upon the throttle and his eye upon the rail. In 1897 he retired from the railroad and removed to Umatilla county, Oregon. On making his settlement in Oregon he engaged in the live stock business and continued in this industry until the spring of 1911, at which time he purchased a suitable piece of ground in Pilot Rock on which he constructed a livery and feed barn. His stables have a wide reputation throughout Umatilla county as being in every particular up-to-date. In addition to his livery he is also the owner of eight hundred acres of land in Umatilla county.

In politics Mr. McGaughey is a democrat, proud of his party and loyal to her banner, consistently following the leaders of this political organization in national, state and county campaigns. He is an honorary member of the United Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers- a membership to which he is entitled by reason of his long years of faithful service as well as his reputation for skill and ability exercised in the discharge of his duties in this responsible position. He is a communicant of the Catholic church of Pilot Rock. Mr. McGaughey is one of the well known citizens of his community and has gained an extensive popularity as a liveryman because of his cheerful and ready compliance to supply the wants of the traveling public.

JOHN FRAWLEY, who is serving as treasurer of Union county, has conscientiously and efficiently performed the duties of this office since 1898. He was born May 29, 1850, at Syracuse, New York, the son of Cornelius and Mary (Halliman) Frawley. The father was a native of Ireland and on coming to America he located in Onondaga county, New York, where he farmed for some time but later engaged in railroad work. He died in Syracuse, at the age of sixty. The mother was also a native of Ireland and passed away at Syracuse in 1880, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. They were the parents of five children: Mary; Patrick; Susan, deceased; Margaret; and John, of this review.

John Frawley received his education in the district schools and after his school days he engaged in railroad work, first being in the employ of the New York Central, then in the Central Pacific, which is now the Southern Pacific, and later with the Hunt Line, which is now a part of the Northern Pacific. He came with the first train to La Grande, Oregon, in 1884 and also brought in the first passenger train to the same town. In 1889 he retired from railroad work, going into the grocery business in partnership with William Dial, and after one and one half years he engaged in farming in the Grande Ronde valley, near Summerville, where he remained three years. In 1898 he was elected county treasurer on the republican ticket and has served continuously ever since.

In 1886 Mr. Frawley was united in marriage with Miss Millie Collins, a native of Iowa, and a daughter of Jacob Collins, who came to Union county, Oregon, where he engaged in farming and remained until his death. Mr. and Mrs. Frawley have become the parents of two children: Harry J., who is attending school; and Mary G., who is eight years of age. Fraternally Mr. Frawley is identified with the Knights of Pythias, and he is a man who devotes much time to social and public work. In politics he is a republican and besides his present official position, which he is now successfully filling, he has served as a member of the city council. He is a public-spirited man, who justly merits the full confidence of the people, which is awarded him unanimously.

DAVID H. NELSON, engaged in agricultural pursuits on his farm near Pendleton, was born in Finland, December 3, 1872. He is a son of Henry and Eva Nelson, both of whom were natives of Finland and came to America in the early '80s, settling at Duluth, Minnesota, where the father died and the mother yet lives. By their union were born four children, all of whom now survive.

David H. Nelson received a common-school education and remained at home with his parents until fourteen years of age. He then went to Washington and in the spring of 1889 removed to Clatsop county, Oregon, residing there until 1893, when he came to Umatilla county and was here employed as a farm hand for four years. Subsequently he rented a farm until 1901, when he purchased the place where he now resides. In this county he owns in all thirteen hundred and forty-seven acres of highly improved land and he makes a specialty of raising wheat.

In 1897 Mr. Nelson wedded Miss Maria Molstrom, a native of Washington and a daughter of Henry and Margaret Molstrom, both of whom were natives of Sweden and came to America in the early '70s. The father has now passed away but the mother is still residing in Umatilla county. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have become the parents of five children: Harry, born April 26, 1900; Helen, born November 18, 1901; Carl, born December 15, 1904; Eva, born March 3, 1909; and Marie, born June 30, 1911.

Mr. Nelson is a republican in politics and has rendered efficient service as road superintendent. Fraternally he is a member of Lodge No. 32, I. O. O. F.; Lodge No. 41, W. O. W.; Lodge No. 4, K. P.; and also of the Finnish Brotherhood. Both he and his wife are active workers in the Lutheran church. He is a conscientious and progressive man, has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances in the community, and he has met with excellent success in his farming.

WILLIAM H. MALL is senior partner in one of the leading real-estate firms of Portland, that of Mall & Von Borstel. He was born in Memphis, Tennessee, May 6, 1864, and is a son of William H. and Elizabeth (Kerpen) Mall. His education was acquired in the public schools of Baileysville, Mississippi; of Denver, Colorado, and Santa Clara and San Francisco, California. His own father died when the son was very small and William H. Mall came to the Pacific coast with his mother and her second husband, Mr. Von Borstel. They removed to Portland when he was but fourteen years of age, at which time he started in the business world for himself by selling fruit on the streets of the city. He carefully saved his money and eventually established a fruit stand at the Stark street ferry, which he conducted until 1888. Gradually his trade increased until the volume of his business was most gratifying. With an understanding of conditions in Portland he believed that the real-estate field was a profitable one and began operations along that line in connection with Joseph Buchtel, under the firm style of Buchtel & Mall. That connection continued until 1893, when the widespread financial panic wiped out a comfortable fortune which Mr. Mall had then accumulated. Nothing daunted by his reverses, he summoned his courage and determination to meet existing conditions and has since continued in the same line of business in association with his half brother, operations now being conducted under the firm style of Mall & Von Borstel. Mr. Mall is thoroughly informed concerning realty values here, knows the property that is upon the market and has negotiated many important realty transfers. Success has been attending his efforts in recent years and he has become recognized as one of the leading real-estate men of the city.

In 1908, Mr. Mall was united in marriage to Miss Ada F. Mercer, a daughter of George Mercer, who came to the northwest in 1852. To this union has been born a daughter, whose birth occurred July 4, 1912. Mr. Mall holds membership with the Commercial Club and is in hearty sympathy with its purposes to upbuild and benefit Portland along lines of progress and improvement. He is a life member of the Multnomah Athletic Club, belongs also to the East Side Business Men's Club, to the Real Estate Exchange and to the Realty Board. For a third of a century Mr. Mall has been a resident of Portland and has witnessed its remarkable growth and development during this period. Moreover, he is of that type of enterprising progressive men who recognize the opportunities of the west and in their utilization win success.

JAMES R. PORTER, who resides on his farm near Pendleton, was born in Lee county, Illinois, February 26, 1850. His parents were James and Susan (Story) Porter, both of whom were natives of New York state and removed to Lee county, Illinois, in the early '40s. In 1850 the father, with a team and wagon, crossed the plains to California, where five years later his wife and family joined him. He was engaged in the mercantile and the butchering business in that state until 1857, when he began farming in the Sacramento valley and resided there until his death, in 1904, his wife having preceded him a number of years, dying in 1888. They were the parents of eight children, six of whom are yet living.

James R. Porter received a common-school education and remained at home until he was twenty-eight years of age, or until 1878, when he came to Oregon and settled on a homestead in Umatilla county, where he yet resides. He later added more land to his farm and he now owns in all thirteen hundred acres, which is under an excellent state of cultivation.

In 1883 Mr. Porter wedded Miss Nancy J. Jones, a daughter of James H. and Sarah A. (Sears) Jones. Her father is a native of Kentucky and her mother of Tennessee. They crossed the plains with ox teams at an early date and located in western Oregon, where they resided until 1871, when they removed to Umatilla county and are yet living in Pendleton, the father having reached the age of eighty-two and the mother being sixty-six years of age. Mrs. Porter is the eldest of nine children, of whom four are still living. To Mr. and Mrs. Porter have been born five children: Clara E., Frank E. and Ralph E., who are living; and Vida E. and Roy E., both of whom are deceased.

Mr. Porter is an advocate of the principles of the republican party, and fraternally he is a member of Pendleton Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F., and has filled all the chairs in the same. He also belongs to the Farmers Union, No. 31, and Mrs. Porter is a member of the Episcopal church. Mr. Porter is widely known as a progressive and enterprising man, and is highly esteemed by his associates. He is very successful in his farming and his business affairs.

ROBERT E. ALLEN, who is well known as the pioneer druggist of Hermiston, was born in Ridgeway, Iowa, September 8, 1871, and is a son of E. T. and Mary E. (Griffith) Allen. The father was born on March 23, 1832, in New York state, and was married in Wisconsin before going to Iowa in 1868. He resided at Ridgeway until his death, which occurred September 18, 1891. He was engaged in the lumber and mercantile business throughout the greater part of the time when he lived in Ridgeway, Iowa. He spent the years from 1857 to 1865 on the Pacific coast and ran a pack outfit in the mountains. Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Allen were the parents of four children: Nellie, who married A. W. Prann, who is interested in the drug business which his brother-in-law conducts; Robert E., the subject of this review; Cora A., who married Henry Butz; and Orville G., a resident of Ridgeway.

Robert E. Allen was educated in the common schools and lived at home until he was twenty years of age. While he was still attending school he also worked in a drug store and in 1887 accepted regular employment in a pharmacy in Ridgeway. He attended the Upper Iowa University at Fayette, Iowa, and later returned to his position in the drug store. Afterward he matriculated in the Northwestern University School of Pharmacy at Chicago, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1896. He later opened a drug store at Clinton, Iowa, where he was engaged in business with A. W. Prann, and sold out in November, 1906. In the spring of 1907 he started a drug store at Ridgeway, Iowa, and conducted the same for three years. In Hermiston, Oregon, he opened his present drug store and operated it independently until the 1st of August, 1911, when he organized the R. E. Allen Drug Company with A. W. Prann as his partner. His was the first drug store to be opened in Hermiston.

On the 31st of August, 1901, Mr. Allen was married to Miss Mary B. McDonald, whose birth occurred on Prince Edward Island, from which place she came to America in March, 1903. Their marriage occurred in Helena. Mr. Allen is a republican and fraternally is connected with the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America. Any man who engages in a new line of business in a town shows his faith in the development and future growth of that locality. The encouragement which has been given Mr. Allen in his venture is well seen by the liberal patronage which is accorded him.

THADDEUS S. TILLSON, who is conducting a saloon in Umatilla, was born in Decatur county, Indiana, January 30, 1867, a son of William S. and Sarah (Warner) Tillson. The father was born in Ohio, and the mother's birth occurred in Pennsylvania. They were married in Columbus, Indiana, and in 1869 removed to Kansas, where their death occurred in Anderson county. During his active career the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Of the children born to their union seven now survive, of whom Thaddeus S. is the second.

Until he was twenty years of age Thaddeus S. Tillson remained under the parental roof attending public school and assisting in the agricultural pursuits in which his father was engaged. When he left home he went to Brookfield, Missouri, and accepted employment with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, in whose employ he remained for eight years. He then removed to Uinta county, Wyoming, where he was employed by the Union Pacific railroad for two years. Subsequently he came to Oregon, locating in La Grande, in May, 1900. After being employed by the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company for four years he engaged in the saloon business which he has conducted in Umatilla for the last five years. He is a good business man and gives his entire attention to the management of his undertakings. He has been engaged also in the coal business for the last two years and conducts the only ice plant in the city. He owns block 80 in Umatilla.

In 1904 Mr. Tillson was married to Miss Norma Whiteman, whose birth occurred in Kansas but who was reared in La Grande. She is a daughter of J. B. Whiteman. To their union three children were born, Grace C., Clyde W. and Dorothy. He casts his vote with the republican party and has served as deputy sheriff for two years and later was city marshal. He holds membership in the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of La Grande and in the Foresters of America.

GEORGE H. SIEVERS, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Umatilla county, was born near Pendleton on the farm where he now resides, March 12, 1887. He is a son of Joe and Anna (Lembeke) Sievers, both of whom were natives of Germany and came to America in 1884, locating in Umatilla county, where they took up a homestead. They later added to the property until they now own eleven hundred acres of excellent land, which is under a high state of cultivation. At the present time they are residing in California. In their family were two children: George H., of this review; and Anna, who is still at home.

George H. Sievers was reared under the parental roof, received a common-school education and on putting aside his text-books became associated with his father in work on the farm. He now operates the old homestead of eleven hundred acres and engages extensively in general farming.

In July, 1911, Mr. Sievers wedded Miss Grace Owen, a native of Missouri and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Owen, who reside on a farm in Umatilla county. Mr. Sievers exercises his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the republican party, and socially he is a member of the Order of Eagles. Although still a young man he is well known as a progressive citizen and an enterprising farmer. His acquaintances respect him and his circle of friends in his native county is an extensive one.

N. I. BURNETT, who owns and operates a farm of two hundred and ninety-five acres five miles north of Forest Grove, is also a prominent factor in financial circles of Washington county, acting as president of the Washington County Bank at Banks, Oregon. His birth occurred in Maine on the 20th of December, 1848, his parents being Isaac and Sarah (George) Burnett, who were likewise natives of that state. In 1854 they took up their abode in Jackson county, Iowa, and there continued to reside throughout the remainder of their lives, the father passing away in 1874 and the mother in 1909 when eighty-one years of age. Their children were ten in number, namely: N. I., of this review; Elizabeth, the wife of Stewart Edgar, of Great Falls, Montana; Jane, who is the wife of John Woods and resides in Iowa; Susan, who is deceased; Alson, of Bellevue, Iowa, who resides on the old homestead where all the children were reared; Albert, of Maquoketa, Iowa; Almira, who is the wife of Louis Bolerdick and lives near Sheridan, Montana; Ella, the wife of Frank Schmidt, of Iowa; Isaac, who is a resident of Belle Plaine, Iowa; and Perry, of Savanna, Illinois.

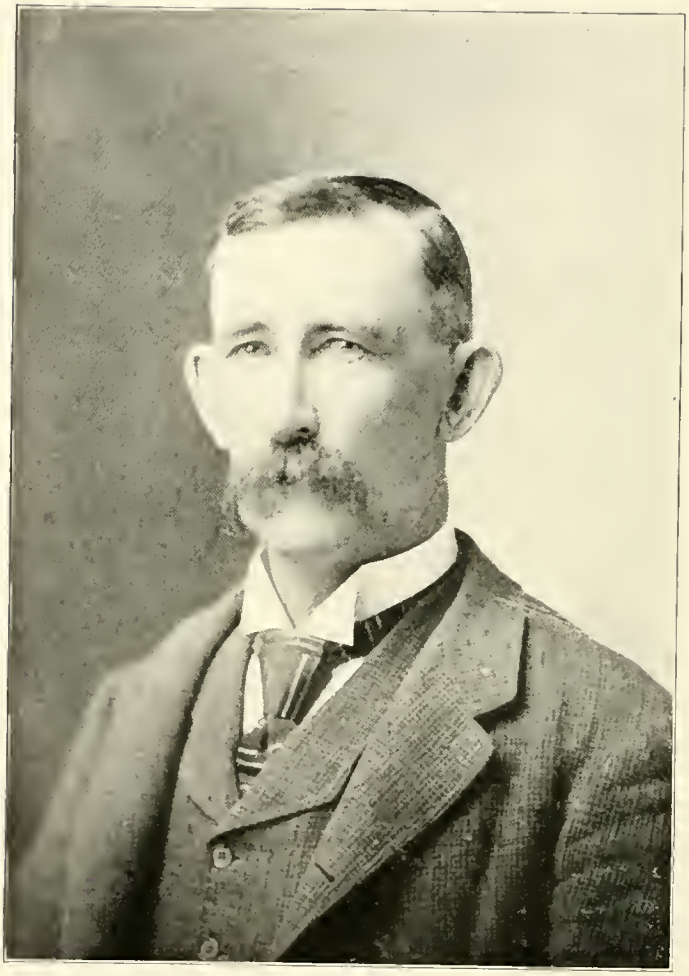
When twenty-one years of age N. I. Burnett began earning his own livelihood, being employed by the month in a wood yard on the Mississippi river for three years. On the expiration of that period he was married and turned his attention to general agricultural pursuits, cultivating rented land in Iowa for five years. At the end of that time he removed to Clay county, Minnesota, and took up a homestead in the Red river valley, there following farming for twenty years and extending the boundaries of his place by an additional purchase of three hundred and twenty acres. In 1900 he sold the property and went to Canada but at the end of four months had become dissatisfied with the country and in October, 1900, transferred his possessions to Forest Grove, Oregon. The following spring he purchased what is known as the John Kirts farm of two hundred and ninety-five acres and has since been busily engaged in its further cultivation and improvement. It is situated five miles north of Forest Grove and in its operation Mr. Burnett has gained a gratifying measure of prosperity. In 1909 he was one of the organizers of the Washington County Bank at Banks, Oregon, and has since served as its president, the other officers being as follows: W. L. Moore, vice president; and W. O. Galaway, cashier. The institution has a capital stock of ten thousand dollars and its continued growth and success is attributable in no small degree to the capable management and sound business judgment of its chief executive officer.

In October, 1873, Mr. Burnett was joined in wedlock to Miss Mary L. Baker, a native of Carroll county, Illinois, and a daughter of Solomon and Margaret (Henry) Baker, who were born, reared and married in Pennsylvania. Some years after their marriage they removed to Chicago, Illinois, where Mr. Baker followed the carpenter's trade. Later going to Iowa, he there purchased a farm and devoted his attention to its operation throughout the remainder of his life. His widow afterward removed to Clay county, Minnesota, where she passed away in 1890, having spent her remaining days in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Burnett. Unto our subject and his wife have been born five children, namely: William L., whose birth occurred in May, 1874, and who is married and resides near Banks, Oregon; Millard, born in 1875, who is at home; Samuel, born in 1876, who is married and resides at Langdon, North Dakota; Sadie M., who is the wife of Nicholas Van Kammen and makes her home at San Mateo, California; and Elsie M., who died at the age of seventeen years. Mrs. Sadie M. Van Kammen is a graduate of the Minnesota normal school and taught school for a number of years prior to her marriage.

Mr. Burnett gives his political allegiance to the men and measures of the democracy but has no desire for the honors and emoluments of office. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to Holbrook Lodge, No. 30, of Forest Grove, Oregon. His record is indeed a commendable one. In business his course has been characterized by the strictest fidelity to honorable principles and in social relations he displays an unfailing courtesy and a genial cordiality that have won for him many friends.

JONATHON PRESS HALLEY is a well known dairyman of Baker county who makes his home at Richland, in Eagle valley, where he owns eighty acres of irrigated land partly within the corporation limits of the town. He also has three hundred and twenty acres in Pine valley which is now utilized as a dairy farm. In the management of his business interests he displays keen discernment and unfaltering industry, and his success is attributable entirely to his own labors. He was born in Macon, Missouri, December 18, 1856, and is a son of B. S. and Mary E. (Halley) Halley. His parents, who were own cousins, were natives of Kentucky, but were

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY



N. I. BURNETT

MRS. N. L. BURNETT

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

married in Missouri, where they resided until 1864 when they crossed the plains to Grande Ronde valley in Union county, Oregon. There the father secured a homestead upon which he and his wife spent their remaining days. In their family were six children: J. P.; Mrs. Belle McCollister of Sherlock, California; Ed, who resides on the old homestead in Grande Ronde valley; Robert, who died at Clinton Falls in 1911, leaving a widow; Nancy, who died at the age of fourteen years; and Page. By the second marriage there was one child, now Mrs. Norah Baker, of Sherlock, California.

J. P. Halley resided at home until he reached the age of twenty-three years, when he married and started out in life on his own account in Wallowa county. He secured a homestead and a preemption claim there and was one of the first settlers in the Middle valley. His life has indeed been an active and useful one. When only thirteen years of age he began running stock for his father and lived upon the ranch, keeping bachelor's hall to the time of his marriage. Since 1890 he has lived in Baker county, making his home now at Richland in Eagle valley, where he has eighty acres of irrigated land lying partially within the corporation limits of the town and all well improved. He also owns three hundred and twenty acres in Pine valley which he purchased three years ago. He continued to raise stock—sheep, horses and cattle—upon the ranch until about three years ago and since that time he has conducted a dairy business, keeping twenty cows and shipping the milk to La Grande. In the year 1885 Mr. Halley made a trip back to Nebraska and drove twenty-seven hundred steers to the northwest. This was not his first experience, however, in driving cattle across country for in 1880 he had made a trip with his father as far as Cheyenne, with fifteen hundred head of steers. All their lives he and his father were connected with the stock industry and became widely known as reliable stockmen of their districts, the father having one thousand acres of land in Grande Ronde valley, on which he ran sheep. J. P. Halley has never engaged in the cultivation of cereals but has always given his attention to stock and has realized a handsome competence from his efforts in this direction.

All the phases and experiences of frontier life are familiar to him. He served under Captain A. C. Smith in the Joseph Indian troubles and was scouting for five days. He almost lost his life at the time of the trouble with the Bannock Indians but was not enlisted for service during that war. He has always been on the frontier and he knew Chief Joseph well. He has slept and eaten with Indians many a time, never having any trouble with them except in days when they were upon the warpath. He believes that the trouble brought on between the white men and Chief Joseph was the fault of the United States government. As the years have passed he has witnessed great changes in this part of the country. No longer is the Indian wigwam a familiar sight, and the hunting grounds of the red men have been converted into fine farms or stock ranches. All the evidences of a modern and progressive civilization have been introduced, and with the work of improvement and upbuilding Mr. Halley has ever kept pace.

In 1881 occurred the marriage of Mr. Halley and Miss Mary E. Bowman, who was born in Missouri and crossed the plains with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Bowman of Baker. The children of this marriage are Maude, who is a school teacher and lives at home; Eleanor, the wife of Sol Mason, of Pine Valley, by whom she has three children; and Earl, also of Pine Valley, who married Miss Nova Lloyd. The two daughters are graduates of the Baker high school and the son of the State University, in which he completed a course two years ago. Mr. Halley has always been a stanch advocate of the cause of education and has given his support to further public instruction in many ways. Fraternally he is connected with the Knights of Pythias and in that organization has many warm friends. Wherever he is known he is held in high esteem, and his geniality and unfailing cordiality are qualities which have rendered him popular, while his entire business career has gained for him a reputation for enterprise and reliability.

WILLIAM C. WHITE. Spending the latter part of his life in his comfortable home in Hermiston, William C. White is now living in honorable retirement, enjoying in well earned rest the success that came to him as a logical result of well directed effort and earnest endeavor. His birth occurred in Gibson, Tennessee, February 16, 1832, and he is a son of Allen and Nancy (Cribbs) White, both of whom were natives of Tennessee. The father was a son of Montague White, who was born in Virginia, and who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war before removing to Gibson county, Tennessee, where he was one of the pioneer settlers. The maternal grandfather also served in the Revolutionary war. Mr. and Mrs. Allen White spent their entire lives upon a farm in Tennessee, where the father was a circuit rider. To them five children were born. John, the eldest, whose death occurred at Weston, Oregon, came to this state in 1844. He was an agriculturist and stock-raiser and was also prominent in political circles. He served as city treasurer of Portland and was three times a representative of Umatilla county. He was judge of the county and also served in the legislature, having been elected from Portland by the republican party. His death occurred about twenty five years ago, when he was fifty-five years of age. William C., the second in order of birth, is the subject of this review. Mrs. Lucy Moore died in Tennessee. Mrs. Mary Cunningham and Nancy reside in Tennessee.

William C. White is indebted to the common schools of his native state for the educational advantages enjoyed by him and on the Tennessee homestead he spent the period of his boyhood and youth, assisting his father in the work of the farm when not busy with his text-books. At an early age he became familiar with the tasks that fall to the lot of the country lad and with the passing of years, as he increased in strength and experience, his duties became more and more important and his training in agricultural lines thorough and comprehensive. His parents died when he was very young, his mother passing away while he was but a child and his father's death occurring when he was twelve years of age. In 1852 he came to Multnomah county and resided with his brother for about two years before removing to Yamhill county, where he purchased a half interest in a herd of cattle of two hundred head. After about three years he purchased his partner's interest in the herd which then comprised about three hundred head and he took it to Umatilla county up the Walla Walla river. In the winter of 1861-2 he had the misfortune of losing all but about eighteen head. The severity of the weather made it impossible for the cattle to find grazing at the proper season of the year. In that year it began snowing on the 22d of December and continued steadily until April. In June there were still many drifts two feet in height throughout the country. After his heavy loss Mr. White went to Florence and worked in the Closser mines, returning in August, 1862, with two hundred and eighty-seven dollars. He then began farming in Umatilla county, six miles southwest of Walla Walla, and continued in that occupation there until about a year ago. He has thus been a resident agriculturist of Umatilla county for fifty years. He owns two hundred and thirty acres on the Umatilla river, one-half mile from Stanfield, all of which land is irrigated. He also owns a half section of wheat land two and one-half miles northeast of Echo and about two acres of land in Hermiston, where he has been residing for the past year. At present his property is all leased. During the years in which he devoted his time and attention to the development and improvement of his property and to general farming and stock-raising he showed that the thorough training which he received in the early days upon his father's and uncle's farms well fitted him for the successful conduct of an enterprise of this character and his keen business sagacity and wise management were resultant factors in the success which attended his efforts. His substantial and gratifying success has made it possible for him to retire from active business life and enjoy in well earned rest the fruits of his former toil. In 1856 he was a witness of some serious Indian troubles. In Yamhill county, the Indians were dying rapidly and, being able to assign no other cause for the deaths of their fellow members than the mistakes which the doctors were making in the treatment of their cases, they tried to kill these physicians. This would have occurred had not Phil Sheridan, who was there at the time, exerted his strength in his attempt to keep the Indians from killing one another. Mr. White was frequently brought into contact with such troubles and many of the trials of the pioneer are among his personal experiences.

In 1856 William C. White was married to Miss Susan Amanda Lenox, whose birth occurred in Missouri, in 1842, and who was brought to Oregon by her parents, David and Louisa Lenox, in 1843. They were residents of Multnomah county, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. White eleven children have been born. W. S., who died at the age of fifty-two years, was survived by three children: Elmer, of Spokane; W. H., of Astoria; and Fred, of Pullman. L. O. makes his home with his father. Elizabeth married W. B. Estes, who is engaged in farming, and they became the parents of six children. Thomas Harvey is deceased, and left four children, Grace, Laura, Lelis and Mary. Rosella became the wife of A. A. Hammer, of Spokane, who owns and operates gold and silver mines, and they have four children. Millard F., who is engaged as an architect in Portland, is married and has three children. Harriet Frances, the deceased wife of G. L. Ward, was the mother of two children, Gladys and Eva. Delia May, the deceased wife of Clarence Getchell, left two children, Clarence and Bonnetta, the latter residing with our subject. Nancy Catherine married J. R. Means, a contractor and builder of Hermiston, and is the mother of two children. Jessie, who married Val J. Gonzales, died at Reno, Nevada, in 1911. John Edward, the youngest member of the family, died at the age of nineteen years. The two eldest of the children were born in Yamhill county and the others were born in Umatilla county. Mr. White is now eighty years of age and enjoys the veneration and respect which should ever be accorded one who has traveled thus far on his earthly pilgrimage and whose career has at all times been upright and honorable.

H. C. MEANS, a self-made man who has won success in the various undertakings to which he has directed his energies, is now conducting the Cottage Hotel at Umatilla. He was born in Ray county, Missouri, April 12, 1858, a son of J. R. and Rebecca (Branstetter) Means. The father was a native of Missouri and the mother was born in Tennessee. In 1863 the former came to Oregon with his family, crossing the plains to Nolin, Umatilla county, with ox teams. After arriving here he took up a homestead, which he made his home until 1878. In that year he removed to Pendleton, where he resided for the remainder of his life. His death occurred in 1904, when he was seventy-nine years of age, and his wife passed away in 1900, at the age of seventy-three years. He was an agriculturist throughout his life, which was spent in hard labor such as most of the early settlers of this county were called upon to endure. By a previous marriage he had two children and Mrs. Means by a former marriage had three children. To Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Means seven children were born, of whom H. C. is the eldest.

H. C. Means remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-two years of age. In early life he attended the public schools and acquired such education as they afforded. On October 6, 1880, however, he came to Umatilla and took charge of the dray business of John R. Kunze & Company, extensive commisson merchants and freighters before the railroad was built. He was with them for nine years. At the end of that time he started a large store for himself, which he conducted until it was destroyed by fire in 1897. Desiring to give up the mercantile business, he built the Cottage Hotel, which he has since been conducting with the exception of the two years which he spent in a mining camp although his family remained in Pendleton at the Cottage Hotel.

In 1886 Mr. Means was married to Miss Anna Groser, whose birth occurred in Minnesota and who came to Oregon shortly before her marriage. To their union three children have been born: Lester A., who is a hardware clerk in Portland; Arthur G., a railroad cashier; and Hazel, who married Harvey McDill, a ranchman of Alta, Canada. Mr. Means casts his vote with the democracy and has been rather active in politics. He holds membership in the Masonic fraternity. In a review of his life it is seen that persistency of purpose, adaptability and energy have been the strong factors in his success and his cordiality of manner has been an essential element in winning him patronage.

EDWARD QUACKENBUSH. While the attainment of success in legitimate business is commendable, the man who places the correct valuation upon life must realize with Lincoln that "there is something better than making a living;" that to aid one's fellowmen by kindly encouragement and assistance, by the establishment of projects and influences that will work for betterment in his life and thus raise the standard of civilization, is a task infinitely higher and nobler than that which is represented solely by efforts for the attainment of prosperity. Mr. Quackenbush is numbered among those who have done important service in the development of Portland along business lines and still more important work through his advocacy of those purifying and wholesome reforms which are growing up in the social and political life of the community and by his cooperation with those projects which have their basis in the material development of mankind.

A native of New York, he was born in Knoxville, Schoharie county, on the 30th of July, 1839, a son of John I. and Margaret Quackenbush. The father was a merchant and farmer and one of the prominent leaders of the whig party in his community prior to the organization of the republican party when he joined its ranks. He was a stanch advocate of Henry Clay and a warm personal and political friend of William H. Seward, Thurlow Weed, of the Albany Journal, Governor Marcey and other distinguished New York whigs. In the maternal line Edward Quackenbush is of Dutch and German descent and is connected through direct lineage, traceable for two hundred and fifty years, with some old Holland families such as the Webbers, Browers, Bogardus's and Quackenbushes, descendants of whom settled in New York and came to be the legal owners of a large estate which the Holland government also claims and also the legal owners of fifty-seven acres of the celebrated Trinity property on lower Broadway in New York city.

Edward Quackenbush attended the common schools until fifteen years of age, subsequently studying general and political history, composition, philosophy, English grammar and higher mathematics. At sixteen years of age he was a clerk in a village store in West Union, Iowa, cheerfully giving his small earnings to his parents, who had taught him habits of industry, frugality, sobriety and honesty. He entered eagerly into all athletic sports and boyish politics and was an early opponent of slavery. It was his ambition to study law but he was unable to gratify his desire in that direction. Denied the privilege of enlisting in the Union army in 1861 because of ill health he went to California, where he served as cowboy and farm hand for a time. The secession spirit was so rampant that he joined the Summer Guard, a company of the Second Regiment of California Militia, and because of the intense loyalty of the members of the company was often called upon for police duty. He declined all official positions, devoting his spare time to acquiring a thorough knowledge of military tactics as then taught. The company was under secret orders for many months and the regiment assembled at a given signal the day following Lincoln's assassination and quelled the rioters who had already destroyed several newspaper plants, and undoubtedly saved property to the value of several hundred thousand dollars for many dwellings, business houses, saloons and churches had been listed for destruction because the owners were southern sympathizers.

While in California Mr. Quackenbush became porter and later bookkeeper in a wholesale fruit house in San Francisco, and subsequently was bookkeeper with A. Roman & Company, proprietors of a wholesale book store on Montgomery street. Because of a return of pulmonary trouble he went to Arizona in March, 1863, and was there cashier for a wealthy syndicate which was prospecting that country principally for mines. In December of the same year he returned to San Francisco and opened an office as an expert accountant but return of ill health caused him to go to Mexico in March, 1865, as secretary and accountant for the Trinnfo Gold & Silver Mining Company, owning a group of valuable and well developed mines. In December, 1865, Mr. Quackenbush arrived in Portland and became bookkeeper for Knapp, Burrell & Company, an agricultural implement and commission house. But ill health two years later forced his resignation, at which time he turned his attention to the hardwood lumber business, which would permit him to be out of doors. In 1869 he was offered and accepted the position of cashier with the pioneer banking house of Ladd & Tilton, there remaining for twelve and a half years, four years of which time he spent as manager. In 1882 he became a member of the firm of Sibson, Church & Company, grain and commission merchants, which for several years did an extensive business in shipping and milling wheat. The firm dissolving in 1887, Mr. Quackenbush turned his attention to the real-estate and investment business, developing and improving Piedmond and other city properties. Since 1885 he has largely engaged in clearing and peopling unimproved farm lands, being an early advocate of small farms and diversified crops. He is now president of the Investment Company, incorporated in 1887, and owns a large amount of city and country property. For several years he was a director of the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, the stock and property of which were purchased by Henry Villard, the business then being recognized under the name of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company. With others Mr. Quackenbush established the first telephone company of Portland and upon its franchise and property the present Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company of Portland was founded. Many other enterprises had felt the stimulus of his cooperation and sound judgment until his life history has become an integral chapter in the history of the city, the material upbuilding and development of which has been promoted in extensive measure through the business enterprises which he has instituted and conducted. He was one of the organizers of the Board of Trade, which in the '70s became the present Chamber of Commerce, of which he has been a continuous member.

The majority of mankind would feel that the extent and importance of business interests which have claimed the attention of Mr. Quackenbush would be enough to occupy the time and energies of any individual, and yet he has been a most active and helpful figure along other lines. From boyhood interested in political questions, he was a member of the Lincoln Wide-Awakes and Glee Club in 1860 and participated in the active campaign in northeastern Iowa. Since then he has been a member of various republican clubs and his attitude on vital questions might be expressed in the statement that he is a Lincoln-Roosevelt republican, thoroughly opposed to dishonesty and misrule in political affairs. When personal acquaintance makes it possible, he votes for men and not for machine politics, and at all times heartily favors genuine reform movements. He has never consented to accept political office but has been an official member of many organizations for the uplifting and betterment of mankind. He was one of the promoters of the organization of the present Young Men's Christian Association of Portland in 1868, was president during the first two terms and maintains active membership to this time. He is a charter member and was secretary of the Portland Seaman's Friend Society, organized in 1877, and later was for many years its president. He aided in organizing and became a charter member of the Oregon Anti-Saloon League in October, 1903, and in securing the adoption of the local option law for this state. He is now treasurer and a member of the headquarters committee of that organization. He likewise belongs to various other associations, religious, reform, social and athletic. Since 1867 he has been a member of the First Presbyterian church and an elder therein since 1876. He is sincerely interested in any Christian movement that deepens the conviction of man's need of a Savior and his sense of responsibility to God.

On the 5th of September, 1867, Mr. Quackenbush was married to Miss Anna Clarke Hastie, of English and Scotch ancestry, who came to America in colonial days. She was born near Portland, Maine, and was educated and taught in the public schools of San Francisco, residing there for nine years. She came to Oregon in 1865. From girlhood she has been an active worker in the Presbyterian church and Sunday school, and in various other church organizations and benevolent societies. The two children of the family, Edward H. and Fred, are both at home.

Such is the history of Edward Quackenbush, whose life has been largely one of service for the benefit of his family and the community. While deeply interested in all that pertains to Portland and Oregon, he has in public matters given aid and support especially to those things which have for their object the development of spiritual and moral character of the people, realizing that in any community where those characteristics predominate the safety and integrity of the political and commercial interests are assured.

ALOIS GASSNER, JR., who since June, 1909, has been successfully engaged in business as a merchant of Reedville, now conducts his establishment in partnership with a brother, X. A. Gassner. His birth occurred in Portland, on the 11th of January, 1877, his parents being Alois and Justina (Lampert) Gassner, both of whom are natives of Austria. In 1873 they crossed the Atlantic to the United States, settling in Illinois, where they remained for one year. On the expiration of that period they made their way to Portland, Oregon, there continuing to reside until 1885, which year witnessed their arrival in Washington county. From that time to the present, covering more than a quarter of a century, they have made their home near Beaverton, being numbered among the substantial and esteemed residents of the community. Their children are five in number, namely: X. A., who conducts a general mercantile establishment at Reedville in partnership with his brother Alois; Alois, Jr., of this review; Carolina, the wife of William Taylor, of Washington county, Oregon; Julius, who is still under the parental roof; and Justina, who is the wife of Ernest Livermore, and resides near Beaverton, Oregon.

Alois Gassner, Jr., was a young man of twenty-three years when he established a home of his own and embarked in business as a dairyman of Washington county, conducting an enterprise of that character for five years. At the end of that time he sold out

ALOIS GASSNER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AN
TILDEN FOUNDA

and went to Seaside, Oregon, where he made his home for one year. Subsequently he returned to Washington county and in June, 1909, became associated with his brother-in-law in the conduct of a mercantile store at Reedville. Eight months later the latter disposed of his interest to X. A. Gassner, a brother of our subject, who has since remained an active partner in the business. The two brothers have built up an extensive trade, carrying a large and well selected stock of goods at reasonable prices and putting forth earnest effort to please their patrons. Alois Gassner owns an interest in the store property and also has a fine residence in Reedville. His property holdings likewise include a tract comprising three-fourths of an acre on East Fortieth street within the corporation limits of Portland, section 12, on the Clinton Kelly donation land claim. He carries a policy amounting to two thousand dollars in the Kansas City Life Insurance Company.

On the 17th of October, 1900, Mr. Gassner was united in marriage to Miss Dora Miller, who was born in Newton, North Carolina, in September, 1882, her parents being George W. and Alice (Smith) Miller, natives of that state. In 1892 they left North Carolina and came to Oregon, settling at Hillsboro, where they remained until 1898. In that year Mr. Miller purchased a farm on what is known as Cooper Mountain, whereon he has resided to the present time. To him and his wife have been born nine children, as follows: Mrs. Gassner; Mrs. Emma Taylor, of Lents, Oregon; Mrs. Laura Dye, whose husband is a printer of Portland; Mrs. Mary Ulrich, living in Hillsboro, Oregon; George E., who is a resident of Washington county; and Thomas, Edward, Wesley and Alice, all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Gassner have had three children, namely: Hilda M., whose natal day was December 28, 1901; Leola L., who died at the age of two years; and Ethel J., whose birth occurred on the 28th of February, 1907.

In his political views Mr. Gassner is a republican, but not strictly partisan, casting his ballot for the men and measures that he believes will best conserve the general welfare. Fraternally he is identified with the Catholic Order of Foresters and also the Modern Woodmen of America, belonging to Silverleaf Camp, No. 8193, at Reedville. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Roman Catholic church, of which his wife is also a communicant. He has always remained within the borders of his native state and in business circles has won a gratifying measure of prosperity.

WILLIAM T. McLEOD, who is engaged in farming near Adams in Umatilla county, was born in Canada, February 13, 1857. He is a son of Roderick and Annabel (McIntyre) McLeod, both of whom were natives of Scotland but removed in the early '30s to Canada, where they died. In their family were eight children, of whom four are yet living.

William T. McLeod received a common-school education and remained at home until sixteen years of age, when he started out in life for himself by working as a day laborer. After reaching his majority he followed farming in Canada for seven years. In 1893 he came to Oregon, locating in Umatilla county, and purchased the farm where he now resides. It consists of three hundred and twenty acres of finely improved land, all under an excellent state of cultivation.

In 1893 Mr. McLeod wedded Miss Mary McFadden, who was born in Canada, a daughter of Duncan and Janet McFadden, both of whom were natives of Scotland and came to America at an early date. Her mother died in April, 1912, at the home of Mr. McLeod, and her father is also deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. McLeod have been born two children, Gladys and Annabel, both at home.

Politically Mr. McLeod casts his vote with the democratic party and is interested in its success and welfare. He gives much attention to the cause of education and is now and has been for the past twelve years clerk of the school board. Fraternally he is identified with the Woodmen of the World, Lodge No. 46, and with the Independent Order of Foresters, Lodge No. 476. Both Mr. and Mrs. McLeod are affiliated with the Presbyterian church and have a wide circle of friends and acquaintances in the community where they now reside.

RICHARD ISAAC YERXA, mayor of Umatilla, was born in New Brunswick, three quarters of a mile from the border between that province and the state of Maine, on the 8th of August, 1850, his parents being Hamilton and Hannah (Green) Yerxa. The mother was born on the boundary line between Maine and New Brunswick, her father's property being located in both countries so that he farmed in Maine and New Brunswick. Mr. and Mrs. Yerxa reared their family in New Brunswick but later removed to Minnesota, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. Yerxa was always engaged in agricultural pursuits and in the lumber business in the east and after taking up his residence in Minneapolis engaged in the wood and coal business for a number of years. Their deaths occurred in Minneapolis. To their union thirteen children were born, of whom Richard Isaac is the ninth in order of birth.

After acquiring his education in the district school and living upon the home farm until he was twenty-six years of age Richard I. Yerxa removed to Washington, locating first at Tacoma, Washington, where he was employed by the Northern Pacific railroad. He also held other positions and during the greater part of his active career filled positions as assistant foreman. In the summer of 1880 he came to Oregon and worked for the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company at Blalock and for one season was engaged as foreman on rush work. For twenty-five years he was in the employ of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, being engaged in construction work and maintenance of way until 1906, a portion of which time he was at Umatilla, six years at Baker City and seven years at Stanfield as track foreman. In 1906 he reentered railroad service in this city and took a position as night agent for fourteen months. Since that time he has worked on his ranch for two years, his property comprising eight acres, all of which is under irrigation. Last year he also engaged in the dray business and he has invested somewhat heavily in real estate in Umatilla. He owns his home and also five city lots.

On the 15th of April, 1891, Mr. Yerxa married Frances Elizabeth Markham, whose birth occurred on the 2d of May, 1864, near Umatilla, and who is a daughter of Samuel and Frances (Bleecher) Markham. Mrs. Markham was a twin, her sister having died in infancy, and Mr. Markham has a twin brother, Daniel. To Mr. and Mrs. Yerxa three children have been born: Frances Zelia, the wife of Robert V. Brownell, of Umatilla; Richard Samuel, at home; and Roger Hamilton.

In politics Mr. Yerxa is a democrat and he is now serving for his fourth term as mayor of Umatilla. He has held this office since the incorporation of the city in 1906. He is a member of the Masons and the Red Men. Without any special advantages at the outset of his career he has steadily worked his way upward and has been both the architect and the builder of his own fortunes. He has made good use of his time and opportunities, and justly merits the prosperity which has come to him.

REV. CASIMIR BUTLER, who is a priest of the Franciscan Capuchin Order and who is now engaged in missionary work in Hermiston, Umatilla county, was born in Kilkenny, Ireland, October 12, 1876, a son of Tobias and Catharine (Murphy) Butler. The father's entire life was spent as an agriculturist in his native land and the mother is now residing there. To their union eleven children were born.

Father Butler received his education in the public schools of Ireland and afterward he completed a course at the University of Ireland from which institution he was graduated with the degree of B. A. in 1901. During the five years following he studied in the College of Science at Dublin and there completed the full course as set forth in the curriculum. He thus became qualified for a science teacher under the government. For eight years he was engaged in teaching in the Capuchin College of Ireland. He resigned from this position in 1910. The bishop of Baker City, Oregon, went to Ireland about that time and set forth the needs of the diocese of which he was the head. Father Butler became interested in the matter and came to America with him, arriving in New York on the 6th of October, 1910. He has since been working in connection with establishing missions at Stanfield, Pilot Rock, Echo, Umatilla and Hermiston. He has succeeded in stimulating the work of these parishes and during his charge, because of his unwearied effort and remarkable energy, he has succeeded in establishing congregations which will probably prove permanent. The work has grown so rapidly under his ministry that it has become evident that the means which he exercises for securing his ends are both practical and effective. He has gained the confidence of the local people and in a brief period of time has not only succeeded in organizing parishes but also in acquiring requisite means for building and furnishing churches. Already he has won the love and esteem of the members of his parishes and is also held in high repute throughout the community by Protestants and Catholics alike.

D. A. OSBORN, who is a representative agriculturist of Umatilla county, was born in that county, January 17, 1872, a son of A. R. and Satirah A. (McDowell) Osborn. The mother was born in Ohio but the father was born while his parents were crossing the plains in 1842. They are still living in this state. To them were born ten children, seven of whom yet survive.

D. A. Osborn received a common-school education and remained at home until he was twenty-seven years of age, when he began farming for himself, and has since continued in that occupation. He now operates a tract of eight hundred acres of land and is engaged in general farming.

In 1898 Mr. Osborn married Miss Bertha Garn, who was born in Union county and is a daughter of E. D. and M. M. (Eldredge) Garn. Her father is a native of Ohio and her mother of Wyoming. The parents came to Oregon in 1879 and located in Union county, where they are still residing. In their family were five children, four of whom are yet living. Mr. and Mrs. Osborn are the parents of three children: Irene L., born January 10, 1900; David C., born January 19, 1906; and Bonnie B., born September 29, 1910.

In politics Mr. Osborn is a republican and gives much attention to the interests of education, having served as a member of the school board. Mrs. Osborn was reared in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Osborn is one of the representative citizens of his county, and all with whom he comes in contact accord him the highest respect and esteem.

HON. FRED W. MULKEY. The name of Mulkey has long figured prominently and honorably in connection with the legal profession in Portland and the political history of Oregon, and while the prosperity of the father has relieved the son of close application to business affairs, he is yet in the management of invested interests and his activity in political lines displaying ability and a spirit of enterprise that ranks him among Portland's forceful and prominent citizens.

The father, Marion Francis Mulkey, was a native of Johnson county, Missouri, born on the 14th of November, 1836, and was a son of Johnson Mulkey, who in 1846, accompanied by his family, started upon the long journey across the plains to the northwest. They proceeded by slow stages, their wagon being drawn by oxen, and when they had left the furthermost western settlements they had to depend upon the supplies which they carried with them. Thus day after day they continued on their way until they reached Benton county, Oregon, where Johnson Mulkey secured a donation claim. Marion Francis Mulkey was at that time a lad of ten years. Upon the home farm he spent his youth, sharing with the family in the hardships and experiences of pioneer life. His educational advantages were those which could be obtained in the little log schoolhouse in his home neighborhood until he had the opportunity to become a pupil in the college at Forest Grove, of which Dr. S. H. Marsh, one of the noted educators of the day was then principal. He was pursuing his studies there when the Indians went upon the war path in 1836. Realizing the necessity of at once organizing for the protection of the settlers, he joined the army and aided in subduing the wily foe. After the restoration of peace he resumed his studies and in 1858 entered Yale. Four years were devoted to the mastery of his university course and following his graduation in 1862 he returned to Portland, where he entered upon the study of law under the direction of Judge E. D. Shattuck. While thus engaged in preparation for the bar he filled the office of provost marshal in 1863, aiding in the enrollment of that year.

In 1864, Marion Francis Mulkey was admitted to practice in the Oregon courts and soon afterward became junior partner of the law firm of Hill & Mulkey, his associate being W. Lair Hill. His preparation for the bar had been very thorough and he seemed to possess a natural discrimination as to legal principles and ethics. A public recognition of his ability came to him in 1866 in his election as prosecuting attorney for the fourth judicial district. From that time forward he continued more or less prominently in public life aside from his profession. In 1867 he was chosen to represent the third ward in the city council and in 1872 was elected city attorney and reelected in 1873. On his retirement from office he became a partner of Hon. J. F. Caples, and during his partner's three successive terms of service as district attorney, Mr. Mulkey filled the position of deputy. In the practice of law his clientage constantly increased and his law business became of a most important character. He displayed keen discrimination in the solution of intricate problems of law and was seldom, if ever, in fault in the application of a legal principle. He prepared his cases with great thoroughness and his arguments were forceful and convincing, while his deductions were at all times logical.

In the meantime, as opportunity offered and his financial resources increased, M. F. Mulkey made investment in real estate and the growing value of his property came in time to win him rank with the most prosperous of Portland's citizens. He purchased vacant property from time to time and, improving it by the erection of substantial buildings, not only enhanced the value of his own realty but also contributed to the upbuilding of the city. There stands as a monument to his enterprising spirit and his faith in Portland the Mulkey block at the corner of Second and Morrison streets, which when erected was one of the leading architectural structures of Portland. The republican party found in him a stalwart supporter and he was an equally exemplary representative of the Masonic fraternity.

In 1862 occurred the marriage of M. F. Mulkey and Miss Mary E. Porter, of New Haven, Connecticut, a representative of one of the leading families there. The children of this marriage are Frank M. and Fred W. The death of Mr. Mulkey occurred February 25, 1889, thus removing one of Portland's most honored and useful citizens. His life was one of unswerving integrity and exalted honor, and the public press bide with the bar in expressing in feeling terms the deep sense of irretrievable loss suffered by the community in the passing of this high-minded and highly respected citizen.

Fred W. Mulkey was born in Portland, January 6, 1871. He was graduated from the University of Oregon in 1896 and also from the New York Law School, New York city, with the degree LL. B., in 1899. He is conceded to be one of the most talented and also one of the most highly esteemed members of the Portland bar and is widely and favorably known throughout the entire state of Oregon.

Senator Mulkey was a member of the Portland city council from 1900 to 1902, and was honored with the presidency of the board the last year of his term. The question of taxation is a subject of which he has made a specialty, and his faith in the cause he champions has always been as strong as his persistency. He was chairman of the Oregon tax commission, whose report received favorable comment from the best tax experts in the United States. He is also a member of the commission on public docks of the city of Portland and serves in the distinguished capacity of chairman of this commission, which has under its supervision one of the most important public projects ever undertaken by the city.

The senator was selected by the people of Oregon for the United States senate to fill the unexpired term of the late J. H. Mitchell in June, 1906, by a plurality of fifty thousand, and was the unanimous choice of the state legislature for the same position. His capacity for work, his forceful and excellent judgment secured special attention in the senate chamber, and his future is full of promise of a brilliant career in which he is yet to figure. Following in the footsteps of his distinguished father Senator Mulkey's ability bids fair to gain for him large political prominence and much of future usefulness in national affairs.

HERMANN SUHL is numbered among the successful agriculturists of Umatilla county, where he resides on his farm near Pendleton. He was born in Germany, October 29, 1871, a son of Paul and Mary Suhl, who were also natives of that country and came in 1890 to America, settling near Walnut, Iowa, where they both died. They were the parents of seven children, all of whom yet survive.

Hermann Suhl received a common-school education in Germany and remained at home until fifteen years of age, when he came to America, locating in Iowa, where for ten years he was employed as a farm hand. In 1897 he went to Colorado but after a short time went on to California and in 1898 he came to Pendleton, Oregon, where he purchased a farm of four hundred and eighty acres, on which he now resides. His land is well improved and is under a high state of cultivation. He also owns four hundred and eighty acres in Washington, which is also under cultivation.

In 1901 Mr. Suhl married Miss Anna Pahl, who was a native of Germany and died at their home near Pendleton, February 21, 1910, leaving three children, Alvina M., Alma A. and Walter H. Mrs. Suhl was a zealous believer in the faith of the Lutheran church and Mr. Suhl is also a member of that denomination. In politics he gives his support to the republican party. He takes a great interest in the cause of education and is now serving as school clerk. He is thrifty and enterprising and through his earnest and persistent labor he has come into possession of valuable property, which annually yields him a good income. Fraternally he is identified with Eureka Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F.; and also belongs to Lodge No. 52, A. F. & A. M.; and to the chapter.

GEORGE J. WILCOX may be regarded as one of the successful citizens of Washington county. He is the owner of a valuable farm three miles north of Banks, which he redeemed from the wilderness. This farm he has developed into one of the most productive properties of this section. He owes his success mainly to his own energy and ability, and to the good judgment which is one of his prominent characteristics. He is a native of Galena, Nevada, born August 7, 1863, a son of John W. and Susan (Gill) Wilcox, record of whom appears elsewhere in this work.

At the age of seventeen, George J. Wilcox came with his parents from Nevada to Washington county, Oregon. He possessed the advantages of education provided by the common schools of Nevada, and after arriving in this state, assisted his father for several years upon the home place. He took up a homestead after arriving at maturity. This tract he has developed from raw land into one of the attractive farms of the county. The tract was originally covered with timber and underbrush, and it required years of systematic labor to produce the results which are to be seen today. He has erected all of the buildings and fences, and has forty acres in an excellent state of cultivation. There are sixty acres in pasture land and sixty acres in commercial timber, which is each year increasing in value. Fifteen acres of the farm is under irrigation. Mr. Wilcox gives his attention especially to dairying and fruit-raising, and as he has a large orchard the returns are highly satisfactory.

On October 9, 1889, Mr. Wilcox was married to Miss Emma Rufli, a native of Illinois, and a daughter of Fred and Charlotte (Stecard) Rufli. The father was born in Switzerland and the mother in Missouri. They were married in Illinois; subsequently, they moved to Kansas where they lived for seven years. They came to Oregon in 1875, and settled in Washington county. The homestead comprises one hundred acres of well improved land, twenty acres of which is under a good state of cultivation. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Rufli were six children: Charles, who resides on a part of the homestead; Louise, the wife of Albert Mills, of Forest Grove; Emma, now Mrs. George J. Wilcox; Robert, who is living at home; Sophia, who married Loren Creps, of Washington county; and Lottie, who is the wife of Frank Creps, also of this county. Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox are the parents of four children, namely: Cora, born in 1890, who is attending high school and is also studying music; Carl W., born in 1892, and Ralph A., born in 1896, who have received a good common-school education, and Dorothy I., who was born in 1901. These children are all highly promising, and are still living under the parental roof.

Mr. Wilcox is not affiliated with any fraternal organization but has been an adherent of the republican party ever since he arrived at maturity. He is an advocate of progress and is always willing to lend a hand in the promotion of movements seeking to enhance the comfort or happiness of the community. He early learned the great lesson of self-reliance and by depending implicitly upon his own judgment has overcome many difficulties that might have daunted a less resolute man. His opinion is regarded very highly by neighbors and friends as to all matters pertaining to the fruit business. That he has met with deserved success is the unanimous verdict of all who know him.

WILLIAM H. ALBEE, who operates a highly improved farm of eight hundred acres, situated near Helix, was born in Washington county, May 27, 1871. His father, Edwin Albee, is a native of St. Louis, Missouri, and on coming to Oregon located in Washington county, where he and his wife, Margaret Albee, yet reside. The mother was born in Virginia and came to Oregon in 1853. In their family were seven children, six of whom are yet living.

William H. Albee received a common-school education and started out in life for himself at the age of sixteen years, working at day labor until he reached his majority. He then opened a meat market in Helix, which he conducted for several years. Subsequently he took up farming and is now managing eight hundred acres of highly improved land, where he employs the latest methods of tilling the soil. He also owns five acres of excellent property in Helix, a half-interest in one hundred and sixty acres near the town, and ten acres of irrigated land near Prosser.

GEORGE J. WILCOX AND FAMILY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC
LIBRARY

On the 22d of February, 1898, Mr. Albee wedded Miss Lydia Montgomery, who was born in Linn county, a daughter of Benjamin and Mary Montgomery, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this volume. Mrs. Albee is a well educated lady and engaged in school teaching before her marriage. To Mr. and Mrs. Albee have been born two children, Letha and William H., Jr.

Politically Mr. Albee is a republican and he has served as a member of the town council. He gives much attention to the interests of education and is now a member of and also clerk of the school board. Fraternally he is affiliated with Helix Lodge No. 93, A. F. & A. M., and Helix Lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F. He also belongs to the Woodmen of the World and to Helix Lodge, No. 74, K. P. Mrs. Albee is identified with the Order of the Eastern Star and the Daughters of Rebekah. Both are faithful workers in the Baptist church and have many friends in the community. Mr. Albee is very successful in his farming and is gaining that prosperity which results from earnest and well directed effort.

JOHN MARION LEWIS for more than twenty-two years has been in the public service, receiving increasing majorities at the successive elections which have continued him in his present position for four consecutive terms. Spending his entire life in the northwest, he is a representative of one of the pioneer families of Oregon, his birth having occurred in Linn county, September 20, 1855. He traces his lineage back to old families of Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. His paternal great-grandfather Fielding Lewis, was born in the Old Dominion in 1767, but at an early age became a resident of North Carolina and afterward of eastern Tennessee. His son, Fielding Lewis, Jr., was born in 1811 and became a resident of Wabash county, Illinois, prior to 1830. Later he established his home in Missouri and was one of the great band of emigrants who in the year of 1852 branched off from the trodden paths that for three years previous had been conducting settlers to California, to settle homes in the northwest that they might take advantage of the opportunities offered by the rich agricultural lands and forests of this section of the country. It was in the spring of the year when Fielding Lewis, Jr., started across the plains in company with his family. Day after day they traveled on, camping along the roadside at night, and when six months had elapsed reached their destination—a point near Brownsville, in Linn county, Oregon. They crossed the Snake river opposite the site of Huntington, followed the general course of the river down to its junction with the Columbia, thence proceeded down the Columbia valley to the mouth of the Willamette and up the latter stream to Linn county. At all times such a journey was fraught with hardships and perils, but there were, moreover, peculiarly sad features in the history of this trip of the Lewis family for mountain fever and cholera broke out in that part and Lucinda Moore Lewis, the wife of Fielding Lewis, was laid to rest in a grave made on the banks of the Snake river near Birch creek. When they reached Burnt river Charles Wesley Lewis, a son, also passed away, and at the Upper Cascades a grave was made for Marion Lewis, while Mary Ellen Lewis died on the Oregon side of the river opposite Vancouver barracks.

James Preston Lewis, one of the family, who travelled with them on the long journey to the northwest, entered land in the forest subsequent to his arrival in Oregon, and at once began to clear and improve a farm that he might thus establish a home for his family. Subsequently he removed to Althouse, Josephine county, where he purchased a tract of land upon which he made his home until his death on the 18th of February, 1906. He was prominent in community affairs there and served for three terms as county assessor. It was on the 29th of November, 1853, that James Preston Lewis was united in marriage to Tennessee Teresa Tycer, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. H. H. Spalding, who came to Oregon with Marcus Whitman in 1836. Mrs. Lewis was born in Linn county, Missouri, a daughter of Lewis Tycer, a native of Nashville, Tennessee, and an early resident of Linn county, Missouri. His father came from France to aid the American colonists in their struggle for independence and participated in the battle of Guilford Courthouse and in other engagements which resulted in the establishment of American Independence. The year 1853 witnessed the arrival of Lewis Tycer and his family in Oregon. His original home was a pioneer cabin but later he purchased a farm and comfortable residence which he occupied to the time of his death, at the age of seventy seven years, and which is still owned by a member of his family. James P. and Tennessee Lewis became the parents of three sons and three daughters who are yet living: George W., who was sheriff of Josephine county from 1902 until 1906 and is now in business at Grants Pass, Oregon; James E. and Mrs. O. J. Wetherbee are residents of Josephine county; Mrs. Joseph G. Hiatt is a resident of Santa Rosa, California; and Mrs. James E. Holland is also a resident of Josephine county.

John Marion Lewis spent the first seventeen years of his life in his native county and then accompanied his parents on their removal to Josephine county. His youthful days were devoted to the work of the fields and to the acquirement of an education in the public schools, and later he engaged in mining to some extent, during the winter months. In 1881 he became a resident of Portland and resumed his studies, for he was ambitious to secure a better education. After taking a course in the Portland Business College he obtained a position in the government employ in 1882, having charge of the mailing division of the Portland post office under Postmaster George A. Steel, for about three years. After C. W. Robey a democratic postmaster, came to the office, Mr. Lewis continued to occupy the position for eighteen months, when impaired health caused by close confinement to the work, compelled him to resign.

For three years after relinquishing his position in the postal service Mr. Lewis was in the employ of the H. R. Duniway Lumber Company in East Portland as lumber inspector, and while there residing was again called to public office, representing his ward in a city council of East Portland from 1888 until 1890. In the latter year he was appointed by President Harrison to the position of postmaster and acted in that capacity until the consolidation of the cities of Portland and East Portland, when the office was discontinued. Later he was appointed superintendent of Station A, which superseded the old office in East Portland, and continued in that position under Postmaster Steel until the close of the latter's second term. In 1894 Mr. Lewis became deputy treasurer under A. W. Lambert, and two years later was reappointed to the same office by Ralph Warren Hoyt and continued in that position for four years more. He was then elected county treasurer and since the 7th of July, 1902, has remained the incumbent of that office, being reelected in 1904, 1906, 1908 and 1910 receiving at the last election a majority of eighteen thousand four hundred and eighty-one votes. He was again nominated in 1912 and has the unique distinction of being the only man to receive the sixth consecutive nomination for an office in Multnomah county. No better testimonial of his capability and fidelity could be given nor of the confidence reposed in him by his fellowmen. He regards a public office as a public trust—and no trust reposed in John M. Lewis has ever been betrayed.

On the first of May, 1883, in Portland, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Lewis and Miss Ella M. McPherson, a native of Linn county, Oregon, and a daughter of W. A. McPherson, who came to this state about 1850. He was connected with the public service as state printer from 1866 until 1870, and his death occurred in 1891. Four children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, one of whom, Herbert Wayne, died at the age of two years. Those living are: Edith and Ione, teachers in the city schools; and Wade Vernon, a graduate of Washington high school. The family attend the Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Lewis is a ruling elder, and in the work of which he has long taken active and helpful part. In his fraternal relations he is an Odd Fellow and is also connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Woodmen of the World. He is affiliated with Washington Lodge, No. 46, A. F. & A. M. and Washington Chapter, No. 18, R. A. M. He is a charter member of Abernethy's Cabin, No. 1, Native Sons of Oregon, and is a member of the Oregon Historical Society. His political allegiance has always been unswervingly given to the republican party for his study of the political conditions and questions of the day has led him to the belief that its platform contains the best elements of good government. His has been a well spent life, characterized by a progressive public spirit that has found tangible manifestation on many occasions. In public office his course has ever been above suspicion. The good of the community he places before partisanship, and the welfare of his constituents before personal aggrandizement. Wherever he is known he is highly esteemed, but in the city of his residence, where he is best known, he inspires personal friendships of unusual strength and all who know him have high admiration for his good qualities of heart and mind.

RUSSELL BROWNELL, one of the younger business men and one of the foremost meat dealers in Hermiston, was born in Modoc county, California, January 2, 1884, a son of Duane R. and Emma Belle (Perkiss) Brownell. The father was born in Utah, December 25, 1845. He lived in the northern part of California for over thirty years and it was six years ago when he came to Umatilla county. While in California he was supervisor of Lassen county for many years. He is one of the most active and prominent citizens in Umatilla county today and is the owner of several ranches in the northwest. The mother's birth occurred in Yuba county, California, and she is now residing at Bieber, California. The paternal grandfather was Gideon Brownell, who served in the Mexican war. To Mr. and Mrs. Duane R. Brownell four children were born: Minnie, who is the wife of P. J. Hopper, of Lassen county, California; Russell, the subject of this sketch; Earl; and Harold.

Russell Brownell resided at home with his parents at Bieber, California, while his father was a merchant in that town. There he attended the public schools and subsequently was a student at the San Francisco Business College. After completing his course in that institution he began earning his own livelihood, his first work being that of locating and selling timber lands in northern California and Washington. Subsequently for about three or four years he was engaged in the manufacture of irrigating pumps at Portland. He was in partnership with his father and they had purchased from the inventor the right to manufacture these pumps. In the spring of 1907 Mr. Brownell disposed of his interests in Portland and came to Hermiston. Since that time he has conducted a meat market in this city and also has been interested in the transfer business at Hermiston and Umatilla. He owns the building in which his shop is located and the home which he has built for himself is one of the most substantial and modern buildings in the town. He has been successful in all his business undertakings and in his particular lines has distanced all competitors.

In 1907 Russell Brownell was married, at Susanville, California, to Miss Lina Gournaz, whose birth occurred in Susanville in 1884. She is a daughter of P. J. Gournaz and a granddaughter of Captain Talbott. Mr. Brownell is a Mason and also holds membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows lodge. He served as the second treasurer of Hermiston and was at one time appointed to the town council, after which he was duly elected a member of the same body. A good business man, he has given the best of his energies to building up his trade, and is widely and favorably known throughout the city.

LORENZO MONTERASTELLI. One of the enterprising and substantial citizens of Pendleton is Lorenzo Monterastelli, who is successfully conducting a monument business here and also at Heppner, this state. He was born in Italy on the 10th of August, 1872, and there he was likewise reared and educated. While still in his early boyhood he was apprenticed to a marble and stone cutter in his native city with the expectation of making this his life vocation. In his country this trade is looked upon as one of the lesser arts and is ranked accordingly, as much attention being bestowed upon form, unity, proportion and harmony from the artistic viewpoint as from the mechanical. He early evidenced more than average skill with the tools and also manifested unusual originality in designing, while his ideas were executed with true artistic appreciation. After completing his period of service, Mr. Monterastelli followed his trade in his native land until 1896, when he decided to come to the United States, believing that he would here find opportunities more commensurate with his ability. When he first came to this country he settled in Massachusetts, but seven months later he came to the Pacific coast, feeling that the less congested districts of the northwest afforded better advantages. He located in Portland, remaining there until 1901, when he came to Pendleton and engaged in business for himself. Here he not only engages in the manufacture of monuments and fine stone and marble cutting, but he also does contracting and building. His thorough understanding of his trade together with his originality and fine appreciation of artistic values readily won him recognition as a master in his line of work, and his business rapidly developed. Later he extended the scope of his activities by opening an establishment at Heppner, that has proven equally remunerative. In the direction of his enterprise, Mr. Monterastelli uses excellent judgment and good business sagacity, and although entirely unfamiliar with the customs and language of the country when he came here, he has readily acquired both and his establishments are conducted in strict accordance to the commercial methods observed by all progressive American business men. He keeps a full line of materials of every grade and quality to be found in the quarries of either the new or the old world, that he offers at very reasonable prices. He does his own designing and employs only the most skilled and capable workmen in their execution, while his shop is fully equipped with every tool or appliance essential in the production of the best effects and results. His personal supervision is given to every detail of the business and he closely examines the execution of every design, it being his policy never to turn out a piece of work that he feels is not a credit to him and his establishment.

This city was the scene of Mr. Monterastelli's marriage in 1910 to Miss Laura J. Latourelle, a native of Montreal, Canada, and they have become the parents of one child, Theresa M. A.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Monterastelli are communicants of the Roman Catholic church, and in politics he is a republican. During the ten years of his residence in Pendleton, he has won the reputation of being absolutely dependable and honorable in his transactions, which has been one of the dominant factors in his success. He gives his undivided attention to his business and is most conscientious in his efforts to faithfully fulfil his contracts. As a result he is prospering in a most gratifying degree and in addition to his fine business is the owner of a two-story brick building. Mr. Monterastelli came to this country with the expectation of making it his home and although he is deeply attached to the land of his birth, he is most loyal to America and its institutions. In matters of citizenship he is progressive, always giving his support to forwarding the welfare of the community or to advancing its utilities.

F. A. HARMON is secretary and general manager of the Eastern Oregon Light & Power Company, with headquarters at Baker. The substantial development and rapid advancement of western cities is a marvel to the more conservative east, but in each community are found men of enterprise who keep abreast of the times and who are eager and ready to introduce any improvement of real value. To this class belongs F. A. Harmon, who is meeting with success in his business connections and at the same time is making his labor of benefit to Baker and other cities of this part of the state. He was born on a farm in Racine county, Wisconsin, August 28, 1859, and is a son of Lyman A. and Jane (Box) Harmon the former a native of Ohio and the latter of England. Mrs. Lyman Harmon came to the new world with her mother, her father having died when she was but a child. The family home was established in Wisconsin and there she married Lyman A. Harmon. In 1869 they removed to Dodge county, Nebraska, where Mr. Harmon entered land and began the development of a farm, upon which he resided to the time of his death, which occurred in November, 1910, when he was seventy-eight years of age. For about three years he had survived his wife, who passed away in 1907, at the age of seventy-four years. He was a contractor on construction work and also a dealer in live stock. For a long period he made his home in the town of Fremont.

It was in Fremont that F. A. Harmon was reared, remaining with his parents until twenty years of age and pursuing his education in the public schools. He then entered the service of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company, continuing in their employ for twenty-eight years, or until 1906. In that connection he gradually worked his way upward, to the position of division superintendent of the Black Hills and Wyoming district. He had supervision over the station service, and the traffic and other departments and was regarded as one of the reliable and capable representatives of the road.

He afterward spent two years in the banking business at Shoshoni, Wyoming, and in 1908 became associated with friends in Fremont who had built the Fremont & Olive Lake Electrical Plant. Within the next few years he combined this plant with the Baker and La Grande plants and has operated these as a unit to the present time. His position is that of secretary and general manager of the Eastern Oregon Light & Power Company. They own and control well equipped plants at different points and their business is one of growing importance, constituting today one of the leading industrial enterprises of Baker.

F. A. Harmon was united in marriage to Miss Carrie M. Moulton, and they have a pleasant home in Baker, where warm-hearted hospitality reigns supreme. Fraternally Mr. Harmon is connected with the Elks. He is an active and prominent member of the Commercial Club of Baker, having served as one of its directors since its organization, while in May, 1911, he was elected to its presidency. He takes a helpful interest in the affairs of the community, standing at all times for progress and improvement. He recognizes possibilities and utilizes them and embraces opportunities not only for individual advancement but for the public good.

HON. THEODORE W. JOHNSON. The quality which, more than any other, takes a man out of the walks of politicians into the ranks of statesmen is that of high personal service. To be successful in public office a man must appreciate his position as a servant of the people and must realize his duty to his fellow citizens without regard to his personal desires. A politician of this sort is Hon. Theodore W. Johnson, now mayor of the city of Riddle. Before his election to this office he had already gained for himself a prominent place in business circles of the city by his extensive and continually growing drug business. He is a native of Iowa, having been born in Montezuma, Poweshiek county, in that state, September 9, 1861. His parents were John I. and Julia A. (Bollenbaugh) Johnson, both natives of Ohio. They were married in Montezuma, Iowa, whither their parents had removed in pioneer times. The Bollenbaugh family was among the earliest settlers in the middle west, Moses Bollenbaugh, the maternal grandfather of our subject, often shooting deer from his dooryard in Jones county in early times. John I. Johnson, the father of Theodore W. Johnson, enlisted in Company E, Fourth Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, in the Civil war, and died in Missouri while in pursuit of Price's army. After his death the mother returned to her own people in western Linn county, Iowa, where she subsequently married Daniel Garnant, a pioneer of that state, by whom she had eight children.

Theodore W. Johnson was the only child born to her former marriage. He was reared in Linn county, Iowa, and his early education was received in the common schools of that district. He later attended Western College and subsequently took a course in the Littlebridge & Valentine Business College in Davenport, Iowa. When he had completed this he came west to California, where he engaged in the dairy business in the employ of J. R. Talcott for one year. At the expiration of that time he returned to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and for twelve years was employed in the wholesale commission business operated by the J. R. Morin Company. The failure of this enterprise in February, 1894, threw Theodore Johnson out of employment. He had, however, been engaged for some time previous in the study of pharmacy and in the fall of 1893 had entered the pharmaceutical department of Highland Park College, Des Moines. When he had completed this course he returned to Cedar Rapids and secured a position in charge of the laboratory of the W. F. Severa Company, manufacturing pharmacists of that city. He remained with this firm for five years and did extraordinary work in his position and entirely revolutionized the manufacturing business. It had been the custom of the company, prior to the time when Mr. Johnson entered their employ, to buy all their drug supplies in prepared materials. When Theodore Johnson took charge of their laboratory his scientific knowledge of drugs and their ingredients led him to experiment in the preparation of his own materials, and in this he was remarkably successful. The company bought no more drugs in their prepared forms. Theodore Johnson made his own fluid extracts and placed upon the market some fifteen or twenty new mixtures. In 1899 he resigned his position to engage in the drug business for himself. In partnership with his half brother, Lou Garnant, he opened a store in Cedar Rapids but sold out after one year to go to Chicago, where he was employed by the packing house of Swift & Company in their commission department. Here he remained three months and then returned to Cedar Rapids and established himself in the drug business at the corner of Second street and Third avenue, where he remained until 1900.

Subsequent to this time Theodore Johnson had made two trips to the west. His first journey to the coast was taken at the time of the Lewis and Clark Exposition and three months after this he again went west to Seattle, where his half brother was located. It had been Mr. Johnson's intention to locate in that city but when he came to Riddle to visit his uncle, Daniel Bollenbaugh, he became greatly impressed with the opportunities in the growing young western city and determined to make it his future home. He sold out his business in Cedar Rapids and came to Riddle, where he opened a drug store and was immediately successful. He soon gained a reputation as an accurate and

THEODORE W. JOHNSON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

scientific pharmacist. In 1909, when the Alaska-Yukon Pacific Exposition opened in Seattle, the Joseph Triner Company, manufacturing chemists of Chicago, put him in charge of their drug exhibit and through his careful handling and expert knowledge he secured for his employers the gold medal for the best exhibit in this line in the exposition. He has since been asked to assist the same company at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915. Mr. Johnson is absorbed in his own special line of activity and does not often go beyond it. His only other business affiliation is with the Riddle State Bank, of which he is a stockholder and an active member of the board of directors.

On March 25, 1888, Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss Rosaltha Brody, of Vinton, Iowa, and he and his wife have many friends in their adopted city. Politically he is a stanch republican and a firm believer in the policies of his party. He takes an active and intelligent interest in local public affairs and his public-spirited citizenship and his broad-minded views were recognized in his community when in February, 1911, he was elected mayor of Riddle, and in May of the following year his administration was overwhelmingly indorsed by the people and he was returned to the office. He has made a record in this capacity for his broad-minded and liberal handling of public affairs. Fraternally Mr. Johnson is a member of Riddle Lodge, F. & A. M., in which he holds the office of treasurer. He serves in the same capacity in Azalea Lodge, No. 136, I. O. O. F. He and his wife are active members of the Rebekahs and of the Order of the Eastern Star. He is prominent in the Modern Woodmen of America and belongs to Star of the West Lodge, No. 1, K. P., of Cedar Rapids. His wife holds membership in the Pythian Sisters, affiliated with this organization. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson also hold membership in St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Theodore W. Johnson is a prominent man in Riddle today. He is active in its business circles. In his special line of activity he has an expert knowledge and a fair degree of scientific attainment, and in his public capacity he serves without fear and without reproach.

H. L. STANFIELD operates an excellent farm, which is well known as the Stanfield Ranch on Butter creek, and in its further cultivation and improvement is busily engaged, his labors bringing him substantial return in large and abundant harvests. He is yet a young man and if he continues in the course that he has already marked out he will undoubtedly win greater success later in life. He was born in Umatilla county on the 18th of March, 1883, and is a son of R. N. and Hattie T. (Townsend) Stanfield, well known and representative residents of that county. The mother is now residing in Portland. In the family were eight children, of whom H. L. is the fourth in order of birth.

Upon the homestead farm H. L. Stanfield was reared, having been brought there by his parents when he was but one year of age. He pursued his education in the district schools near by until he had mastered the branches of learning that constituted the curriculum. He worked upon the farm through the periods of vacation and early became familiar with the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist. Therefore he was qualified by broad, practical experience to begin farming on his own account after his father gave up the management of the property. His work is conducted along practical and progressive lines and he is systematic in all that he does, so that there is no loss of labor or material. He recognizes the fact that unabating industry, intelligently directed, is the only sure foundation upon which to build success, and he is, therefore, diligently directing his labors in the cultivation of an excellent farm of a thousand acres, which is devoted to hay and stock-raising. The Stanfield brothers have at present about twenty thousand head of sheep and H. L. Stanfield is managing the ranch and attending to the sheep.

In 1907 Mr. Stanfield was married to Miss Juanita Robinson, whose birth occurred in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and who is a daughter of A. W. Robinson, a prominent lumberman, formerly of this county but now a resident of Spokane. To them two children have been born: Hugh, Jr., and Winnie May.

Having passed his entire life here, Mr. Stanfield's record is well known to the residents of his locality and the fact that many of his warmest friends are those who have known him from his boyhood indicates that his salient characteristics are such as awaken confidence, respect and good-will.

A. S. QUANT, postmaster of Albee, where for sixteen years he has been engaged in the mercantile business, was born in Saratoga county, New York, on the 13th of October, 1847. His parents were Jacob and Permelia G. (Wight) Quant, both natives of the Empire state and there they were also reared and married. In the early years of their domestic life they removed to Illinois, locating in Dupage county, where they made their home for five years. In 1861 they again changed their place of residence, this time settling on a farm in Michigan, on which they continued to live until their death. Of the five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Quant all are deceased with the exception of two sons: A. S., our subject; and Wallace, who resides in Michigan.

The school days of A. S. Quant were terminated at the age of sixteen years, when he enlisted in Company C, Eleventh Michigan Volunteer Cavalry and went to the defense of the Union. During the two years he was at the front he saw considerable active service, participating in some of the closely contested engagements of the war. He was mustered out at Nashville, Tennessee, in 1865, receiving his discharge at Jackson, Michigan. Upon his return home he resumed the duties of civil life as a wage earner and for five years thereafter was employed in the lumber camps of Michigan. At the expiration of that time he went back to Illinois, locating in La Salle county, but he only remained there for two years. His next removal was to Newton county, Indiana, but not finding there the opportunities he desired, five or six years later he decided to come to the northwest. He first came to Oregon in 1879, locating in Douglas county, where he lived for five years. In 1884, he became a resident of Umatilla county, and during the succeeding six years was engaged in the lumber business in the Camas valley. Withdrawing from this at the end of that time he took a clerkship in a general store, and for five years applied himself diligently to the mastery of the various details of this business. At the expiration of that period, feeling that he was fully qualified to conduct a similar establishment of his own he invested what capital he had in a store at Albee that he has ever since been conducting. As he carries a well assorted stock that he offers at reasonable prices and conducts his business in an honorable and straightforward manner he has met with a goodly measure of success. In addition to the management and direction of his personal interests for several years past Mr. Quant has also been postmaster. He is a capable man and has always applied himself energetically to anything he has undertaken, his success being entirely attributable to his close concentration and persistence.

Mr. Quant has been married twice. His first union was with Miss Mattie Monroe in 1882, but she died two years later and in 1899 he married Miss Jane Fudge. The present Mrs. Quant was born and reared in England and there made her home until 1890, when she emigrated to the United States. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Quant, Myrtle J., whose birth occurred on the 31st of August, 1903.

Mr. Quant belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic and he is also a member of Pendleton Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F. In politics he is a stanch republican and since living here has served on the school board and he also acted as deputy sheriff for two years. He is one of the older citizens of the town in the development and upbuilding of which he has materially assisted, as he is a public-spirited, progressive man, who is always willing to cooperate in advancing the welfare of the community.

DALTON BIGGS, circuit judge for the district comprising Malheur, Harney and Grant counties, was elected to the bench in November, 1910, and his record as a judge has been in harmony with his record as a lawyer and citizen—distinguished by his fidelity and by a masterful grasp of every problem presented for solution. He was born in Louisiana, Pike county, Missouri, December 18, 1874. The family is of Welsh origin and their ancestry is traced down from Davis Biggs, of Kentucky, through William Biggs, of Pike county, Missouri, and John D. Biggs, of Ralls county, Missouri, to James D. Biggs, father of Dalton Biggs. James D. Biggs lived in Ralls county and wedded Lucy Cooper Hatch, a native of Georgetown, Kentucky. She was a daughter of Samuel Hatch. David Biggs, the first American ancestor of whom we have authentic record, was a clergyman and at an early date removed from Kentucky to Missouri, where he made his home. His son, William Biggs, became a farmer and one of the leading men in his district. He held various offices, serving at one time as a member of the state legislature and afterward as state senator. His agricultural interests were extensive and his business affairs as well as his political prominence made him a leading citizen of the community in which he lived. He met an accidental death when fifty-six years of age. John D. Biggs, the grandfather of Judge Biggs, also engaged in farming and took an active part in politics. He, too, was a member of the state legislature and likewise served as county judge. During the Civil war he served as a colonel in the home militia and he lived to a ripe old age. James D. Biggs, the father, was a graduate of Georgetown College of Kentucky and also of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, which was then located at Greenville, North Carolina, but is now at Louisville, Kentucky. He was pastor of several churches and occupied the pulpit at Springfield, Missouri, for some time. He was also pastor of the Kirkwood Missouri church and for fifteen years was in charge of the first church at Bowling Green, Missouri. He died at the age of sixty-five years, having been severely injured in a railroad wreck near Columbus, Ohio, when returning from the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. His wife was a daughter of Samuel Hatch, a banker of Georgetown, Kentucky. The Hatch family was very prominent in Kentucky and Missouri in anti-bellum days.

Judge Biggs, the third of seven children, acquired his education in private schools and in the college at Louisiana, Missouri, in which he remained until thirteen years of age, when he entered Pike College at Bowling Green, being graduated therefrom with the class of 1893. He afterward took up the study of law in the office and under the direction of George W. Emerson, of Bowling Green, who was then prosecuting attorney of the county and is now one of the leading attorneys of Arkansas. After completing his course and being admitted to the bar he became a partner of his former preceptor and acted as deputy prosecuting attorney until September, 1900, when he removed to Burns, Oregon. There he formed a partnership with his brother, J. W. Biggs, which association was maintained until June, 1906, when Judge Biggs established his home in Ontario, Oregon. In November, 1910, he was elected circuit judge of the district comprising Malheur, Harney and Grant counties. He has a clean record and stands high in public opinion because of his fidelity to duty and his superior qualifications for office. His decisions are strictly fair and impartial, being based upon the law in the points at issue.

On the 28th of December, 1899, Judge Biggs was united in marriage to Miss Phoebe L. Lawry, a native of Bowling Green, Missouri, and a daughter of W. P. Lawry, who for forty years was principal of the public schools of that city. Judge and Mrs. Biggs are the parents of six children, namely: Lucille, James D., William M., Hugh L., Annabelle and Paul. The Judge is well known to the membership of the Masonic lodge and the Knights of Pythias, of both of which he is a worthy exemplar. He holds to high standards in his profession, recognizing the fact that it must ever be the safeguard of the rights and principles of the people. He is a constant student of the fundamental principles of the law and is daily becoming more and more familiar with precedent.

RAPHAEL RAYMOND, who is now living retired in Pendleton, was for many years identified with the agricultural development of Umatilla county, his efforts in this direction proving so lucrative that he succeeded in acquiring sixteen hundred acres of valuable land. This is all well improved and under high cultivation and annually yields an income that is more than sufficient for the needs of Mr. Raymond and his family. He is a native of Canada, his birth having occurred on the 16th of June, 1855, and is a son of Gabriel and Truda Raymond. The parents passed their entire lives in Canada, the father's death there occurring in 1895, and that of the mother in 1905. Their family numbered eleven children eight of whom are still living, three being residents of the Dakotas, while four have always made their home in Canada.

The school days of Raphael Raymond were terminated at the age of fourteen years, when he laid aside his text-books to become a wage earner. Not being qualified at that time to assume the duties of any particular occupation he worked as a day laborer in the vicinity of his home. A few months later he crossed the border into the United States, locating in the state of New York, but he only remained there a brief period, however, then went to Massachusetts. There for two years he was employed in a brick yard and at the expiration of that time he went back to his old home, but soon returned to Massachusetts, where he passed the summer. In 1873 he became a resident of Carson City, Nevada, being employed in the mines at that point during the succeeding four years. His next removal was to the Pacific coast, where he settled in the fall of 1877, his first place of residence being the city of Portland. He had come here with the expectation of acquiring land, however, and a few months later came to Umatilla county and filed on some government land. He placed some improvements upon this and subsequently sold it and during the Indian excitement in the spring of 1878 entered the employment of the government, continuing in their service during the summer. In the autumn following, he returned to Umatilla county and bought one hundred and sixty acres of railroad land northwest of Athena upon which he located. Later he extended the boundaries of his ranch by filing on a quarter section of land adjoining, devoting his entire time and attention to the further improvement of his holdings until the spring of 1880. He then invested in two teams of horses and went to work on the narrow gauge railroad, at that time in course of construction. By this means he acquired ready money to extend the improvements on his property, where he spent the winter and the next spring again resumed his work on the railroad. He continued to thus divide his time during the winter and summer months until the road was within fifteen miles of Spokane Falls, when he gave up his teaming and gave his entire attention to the operation of his ranch. The close application and unceasing energy of Mr. Raymond brought him corresponding returns and as the years passed he added to his possessions until he acquired sixteen hundred acres of good, tillable land. This he brought under high cultivation and made thereon extensive improvements, making it one of the most valuable properties in the community. A man of progressive and practical ideas, he installed on his ranch as his circumstances warranted such modern appliances and conveniences as are essential in attaining the best and quickest results at the minimum expenditure of time and labor. He was actively engaged in the operation of his ranch until 1905, when he came to Pendleton and purchased the fine residence property on Water street now occupied by himself and family, and has ever since been living retired.

In the achievement of his success Mr. Raymond has been materially aided by the capable supervision and administration of Mrs. Raymond in the household affairs. She was in her maidenhood Miss Adaline May Sutherland. She is a native of Kansas, born in 1869, a daughter of David and Louisa Adelia (Balcom) Sutherland. The father was a native of Canada, his birth occurring in November, 1817, while the mother was born in the state of New York, her natal day being in August, 1831. In his early manhood he came to the United States and when the Civil war broke out enlisted in Company K, First Illinois Volunteer Infantry and went to the front. The long marches and hardships incident to camp life told on his health, however and he was subsequently discharged on account of disability and returned home. Together with his wife and family, in 1869 he went to Kansas and there Mrs. Sutherland passed away in 1870. But he was living in Boise, Idaho, at the time of his death. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland, but three are deceased. When she was a child of eight years Mrs. Raymond accompanied her father and the other members of the family across the plains to Oregon. She remembers the journey, which occupied four months. Upon their arrival in Oregon her father settled in Umatilla county and here she has ever since lived. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond as follows: Bessie Naline, who was born on the 18th of June, 1885, and is the wife of George E. Rees, now living on her father's ranch; Jessie L., who was born August 23, 1887, and is the wife of C. C. Conner, of this county; Bertha D., who was born on the 29th of August, 1890, and died October 21, 1892; Helen J., who was born September 17, 1896, and is now attending high school; and Raphael R., whose birth occurred on the 16th of October, 1906.

The family affiliate with the Presbyterian church, in which the parents hold membership. They likewise belong to the order of United Artisans and he is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Farmers Educational Cooperative Union of America. In matters politic his views coincide with the principles of the republican party, to whose candidates he accords his support, but he has never held any public office save that of school director. Mr. Raymond is a representative of the type of men, who invariably win the respect of those with whom they come in contact owing to their unceasing energy and determination of purpose which gives them the power that commands recognition. He is in every sense of the word self-made, as he began for himself at an age when the average lad is little more than earning his own spending money, and has forged his way ahead until he is now numbered among the prosperous and substantial citizens of the county. During the long period of his residence here he has ever manifested the highest qualities of citizenship, while in business transactions he is found to be thoroughly reliable and trustworthy.

CASPER BECKER, who resides five miles west of Gervais, was born in Switzerland, November 26, 1843, his parents being Jacob and Barbara (Witenweiler) Becker, who came to the United States and settled in Green county, Wisconsin, when Casper Becker was a child of three years. This was their home until they came west in 1877, travelling by rail from Chicago to Sacramento in eleven days and by steamer from San Francisco to Portland in five days. Mr. Becker remained in Portland four years and then was employed in a warehouse in Fairfield for four years, leaving there to reside on the one hundred acre farm he had purchased five miles from the town. This was his home for the four years previous to his removal to the property upon which he has lived for the last sixteen years.

At the age of eighteen years Casper Becker entered upon his career as an agriculturist and four years later enlisted in the Forty-sixth Infantry of Wisconsin, in General Thomas' command of General Grant's army, but because of illness he was incapacitated for active duty and nine months after his enlistment he was discharged. Returning home, he again took up his agricultural pursuits, his wife having managed the farm during his absence, and at the present time the farm of three hundred acres upon which he resides is evidence of the diligent labor which has been expended upon it and of the ability of its manager. All of the stock upon the farm is owned by Mr. Becker. He also owns four lots and a house in Newberg.

In 1862 Mr. Becker was married to Anna Schindler, whose birth occurred in Switzerland, September 1, 1844, she being the youngest of ten children. David Schindler, the eldest brother, deceased, was county clerk in California for sixteen years and was the owner of a large farm. Gabriel Schindler, deceased, was in the furniture business in Portland and was Swiss consul for Oregon, Washington and Idaho for several years prior to his death, in 1908. William and Henry, both deceased, resided in New Orleans, Louisiana. Casper, Mary, Barbara and Elizabeth are deceased. Barbara, who is the wife of D. E. Durst, resides in California. At the age of four years Mrs. Becker came to America with her parents and settled in Green county, Wisconsin, this being her home until her marriage, fifteen years later. To Mr. and Mrs. Becker fifteen children were born, nine of whom are living and six deceased. Those living are J. J., Mary Keene, Charles, Lydia Keene, Anna, Edwin, Chester, Catherine and George. Those that passed away are Anna Mary, Anna Barbara, Edwin, Lydia and two who died in infancy.

In politics Mr. Becker is a democrat, and in religious faith, a Lutheran. He has not been an office seeker and held no offices except that of school director, having little time to spare from his regular duties, but he is interested in all that tends to improve the moral and social conditions of his community and is especially interested in schools. As an agriculturist Mr. Becker has been energetic and diligent and the property which he cultivates has been made highly productive, his principal crops being wheat, oats and general farm products, and in addition to this he raises horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. Mr. Becker has labored diligently for the home and comforts he now enjoys and his success shows that his methods have been well selected and carefully executed. In his community he is regarded not only as an able agriculturist but also as a citizen of the conscientious and broad-minded type.

JOSEPH PALMER, who is living retired in La Grande, was born October 5, 1837, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, a son of Robert H. and Hannah (Palmer) Palmer, The father, Robert H. Palmer, who was a son of Joseph Palmer, was born in Delaware county in 1812, was reared in the faith of the Friends church and was a worthy representative of that society. In politics he was a republican and held many county offices in his native state. He died in 1901, at the age of eighty-nine, and his wife passed away May 11, 1910, at the advanced age of ninety-seven years.

Joseph Palmer received his education in the district schools of Pennsylvania and after putting aside his text-books began to learn the carpenter's trade, in which occupation he served as an apprentice for two years. In 1857 the family removed to Iowa, where he followed his trade until August, 1858. In that year, while the Mormon war was in progress, he drove a government team to Salt Lake City but returned the same winter. In the spring of 1859 he started for Denver, Colorado, but changed his plans and five months later arrived at Yreka, California, and engaged in quartz mining. In 1862 he set out for the Solomon River mines but reaching the placer mines, or the Granite Creek mines, at John Day, Oregon, remained there until 1863, and was very successful. In the fall of that year he returned to Iowa, going by steamer from Portland to the Isthmus of Panama, thence to Baltimore and Philadelphia and then on to Iowa. In the spring he started back to Oregon, arriving in the Grande Ronde valley on July 4, 1864. He preempted a quarter section of land, which is the present site of La Grande, and began farming. Later he sold his tract in portions to various people and took up the sawmill business. After two years he bought a meat market, which he managed for fifteen years and during the same time he engaged in feeding and shipping cattle. In 1906 he again took up mining, buying and operating a mine on Eagle mountain. He also owned and operated the electric light plant at La Grande for a few years but about 1904 he gave up active work and has since lived retired.

MR. AND MRS. CASPER BECKER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

In 1874 Mr. Palmer was united in marriage with Miss Ellen D. Allen, who was born at Barnesville, Ohio, and died at La Grande in 1886, at the age of forty-two years. In 1889 he was again married, his second union being with Miss Fannie Smiley, of Maine, who died one year later, leaving one child, Joseph, who lived only nine months. In 1897 his third union took place with Miss Sally A. Thatcher, a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania. In politics Mr. Palmer is a republican and has served in former times as a member of the city council. Fraternally he has been connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows since 1867 and has filled all the chairs in the local lodge. He is also a member of La Grande Lodge, No. 433, B. P. O. E. Since his youthful days Mr. Palmer has had varied experiences which have well fitted him for the duties of life. In business he has always held to a high standard and as a citizen he has been progressive and loyal.

W. B. HINKLE, who has a responsible position as chief engineer of the Western Land & Irrigation Company, was born in Barren county, Kentucky, December 28, 1878, his parents being George W. and Iantha Frances (Phelps) Hinkle. To them five children were born: C. P., who is a resident of Lewiston, Idaho; M. G., deceased, who was a physician of Seattle; J. T., who is mentioned elsewhere in this work; W. B., the subject of this review; and A. C., who is residing in Portland.

At the age of four years W. B. Hinkle was brought to Oregon by his parents. They located at Pendleton and in the public schools of that town he acquired his elementary education. When he was fourteen years of age he removed to Grangeville, Idaho county, Idaho, where he attended the high school. Subsequently he accepted a position in the office of the county auditor and recorder. He was thus employed for three years before he entered St. Mary's College at Oakland, California, and completed the four years' course in civil engineering which that institution offers. He graduated in June, 1906, and at once accepted a position with the engineering force of the Southern Pacific Railway Company. He was in charge of one of the parties on the first survey of the Natron-Klamath Falls cut-off through southern Oregon. Subsequently he came to Umatilla county and was employed as engineer for the Hinkle Ditch Company. He laid out several lines which have since been constructed for the Hinkle Ditch Company before it was taken over by the Western Land & Irrigation Company. In the autumn of 1907 he entered the Nevada mines but the following year he removed to California, where he was employed as engineer for the E. Clemons Horst Company of San Francisco. He remained in that position for two years but at the end of that time returned to Oregon and accepted the position which he is now occupying with the Western Land & Irrigation Company. During the summer of 1911 he was appointed city engineer for Hermiston and he drew up the plans for the water system to be installed during the following year. Because of the possibilities which he considered it offered as an investment he purchased a tract of irrigated land on Butter creek.

W. B. Hinkle was married, August 23, 1911, to Miss Minnie Elizabeth Naylor, of Athena, Oregon. He gives his support to the republican party and fraternally is a member of the Masons and the Knights of Pythias. His position as engineer makes it imperative that he keep in touch not only with the advance made in the engineering profession but also with the trend of the agricultural development of the region. He has displayed the energy and resolute will which are indispensable factors of success and has made good use of every opportunity which presented itself along progressive lines to aid him in his business career.

DAVID LINN, one of Oregon's honored pioneers was born October 28, 1826 near Cambridge, in Guernsey county, Ohio, and there acquired a common school education. At the age of fourteen years he started to earn his own living, learning and following the carpenter's and cabinet maker's trades. He was thus employed until 1851, when he crossed the plains to Oregon, arriving in Portland in September. He made his way up the Willamette river to Oregon City and was there employed at his trades for a short time. He afterward went to Jacksonville in the Rogue river valley and later to Yreka, California, where he engaged in mining for a time. In making that trip he packed his provisions on a horse and walked across the Siskiyou. In 1852 he returned to Jacksonville and for a short time was engaged in the hay business. He was in the Big Bar encounter on Rogue river, the first fight of any consequence with the Indians in the Rogue river valley. He also participated in the fight with the Indians on Evans creek in 1852, being a member of an independent company under command of Captain Hardy Eliff. They were at Willow Springs, near Jacksonville, where the people had assembled during the Indian outbreak of that time and Mr. Linn thus became closely associated with the early military history of the state which had to do with the subjugation of the red race. He was, moreover, regarded as a prominent and influential citizen of his community in other connections. In 1854 he was appointed county treasurer to succeed Dr. Cleveland and was elected every term, thereafter, until 1862. He was then out of office for two years but in 1864 was again chosen to that position and served for another term of two years. He served in the council for a long period and was for many years president of that body. During that time he had to carry the funds of the territory and the state, following the admission of Oregon to the Union, to Salem on horseback. In the meantime Mr. Linn had become connected with commercial pursuits at Jacksonville, at first dealing in hay, as previously stated, and later turning his attention to carpentering. He also built fanning mills for cleaning grain and rockers for use by the miners. He likewise turned his attention to the manufacture of furniture and further extended the scope of his business to include general contracting and building. At first he did all the work of his furniture factory by hand but later operated machines by the use of horse power. He was closely associated with the early industrial development of his part of the state and in 1858 he returned to his Ohio home and purchased a steam sawmill which he brought to Jacksonville in 1860, shipping it first to New York, thence around Cape Horn to San Francisco, from which point it was transferred to Scottsburg near the mouth of the Umpqua river and on to Jacksonville by team. This was one of the first steam sawmills brought to Oregon and it was an important feature in the development of the community, drawing its patronage from a wide territory. Mr. Linn operated his sawmill and also manufactured furniture for a considerable period and also did contracting and building throughout the valley. He built all of the mills of this part of the state in his day. In later years he had a fruit dryer and evaporator and thus handled fruits, being the owner of a large farm which constituted one of the divers elements of his many sided business affairs. In 1863 he obtained the subcontract for building Fort Klamath and took a sawmill to that district in order to get out the lumber. In 1869 in company with a party of others from Jacksonville and Fort Klamath, he built a boat in sections which was to go on the shore of the lake and on this the party visited the island in Crater lake and were, undoubtedly, the first white men to explore that lake. Mr. Linn continued in the manufacture of lumber products until his plant was destroyed by fire in 1888. He afterward conducted a furniture business and cultivated his farm until about 1888 when he retired. No name is more closely identified with every movement in the industrial development of southern Oregon than that of David Linn, who was the pioneer of many enterprises that have been of essential value in the development and upbuilding of the state.

On the 31st of August, 1860, David Linn was united in marriage to Miss Ann Sophia Hoffman, a daughter of William and Caroline Barbara (Schafer) Hoffman. Mrs. Linn was born in Indiana in 1842 and died in August, 1907. By her marriage she had become the mother of seven children: Corinne, who is living in Jacksonville, Oregon; Margaret, whose home is in Los Angeles, California; William, deceased; Fletcher, a resident of Portland; G. D., living in Eugene; Mary, the wife of L. J. Gay, of Seattle; and James, deceased. Mr. Linn not only figured conspicuously and honorably as one of the builders and promoters of Oregon along industrial and commercial lines, but also took an active part in the work of the Masonic fraternity and was one of the organizers of both the lodge and Royal Arch Chapter of Masons at Jacksonville. His death occurred May 16, 1912.

FLETCHER LINN, whose name introduces this record, was born in Jacksonville, Oregon, November 10, 1866. He was provided with liberal educational advantages, supplementing a public-school course by study in the University of Oregon, from which he was graduated A. B., while later the degree of A. M. was conferred upon him. At the end of his college days he engaged in the furniture business at Eugene, succeeding Jeremiah Reams and conducting the business that is now owned by the firm of Bissell and Barker. After six years he sold out to J. W. Kays and in 1896 came to Portland, since which time he has been identified with the Oregon Furniture Manufacturing Company which was organized in 1867 and is now the oldest company in the field of furniture manufacturing on the Pacific coast. In 1900 Mr. Linn was elected secretary of the company which had been incorporated in 1874. In 1902 he was chosen to the presidency and is still acting in that capacity. At that time the wholesale and retail branches of the business, which had previously been conducted, were discontinued and the energies of the officers and men were concentrated upon the manufacture of furniture and its sale on the market. Today the company has its traveling men who cover the entire Pacific coast and the trade is very extensive. Their present factory was built in 1903 and at the present time a carload of furniture is turned out daily through the efforts of two hundred men who are in their employ. The business is one of the most important productive industries of Portland and Fletcher Linn now stands at the head of this enterprise. That he is regarded as one of the leading and prominent business men of the Rose City is indicated in the fact that for three years he was chosen president of the Manufacturers' Association.

Mr. Linn was married in 1892 to Miss Louise M. Sawyers, a daughter of Colonel James A. Sawyers, who served with the rank of colonel in the Mexican war and also in frontier service. Mrs. Linn was born in Sioux City, Iowa, and like her husband, has gained a large circle of warm friends in Portland. In politics Mr. Linn is a republican and while living in Eugene served for two years as a member of the city council. For two years he was trustee of the Chamber of Commerce in Portland and is in hearty sympathy with its plans and purposes for the upbuilding of the city. He is a man of keen discrimination and sound judgment and his executive ability and excellent management have brought to the concern with which he has been connected during recent years, a large degree of success. The attainment of wealth, however, is not the ultimate end and aim of his life. He displays a laudable ambition to advance in the business way and desires that measure of prosperity which is the legitimate reward of all earnest and honorable endeavor and yet he does not allow business affairs to exclude his cooperation with public spirited activities or with movements for the moral progress of his city. His interest in the latter is tangibly manifested in his service as a director of the Young Men's Christian Association and as one of the elders of the First Presbyterian church. Since his father came to the state more than six decades ago the name of Linn has figured prominently and honorably on the pages of Oregon's history and the record of Fletcher Linn constitutes a creditable chapter in an untarnished family record.

FRANK T. BYRD, who for more than fifteen years has been engaged in general farming and the feeding and raising of stock in Umatilla county, is the owner of a highly improved ranch of thirteen hundred acres in the vicinity of Pilot Rock, where he and his family reside. He is a native of this county, his birth having occurred on the 9th of July, 1871. His parents, Daniel and Maria (Alexander) Byrd, were born, reared and married in Wisconsin. There they resided until 1852, when they crossed the plains with ox teams to Oregon, settling in the vicinity of Corvallis, where the father filed on a donation claim. After engaging in the cultivation of his ranch for some years he disposed of it and removed to Steilacoom, Washington Territory, and engaged in the mercantile business. He continued in this for some time with very good success, but subsequently deciding that he preferred other lines of business activity, he sold his store and came to Umatilla county. As but a small portion of the timber had been cut in this vicinity at that time, Mr. Byrd quickly recognized the opportunities to be afforded in the lumber business and erected the first sawmill ever built in the county, which he operated until his death in 1875. He is still survived by the mother, however, who has attained the venerable age of seventy eight years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Byrd numbered eleven children, five of whom are still living.

Practically the entire life of Frank T. Byrd has been passed in this county, where he is widely known and is recognized as an unusually capable business man. He received his education in the common schools, remaining at home until he had attained his majority. In 1892, he started out to carve a career for himself and as he had never learned a trade and was entirely dependent upon his own resources he sought employment on a ranch, this being the only line of work with which he was at all familiar. He continued to follow this occupation for four years, and as he was thrifty and industrious he managed to accumulate enough money during that time to begin for himself on a small scale. Withdrawing from the service of others, in 1896 he came to the place where he is now living and began general farming and stock-raising. His four years' practical experience well qualified him for this undertaking and, meeting with success, he was later able to extend the boundaries of his ranch until he now owns thirteen hundred acres of land. This is almost entirely devoted to the raising of grain and pasturage, as Mr. Byrd is an extensive feeder of stock, annually shipping from three to four carloads of steers. He is a man of progressive ideas, and realizing that quality is a greater factor of success in any enterprise than quantity, he breeds a high class grade of stock and receives the highest prices in the market. His ranch is fully equipped with all modern facilities and is kept in excellent condition, Mr. Byrd giving his personal supervision to everything about the place.

On the 9th of October, 1909, Mr. Byrd completed his arrangements for a home by his marriage to Miss Carrie L. Heacock, of Multnomah county, a daughter of Daniel and Nettie (Davis) Heacock. Mrs. Byrd, as well as her parents, is a native of Ohio, where the father passed away. The family continued to reside in the Buckeye state until 1903, when the mother and children removed to Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Byrd have two children: Lorena May, whose birth occurred on the 21st of October, 1910; and Arlene, born February 20, 1912.

Mr. Byrd is affiliated with Alta Lodge, No. 165, I. O. O. F. at Pilot Rock and in matters politic he is a republican. He has never prominently participated in local political affairs, not being an aspirant to public office, but for some time he served as a member of the school board. For many years he has persistently and industriously applied himself to the achievement of success and he is now recognized as one of the representative stockmen and agriculturists of his community. His prosperity is entirely attributable to his individual efforts and therefore carries with it a greater degree of personal gratification as well as public commendation.

H. B. REES, who for the past five years has been discharging the duties of deputy postmaster in Pendleton, was born in Des Moines, Iowa, on the 1st of February, 1875. He is a son of Daniel and Ruth (Ward) Rees, both natives of Wales, whence they emigrated to the United States, locating in Iowa. There the father passed away in 1885 and the mother subsequently removed with her family to Salt Lake, where she continued to live until her death in 1906. Twelve children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Rees, nine of whom are still living.

As both the boyhood and youth of H. B. Rees were passed in a city, he was given the advantages of a good high-school education, after which he pursued a course in a business college, thus well qualifying himself for the practical duties of life. He remained at home with his mother until he had attained the age of twenty-three years, when he started out for himself. During the first six years he was engaged in the express business but withdrew from this at the end of that time to take a position in a grocery in Pendleton. He resigned this at the end of a year to assume the duties of assistant postmaster, with which position he has ever since been identified. As he is a man of gracious and accommodating manner who is universally courteous, he is well adapted for the office he is now holding.

In June, 1902, Mr. Rees was united in marriage to Miss Evelyn Starkweather. She is one of the five children born unto Robert and Theresa (Clark) Starkweather, both natives of Illinois, whence they removed during the pioneer days to Oregon, where the father passed away in 1883 but the mother is still living. Two sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rees: William H., whose natal day was the 25th of April, 1904; and David E., whose birth occurred February 15, 1909.

The family affiliate with the Presbyterian church, in which Mrs. Rees holds membership and fraternally he is identified with Pendleton Lodge, No. 4, K. P. He votes the republican ticket. During the period of his residence in Pendleton, Mr. Rees has won the reputation of being thoroughly straight-forward and reliable in his business methods and he has also manifested most excellent traits of citizenship, as he is always interested in the general welfare of the community and renders such assistance as is in his power in forwarding every progressive movement.

GEORGE AYRE is one of the influential citizens of Marshfield, where he is now living a retired life, devoting his attention closely to the care of his real-estate holdings and other business enterprises in which he is interested in Marshfield. He was born in England in 1854 and is the son of George and Elizabeth (Allen) Ayre. The father was a native of England and the mother, who was of Scotch-Irish extraction, was a cousin of Allen Pinkerton, the noted founder of the Pinkerton Detective Ageney. To Mr. and Mrs. Ayre sixteen children were born, only three of whom lived to attain mature years, namely: James, whose death occurred in Pennsylvania in 1910; John, who is the proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel at Atlantic City; and George, of this review. The father was a member of a family of nineteen children. In 1869 he emigrated to the United States and settled in Pennsylvania and in that state followed the occupation of shipbuilding until the time of his death, which occurred in 1891, the mother having passed away in 1887.

George Ayre was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools. He started in life for himself at the age of eleven years, his first employment being that of cabin boy on an ocean vessel, and in that occupation he continued for a period of four years, during which time the ship on which he sailed made all of the prineipal ports of the oceident and orient. He then returned to England, where he remained but a short time and again went to sea for one year and returned to England. In April, 1869, he emigrated to Americea and on reaching the shores of the new world he found employment with a shipbuilding company, with which he continued for a brief period and then engaged in the occupation of a coal miner and continued to follow that business for three years. In 1876 he returned to England, where he was engaged in shipbuilding as an employe of his wife's father. He remained in England for five months, after which he returned to Americea, arriving in this country at the time when the coal-mining industry was suffering from the prolonged strike of the operatives. He immediately returned to England, where he enlisted in the English army and was mustered into the North Yorkshire Artillery as musician. He continued with his eommand for four years, during which time he devoted himself largely to the study of music. Immediately following his diseharge from the British army he returned to America and joined Battery A of the First United States Artillery Band and continued in that relation for five succeeding years. In Mareh, 1889, he removed to Coos county, settling in Marshfield, and at once engaged as an employe in the Libby mills. He later retired from that employment and established himself in Marshfield as a teacher of instrumental and vocal music, to which he devoted his undivided attention until 1909, when he retired from active business life. For many years he was the owner of a valuable piece of property located at the corner of Commercial avenue and Third street, whieh he later sold at a figure much advanced above its original cost to him. He is the owner of three valuable residenee properties located on Elrod avenue and two others which he rents.

In 1889 Mr. Ayre was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Ayre, a native of England, and to them seven children were born, four of whom died in infancy. Those living are Elizabeth, Edith and Robert, all of whom reside at home with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Ayre also have an adopted daughter, Eliza, who is now employed as Bookkeeper for the Home Telephone Company and resides at home.

Mr. Ayre is a member of the prohibition party but is very liberal in the use of his franchise. He has never sought political preferment of any kind, ehoosing rather to give his attention to his private business interests. He is a member of the Baptist church of Marshfield. He belongs to the Foresters of America and for twenty-five years was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His home is located at No. 635 Ninth street, South. George Ayre is one of the valued and esteemed citizens of Coos county and he has been identified with the building up of various business enterprises of his portion of the state. As a teacher of instrumental and vocal music he has contributed very materially to the intellectual and social refinement of the people of his county and state.

GEORGE AYRE

GEORGE W. KENEDY is a farmer who is prominent not only in business life but also in fraternal, educational and church circles of Baker. He was born in Adams county, Illinois, on the 10th of December, 1844, his parents being William and Sarah (Richardson) Kenedy, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. At the early year of about 1824, Mr. and Mrs. Kenedy removed to Illinois, where they lived until 1852, when, becoming convinced that the far west held out to them advantages and opportunities not to be realized where they were then living, they crossed the plains with ox teams and settled in Polk county, Oregon, where they took up a government claim, upon which they lived until 1872. Both passed away near Spokane, Washington. They were the parents of eleven children, seven of whom survive.

George W. Kenedy received a common-school education and remained with his parents until twenty-five years of age, when he was married and established a home of his own. Having learned the blacksmith's and machinist's trades, he followed those occupations until 1893, when he came to Baker county, Oregon, and engaged in mining. He worked in this occupation for a number of years and then bought a ranch of thirty acres, which he cleared and brought under a high state of cultivation. His farm property is now worth about three hundred dollars an acre.

In 1869 Mr. Kenedy was married to Miss Malinda Johnson, a native of Yamhill county, Oregon, and a daughter of Melchior and Delilah (Ware) Johnson, natives of Missouri. They crossed the plains in 1847 and settled in Yamhill county, Oregon, where they took up six hundred and forty acres of government land near Amity. Subsequently they took up their abode in Douglas county, Oregon, there spending the remainder of their lives. Their family numbered eleven children. Unto our subject and his wife were born four daughters, as follows: Effie M., who is now the wife of Harry Mullen; Grace N., who is deceased; Bertha, the wife of James McKee, of Everett, Washington; and Mary Eva, who has passed away.

In his political affiliation Mr. Kenedy is a republican. He has been very much interested in educational matters and has served as school director in his district for nine years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being affiliated with the lodge at Baker City, in which he has occupied all of the chairs. Both he and his wife belong to the Eastern Star. They are also devoted and consistent members of the Christian church, Mr. Kenedy serving as one of its elders and also as president of the church board. The active life which George W. Kenedy has lived in this community and the deep interest which he has shown in church and religious matters have served to make him well known to a very large proportion of the people of Baker City and county. Interested as he is, and has been, in the less material though perhaps really the more important things of life, he has been among the most valued citizens of the county. His business ability is also well recognized, as is shown in the highly improved and fertile condition of his farm, where he is practicing the most intensive methods of cultivation known to modern agriculture.

ASH PIERCE, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits at Hermiston, was born April 29, 1852, his parents being Ashman and Elizabeth (Mansfield) Pierce, both of whom are of English lineage. The grandparents came to New England at an early date and both Mr. and Mrs. Ashman Pierce were born in Maine. Ashman Pierce was a sea captain, thus following the activity in which many of his ancestors had engaged. He died when his son Ash was but a child and the mother's death occurred in 1900, when she was over seventy years of age. She had three children: Anna, who is the wife of W. G. Smith, of Portland, Maine; Ash, the subject of this review; and David, whose death occurred in Joplin, Missouri, in 1908.

Ash Pierce spent the early years of his life in Maine attending school and assisting his mother in the activities in which she engaged while supporting her family. At the age of fourteen years he removed to Buchanan, Michigan, with his mother and an uncle and they there resided until 1870. When Ash Pierce started to earn his own livelihood he determined upon the jeweler's trade as a life work. He was thus employed for about two years before removing to Laporte, Indiana, where he again worked at his trade for one year. In 1872 he went to Pennsylvania and subsequently to Connecticut, where he finished learning his trade. After returning to Pennsylvania for a short time he removed to Salt Lake City in 1882. Shortly afterward he went to Montana and thence to Washington, stopping en route at Seattle for a short time. In Everett he first entered business independently. After four years, however, he gave up the jewelry business and purchased a farm on Whilby Island, which he operated for three years. After going to La Grande, where he remained for a short time, he came to Hermiston in March, 1908, and opened a jewelry shop. He conducted this enterprise while he was preparing to move to his farm. He owns a forty-acre desert claim six miles north of Hermiston. This is situated in the belt which is under irrigation and consequently is valuable land. He purchased his home in Hermiston soon after his arrival here and his is one of the most attractive residences in the city.

In 1900 Ash Pierce was married, in Everett, Washington, to Mrs. Etta Pulley, a native of Wisconsin and a daughter of John V. Woodhouse, the inventor of the Woodhouse Water Back, which is universally used in lead and zinc smelting plants. His death occurred about fifteen years ago at Anacortes, Washington. Mr. Pierce has served as city treasurer for two years, being the third man elected to that office in Hermiston. During his residence in the county he has ever been upright and honorable and the number of his friends is almost coextensive with the circle of his acquaintance. His sterling traits of character, as well as his business ability, have won high regard which is uniformly tendered him.

PAUL D. SHACKELFORD. One of the early settlers of Washington county, to whom belongs the distinction of being a veteran of the Yakima Indian war, is Paul D. Shackelford, who during the fifty-eight years of his residence in the state has endured practically all of the hardships and privations that devolve upon a pioneer settler. He was born in Casey county, Kentucky, on the 26th of March, 1826, and is a son of Nicholas H. and Nancy (Elder) Shackelford. The parents spent their entire lives in the Blue Grass state, the mother passing away when seventy-five years old and the father attaining the remarkable age of four score and ten. To Mr. and Mrs. Shackelford there were born nine children, as follows: Emily, James and William, who were both killed in the Civil war; Paul D., our subject; Frances, who is living in Kansas; Priscilla and Jewell, both of whom are deceased; Annie, who is living in Evansville, Indiana; and John, who died in infancy.

Reared at home Paul D. Shackelford acquired a common-school education and began to make his own way in the world upon attaining his majority. When little more than a boy he began operating a distillery, continuing in this occupation for fourteen years. In 1852 he removed to Missouri and the following spring he started across the plains to Oregon, arriving in Oregon City, on the 29th of September, 1853. He worked out until 1854, in which year he filed on a donation claim of one hundred and sixty acres in Washington county, that he operated until 1880, when he disposed of it. Soon thereafter he entered a homestead in Tillamook county, that he proved up on, but eight years later he sold it and returned to Washington county, locating in the vicinity of Beaverton, where he is now living retired. He still owns an eighty-acre tract of fine timber land in Tillamook county, that has not been cleared. When Mr. Shackelford first located in Oregon, the state was but sparsely settled and there were great stretches of unbroken prairie and extensive forests infested by the Indians, who constantly menaced the white settlers. It is hardly possible for the traveler of today to realize, that where there are now thriving towns provided with all of the comforts of modern civilization, less than fifty years ago the red men were hunting wild game. The prairies have been converted into fertile grain fields and bearing orchards, while the Indian's wigwam has given way to the modern residence of the white man. Mr. Shackelford has been an interested observer of this transformation and relates many thrilling experiences of those early days. On the 13th of October, 1855, he enlisted with many of the other settlers and spent two hundred and eight days in striving to suppress the uprising among the Yakimas, returning to his claim in the spring of 1856. They encountered many hardships at this time, often being without rations, their only food being horse-flesh and such wild roots and berries as they found in the woods. Although he was so fortunate as never to be wounded, he was permanently crippled by having his horse fall upon him, an affliction, which handicapped him during his entire active career.

On the 20th of November, 1856, Mr. Shackelford consummated his plans for a home by his marriage to Miss Elizabeth Barnes. She was born in Pennsylvania, on the 1st of April, 1839, and is a daughter of John C. and Amanda (Moore) Barnes. The parents were also natives of the Keystone state, the father's birth having occurred on May 20, 1808, and that of the mother on the 20th of February, 1815. They continued to make their home in Pennsylvania until 1849, when they removed to Iowa, where they lived for four years, before crossing the plains to Oregon. Upon their arrival in this state they first located in Yamhill county, but in 1854 they came to Washington county. Here the father filed on a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres that he operated until his death in December, 1870. He was long survived by his widow, who passed away on the 18th of March, 1903. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, of whom Mrs. Shackelford is the second in order of birth, the others being as follows: Sarah, who was born on the 14th of September, 1836; Jemima, whose birth occurred on Christmas day, 1842; Amanda J., who was born on April 14, 1845; and Flora, whose birth occurred on the 8th of September, 1848. All of the family with the exception of Mrs. Shackelford reside in Yamhill county. Mr. and Mrs. Shackelford were the parents of two sons and one daughter. William T., who was born on the 29th of December, 1858, has never married and is engaged in the operation of thirty acres of land, that formerly comprised a part of the donation claim of his maternal grandfather, twenty acres of which he has brought under high cultivation. Mary C., who was born on the 20th of November, 1860, engaged in teaching for a time, having been identified with both the public and mission schools, but she subsequently withdrew from this occupation and went into the millinery business in Portland, Oregon. She is now living in Lincoln county, Oregon. Herbert D., the youngest member of the family was born on the 5th of April, 1863, and is now residing in this county.

The family all hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church and Mr. Shackelford votes the republican ticket, but he has never prominently participated in political affairs. He is widely known in the county, being one of the very few survivors of the early pioneer period, both he and his wife belonging to that estimable band, who through their courage and fortitude made possible the advent of a newer civilization, thus promoting the development of the country and enabling Oregon to become recognized as one of the foremost states of the west.

JOHN J. PEEBLER, who formerly engaged extensively in farming and in the cattle business, is now living retired at La Grande. His birth occurred in Jefferson county, Iowa, July 25, 1836, and he is a son of Samuel C. and Dorothy (Fouch) Peebler. The father, a native of Illinois, was married in that state and later removed to Iowa, settling on a farm near Fairfield, where he died when his son John J. was only six years old. He and his wife were greatly attached to each other and her death occurred the day following her husband's. They were both buried in the same grave. In their family were seven children: Mrs. Eliza West, now deceased; William H., who died at Milo, Iowa, in 1912; John J., of this review; Mrs. Mary Lyonberger, of Phoenix, Arizona, who died in April, 1912; Michael, a resident of Fairfield, Iowa; Samuel C., of Batavia, Iowa; and Mrs. Syran Glenn, who died in Boise, Idaho, in 1910.

After the death of his parents John J. Peebler went to live with an uncle, David Peebler, and at the age of sixteen years crossed the plains with his uncle's family in a train of between forty and fifty wagons, being six months on the way and seeing no house from the time he left Council Bluffs, Iowa, until he arrived at The Dalles, Oregon, in 1853. He remained under his uncle's roof until he was nineteen years of age, when he went to Yreka, California, and engaged in mining with a fair degree of success. He then went to the Umpqua valley, where he remained until 1863, at which time he came to the Grande Ronde valley, locating on a farm of three hundred and twenty acres of state land in the Ladd canyon. He resided on this place for forty-five years, being engaged in farming and stock-raising. He still owns this homestead and it is now managed by his two sons, Henry and Adolph. In 1908 he removed to La Grande, where he now lives retired.

In 1859 Mr. Peebler was united in marriage with Miss Amelia Antoinette Grubb, who was born in Grundy county, Missouri, December 8, 1843, and was the youngest daughter of Thompson Grubb. Her father crossed the plains with his family in 1850, settling in the Willamette valley, where he remained until he passed away, at the age of seventy four, his wife having died when the daughter, Mrs. Peebler, was only a little child. Mr. and Mrs. Peebler have become the parents of seven children: one who died in infancy; Olive, now Mrs. John Green, of Emmett, Idaho; Richard of Grande Ronde valley; Mrs. Mary Allen, now deceased; Henry, living on his father's homestead; Clara, now Mrs. Allen, of La Grande; and Adolph, on the family homestead.

Mr. Peebler, having passed so many years in Oregon, has been a witness of the development of the country from the primitive to its present state. In 1863, when he first settled in the Grande Ronde valley, the nearest source of supplies was Walla Walla, Washington, and with a plow and a dozen chickens which he purchased from there, he started farming. He and his wife early learned the makeshifts of the pioneer and often used browned wheat as a substitute for coffee. An active and progressive man, Mr. Peebler steadily advanced and is now able to spend his last days in ease and plenty, surrounded by many friends and acquaintances. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic order.

J. E. SCHROEDER is the popular and accomplished assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Condon, in which city he has his residence. His birth occurred in St. Louis county, Missouri, on the 13th of October, 1879, his parents being William and Anna (Schott) Schroeder, the former a native of Germany and the latter of St. Louis, Missouri. William Schroeder was reared in his native country, where he learned the trade of a cigarmaker, and while yet a young man he emigrated to the United States and located in the city of St. Louis, where he worked for some time as a journeyman cigarmaker. He was a young man of correct habits, frugal and ambitious, giving prompt attention to his business, and by the practice of rigid economy during three short years he saved sufficient means with which to establish himself in business. With this end in view he removed to Manchester, Missouri, where he at once engaged in the manufacture of cigars. He prospered in this venture from the first and became prominently identified with the industry. He remained in business in Manchester until his death, which occurred in 1904. At the time of his demise he was succeeded in business by his son, August. Mrs. Anna Schroeder, his widow, is still living, residing at the old home in Manchester, Missouri.

J. E. Schroeder was reared at home, acquiring an education in the public schools. In 1899, at the age of twenty, he emigrated to Oregon, locating in Gilliam county. He found employment at once on a stock ranch, where he remained for one year, after which he engaged in the stock business for himself, using the unoccupied near-by government lands as range for his cattle. While engaged in this enterprise he secured a position as manager for the Kerr Gifford Company's warehouses at Clem and Mikkalo in Gilliam county. While thus occupied he employed help to care for his cattle. Mr. Schroeder by inheritance possessing a temperament distinguished for diligence in practical business matters, found time while attending to the interests of his employers and also to his own affairs, to attend Holmes Business College in Portland, from which institution he was graduated in 1906. In June, 1909, he resigned his position with the warehouse company to accept the proffered position of assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Condon—a position he still fills to the entire satisfaction of the institution and its patrons. He owns two hundred acres of land on Hay creek, to which he is giving his attention. His fraternal relations are with Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 95, F. & A. M., and Endymion Lodge, No. 66, K. P. In politics he is a republican. Mr. Schroeder is still an unmarried man. He is one of the representative citizens of Gilliam county, in which his name is a synonym for integrity and success in business.

WILLIAM I. BONEBRAKE is the owner of two hundred and fifteen acres constituting a fine dairy ranch about six miles from Marshfield, Oregon. He was born in Iowa, November 10, 1854, his parents being William F. and Fannie (Mellinger) Bonebrake, both of whom were natives of Indiana. They were married, however, in Ohio, where they resided for a few years and then removed to Iowa, where the father purchased land and engaged in farming until 1862, when he came to Oregon by ox teams and settled at Roseburg where he resided until 1867. He then returned by wagon to Iowa, but in 1869 again came to Oregon, driving a mule team across the plains and over the mountains to the northwest. Once more he took up his abode in Roseburg but soon afterward removed to Coos bay and settled on Catching's Inlet where he secured one hundred and sixty acres of land upon which he made his home for three years. He then again located in Roseburg where he lived until 1874, after which he spent the succeeding nine years in Coos bay. In 1883 he became a resident of the state of Washington, where he remained until his death in November, 1887. His wife surviving him, passed away on January 12, 1890, at Goldendale, Washington. Throughout his entire life the father was engaged in preaching as a minister of the United Brethren church. In the family were nine children of whom six are still living: Mrs. Hargan, who makes her home near Portland; Noah, who is living near Oregon City; Mrs. Elmore, of Colusa, California; Allen, a practicing physician of Goldendale, Washington; Mrs. Quinn, of Hoquiam, Washington; and William I.

The last named was but seven years of age when the father brought him to the northwest. He again crossed the plains on two other occasions when the family returned to Iowa, and again when they came to Oregon. They had the usual experiences that befell the travelers who made the long journey by wagon to the Pacific coast. They had some encounters with the Indians and met with many hardships while on the way, but at length the long distance was covered and the family was pleasantly established in a home on the Pacific coast.

William I. Bonebrake remained with his parents until his marriage in 1880, when he began farming in Coos county, since which time he has followed that occupation, making dairying a special feature of his business. At the present writing he is the owner of two hundred and fifteen acres of good land constituting one of the fine dairy ranches of this part of the state. It is conveniently located about six miles from Marshfield and there as well as in other districts he finds a ready sale for his dairy products.

Mr. Bonebrake wedded Miss Elma Cutlip, who was born in Oregon, and is a daughter of Abraham and Hariett (Cook) Cutlip, who were natives of Virginia and Ohio, respectively. They settled in Iowa for a time and crossed the plains to Oregon with ox teams in 1852. They settled in the Willamette valley where they resided until 1865, when they took up their abode on the Coos river in Coos county, where both passed away, the mother dying in 1895, while the father's death occurred in 1910. In their family were seven children, of whom one died in infancy, the others being: Mark, living in Coos county; Mrs. Bonebrake; Mrs. Matilda Smith, who resides on a farm on the Coos river; Sherman, whose home is on Daniel's creek in Coos county; Leonard, who died at the age of twenty years; and Roselia, who married Henry La Cross, and died at the age of eighteen years. Mr. and Mrs. Bonebrake have become the parents of four children: H. R., who was born October 24, 1881, and died on August 9, 1896; S. Maude, who was born February 14, 1883, and is the wife of William Conklin of Coos county; Elsie, who was born on September 25, 1885, and is the wife of E. R. Stevens, of Chippewa Lake, Michigan; and Mabel C., who was born September 11, 1888, and is the wife of C. S. Masters of Coos county.

Mr. Bonebrake votes with the republican party, but takes no active part in politics. He belongs to the Grange at Marshfield and he and his wife hold membership in the United Brethren church. They are interested in all that pertains to the moral progress of the community and Mr. Bonebrake has also contributed to its material development through the careful conduct of his business interests. He carries on dairying along modern and scientific lines and a ready sale of his products on the market has assured him of continuous success.

GEORGE JACOB BOWMAN. The city of Baker was organized in 1874 and George J. Bowman became one of its first councilmen, in which position he continued for four consecutive terms and was made president of the council. He thus did much in shaping the policy and molding the destiny of the city and he has ever been an advocate of all that pertains to its upbuilding and substantial improvement. He was born in Wilgartswiesen, Germany, January 1, 1829, and is therefore eighty-three years of age—one of the venerable and honored residents of Baker county. His parents, Michael and Elizabeth (Braun) Bowman were natives of Germany.

WILLIAM I. BONEBRAKE AND FAMILY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

The father, born in 1787 died in 1838 when his son George was nine years of age, having been accidentally killed by a heavy timber falling upon him. His wife, who was born in 1788, died about 1862. In their family were five children, Phillip, Elizabeth, David, Margaret and George J., but the last named is the only one now living.

As passenger on a westward bound sailing vessel, the New Brunswick, George J. Bowman came to the United States, landing at New Orleans on the 7th of December, 1818. He worked through the succeeding winter at the wagon and carriage-making trade and then proceeded northward to Louisville, Kentucky, where he again engaged in a similar business. He afterward located in Woodford county, Kentucky, where he continued until 1852 when he went to Missouri, living in that state until 1873. About that time he heard and heeded the call of the west and came to the present site of Baker, although the city was not incorporated until the following year. Here he purchased the property where the Grand Hotel now stands and there engaged in the wagon-making business which he followed until 1878. He was thus associated with industrial interests from an early day in the city's history and has made for himself a creditable position in business circles and has also gained a gratifying return for his labor.

It has not been in business lines alone, however, that Mr. Bowman has left his impress for good upon the welfare of the city. His service as city councilman for four consecutive terms beginning in 1874, has been an element of value in establishing the city upon a foundation that has ever promoted its stability. He favored many movements for the general good and instituted plans and projects which have been beneficial elements as the years have gone by. He was one of the first school directors and organized the school of that day into three departments.

On the 9th of November, 1854, Mr. Bowman was married to Miss Elizabeth Tweedie, a daughter of David and Rachel (Bennett) Tweedie, who were natives of Scotland and England respectively. The mother was brought to America when she was two years of age. Her father introduced the first glass manufacturing into this country. Mrs. Tweedie was born February 6, 1817, and died February 11, 1894. Mr. Tweedie was born January 11, 1809, and passed away in Missouri January 15, 1894. In their family were eleven children of whom six are yet living: Mrs. Bowman; John, of Missouri; Esther, who is the widow of Joseph H. Wilson and lives in Missouri; Ella, the wife of John Long of the same state; Thomas of Missouri; and Lee, the wife of Oliver Long, also living in that state. The five who have passed away are William, Margaret, David Gordon, Jane and Mary. Mrs. Bowman was born August 13, 1835, and by her marriage has become the mother of nine children. Kate May, born November 28, 1855, was married in 1876 to Frank Palmer of Baker, and they have two children, Eula, the wife of John Warren of Baker and the mother of one son, Leland; and George, who married Miss Jean Scott and has two children, George and Chester Scott Palmer. George Joel Bowman, the second of the family, died in Missouri when but four months old. Mary E., born July 25, 1860, is the wife of J. P. Halley of Richland, Oregon, and they have three children, Maude; Eleanor, who married Sol Mason and has three children, Edna, Floyd and one still in infancy; and Earl, who married Miss Nova Lloyd James Wiles Bowman, born February 28, 1863, died in Boise, Idaho. Frank Bowman of Baker, who was born January 17, 1866, married Miss Alice Shelton of Baker and has three children, Lloyd who married Miss Anna Westlake; Ross and Eva. John T. Bowman, born October 3, 1868 married Mollie Poe, who died leaving two children, Lester and Ethel, of Wallowa county. He chose for a second wife Miss Ella Bloom. Robert B. Bowman, born April 24, 1872, married Miss Belle Willett, Beulah Bowman, born April 12, 1876, is the wife of W. H. Stocker of Portland. Myrtle Bowman, born May 7, 1880, is the wife of J. W. Campbell of Richland, Oregon, and their three children are Dorothy, Elizabeth and George.

Mr. Bowman has long been a democrat in his political views, and the offices which he has held have found in him a faithful and worthy incumbent. Both he and his wife are devoted and loyal members of the Presbyterian church in which he has served as an elder for fifty eight years. His life has indeed been an upright and honorable one actuated by lofty principles, and now in the evening of his days he can look back over the past without regret and forward to the future without fear. He has not only done his duty but has extended a helping hand wherever aid was needed being always ready to assist a fellow traveler upon life's journey.

MRS. ELIZA E. KELLY is a native of the state of Iowa and a daughter of James and Mary Hutton, both of whom were born in Illinois. In an early day they went to Iowa with some of the venturesome pioneers and after remaining there for some time decided to remove to the far west, which held out to them superior advantages. In 1861 they crossed the plains with ox teams, locating in Baker county, Oregon, where the father engaged in agricultural pursuits. Here the parents resided during the remainder of their lives. In their family were ten children.

Eliza E. Hutton was married in 1870 to D. Kelly and to them five children were born: Agnes, who is the wife of William Douglas, of Portland; Anna, now Mrs. L. Hackett, of Baker county; W. C., also a resident of Baker county; James V.; and Eugene, at home. Mrs. Kelly is one of those women in whom was born the true spirit of courage and a generous amount of perseverance. She is living on her own farm, comprising twenty-five acres of fertile soil, well improved, which is devoted to dairying. She is one of the pioneer settlers of Baker county and by her labors and example has become a well known figure in the life of the community. Her religious affiliation is with the Second Baptist church of Baker, where she is a faithful member and a regular attendant. Mrs. Kelly was born and reared in an atmosphere of activity. Her parents, being among the early settlers of the middle west, were familiar with those hardships which were the rule and not the exception with the pioneers of that section. This spirit of the settlers of the middle west served the Hutton family well in their long, tedious passage across the plains with ox teams and in their earlier experiences in Baker county, the family having settled here at a very early date. Mrs. Kelly is known to a large number of people in Baker City and among them she is respected as well as admired for her business qualifications as well as for the excellent social qualities which she possesses.

COLONEL ALFRED COLLIS. Among the men now living in Cascade Locks who fought for the Union in the Civil war, Colonel Alfred Collis stands prominent. His birth occurred in Virginia on the 20th of May, 1840, his parents being H. and Margaret (Taylor) Collis, both natives and lifelong residents of Virginia. To them eleven children were born, two of whom survive: Alfred, who is the subject of this review; and Susan J., who is the widow of James Props of Virginia.

After spending some time in the district schools and also assisting his father in various ways Alfred Collis left home at the age of eighteen years to start upon an independent career. He was variously employed until 1864, when he enlisted in Company E of the Coles Cavalry and served until the close of the war when he was discharged in Baltimore, Maryland. At one time during his service he was shot through the right foot in an engagement at Charleston, but so great was his enthusiasm for the cause for which he was fighting that as soon as he was physically able to do so he reentered active service. His life as a soldier made a deep impression upon him and appealed to him so strongly that in 1879 he again enlisted in the army, this time joining the regular army at Omaha, Nebraska, and serving for nine years before his discharge on the 28th of June, 1888, in Arizona. He had given his best years to military service and when he came to Cascade Locks in 1890 he was given a position by the government as lock tender. For several years he continued this work, and since his retirement from active life has been residing in Cascade Locks.

In 1868 Colonel Collis was married to Miss Mary Dietz, whose birth occurred in Virginia and who passed away eighteen months after their marriage.

Colonel Collis has been for many years a stanch advocate of the republican party but he has never aspired to official honors. He is a worthy member of the Cascade Locks Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, and at the gatherings of his comrades he renews his associations of long years ago on the battle field, and recognizes that the greatest honor of his life was his service under the stars and stripes. Colonel Collis has ever been a respected and patriotic citizen and an energetic man who has contributed to the extent of his ability to any undertaking which might have benefited by his support.

JOHN P. MYERS, M. D. Among the prosperous men of Union may be mentioned Dr. John P. Myers, who since settling here in 1906 has built up a splendid practice. He was born in Mercer county, Missouri, February 9, 1874, a son of A. F. and Anna Elizabeth Myers, the father a native of Ohio and the mother of Illinois. The wedding of the parents was celebrated in the latter state and shortly afterward they removed to Missouri, where their children were born. In 1884 the family removed to Washington and settled in the town of Woodland, where they remained until 1889, when they came to Oregon, locating in Clatskanie, where the parents are still making their home. In their family were three sons and two daughters, of whom John P. Myers was the fourth in order of birth.

Dr. Myers was given a high-school education at Clatskanie, after which he took a one year's course at the State Normal School. He then entered the University of Michigan, where he spent two years, then, going to Chicago, became a student in the Northwestern University, from which he was graduated with the class of 1904, winning the degree of M. D. He immediately returned to his home town and began the practice of his profession, continuing there until 1906, and in March of that year he settled in Union, where he has since been engaged in the active work of his profession, having built up a large practice.

Dr. Myers was married, August 14, 1904, to Miss Dora Liggett, of Independence, Oregon. Her father passed away when she was an infant, and her mother died two years later. Dr. Myers is an active member of the Union Commercial Club and takes a deep interest in all of the affairs affecting the community. He is a good citizen and is also regarded as an able physician. He has an extensive acquaintance throughout the county and his popularity and practice are continuously growing.

C. J. GULLIFORD, who is interested in a hardware business in Echo, is also the owner of a livery barn there and sixty-five acres of alfalfa land, a portion of which is within the city limits. He is a prominent resident of the city and has been for about five years a member of the municipal council. He was born in Lane county, Oregon, August 28, 1863, the son of John and Julia Gulliford, the former a native of Illinois and the latter of Missouri. The parents emigrated to Oregon about 1855 and settled in Lane county, where they resided for about ten years. The father then removed to Umatilla county, taking up a government claim there, upon which he resided until his death, in 1899. In his earlier years in Oregon he had participated in the Indian war. The mother is still living and makes her home in Pendleton. They were the parents of nine children, three of whom are deceased. The six children who are now living are all residents of Umatilla county.

C. J. Gulliford was given a common-school education and remained at home with his parents until he attained the age of twenty-five years. At that age he engaged in the stock business in Umatilla county, an occupation which he followed for fifteen years. He then came to Echo, where he operated a farm adjoining the city limits. He is now engaged in the hardware business in partnership with Ed Hammer and also is the owner of a livery barn in Echo. He likewise owns sixty-five acres of alfalfa land, part of which adjoins the town, the remainder lying inside the corporation.

In 1896 Mr. Gulliford was married to Miss Kate McCullough, of Umatilla county, a daughter of J. M. and Lucinda (Johnson) McCullough. The parents came to this county at an early date and the father took part in the Indian war. His death occurred in 1908 but the mother is still living. Mr. and Mrs. Gulliford are the parents of three children, Clephane, Daphne and Myrtle, all at home.

In his fraternal connections Mr. Gulliford is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Echo and also belongs to the Woodmen and Maccabees lodges. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he has been prominently connected with city politics for many years, having been a member of the city council for about five years. Both he and his wife are members of the Baptist church and are actively engaged in the work of that denomination. Mr. Gulliford is one of the popular business men of Echo, where he is widely known and universally respected. He is a progressive, enthusiastic citizen and readily lends his assistance to every good work calculated to advance the interests of his city and community. He is active in business affairs, giving the closest attention to all details and having long since won an enviable reputation for integrity and general efficiency.

JOHN PETERSON, who now lives retired in Helix, was born in Norway, October 15, 1840, a son of Peter and Andrea Benson, both of whom were also natives of Norway, the father born in 1799 and the mother in 1802. Both died in their native land, the mother having reached the advanced age of ninety-six years. In their family were two children.

John Peterson received a common-school education and remained in Norway until he was twenty-eight years of age. On coming to America, he settled at Omaha, Nebraska, where he resided five years. Subsequently he went to Rock Springs, Wyoming, but after five years removed to Walla Walla, Washington, residing there one year. In 1878 he came to Umatilla county, Oregon, where he purchased a farm, residing thereon for four years. He then sold that place and bought one hundred and sixty acres but after five years sold the second farm and purchased six hundred and forty acres, which he still owns and which is highly improved. In 1906 he retired from active work and purchased a residence in Helix, where he has since resided.

In Omaha, Nebraska, in 1872, Mr. Peterson wedded Miss Anna Ingerman, who is a native of Norway, and came to America on the same ship with her future husband. To them have been born eleven children: Paul J., now a resident of Wyoming; Emma, the wife of Ed Oliver, of Umatilla county; Henry, of the same county; Agnes, the wife of Ed Brotherton, of Walla Walla, Washington; Clara, the wife of Charles Young, of Wyoming; Anna, who married Addison Stockman, of Umatilla county; John L. and Jens C., both of that county; Fred, now in South America; Ellen, the wife of Frank Rame, of Umatilla county; and one deceased.

Mr. Peterson gives his allegiance to the republican party, and he has always been greatly interested in the cause of education, having now served for over twenty years as school director. Both he and Mrs. Peterson are faithful members of the Christian church and they are most highly honored and valued citizens in the county where they have chosen to make their home.

NELSON SCHOONOVER. Success—the thing for which all men strive—is not so difficult of attainment but means continuous effort day by day and a neglect of no opportunity. A life of continuous industry has brought to Nelson Schoonover his present position as a substantial citizen, whose well directed labors in former years now make it possible for him to live in comfortable retirement. One of Pennsylvania's native sons, he was born in Bushkill, Pike county, on the 24th of May, 1838, and was the third in order of birth in a family of nine children. His father, Samuel G. Schoonover, whose entire life was passed in Pennsylvania, came of sturdy Holland stock. The mother, whose maiden name was Mary Heller, was a native of Germany.

In the city of his nativity Nelson Schoonover spent the period of his boyhood and youth, and there acquired his education in the public schools. In 1858, when a youth of twenty years, he went to Fort Wayne, Indiana, and there remained for six years, during which time he was engaged at milling. When the Civil war broke out he decided to put aside personal interests and enlist for service in support of the Union but his employers insisted on his remaining at his work and he continued with them until 1864, in which year he joined a number of others who were preparing to go to the mines of Idaho. They made the trip as far as Marshalltown, Iowa, by train and there purchased mule teams with which they continued their journey. Although they were worried many times by the attitude of the Indians they never suffered any actual attack, but a party who had camped on the banks of the Platte river directly opposite them were molested by the red men and two of their number killed. Without serious interruption Mr. Schoonover and his companions completed their journey, arriving at Idaho City late in the fall of the year, but he did not tarry long at that place, continuing his journey to Walla Walla, Washington, where in the spring of 1865 he took up the business of freighting. After being thus engaged for some time he came to Union county, Oregon, locating on property which is now incorporated within the city limits of Union. Shortly after his arrival here he entered the employ of Crawford, Slocum & Company, large freighting contractors, who made a specialty of government work, and he continued in their employ for a number of years, at the same time carrying on agricultural pursuits. After the railroad had been built through this district he gave his entire time to his farming and stock-raising interests and in that line he met with success. He manifested the same spirit of industry and enterprise which had characterized his labors while in the employ of others, with the result that his efforts were rewarded with a degree of prosperity that eventually made it possible for him to withdraw from active life, and he retired from business with a handsome competence. He now resides in Union in an attractive home which he owns and which is popular among his many friends for its hospitality.

On the 19th of March, 1876, Mr. Schoonover was married to Miss Anna Morrison, a native of Scotland, and both occupy a high place in the social circles in which they move. Mr. Schoonover is public-spirited to a high degree and is now serving as a member of the city council, in which capacity he does all in his power to further the interests of the community in which he resides. He has made a number of trips to various points in the United States, and is a man of genial disposition, whose companionship is enjoyed by a large number of warm personal friends.

WILLIAM BROWN, who was engaged in farming near Baker, was born March 1, 1841, in the northern part of Ireland, a son of James F. and Eliza Brown, who were farming people and immigrated to the United States when their son William was but three years of age. They first settled in Illinois and afterward removed to Wisconsin, spending their remaining days near Mineral Point. In their family were six sons and six daughters, the latter all yet living, while three of the sons also survive.

William Brown was educated in the common schools of Lost Grove, Wisconsin, and when twenty-one years of age made the long and arduous journey across the plains, arriving in Auburn, Oregon, in 1862. He there worked on the Auburn canal, which was then being constructed to furnish water to the mining camps of Auburn and vicinity. In 1863 he went to Idaho and engaged in mining until 1865, when he returned to Baker county. Here he took up the work of farming, which he followed until 1867, and during that period he purchased the John R. McLain claim, near Pocahontas, about eight miles northwest of Baker City. He afterward homesteaded the property, improved it and converted it into a valuable tract of land, on which he carried on farming and stock-raising, also hauling wood to Baker City. For six years during the summer months he supplied the Mormon basin and mining camps of that vicinity with wood, blocks for flumes and charcoal for blacksmith work. He was engaged in this work during the time of the Bannock Indian war of 1878. These mining camps were often largely occupied by Chinamen who were engaged in mining and no man ever stood higher in the estimation of these miners than Mr. Brown, because of his fair and honorable dealing. Whatever he said was with them "allrightee." If he gave his word that he was furnishing one or one hundred cords of wood, so many hundred blocks or so many bushels of charcoal, they knew that was the amount supplied. He was familiarly called Billie Brown through the mining camps and all knew that his word was to be relied upon under every condition. They recognized that he gave value received for the gold dust weighed out to pay the bills, amounting to thousands of dollars each year. He was very successful in his work and won a substantial profit on his business there. He continued to reside on the old homestead farm to the time of his death, which occurred on the 14th of March, 1902.

On the 30th of January, 1869, at Pocahontas, Oregon, Mr. Brown was married to Miss Julia A. Dean, a daughter of Owen R. Dean. Her father was a Kentuckian and her mother was from Indiana. After their marriage they removed to Missouri, where they lived for about fifteen years, and in 1865 they crossed the plains with teams to Oregon, settling near Pocahontas. There they followed mining and farming until 1869, at which time they removed to Texas, where they resided until called to their final rest. They were the parents of thirteen children, eight sons and five daughters, of whom four sons are yet living and one daughter, Mrs. Brown, who by her marriage became the mother of one son and three daughters. The eldest, Lillie M., born May 1, 1870, is the wife of W. B. Landreth, and they have one son and one daughter. Harvey K., born August 17, 1871, married Dorcas A. Montgomery and has a daughter, Ethel M. Abbey M., born September 30, 1876, is the wife of W. A. Payton, and they have two sons and two daughters. Ella M., the wife of M. S. Osborne has two sons and two daughters. All reside in Baker county. At his death Mr. Brown made no will, leaving all of his property to his family, feeling that they would do right by each other in the matter of disposition, and in this he was not mistaken. The land has since been divided among the children and Mrs. Brown received the old home place—an example of fair and just dealing that might well be followed by many.

At different times Mr. Brown was called to public office by his fellow townsmen who recognized his worth and ability. He served as county commissioner for nearly eight years and died on the 14th of March, 1902, just a few months before the expiration of his term of office. He was also school director for a number of years, the cause of education finding in him a warm friend. In politics, he was a republican, interested in the work and success of the party, but he would not stoop to the practice of putting up money to buy or influence votes. He became his party's candidate for sheriff when the county was largely democratic. His popularity was so great that twenty dollars placed in a certain saloon would have turned votes enough to elect him. He said he did not approve of acquiring office by any such methods although the office at that time paid about ten thousand dollars a year. His only son, Harvey, although a republican, was elected sheriff in 1902 and again in 1904. He made an excellent record in office, cleared up outstanding delinquent taxes closer than any sheriff that had preceded him in Baker county, and he used every opportunity to enforce the law. He was a candidate for the nomination as governor in 1906 and received a very large vote. He was a popular and valued member of the Elks and Knights of Pythias lodges and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, all of Baker. He met death at the hands of an assassin, who placed a bomb at his gate which exploded as he passed through the gate about 10:30 p. m., on the night of September 30, 1907. He passed away on the 1st of October, and his was the largest funeral ever seen in Baker. At one time rewards amounting to fifteen thousand dollars were offered for the arrest and conviction of the assassin but so far no clew to the guilty party has been found. His death was a great loss to the community at large for he was a highly esteemed and valued citizen—a man whose worth was widely acknowledged.

WILLIAM BROWN

The father, William Brown, held membership in the Masonic fraternity, becoming a member of Baker Lodge, No. 47, A. F. & A. M., on March 13, 1873. He was an active worker in the lodge throughout the remainder of his life and was also a great temperance worker, doing all in his power to check the liquor traffic. He was a consistent and faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church for thirty-two years, was long one of its trustees, was superintendent of the Sunday school for a number of years and took an active and helpful part in all lines of church work. Baker county long numbered William Brown among her representative and honored residents.

W. T. EHLE is the genial and hospitable proprietor of the Sumpter Hotel under whose direction this popular hostelry has succeeded in gaining an enviable reputation. He was born in Missouri, November 27, 1873, the son of Robert H. and Mary E. (Lake) Ehle, the former a native of Wisconsin and the latter of Missouri. The father passed away in April, 1911, but the mother survives and is now residing in Oklahoma City. They were the parents of five children, three of whom are still living.

W. T. Ehle was educated in the common and high schools and remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority. Shortly afterward he obtained a civil service appointment in the State Reformatory, a position which he held for six years, and during the time he was thus employed satisfactorily discharged all of the duties devolving upon him. In 1898 he enlisted for military service in the Spanish-American war, joining Company I, of the Fifth Missouri Regiment of Volunteers. He was in this service throughout the war and at its close he returned to Missouri, where he remained for a short time and then set out for Alaska and there entered the employ of the Alaska Mercantile Company. Subsequently he removed to California and later came to Sumpter, where he became proprietor of the Sumpter Hotel.

Mr. Ehle's political allegiance is given to the democratic party. He has never been an office seeker, preferring to give his undivided attention to the hotel which he is so successfully conducting. He is affiliated with the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in which he is an active and valued member. As the manager of the Sumpter Hotel he is favorably known and his reputation as a landlord is justly merited. He takes an active interest in the civic, fraternal and social welfare of Sumpter and his first consideration is always for the interests and comfort of his guests.

WILLIAM H. BOYD has been a resident of Umatilla county since 1891 and a citizen of Echo since 1900. He is one of the leading merchants of Echo, giving strict attention to his business and universal satisfaction to his patrons. He was born in the state of New York on the 23d of November, 1853, his parents being John and Sarah (Hobbs) Boyd, the former a native of Canada and the latter of the Empire state. They were married in New York and there continued to reside until they passed away. They reared a family of seven children, six of whom are still living.

William H. Boyd was reared at home and educated in the public schools. He remained with his parents until he was fifteen years of age, at which time he engaged as a farm laborer and continued in this occupation until he attained his twenty-second year. On reaching his majority and having had some limited experience in self support and personal business affairs, he concluded to go to the far west and at once decided to try his fortune in the Golden state. On reaching California he did not find conditions quite to his liking and after remaining for eight months he removed to Oregon in 1876, settling near Portland. He rented a farm in Yamhill county and engaged in farming for the following six years. He eventually disposed of his agricultural interests and removed to the state of Washington, where he engaged in the stock business until 1891. In that year he sold out and decided to change his location and his business as well. Upon disposing of his property he immediately removed to Umatilla, where he was engaged in merchandising until 1900. He then removed to Echo, where he established himself in a general mercantile business and has met with gratifying success.

In the year 1877 Mr. Boyd was united in marriage to Miss Emma Wright, a native of Yamhill county, Oregon, and a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Wright, who were natives of Missouri and Tennessee respectively. They crossed the plains in 1847 and filed upon a donation claim in Yamhill county, where they established their home and spent their remaining days. Their children were ten in number. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd are the parents of three children, namely: Jessie P., who is the wife of A. C. Armstrong, of Portland, Oregon; Thomas M., who is in the service of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company; and Agnes M., the wife of A. L. Wigle, of Echo.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Boyd has supported the men and measures of the democracy. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to Lodge No. 40 at Umatilla, in which he has filled all of the chairs. His wife is a consistent and faithful member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Boyd is one of the progressive and up-to-date business men of the thriving city of Echo. His store is known throughout the entire county and his patronage is widely distributed throughout that portion of the state. He is among the ready supporters of every measure seeking to advance the best interests of his county and the community in which he lives.

CARL KUPERS, the able and conscientious cashier of the Bank of Helix, was born in Germany, September 30, 1875, and is a son of Claus and Mary Kupers, both of whom were natives of Germany and came to America in 1898. The father was a railroad man and is now drawing a pension from the company by which he was employed. He resides with his son Carl, the mother having passed away in 1909. In their family were eight children, three of whom are yet living: Henry, who makes his home in Germany; Augusta, the wife of August Kupers, of Umatilla county; and Carl, of this review.

The last named received his education in his native country and when but seventeen years of age came to America, locating in Umatilla county, Oregon, where he was employed as a farm hand for three years. Subsequently he purchased a tract of land and began farming for himself. He now owns four hundred and eighty acres of excellent land in this county and nine hundred and sixty acres in Franklin county, all of which is under a high state of cultivation. In 1905 he was one of the organizers of the Bank of Helix and from the start was one of the directors. In 1908 he was elected assistant cashier and in March, 1909, was made cashier, in which capacity he is now so ably serving.

In July, 1908, Mr. Kupers wedded Miss Minnie Ruther, who was born in McLean county, Illinois. Her parents William and Annine Ruther, were natives of Germany and came to America in 1883. In 1907 they settled in Umatilla county, on the farm where the mother is yet living, the father having passed away in 1908. In their family were seven children. Mrs. Kupers died in April, 1909, and her early death was deeply regretted by all who knew her. She was a faithful member of the Lutheran church and her life was carefully guided by its teachings. Mr. Kupers is an earnest worker in the same church and has many friends and acquaintances in Helix. He has been extremely successful both in farming and banking, and he has found here in America the opportunities which are always open to the energetic and ambitious man and through these he has steadily worked his way upward.

EDWIN T. BEERS. Incontrovertible proof of Edwin T. Beers' commendable position in Grand Army circles is given by the fact that since January, 1895, he has served continuously as commander of Joe Hooker Post. He has since January, 1897, been secretary of the Fraternal Union of America. His popularity is based upon substantial qualities of manhood and citizenship, the latter finding expression in his service as a soldier in the Civil war and in his devotion to many elements of public progress since that day. Mr. Beers went to the front from Iowa, his native state. His birth occurred in Mount Pleasant on the 10th of May, 1846. His parents were Elijah and Mary Ann Beers, who afforded their son good educational opportunities so that he supplemented his public-school course in Mount Pleasant by study in the Iowa Wesleyan University. Ere the time for his graduation had arrived, however, hostilities between the north and south had been inaugurated and he laid aside his text-books in order to join the army and aid in defense of the stars and stripes. It was on the 2d of October, 1863, that he enlisted as a member of Company I, Ninth Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, remaining with that command until mustered out at Little Rock, Arkansas, March 15, 1866. Nine days later he was honorably discharged at Davenport, Iowa, and resumed the pursuits of civil life.

In early manhood Mr. Beers learned the brick mason's trade which he long followed, becoming an excellent workman. He eventually took up contract work on his own account. In June, 1876, he came to Oregon and made his way direct to Baker City, where he has since resided. As the years have passed he has prospered in his undertakings and he is now the owner of nine residence properties from which he derives a gratifying income. All through his residence here he has taken an active interest in everything pertaining to the development of the community and to its upbuilding along substantial lines. He served as city councilman from the second ward for six years, dating from November, 1904, to December 1, 1910, and exercised his official prerogatives in support of various progressive measures. He has always voted with the democratic party, his study of the questions and issues of the day leading him to give earnest support to that organization. Appreciative of his worth and ability as commanding officer, his comrades have year by year elected him to the highest position in Joe Hooker Post, No. 20, G. A. R., his services as commander covering seventeen years. For fifteen years he has been at the head of the Fraternal Union of America. On the 12th of July, 1875, he joined the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and for twenty-two years he has been the financial secretary of Baker City Lodge, No. 25.

Edwin T. Beers was married at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, January 12, 1869, to Miss Elizabeth J. Casidy, a daughter of Shadrach and Susan (Scott) Casidy, the father an early settler of Henry county, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Beers have become the parents of three sons and three daughters: William E., forty-one years of age, who married Miss Lee, of Utah; C. R., thirty-nine years of age; Harry E., twenty-one years of age; Mrs. Anna Harthrong; Rose Elizabeth, the wife of Earl A. Wheeler of Caldwell, Idaho; and Margaret, a graduate of the Baker high school, who is at home. Few among the residents of Baker City are more widely known and none more favorably so than Edwin T. Beers, who in his business, social, political and fraternal relations has ever merited and enjoyed the confidence and good-will of the general public.

WILLIAM H. McKINNEY, M. D., who is successfully engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery at Helix, was born in Missouri, January 6, 1883. He is the son of Andrew J. and Mary (Griffin) McKinney, the father a native of Tennessee and the mother of Missouri. At an early date Andrew J. McKinney went to Missouri, where he met and married Mary Griffin. He died in that state in 1906 and his wife, having preceded him by twenty-one years, passed away in 1885. In their family were two children: Ollie, who is the wife of Richard R. Sherman, of Colorado; and William H. of this review.

William H. McKinney grew to manhood in Missouri and there acquired his early education in the public schools. Later he became a student at the University Medical College of Kansas City, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1904. Subsequently he took up the practice of his profession in his native state, where he remained until 1909, when he came to Oregon, settling at Adams, in Umatilla county. One year later he came to Helix where he is now located and where he has built up an extensive and remunerative practice. He has been successful in his investments and owns valuable real estate in Missouri.

In 1902 Dr. McKinney wedded Miss Wimpey, who was a daughter of Thomas H. and Zorna Wimpey, who are now residing on a farm near Condon, Oregon. Mrs. McKinney passed away in 1909, leaving a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who deeply mourned her loss. Dr. McKinney is an advocate of democratic principles, having supported the party since attaining his majority. He is affiliated with Helix Lodge, No. 92, A. F. & A. M.; belongs to Helix Lodge No. 74, I. O. O. F., having filled all the chairs of the same; and is a member of Helix Lodge, No. 74, K. P. Although Dr. McKinney is yet a young man, he is rapidly demonstrating his ability to cope with the intricate problems that continually confront the physician. He is a conscientious practitioner who gives his patients due attention and he keeps in close touch with the advancements and progress that are being made today in the medical world.

SAMUEL A. PURSEL, who has been identified with the industrial activities of Oregon since 1872, is now living comparatively retired in a comfortable home in Union. A great deal of his time has been spent in the sawmill business, although he has been interested in a livery barn and other enterprises. He is a veteran of the Civil war and a citizen of the highest standing. Mr. Pursel was born in West Brownsville, Pennsylvania, April 15, 1840, the son of Morris and Sarah (O'Donnell) Pursel, the former born in Maine, and the latter in Pennsylvania. The grandfather and his family removed to Ohio at a very early day, the father being only four years of age at that time. The family were among the pioneers of that state and the nearest neighbor at the time they settled there resided four miles distant. The people wore buckskin clothing and lived in an extremely primitive way during the early years of the family's residence in the Buckeye state. The father enlisted for service in the War of 1812 but before arriving at the front the war was over and his services were not needed. When a young man he removed to Pennsylvania, settling at Sewickley, and remained there until 1850, when with his family he removed to Iowa, going as far as Muscatine by boat and settling in Johnson county, twelve miles south of Iowa City. There the father engaged in farming and took an active part in the affairs of the locality. He was married twice and became the father of fifteen children, Samuel A. Pursel being the youngest of the first family, which contained eleven children.

The early boyhood of Mr. Pursel was spent in Pennsylvania, he being ten years of age when the family removed to Iowa. He pursued his education in the schools of Pennsylvania and Iowa and remained under the parental roof until October 17, 1861, when he enlisted in the First Iowa Cavalry but before the company joined the regiment the latter was completed and the company was disbanded. On October 17, 1861, he enlisted in Company K of the Fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry under Colonel S. D. Nelson. The company was mustered in at Davenport and after a short time was ordered to Atlanta, Georgia, where it joined Sherman on his march to the sea. The regiment took part in the battle of Mill Creek and was in innumerable skirmishes in various parts of the south. Mr. Pursel's regiment returned at the close of the war by way of Washington and took part in the grand review in that city, thence returning to Davenport, where its members were honorably discharged in August, 1865. Mr. Pursel returned to his Iowa home, where he remained until 1872, being engaged in agricultural pursuits. In that year he migrated to Oregon, going by rail to Kelton and by stage to La Grande. He bought an interest in a sawmill at Perry, then called Stumptown, and was engaged in its operation until the fall of 1877, when he sold his sawmill interests and purchased land ten miles north of Union. He resided in Union and was engaged in various lines of business, at one time being interested in The Sentinel. He engaged in the livery business in Union in partnership with J. T. McComas, under the firm name of McComas & Pursel and was also interested in the horse-breeding business. Later he again became connected with the sawmill business, being one of the members of the firm of Pursel, Welsh & Swackhamer. Mr. Welsh afterward sold his interest and the business was continued under the name of Pursel & Swackhamer. Mr. Pursel later bought Mr. Swackhamer's interest and continued on his own account for three years, when he disposed of the business.

On April 4, 1866, Mr. Pursel was united in marriage to Miss Esther McComas, a native of Tippecanoe county, Indiana, and a daughter of John and Jeannette (Carr) McComas, the former a native of Kentucky, while the latter was born in Adams county, Ohio. The grandfather, James McComas, was a native of Scotland. Mrs. Pursel, who is a woman of education and strong individuality, was engaged in teaching school in Iowa previous to her marriage and since that time has been actively identified with the social and literary activities of the communities in which the family have lived. She is president of the Woman's Club of Union, which is a literary organization, is a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and takes an active part in these societies. Mr. Pursel is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, while Mrs. Pursel is actively associated with its auxiliary, the Woman's Relief Corps. Mr. and Mrs. Pursel have attended several national encampments of the Grand Army of the Republic and are widely and favorably known. Mrs. Pursel possesses decided artistic ability, having executed a number of oil paintings which adorn the Pursel home.

ASVALDUR SIGURDSON, owning and operating a canning factory at Warrenton, is one of the prosperous, respected and representative residents of that town. His birth occurred in Iceland on the 22d of July, 1858, his parents being Sigurd and Gudrun Sigurdson, who were likewise natives of that country. Following the father's demise, the mother came to America with her five children. These are as follows: Asvaldur, of this review; Sigurd, who holds the office of county commissioner in a bailiwick of North Dakota; Anna, the wife of Sigfus Bergmann, who conducts a mercantile establishment in Canada; George B., who is extensively engaged in farming at Edinburg, North Dakota; and Gunnar, of Washburn, North Dakota, who is serving as county judge.

Asvaldur Sigurdson obtained his education in the common schools of his native land and after attaining his majority was connected with railroad work for two years. On the expiration of that period he took up a claim in North Dakota, being one of the pioneer settlers of that state and carrying on general agricultural pursuits there for twelve years. He likewise operated a thresher in North Dakota. Subsequently he removed to Sheridan, Oregon, where he made his home for six years, spending each fall, however, as a thresher in North Dakota. He next became identified with the fishing industry, fishing for salmon in the Columbia river for a year. In 1899 he came to Warrenton and here continued fishing and clam digging for a time. Then he opened the canning factory which he owns at the present time and in the operation of which he has won a gratifying measure of prosperity. He likewise has a commodious and attractive home and is the owner of the launch Eva, as well as another smaller one.

On the 22d of July, 1885, in North Dakota, Mr. Sigurdson was united in marriage to Miss Anna Bjornson, a native of Iceland and a daughter of Fredbjorn and Anna Bjornson, who were likewise born in that country. Coming to the United States, they located in North Dakota and there continued to reside throughout the remainder of their lives, Mr. Bjornson passing away in 1888, while his wife was called to her final rest in 1882. They were the parents of seven children, namely: Fredbjorn, who owns and operates a farm in North Dakota; Mrs. Sigurdson; Arni, living in North Dakota; Magnus, an implement dealer of North Dakota; Paul and Thorlakur, who are residents of Canada; and Margaret, the wife of Halldor Rykjalin, of North Dakota. Unto our subject and his wife were born thirteen children, as follows: Alexander, who pursued a course of study in a business college and is now captain of a launch on the Columbia river; Anna, a high-school graduate who has followed the profession of teaching for some time; Fredbjorn, whose birth occurred on the 19th of August, 1889, and who is captain of the launch Eva on the Columbia river; Sigurd, whose natal day was April 22, 1891, and who is still at home; Gudrun, twin of Sigurd, who died at the age of two years; Gunnar, born December 10, 1892, who has a common-school education; Frances G., born January 14, 1894, who is a grammar-school graduate; William F., whose birth occurred on the 26th of September, 1896, and who has likewise completed a course in the common schools; George Walter, whose natal day was May 22, 1900; Clarence Edwin, born September 14, 1901; Henry E., whose birth occurred on the 1st of May, 1903; Asvaldur, born December 4, 1904; and Robert, who was born on the 1st of April, 1910.

ASVALDUR SIGURDSON AND FAMILY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

Mr. Sigurdson is a republican in politics and served as justice of the peace, town clerk and postmaster at Eyford, North Dakota, holding the last named office under Harrison's administration. He also served as justice of the peace at Warrenton and his decisions have ever been fair and impartial. Fraternally he is identified with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks at Astoria, the Ancient Order of United Workmen of that place and also the Degree of Honor. His religious faith is that of the Lutheran church. In business life he has been well known for his alert and enterprising spirit and his salient qualities and characteristics are such as win an honorable success.

CHARLES HARRISON ERNST, the genial proprietor of the Ernst Restaurant on Main street, Baker City, was born in Portland, Oregon on the 7th of November, 1883. His father, Fred K. Ernst, was born in Hanover, Germany, February 1, 1849, and died May 31, 1910, in this city. He was for many years proprietor of a hotel in this city and his place was a rendezvous for the old pioneers with whom he had been associated for many years. Later he retired from that business and opened a fish and oyster market which he continued until the time of his death. He was a member of the Second Massachusetts Regiment of Infantry during the Civil war and after serving his first term reenlisted in the cavalry. He served one term as a member of the city council of Baker City. His wife, who in her maiden hood was Sarah Frances Stephman, was born in Baker City. In their family were two sons, Charles and Jesse, who at the time of the father's death took charge of the fish and oyster business which they conducted for some time, or until Charles H. Ernst withdrew to enter the restaurant business in which he has since engaged. The enterprise originally established by the father, however, is still conducted by the son Jesse.

Charles H. Ernst acquired his education in the common schools of Baker City, where his youth was spent. After his experience in the fish and oyster business he became, in 1911, the proprietor of a restaurant on Main street, which he conducts under the name of the Ernst Restaurant and which, through his careful management, his warm-hearted ness and genial manner, together at all times with an earnest desire to please his patrons, has developed into a very satisfactory business.

Mr. Ernst was married, on the 15th of January, 1910, to Miss Ethel Moore, a daughter of Dean and Laura Moore. Her father is now deceased but the mother survives and makes her home in this city. Mr. Ernst became a member of the Oregon National Guard and served three years when he resigned, but has since reenlisted and is now identified with that body. Politically he is a republican. His religious faith is that of the Episcopal church and in his fraternal relations he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and Lodge No. 1, F. O. E., of Seattle, Washington. He is numbered among the well known business men of Baker City, where he is universally respected and popular. His connection with the state guard and fraternal circles has widened his acquaintance and popularity and in fact there are few men who are better or more favorably known in this locality than Charles H. Ernst.

CECIL THOMAS GODWIN, a member of the Oregon bar since 1904 and a representative of the legal profession in Baker since 1909, was born in Berlin, Green Lake county, Wisconsin, May 12, 1878, his parents being James E. and Mary Elizabeth Godwin. The former was a son of the Rev. Thomas and Isabella Godwin and was born near Toronto Canada, in the year 1855, while the latter was a daughter of William and Mary Cheesman and was born near the same place in the year 1858. This parentage is of English and Scotch-Irish ancestry; that of the mother is traced directly back to the Mayflower.

Ere the birth of Cecil Thomas Godwin, his parents had removed to Wisconsin and he pursued his education in the public schools of Berlin until graduated from the high school there with the class of 1897. He afterward entered upon the study of law and was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1901 with the Bachelor of Laws degree. His early training had been that of the home farm upon which he remained with his father until twenty-two years of age assisting through the spring, summer and fall months in the work of plowing, planting and harvesting. Following his admission to the bar he sought the opportunities of the far west and since 1904 has been a resident of Oregon. He settled first in Milton, where he remained for five years and in 1909 came to Baker where he has since engaged in the practice of law, securing a large and distinctively representative clientage here.

In Portland, Oregon, on the 4th of September, 1907, Mr. Godwin was married to Miss Mary Inez Phelps, a daughter of D. F. and Ellen Phelps, who were pioneers of this state. Her mother, who in her maidenhood was Miss Wilmot, was brought across the plains from Missouri in an emigrant train when but six weeks old.

Cecil Thomas Godwin is a republican, stanch in his advocacy of the principles of that party and is now its candidate for district attorney of the eighth judicial district. Since 1905 he has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and he belongs also to the Country Club of Baker, the Woodmen of the World and to the Methodist Episcopal church, associations which indicate much of the nature of his interests and his activities aside from the work of his profession.

WILLIAM LYLE ROBERTS, a retired citizen of Haines, Baker county, who has had a successful and useful business career, was born near Kingston, Tennessee, October 17, 1851, a son of F. M. and Margaret (Lyle) Roberts. The parents were both natives of Tennessee but removed in 1856 to Missouri, where they resided for a considerable period. When the Civil war broke out the father enlisted in the Confederate army and in that service was killed in 1863. The mother continued to reside in Missouri until her death, which occurred in 1875. In their family were five children, one of whom is deceased. Those living are: J. F., of Van Buren, Arkansas; Samuel H., of Christian county, Missouri; Elizabeth, the wife of John Key, of Missouri; and William Lyle.

William Lyle Roberts secured such an education as was available in Missouri during his boyhood. On crossing the plains to Oregon he rented a ranch in Baker county for two years and then took up a government homestead of one hundred and sixty acres three miles east of Haines, where he lived for five years, securing in the meanwhile a government patent to this land, which he still owns.

In 1876 Mr. Roberts married Miss Sophronia Byrd, a native of eastern Tennessee. To them eight children were born: Vergil V. and Burns E., both of whom reside in Baker county; Otto O.; Alford M.; Gertrude, the wife of S. C. Barnes; Florence, the wife of Thomas Lefler; Eunice; and Cecil G., at home.

Politically Mr. Roberts gives his allegiance to the democracy and on account of the lively interest which he has shown in politics he has been called upon to serve as justice of the peace for eight years, a position which he still occupies. He has also served on the town board for one term. Fraternally he is a member of Haines Lodge, No. 112, I. O. O. F., having filled nearly all of the chairs in this order and has represented his lodge in the Grand Lodge. Mrs. Roberts is a faithful and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

SAMUEL O. SWACKHAMER. Among the well-to-do and respected citizens of Union who has well performed his part in developing this great state is S. O. Swackhamer, now living retired. He owns eight hundred acres of farming and pasture land and fifty or sixty acres inside the corporate limits of the city. He was born in Warren county, New Jersey, July 25, 1837, a son of Conrad Swackhamer, a native of the same state. The grandfather, Samuel Swackhamer, also of New Jersey, was of German birth. The father and his family removed to Pennsylvania when S. O. Swackhamer was about five years of age and they afterward took up their abode in Illinois. The mother passed away when the subject of this review was about six years old and his father was again married, his second wife dying in 1879.

S. O. Swackhamer pursued his education in the schools of Pennsylvania and Illinois and in 1860 migrated to Colorado, where he engaged in the freighting business, operating between Denver and the Missouri river. This he continued for about eighteen months and after his marriage he returned to Denver, where he spent the winter of 1862-63. On the 11th day of the following May he started for Oregon with ox teams, arriving in La Grande on the 5th of August. His was one of three wagons starting from Denver but the little train was joined at various points by other wagons journeying toward the far west. He was taken sick with the typhoid fever at Burnt river and was brought to La Grande, where he was attended by Dr. Peyton. After his recovery he began freighting from The Dalles to the Grande Ronde valley, residing in The Dalles during that winter, in which city his wife's people were also making their home. He then returned to the Grande Ronde valley, where he continued freighting and also acquired a homestead. He is now the owner of a farm of eight hundred acres on Catherine creek, five miles from Union and has fifty or sixty acres within the city limits, a considerable portion of which he cultivates. A race track and fair grounds were also located on a portion of his land and his home occupies an entire block in the residence section of the city, adjoining the business district.

October 9, 1862, Mr. Swackhamer was united in marriage in Omaha, Nebraska, to Miss Carrie E. Dodge, a native of Montpelier, Vermont, and a daughter of Hiram T. Dodge, who was at one time engaged in the sash and door business in Vermont. His plant was destroyed by fire and he then located in Omaha, continuing in the same business. In 1859 he joined a party going to Pikes Peak for the purpose of gold mining but on reaching that point Mr. Dodge concluded that the gold fields were not what they had been represented and he continued with his party to Oregon, settling in the vicinity of The Dalles, where with a partner he operated a sawmill on Fifteen-Mile creek. To Mr. and Mrs. Swackhamer have been born nine children: Mrs. Clara Nevada Mulholland; Mary Olive, Luther, Alta, Elizabeth and Maud, all of whom died of diphtheria in the spring of 1879; Walter; Arthur, who died of pneumonia in 1884; and Chester. Walter and Chester Swackhamer are both graduates of the high school at Union. The former attended a business college at Portland and later entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Chicago. He will graduate from this institution in 1914. He was married to Miss E. Odell, a granddaughter of Colonel A. G. D. Chapman, who donated a large tract of land to the city of Portland. Chester Swackhamer took a two years' course in the University of Illinois at Urbana and was later graduated from the University of Chicago. He is now a student at Rush Medical College, Chicago, and will graduate in the class of 1913. He is thoroughly conscientious in his work and stands high in all his classes. The mother of these children passed away in November, 1908, and Mr. Swackhamer later married Miss Ellen Finley, of San Diego, California, whose parents were old Illinois friends of the Swackhamer family.

Politically Mr. Swackhamer is a republican and has had a political career worthy of mention. In 1876 he was elected sheriff of Union county and served for two terms, being the first republican elected to the office in Union county. During his tenure of office occurred the Indian outbreak, when the settlers threw up rifle pits in various places and the courthouse in Union was barricaded. While in office he handled many desperate characters, always using the greatest caution, and fortunately he met with no serious mishap. In 1885 through the recommendation of Congressman George and Senator Dolph he was appointed register of the land office by President Arthur. This office he held only eight months, owing to the election of President Cleveland. In 1898 he was appointed receiver of the United States land office by President McKinley, through the influence of Senator George McBride and W. R. Ellis, of Pendleton, and served acceptably in that capacity for about five years. He has also served in the city council of Union and has been one of its leading citizens. He is a Mason of long standing, having served in all the chairs. He was the first high priest of Union Chapter and is a member of Al Kader Temple of the Mystic Shrine of Portland. He is also a member of the Eastern Oregon Commandery, No. 6, of La Grande. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and was lay delegate to the general conference, which convened in New York city in 1888. Mr. Swackhamer is a splendid citizen and has an extremely large number of close personal friends who hold him in the highest esteem. He has a wide acquaintance throughout Union county, his activities having brought him in touch with a very large number of citizens, and he is highly respected by the people of the entire community.

FRANCIS M. HUNSAKER, who was born in Vancouver, Washington, September 15, 1855, is one of the well known farmers of Baker county. He is the son of Bradford and Hannah Maria (Stice) Hunsaker, the former a native of Illinois and the latter of Missouri. The parents crossed the plains with ox teams in 1852 and settled near Vancouver, Washington, where they resided until the spring of 1870, when they removed to Baker county, Oregon, where the mother died in August, 1906. The father, however, survives and at the ripe old age of eighty years is still living in this county. They were the parents of six children, four of whom are now living.

Francis M. Hunsaker remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority, having received a common-school education in the schools of Washington and Oregon. After he became of age he worked in a store as clerk for a year and then took up the business of freighting, which he followed for six years. He then became a carpenter and for eighteen years worked at that trade, when he bought a ranch of forty-four and one-half acres, upon which he now lives. This farm is now a well developed and finely improved property and he owns besides this forty acres, which is an additional source of income.

In 1880 Mr. Hunsaker was married to Miss Frances Sargent, a daughter of I. N. and Hannah Sargent, both of whom were natives of New York. The parents emigrated to Oregon in 1862 and later removed to The Dalles, where both passed away. Mr. and Mrs. Hunsaker are the parents of two sons: Clarence H., who was born September 1, 1881; and Archie E., born September 9, 1884. The mother of these children died in 1900 and on June 5, 1904, Mr. Hunsaker was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Estella (Reel) Boswell, a native of Wyoming and a daughter of Isaac W. and Ellen (Marrs) Reel. The father was a native of Kansas and the mother of Iowa and both are now deceased. By her first marriage Mrs. Hunsaker was the mother of a son, Chester A., and a daughter, Uma U. Boswell. Mr. and Mrs. Hunsaker are the parents of one child, Francis L.

In politics Mr. Hunsaker votes the republican ticket but has never been an office seeker or intensely interested in politics. He and his wife are members of the First Baptist church at Baker City, where they are faithful attendants, influential members and generous in their support. Mr. Hunsaker has long been numbered among the better class of farmers and citizens of Baker county, where he is known to a large circle of friends and neighbors. He is one of those men by the efforts of whom Baker county has been brought to its present state of agricultural development, and the Hunsaker family move in the best circles in the county.

JOHN LAPSLY YANTIS. An honorable, upright life has established John Lapsly Yantis in an enviable position in public regard in the Sumpter valley of Oregon, where he is following the occupation of farming. He was born in Trenton, Missouri, October 8, 1858, a son of Robert Piper and Elizabeth Jane (Rochester) Yantis, both of whom are natives of Kentucky. Tradition has it that the city of Rochester, New York, was named in honor of one of the mother's ancestors. Robert P. Yantis was born in 1821 and it was in 1847 that he wedded Elizabeth J. Rochester, whose birth occurred in 1822. He was a cabinet-maker by trade and followed that pursuit in early life. About 1850 he removed westward to Missouri, where he lived until 1864, and then went to Idaho, crossing the plains with ox teams. For about five years he lived in Boise, after which he purchased what was then known as Miller's ranch on Burnt river in Oregon, taking up his abode thereon in 1869. He conducted a stage station and road house at that point, this being one of the most noted stations on the line of travel from Umatilla, on the Columbia river, to Boise. That place is now the town site of Huntington, and the junction point of the Oregon Short Line Railroad and the line of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company. After selling that place Mr. Yantis bought a tract of land on Willow creek in Malheur county, to which he removed about 1878. He then turned his attention to farming and stock-raising, in which business he remained to the time of his death, which occurred about 1896, when he was seventy-five years of age. He passed away in Baker, Oregon, as did his wife, who was eighty-five years of age at the time of her demise. In their family were five children, three sons and two daughters. Kate L., living at Long Beach, California, was married in Boise to Joe Misner, and they had two sons, Edward and Robert. Her second husband is Burton Yantis and they have one daughter, Fannie. Amos Rochester, married Sadie Howe and to them have been born a number of children of whom five are now living. Mary Elizabeth, is the wife of C. M. Kellogg and to them have been born four sons and two daughters. Mr. Kellogg has been well known as a stage and mail line contractor since about 1867. Charles Thomas, a farmer residing near Walla Walla, Washington, married Miss Ada Mallory and they have four children, a son and three daughters.

John Lapsly Yantis, the fifth of the family, attended school in Boise, Idaho, and in Baker, Oregon, having accompanied his parents to the northwest in early boyhood. When he started in the business world for himself he began learning the jeweler's trade in Baker and followed that line of business for about two years, when he went to Montana with a band of horses, remaining in that state for two years. He afterward returned to his father's farm on Willow creek and took up farming and stock-raising, to which business he has given practically his entire time since. In the fall of 1899 he removed to Sumpter valley, purchased a farm and now has four hundred and eighty acres there, which are planted principally in hay and grain. This land is worth about forty dollars per acre. In addition to the cultivation of cereals best adapted to the soil and climate he raises various kinds of stock but makes a specialty of horses. His place is located on the Sumpter Valley railroad and owing to his industry and careful management is being rapidly brought under a high state of cultivation.

On the 27th of March, 1890, at Dell, Malheur county, Oregon, Mr. Yantis was united in marriage to Miss Effa Levelle Lee, a daughter of George R. and Eva A. (Wilson) Lee, who were married in Oregon. Her father had crossed the plains with teams in 1852 and served in the Indian wars of Oregon and Washington in 1855 and 1856. In every way he was closely associated with pioneer development and in days of peace followed the carpenter's trade. He died about 1904 and is survived by his wife. In their family were three children, a son and two daughters. Mrs. Lee was born on the Sandwich Islands in 1845 and her parents came to Oregon, in 1848 settling in Oregon City and making their home from that time until called to their final rest in this state. Mr. and Mrs. Yantis have become the parents of four children, two sons and two daughters: Grover Lee, who was born January 30, 1893; Luther, born July 7, 1894; Mildred, born December 1, 1896; and Levelle, born October 21, 1898. The parents are providing their children with good educations and are putting forth every effort to prepare them for life's practical and responsible duties.

John L. Yantis at one time served as deputy sheriff of Malheur county for two years. His stanch temperance principles have led him to ally himself with the prohibition party. His life has been spent in harmony with the teachings of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he is a devoted member, and his influence is always on the side of righteousness, justice, truth and progress.

CLAY C. CLARK is a well known and popular general merchant, extensive land owner and cattle man of Arlington. He was born in Chariton county, Missouri, June 24, 1861, a son of Ephraim and Mary (Van Tine) Clark. The father was born in Kentucky and the mother in New York, and they were married in Missouri, where they resided until the death of the father, which occurred December 24, 1864. The mother survived him until April 7, 1895.

Clay C. Clark was educated in the public schools of Missouri, in which he pursued his studies during the winter seasons of the year, while in the summers he earned his livelihood in farm work, being so employed in Kansas for about five and a half years. When eighteen or nineteen years of age he discontinued school attendance altogether and began to give his entire attention to farming and stock-raising, being employed by others until he removed to Oregon in 1885. On coming to this state he settled on a homestead near Blalock, upon which he remained for many years, farming in a diversified way and raising cattle. In 1905 he removed from that farm to Arlington, where he engaged in the meat business. He remained thus employed until in 1911, when he entered the general mercantile trade and now is conducting a good business, in connection with a meat market, under the firm name of C. C. Clark & Sons. He also owns about two thousand acres of land and does a big cattle business, raising and disposing of large numbers of animals each year.

Mr. Clark was married in Sheridan county, Missouri, March 9, 1883, to Miss Nancy A. Lambert, a daughter of Jacob and Sarah Lambert. To this union were born five children, namely: Lambert E., of the firm of C. C. Clark & Sons; Claude C., the secretary of C. C. Clark & Sons; Francis C., who has charge of the meat market of this firm; Lulu M., at home; and Edith M., attending school. In his political views Mr. Clark is a republican and is a prominent man in his community, having been county commissioner and taking an active interest in local affairs as well as in the policies of his party affecting the nation. In his fraternal relations he belongs to Lodge No. 88, A. F. & A. M. and is also a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason of Portland Consistory. He is an earnest and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, rendering to that religious denomination material assistance as well as helping by his influence and personal worth to make the church and its allied interests efficient for good in the community. Mr. Clark, who has lived for many years in Oregon, during all of which time he has been actively engaged in business, has been a remarkably successful man. He has not only given the strictest attention to his business, and labored early and late in building up a fortune but has by a peculiar fitness so well directed his efforts that he has achieved much larger success than is vouchsafed to the average business man. He enjoys a reputation for the strictest integrity and all of his transactions with his customers are characterized by that same sagacity which has distinguished all of his business dealings. Being of an affable disposition and an optimistic spirit, he displays a cordiality of manner which has won for him a most extensive list of acquaintances, all of whom hold him in the highest esteem. He is one of the most valuable and substantial men of his county, a man of large calibre, generous and broad minded.

CLAY C. CLARK

PUBLIC LIBRARY

EDWARD R. CARDWELL. A ranch of one hundred and forty acres three miles southeast of Merrill is the home place of Edward R. Cardwell and thereon are found exceptionally good improvements, making this one of the attractive properties in Klamath county. The owner is one of Oregon's native sons, his birth having occurred in Jackson county, April 1, 1868. His father, John Cardwell, was a native of England and went to the gold fields of California among the Forty-niners. He followed mining for many years and it was that which took him to Jackson county, Oregon, about 1857. There he spent his remaining days. In San Francisco he wedded Mrs. Ellen (O'Roke) Steedman, who was born in County Clare, Ireland, December 25, 1832, and came to the United States in 1849. In 1859 she became the wife of William Steedman and the same year removed to San Francisco. Three children were born of this union: Mrs. Anna Damon, of Mount Vernon, Oregon; Mrs. White, of Chico, California; and Katherine, now deceased. It was in California, that Mrs. Steedman became the wife of John Cardwell, after which they removed to the mines in the northern part of the state, her husband following placer mining there for a few years. They afterward took up their abode in Sams valley, where Mr. Cardwell died May 4, 1882, his son Edward R. being then about fourteen years of age. His widow survived him until 1901. They became the parents of thirteen children, of whom five are living: Jane, the wife of Will Nichols, living in Central Point, Oregon; Martha, the wife of J. Frank Adams; Edward R., of this review; Lawrence, of Gold Hill, Oregon, and David S., at Fresno.

Edward R. Cardwell was reared upon the old homestead farm and remained a resident of Jackson county until ten years ago, when he came to Klamath county. He remained for three years at Fort Klamath and since then has been upon his ranch, comprising one hundred and forty acres three miles southeast of Merrill. This is exceptionally well improved and upon it he has a good home. All is under government ditch and he makes a specialty of the cultivation of alfalfa. He also owns two hundred and seventy acres at Fort Klamath, which is irrigated. It is situated at the head of Wood river, on the military hay reserve, and embraces four claims, all used as meadow lands and rented out by Mr. Cardwell.

In 1895 Mr. Cardwell married Rose Griffiths, who was born at Stockton, in the San Joaquin valley of California, January 1, 1871. When eight years of age she was taken to Jackson county, Oregon, by her parents, John D. and Mary (Thomas) Griffiths, who were natives of Wales and were married in Salt Lake City, Utah. The father died in Jackson county, Oregon, in 1886, and the mother is now living in Gold Hill, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Cardwell have one child, Opal. The parents are well known and have many friends in this district. Mr. Cardwell is a faithful member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He represents the progressive element in agriculture in this part of the state, following improved and advanced methods for the reclamation, development and cultivation of his land.

JAMES M. McCULLOUGH was one of the early pioneers of Oregon and in his adopted state he spent nearly all of his life. His birth occurred in Tennessee on the 8th of January, 1832, his parents being Washington and Eliza McCullough, who were natives of Kentucky and passed away in Tennessee. In 1847 James M. McCullough emigrated to Oregon. He crossed the plains with ox teams and located in Yamhill county. There he continued to live until 1863, when he disposed of his property in Yamhill county and moved to Umatilla county, where he filed upon a government homestead, and after establishing his family in their new home he at once engaged in stock-raising and with this business he continued to occupy himself until 1908, when he was called from an active and successful life to the land beyond.

In 1859 Mr. McCullough was united in marriage to Miss Lucinda Johnson, a daughter of James and Louisa (Crisp) Johnson, who were natives of Tennessee and Missouri respectively. They crossed the plains in 1847, locating in Yamhill county, where they spent their remaining days. Mrs. McCullough was one of six children, of whom three are still living. Unto Mr. and Mrs. McCullough were born eleven children, as follows: Isadora, who is the wife of Nelson Chapple and resides in the state of Washington; Louisa, the wife of William Owens, of Washington; Anna, the wife of Joe Foller; Kate, the wife of C. J. Gulliford, of Umatilla county; Emma, who gave her hand in marriage to Edward Hammer; James Lee and Benjamin, both of whom are residents of Umatilla county; and four who are deceased. Mr. McCullough was a devoted husband and a kind and indulgent father, giving his strength and all his attention to the interests of his family.

He was a patriotic and public-spirited man as well as an ideal and desirable citizen. During the Indian wars of 1855 and 1856 he was one of the volunteers who enlisted in the defense of Oregon and the homes of her white people. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and in the cemetery belonging to this order he was buried at Echo, Oregon. His widow, Mrs. Lucinda McCullough, owns a comfortable residence in Echo, where she has established her home, and in addition to this property she owns and operates an alfalfa farm near by in this valley. Mr. McCullough died in the faith of the Christian church, of which his widow is also a devoted and consistent member.

RALPH FOLSOM is a representative of one of the old pioneer families of Oregon. He is engaged in the furniture and undertaking business in Pendleton and he is likewise connected with many fraternal organizations, so that he has a very wide acquaintance in this part of the state, while his sterling qualities have won him the favorable regard of many. He was born in Astoria, November 19, 1872, so that his entire life has been passed in this state, and of its development and progress he has been an interested witness. His father, Moses Folsom, was born in Maine in 1820 and came around the Horn to Oregon in 1846. He was a blacksmith by trade and opened one of the first shops of that kind in Oregon City, becoming identified with the business interests of that district ere the site of the city of Portland was marked by more than one or two houses. He died in 1898 but is still survived by his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Folsom, who is now living in Los Angeles, California. One of his brothers, Orman Folsom, located the prison in California which bears his name and upon the pages of pioneer history in that state as well as in Oregon the Folsoms have left their impress.

Ralph Folsom is one of a family of ten children, all of whom are living, six being residents of Oregon and four of California. He was a young child when his parents removed from Astoria to Pendleton and pursued his education in the public schools here, passing through consecutive grades until he became a high-school student. On putting aside his text-books he entered the employ of Jesse Failing, who was engaged in the furniture and undertaking business. Mr. Folsom was then eighteen years of age but that he proved capable, faithful and diligent is indicated in the fact that he continued with his first employer for ten years, at the end of which time, desirous that his labors should more directly benefit himself, he began business on his own account and has since been proprietor of one of the leading commercial establishments of the city, carrying furniture, carpets and undertaking supplies. Three years later he purchased the business of his former employer, Mr. Failing. Mr. Folsom was in partnership with John S. Baker but in 1910 this relationship was discontinued and he has since been alone in the business. He is proprietor of one of the leading stores of the city, carrying a large and well selected line of furniture and carpets of all kinds and grades so as to meet the varied tastes and demands of the public. His goods are attractively displayed and he makes every effort to please his patrons, knowing that satisfied customers are the best advertisement. In addition to his commercial interests he is the owner of a farm of eighty-three acres in Polk county.

On the 1st of April, 1898, Mr. Folsom was united in marriage to Miss Elsie Allen, who was born in Marion county, Oregon, and is a daughter of John C. and Mary A. Allen. Her father was a prominent, influential and honored citizen of Polk county, where for an extended period he carried on agricultural pursuits and also took a very active part in public affairs. For a number of years he served as senator from Polk county and was regarded as one of the leading members of the upper house of the general assembly, giving careful and earnest consideration to all vital questions which came up for settlement. Over the record of his public career there falls no shadow of wrong or suspicion of evil. He is now deceased but his widow still survives. Mr. and Mrs. Folsom have become parents of two sons, John Allen and Harry Emerson. The parents are members of the Episcopal church and are interested in all the ennobling and uplifting influences which are proving forceful factors for good in the community.

Mr. Folsom is very prominent in fraternal circles, holding membership in both branches of the Knights of Pythias fraternity and also belonging to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Woodmen of the World, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Eagles, the Red Men and the Artisans. He is a stalwart advocate of republican principles, being recognized as one of the local leaders of the party in Umatilla county. When associated with Mr. Failing he was elected to the position of county coroner, which he filled for three years. Later he was again chosen, so that he is now serving for the second term in that office. He is loyal to the best interests of Pendleton and his influence is always found on the side of justice, truth, progress and improvement. The consensus of opinion places him in a high position in public regard.

JOHN ALEXANDER DOUTHIT, well known in journalistic circles but at the present time engaged in the real-estate business at The Dalles, was born in Linn county, Oregon, April 26, 1858, his parents being James H. and Louisa Douthit, who were natives of South Carolina and in 1853 emigrated to Oregon, crossing the plains with horse and mule teams. The father secured a donation claim on Albany prairie, in Linn county, whereon J. A. Douthit was born. In 1870 they removed to eastern Oregon, settling in Ochoco county where the mother passed away the following year, while the father survived until 1876.

J. A. Douthit pursued his education at home under the tutelage of his father, there being no schools within forty miles of the cattle ranch on which he resided as a boy in the Ochoco country. When sixteen years of age he entered the Albany (Oregon) College, in which he spent one year while the following year was devoted to study in the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis. He was left an orphan at the age of eighteen years and soon afterward took up the profession of school teaching while later he devoted a few years to mining in eastern Oregon and in Idaho. In 1880 he established his home at Prineville where in 1884, in company with G. W. Barns, he began the publication of the Ochoco Review. The following year he purchased the interest of his partner in the paper and continued its publication for nine years. He sold the Review in 1894 and in 1895 bought the Times-Mountaineer, a daily and weekly paper published at The Dalles. He continued to edit and publish both the daily and weekly editions until 1904, in which year he retired from the field of journalism. In newspaper circles he was well known as an aggressive and fearless writer, one who ably handled the subject under discussion. He read broadly and thought deeply, and was largely conversant with the vital and significant questions which have engaged public attention. Moreover, his papers ably conserved and promoted the local interests and were ever recognized for their championship of public progress and improvement. His work as a journalist ended, he turned his attention to the real-estate business in which he still continues with offices in the Odd Fellows building at The Dalles. He has thoroughly informed himself concerning realty values, knows the property that is upon the market and has been able to make advantageous purchases and sales for his clients.

On the 28th of October, 1888, Mr. Douthit was united in marriage to Miss Mary V. Dunham, a daughter of Amos and Eliza Dunham, who were Oregon pioneers. Their daughter was born in Linn county, a few miles from the birthplace of Mr. Douthit. She completed her education in the University of Oregon and engaged in teaching school for a few years prior to her marriage. She is a member of the Sorosis, a woman's club; also the Episcopal Guild and the United Artisans. Mr. and Mrs. Douthit have become parents of two children, John G., who was born in 1889, and Winnifred Lucile, born in 1894. The son is a graduate of The Dalles high school and the daughter is now a student there.

Mr. Douthit is a democrat and takes an active interest in the affairs and the success of his party. He holds membership with the Knights of Pythias, the United Artisans, the Workmen and the Brotherhood of America. He has held the office of keeper of the records and seal in the first named for a number of years. He has been master of the Artisans assembly, is master of the Workmen lodge and secretary of the Brotherhood of America. His religious faith is evidenced in his membership in St. Paul's Episcopal church, of which he has been vestryman for many years. He is a native Oregonian and is a typical westerner in every respect, progressive and hospitable, possessing many of the chivalric qualities of his southern parents. He is also a good entertainer, and the Douthit home is justly renowned for its hospitality.

J. H. ENSMINGER was born in Hancock county, Illinois, March 19, 1847. His parents were George and Esther A. (Wilson) Ensminger, the father a native of Maryland and the mother of Indiana. They settled in the state of Illinois at a very early period and there passed their remaining days. To them were born nine children, all of whom are still living.

J. H. Ensminger received a common-school education in Illinois and meanwhile was carefully trained by his father in the details of farm work. He was a venturesome, ambitious boy, and at the early age of fifteen years left home and made his way across the great American plains, settling in Baker county, Oregon, where for a number of years he was employed at farm work. In 1871 he settled on a farm near Baker City, a part of which he still owns, and there he successfully followed agricultural pursuits until 1909, when he sold all but forty acres of his farm and removed to Haines, where he is now living a retired life.

Mr. Ensminger was married in 1871 to Miss Johanna H. Loennig, a native of New Jersey. Her parents, Ernest and Mary (Diedle) Loennig, were natives of Germany and early in life emigrated to the United States. As early as 1863 they made their way across the plains to the Pacific coast, settling in Baker county, Oregon, where both passed away. Mrs. Ensminger was one of a family of seven children and by her marriage she became the mother of eleven children, as follows: Mary, the wife of Joe Henner, of Baker county; George, also of that county; Bertha, the wife of A. A. Fiddler, of Baker county; Frank, residing in the same county; Minnie M., who was born September 22, 1881, graduated from the Baker City high school, taught school for two years and passed away December 27, 1902; Pauline, who married N. E. Dodd; Blanch, the wife of Ed McCullough; Viola, Zella, Alice and Herbert, all yet at home.

In his political views Mr. Ensminger is a democrat and takes considerable interest in local affairs in which his party figures. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge, No. 17, at Baker City. The fact that a boy fifteen years of age should have the courage to leave the prairies of his native state of Illinois and journey alone across the plains in 1862 to seek his fortune in the great northwest is sufficient evidence of indomitable courage as well as of a great degree of ambition, both of which J. H. Ensminger is well known to possess. His life has been one of well directed effort in so much that the fruits of his labors have enabled him to retire from active business and pass his remaining years in comparative quiet in the seclusion of his own well appointed home in Haines. He has contributed not a little to the general welfare, resources and progress of his community and he numbers among his friends many of the best citizens of the district in which he has lived.

EDWARD PILLETT, who resides two and a half miles north of St. Paul on the Salem and Champoeg road, was born March 30, 1858, in St. Clair county, Illinois, his parents being Joseph and Elizabeth (Moussette) Pillett, both of whom were also natives of St. Clair county. His maternal grandmother was born in France and the maternal grandfather and his father's parents were natives of Canada. The maternal grandfather came directly to Illinois, where he accepted employment as pilot on a Mississippi river steamboat, and was married while occupying this position. His death occurred in 1850, when Elizabeth Moussette was twelve years of age. She was one of eight children, namely: John, Peter, Charles, Oscar, Louise, Sophie, Florence and Elizabeth. They are all deceased excepting Charles, who is a resident of Illinois, and Oscar who is residing in Missouri. Joseph Pillett was one of four children, all deceased: John, Joseph Mary and Ursula. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pillett were married in Illinois in 1857 and to them thirteen children were born, namely: Edward, the subject of this sketch; Charles, who is a resident of Salem; Fred and Oscar, both of whom died in infancy; Adolphus, a resident of Vida, Oregon; Henry, who lives in Alberta, Canada; Milton, who is married and lives in Madras, Oregon; Webster, who resides on part of the old home place; Mary, a resident of Kansas City, Missouri, who is the wife of John Lynch; Matilda, of Gervais, who is the wife of Frank Miller; and Elizabetb, Antoinette and Adelaide, all deceased.

Edward Pillett started in life on his own account at the age of twenty-six years, when he rented a farm of four hundred acres, two hundred of which were in a high state of cultivation. For nine years he engaged in the cultivation of this land, devoting his attention principally to raising grain. He then removed to a farm of three hundred acres near Gervais, which he cultivated for two years before purchasing one hundred and sixteen acres near St. Paul, where he has since been engaged in the dairy business and also in raising grain and hops, having fifteen acres planted to the latter. For nearly thirty years Mr. Pillett has been successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits and the energy and labor which he expended have been rewarded by crops which have annually attested his skill and ability.

On February 17, 1892, Mr. Pillett was married to Miss Dorothy Krechter, who was born February 6, 1874, and is a daughter of August and Annie (Krüep) Krechter. The former was a native of Germany and the latter, who was born in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1849, was of German descent. They were married in St. John, Illinois, while Mr. Krechter was engaged in teaching school, a profession which he followed for twenty years. To them seven children were born: Mary, who is the wife of Joseph Orth, of Mount Angel, Oregon; Edward, of Woodburn, Oregon; Mrs. Pillett; Bernard, who resides at St. Paul; Joseph, deceased; Lena, who is the wife of Thomas Hughes, of St. Paul; and Cecelia, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Pillett were the parents of seven children: Rachel, deceased; Constance, born April 24, 1894, who received a college education and is the wife of Fred Manning, of Gervais, Oregon; Herman, born December 26, 1895, who is at home attending public school and has shown some natural musical ability; Edward, Jr., who was born February 5, 1898; Stanley, whose birth occurred February 25, 1900; Eva, who was born January 1, 1902; and Basil, whose birth occurred May 12, 1904. The latter four are attending school.

In politics Mr. Pillett gives his support to the democratic party and, although he has never sought office, he has always been actively interested in promoting any measures which the party might introduce for the public welfare. In religious faith he is a member of the Catholic church. He has shown in various relations, a loyal regard for principles involved and for the best interests of his fellow citizens.

PETER SHERIDAN, who has been successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits throughout his entire business career, is the owner of five hundred acres of land near Echo, Umatilla county. His birth occurred on the farm upon which he is now residing on the 6th of January, 1883, and he has always resided there. His parents were James and Ann (Kennedy) Sheridan, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ireland. The mother settled in Pennsylvania after her arrival in this country and they were married in that state before coming to Oregon about thirty-five years ago. The father took up a homestead of eighty acres, which is the nucleus of the present Sheridan farm. His death occurred there on the 1st of May, 1898. The mother is at present residing there at the age of seventy years. To them were born three children: Barney, deceased; Peter, of this review; and Sarah C., also deceased. By a former marriage the father had two children: Mary, who became the wife of Charles Enzroph, of Walla Walla, Washington; and T. F.

Peter Sheridan pursued his education in the common schools and under the direction of his father gained an excellent knowledge of agricultural pursuits during his boyhood and youth. Of the five hundred acres which constitute his farm two hundred and forty are planted to hay and the average yield of alfalfa which he harvests is about six tons per acre. He is at present breeding Percheron horses and Poland China hogs. He has brought his place to a high state of cultivation and his neat premises, good buildings and well tilled fields testify to his executive ability and knowledge of farming.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD PILLETT

Although he is one of the younger agriculturists of the state, he is carrying on his business on a large scale and has already shown that his capabilities are equal to those of many an older farmer. As he has been financially able to do so he has invested in real estate and at present owns a substantial dwelling in Pendleton.

On the 20th of June, 1906, Mr. Sheridan was married to Miss Lora Harrison, a daughter of Asbury and Eudoria (Hammer) Harrison, of Colfax, Washington. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan are active in social circles in their community and exert a helpful influence in undertakings for public good. He is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. Having spent his entire life in this part of the state, he is well known and his circle of friends is a wide one.

ERNEST WHITCOMB CRICHTON. Among those who have been most active in keeping navigation interests in the northwest up to the high standards maintained in other portions of the country is Ernest Whitcomb Crichton, secretary of the Columbia River & Puget Sound Navigation Company, who for more than a third of a century has made his home in this state, being identified throughout that period with business interests which have direct bearing upon the development and upbuilding of this section of the country. He was born at Buckhorn Furnace, Ohio, August 27, 1850. His father, James Crichton, a native of Scotland, was engaged in the manufacture of pig iron at that place until his death, which occurred in 1861. He had married Ruby Whitcomb, a lady of American and French descent, who died at Buckhorn Furnace, in 1859.

In the common schools of his native town Ernest W. Crichton began his education and later attended the high school at Wheelersburg, Ohio, from which he was graduated in 1868. The following year he started out in life for himself, first as storekeeper and later as bookkeeper for the Charcoal Iron Company at Buckhorn Furnace. He was thus employed until June, 1875, when thinking that the growing northwest held better advantages for him he left Ohio and came to Oregon. Locating at Oswego, he was employed by the Oregon Iron Company as bookkeeper until they closed down in October, 1876, after which he came to Portland, which then had but sixteen thousand inhabitants. During the year 1877 he was engaged in steamboat operation on the Willamette river, filling the position of purser on the steamers Ohio and City of Salem with Captain U. B. Scott and Captain E. W. Spencer. The following year he again became connected with the iron industry for in 1878 the Oswego Iron Company was organized by L. B. Seeley, S. H. Brown, C. R. Donohue and E. W. Crichton, who purchased the iron works at Oswego, Mr. Crichton becoming secretary and superintendent. In 1881 the business was reorganized and the plant enlarged under the name of Oregon Iron & Steel Company, Simeon G. Reed, Henry Villard and W. S. Ladd becoming interested in the establishment. From 1878 until 1886 this plant manufactured thirty-six thousand tons of pig iron with the old stone stack which is still standing. In 1888 they built a new iron stack at Oswego with modern Whitwell ovens and sixty large brick charcoal kilns, each holding fifty cords of wood. Mr. Crichton was superintendent of the wood department, having charge of the wood cutting and of supplying the kilns which was done at the rate of one hundred and fifty cords daily. In 1891 he severed his connection with that concern and came to Portland as secretary and treasurer of the Columbia River & Puget Sound Navigation Company, which position he still holds. This company owned and operated the steamers Telephone, Bailey Gatzert, Tahoma, Metlako and Astorian on the Willamette and Columbia rivers, and the steamer Flyer on Puget Sound, running between Seattle and Tacoma. They had established routes between Portland and Astoria and between Portland and The Dalles, and increased travel over the latter scenic route by world-wide advertising, making the beauties of the upper Columbia as famous to western as the Hudson river is to eastern tourists. In 1903 they sold their boats on the Columbia river and in 1911 the Flyer, which has a world-wide reputation. During twenty years, previous to the 7th of June, 1911, this boat traveled, between Seattle and Tacoma, one million five hundred thousand miles and carried four million passengers.

In his political views Ernest Whitcomb Crichton has always been an earnest republican and was somewhat active in political circles while a resident of Oswego, which at that time was in the district that included Clackamas county and controlled the state. He always refused office, never seeking political preferment as a reward for party fealty. Since coming to Portland he has become a member of the Commercial club and is much interested in its purposes and its work of promoting the business and public interests of the city.

Ernest W. Crichton was married in Oswego, December 25, 1879, to Miss Anna Wyland, a daughter of Amanda Wyland, and to them have been born five children: James, who is the Portland agent for Ford automobiles; William L., who resides at The Dalles, where he is agent for the Regulator Steamboat Line; Charles, of Madras, Oregon, who is with Porter & Connelly, contractors; and Ruby and Earnest at home. The family residence is at No. 280 East Seventeenth street. Whatever success Mr. Crichton has attained is attributable to his own effort. Progress has been the keynote of his fortunes and as the architect of his fortunes he has builded wisely and well.

HUGH G. WALKER. Among the men whose life's labors are ended, yet whose influence remains as a factor for good in the community, was Hugh G. Walker, who was closely identified with the agricultural development of Umatilla county and at all times commanded the confidence and respect of his fellowmen. He was a native of Ontario, Canada, his birth having occurred in Collingwood, on the 7th of October, 1860. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, had a family of nine children and Hugh G. Walker was the first to pass away. Those still living are: Mrs. P. S. Walden, a resident of Milton, Oregon; Robert, who is living in Gresham, this state; Mrs. J. B. Thompson, of Walla Walla; Alex, whose home is in Weston; John, a resident of Athena; Mrs. Robert Jamieson, also of Walla Walla; Mrs. C. R. Duncan, who is living in the same place; and Horace, who makes his home in Pendleton.

Hugh G. Walker spent the first fifteen years of his life in the place of his nativity and there obtained a good education in the common schools. The year 1877 witnessed his arrival in Umatilla county, at which time he took up his abode in the vicinity of Weston and began farming. Later he purchased a right to a quarter section of land in Morrow county and homesteaded it. After proving up he sold that property and took up his abode two miles east of Helix in Umatilla county, where he owned four hundred and eighty acres of excellent wheat land, his intelligent cultivation resulting in the production of thirty bushels to the acre. For sixteen years he and his brother Horace were partners in wheat-raising and were among the first to successfully produce the crop in this district. At the end of that period Hugh Walker purchased his brother's interest in the business and thereafter conducted his affairs in the same progressive manner, so that year after year success crowned his labors. Moreover, he added many substantial and modern improvements to his farm, converting it into one of the most attractive places of his section of the county.

On the 18th of January, 1898, Mr. Walker was united in marriage to Miss Minnie F. Greer, a daughter of Joseph and Harriet (Courtney) Greer. Theirs was a most happy married life, terminated by the death of Mr. Walker on the 28th of July, 1908. Since her husband's death Mrs. Walker has taken up her abode in Weston, where she still makes her home. Mr. Walker was a member of the Masonic fraternity and was always most loyal to its teachings and its principles. He possessed many sterling traits of character and one of the local papers wrote of him: "He was a man of kindly and generous nature, the soul of honor in his business dealings, and the memory of his virtues will be cherished long in the hearts of his friends." He lived for more than thirty years in this part of the state and all who knew him entertained for him the warm regard which is always accorded in recognition of sterling qualities of manhood.

ANDREW J. RICHMOND was a lifelong farmer and a man whose sterling traits of character gained for him the respect and good will of all with whom business or social relations brought him in contact. He was born in Cleveland, Ohio, January 21, 1834, and was a son of Hiram Richmond. He continued upon a farm near Cleveland until he had attained his majority, when he removed to Montgomery county, Illinois, settling near Hillsboro. There he carried on general agricultural pursuits until he came to Oregon in 1878, traveling by rail to San Francisco and by boat from that city along the coast and up the Columbia river. He first located at Helix, where he remained for about eight years, devoting his time and energies to farming. On the expiration of that period he came to Weston, where he resided to the time of his death, which occurred in January, 1893. Throughout his entire life he followed the occupation of farming and that his methods were practical and progressive is indicated in the success which came to him.

On the 23d of September, 1858, Mr. Richmond was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. Lane, who was born in New Hampshire, December 15, 1837. Two years later she was taken by her parents to Montgomery county, Illinois, where she lived to the time of her marriage. She is a daughter of T. L. and Roxey (Harvey) Lane, who were natives of New Hampshire but died in Montgomery county, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Richmond became the parents of six children: O. M., who is living in Walla Walla, Washington, and has two children; Mrs. Cora Simpson, who is also of Walla Walla and has four children; Frank H., of the same place, who is married and has three children; Elmer, of Athena, who is married and has four children; Harlow B., who is living in Walla Walla and has three children; and Clara, the wife of J. H. Price, of Weston.

In his political views Mr. Richmond was a democrat, his study of the questions and issues of the day confirming him in his belief concerning the principles of the party. He served as justice of the peace for many years and in other local offices, the duties of which he discharged with promptness and fidelity. He was for fifteen years a resident of Oregon and during that period his sterling worth won for him the high regard of all with whom he came in contact.

DAVID BENJAMIN FISK, who is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of Union county's fertile land, which he has brought under high cultivation, takes great pride in the fact that he is a native of Oregon, and has here passed the greater part of his life. His birth occurred in Jackson county, on the 24th of November, 1853, his parents being Nathan Willis and Esther (Tripp) Fisk. They were married in Carroll county, Illinois, and there passed the early period of their domestic life, crossing the plains to Oregon with their family in 1852. They settled in the vicinity of Ashland, Jackson county, where the father took up a donation claim which he cultivated for five years. At the end of that period, in 1857, he removed with his family to Yreka, California, where he continued his agricultural pursuits and also identified himself with the mining interests. They resided in California until 1864, when they returned to Oregon, locating on a claim in the vicinity of Canyon City.

In connection with diversified farming, Nathan Willis Fisk devoted much of his time to fruit culture. He planted forty acres of his land to a varied assortment of fruit trees, and was the first settler in Grant county to set out a large orchard. His friends and neighbors were all very skeptical about the success of his undertaking, but he lived to see his trees bear and yield a good income. The children of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Fisk numbered ten, but the four eldest are deceased. In the order of birth they are as follows: John Moffett, who was married in Canyon City, Oregon, to Miss Indiana Amacy Wilson, and became the father of six children; Amanda Ann, who was married at Yreka, California, about 1864, to A. P. McCarton, by whom she had three sons and three daughters; Nathan Taylor, who was married at Prairie City, Oregon, about 1870, to Miss Mary C. Wilson, and to whom were born three sons and two daughters; Mary Jane, who was married in 1865 to A. E. Starr by whom she has one son and five daughters, one of whom died in childhood; William Ralph, who married Miss Melvina E. Hardman, and to whom were born five children, three sons and two daughters; David Benjamin, our subject; Laura Hanna, who married Antone Hacheney and became the mother of a son and daughter; Daniel Webster, who married twice and had two daughters by his first wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Perkins; Francis Marshall, who married a Miss Gregory, and to whom were born a son and a daughter; and Eudora, who married John Wilson, by whom she has a son and three daughters. The parents have long been deceased, the father having passed away in 1879 and the mother some five or six years later.

David Benjamin Fisk was a child of four years when his parents removed to California and a youth of eleven when they returned to Oregon. He pursued his education in the common schools of these two states, and during that time he also assisted his father with the work of the farm. He subsequently learned the blacksmith's trade, and in 1877, at the age of twenty-four years, established a shop of his own at Lakeview, Oregon. The next year, he removed to John Day, Grant county, and later went from there to Prairie City, this state. In 1887, he went into the hardware business at Prairie City, remaining there until 1889, when he removed with his hardware stock to Baker City. About five years later he severed his connection with commercial activities and engaged in farming and stock-raising. He acquired extensive landed holdings, but recently sold several hundred acres of his property to The Powder Valley Land & Irrigation Company, for a reservoir site for what is known as the Thief valley irrigation scheme, the purpose of which is to reclaim seventy thousand acres of arid land. He still holds the title to his homestead, comprising one hundred and sixty acres of land, given over to the raising of fruits and vegetables. His place is well improved and is worth fifty dollars per acre.

On the 22d of February, 1878, at Lakeview, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Fisk and Miss Lillie May Phetteplace, of Jackson county. She is a daughter of Benjamin and Harriet (Moon) Phetteplace, who crossed the plains from Iowa to Oregon with an ox team in 1859, and located in Jackson county, in the vicinity of Phoenix, where the father passed away and the mother subsequently married Abraham Tenbrook, a Jackson county ranchman. Mrs. Fisk's family all are deceased with the exception of a sister and brother and three half-brothers. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fisk, as follows: Bertha May, who married George W. Gilbert, of Baker, Oregon; Marion Benjamin, of North Powder, Union county, who married Miss Isabelle Gilderoy, and has become the father of two daughters; Willis Curran, who passed away in Baker, at the age of twenty-two years; and Hayden Wooster, a graduate of the Pacific Dental College of Portland, who married Miss Georgia Wise of that city, and who engages in the practice of his profession there.

In 1885, David Benjamin Fisk joined Mountain View Lodge, No. 33, I. O. O. F., in which he has passed through all of the chairs; and in 1891 or 1892 he affiliated with the Masonic order, and has ever since been identified with Prairie City Lodge, No. 60. He is a charter member of Queen City Camp, No. 48, W. O. W., at Baker, and has passed through all of its chairs, having served for several years as counsel commander. He votes the republican ticket, and while residing in Siskiyou county, California, in 1876 and 1877, served for six months as deputy sheriff under J. M. Jones. He also belonged to the state militia of California, being under the command of Captain J. V. Brown at Yreka. Mr. and Mrs. Fisk manifest their religious faith through their membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, in which belief they have reared their family. Mr. Fisk is loyal to the state of his nativity, in the wonderful progress and development of which he takes great delight.

JOHN GEISS. For more than a third of a century, or since 1878, John Geiss has been a resident of Umatilla county. He has practically lived retired for the past six years but for an extended period was identified with agricultural pursuits and is still the owner of an excellent farm near Adams, in which town he makes his home. He is a native of Prussia, Germany, born July 22, 1837, his parents being John and Christina (Shubrpest) Geiss. The mother died in Germany when but thirty-two years of age and the father afterward came to the new world with his son John in 1870. They made their way to Illinois, settling in Beardstown, and five years after the arrival of John Geiss in the northwest the father also came to Umatilla county and spent his last days here. He was a butcher by trade and followed that pursuit in order to provide for his family. He had three sons and four daughters and with the exception of one of the daughters, all came to the new world. The girls married in Illinois and reside there, and one son returned to that state but John and Peter are still residents of Umatilla county.

John Geiss was a young man of twenty-one years when in 1878 he came to Oregon, since which time he has resided in the county that is still his place of residence. He has always followed farming, working by the month at first until he had saved a sufficient sum to enable him to begin farming on his own account. He entered one hundred and sixty acres of land at Weston which he afterward sold, but he and his wife now own an entire section of land near Adams, which is being operated by their son-in-law. At an earlier period Mr. Geiss year after year cultivated his fields and harvested his crops and was numbered among the progressive and enterprising agriculturists of the community. At length his labors brought to him a substantial competence with which he retired to private life, turning over his farm to the management and development of his son-in-law.

In 1881 Mr. Geiss was united in marriage to Miss Sarah C. Lieuallen, who was born in Decatur county, Iowa, August 28, 1862, and in 1864 was brought to Weston, Oregon, by her parents, Noah F. and Margaret R. (Cox) Lieuallen. They were natives of Tennessee but were married in Missouri. The mother died in Morrow county, Oregon, while the father's death occurred in Moscow, Idaho. He was a stockman and farmer and secured a preemption right to a claim at Moscow and also owned a homestead at Athena. He was likewise a local minister of the Baptist church, being one of the first clergymen of this town. Mrs. Lieuallen taught the first school in Athena and afterward was teacher of the Rawhide school near the present site of the town. Mr. Lieuallen taught the first school near Moscow and both were pioneer teachers of the northwest. Mr. Lieuallen also engaged in teaching music. Unto him and his wife were born three sons and four daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. Geiss have become the parents of three children: Minnie G., who is the wife of John Winn, of Adams; Winifred, at home; and Almond Raymond, who died at the age of seven months. Politically Mr. Geiss is a democrat and has served as a member of the city council of Adams for four years. He belongs to the Baptist church and to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows—associations which indicate much of his interests and the principles which govern his conduct. Whatever success he has achieved in life is due entirely to his own efforts, for he has worked hard, never being afraid of earnest, persistent labor. His business affairs, too, have been honorably conducted and his prosperity is the fitting reward of his labors.

E. W. RHEA, a prominent representative of the agricultural interests of Echo, was born near Heppner, Oregon, on Rhea creek, which was named after the family. His birth occurred November 26, 1871, his parents being Columbus A. and Sophrona (Adkins) Rhea. The mother's death occurred some time ago but the father is still living upon the home farm, where he first located when coming to Oregon in 1862. Throughout his entire residence in this state he has been a ranchman and has been one of the progressive men of his community. In the family were eight children, of whom E. W. is the third in order of birth.

E. W. Rhea spent the days of his boyhood and youth upon his parents' farm, attending the district school nearby and assisting his father in the duties which came daily to hand upon the farm. After his marriage in 1895 he engaged in general mercantile business in Heppner for ten years. At the end of that time he purchased his present farm, which originally comprised two hundred and forty acres but which at present is only one hundred and sixty acres in area. He has devoted the greater part of this land, all of which is well irrigated, to alfalfa growing and cattle feeding. The home which he has built and the other equipments with which he has provided the farm show him to be a substantial, progressive, industrious and prosperous farmer.

On the 3d of January, 1895, Mr. Rhea was married to Miss Effie Fields, whose birth occurred on Birch creek in Umatilla county, December 16, 1874. Her father, Hugh Fields, is a native of Virginia and when he was seventeen years of age came to Oregon, where his marriage subsequently occurred. He passed away on the 3d of November, 1902. He resided on a ranch throughout his residence in Oregon, and at one time lived in a little loghouse which he built many years ago. To Mr. and Mrs. Rhea three children have been born, Hugh, Irene and Columbus A., Jr.

Fraternally Mr. Rhea is a member of the Masons and of the Elks. As a lifelong resident of Oregon he has not only been a witness of much of its development but has also been an able assistant in its improvement.

JOHN TRIMBLE, one of the prosperous ranchmen and esteemed citizens of Baker county, Oregon, is the owner of a hay and stock ranch of three hundred and twenty acres on Burnt river and also owns one hundred and twenty acres of timber land. His birth occurred in Noble county, Ohio, on the 7th of October, 1845, his parents being Jacob and Elizabeth (Stewart) Trimble, who spent their entire lives in the Buckeye state, the father cultivating a farm. They reared a family of three children, namely: John, of this review; Mrs. Eliza Jane Burlingame, who is deceased; and Charles, who is a resident of Noble county, Ohio.

John Trimble remained a resident of his native state until twenty-eight years of age, when he removed to Kansas where he remained for one and a half years and was engaged in hunting buffalo, killing in excess of five hundred during this time. He was always an enthusiastic hunter and many a deer and elk fell before his gun since coming to Oregon. He next made his way to California, spending one year in the Golden state. Going to Washington, he there remained for five years and on the expiration of that period, in 1880, took up his abode on the Burnt river in Oregon, near Hereford, where he has resided continuously since. At the present time he owns three hundred and twenty acres of land on the river and also has a tract of one hundred and twenty acres of timber land. He devotes his ranch to running of stock and also markets hay and has brought the property under a high state of improvement, it being entirely covered with sagebrush at the time it came into his possession. The place yields about four hundred tons of hay annually. At one time Mr. Trimble owned three hundred head of horses and two hundred head of cattle. Throughout his entire business career he has devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits and his efforts have been attended with a splendid measure of success. At the time of his arrival in this state he had only six hundred dollars but by dint of unremitting industry and capable management has augmented his capital until he is now numbered among the wealthy citizens of his community.

JOHN TRIMBLE

In 1864 Mr. Trimble wedded Miss Kate Stevens, who was born in Ohio in 1844 and passed away in that state in 1896. By this marriage there was one son, James, whose birth occurred on the 5th of November, 1869, in Noble county, Ohio, where he resided until the spring of 1883. Since that time he has made his home on the Burnt river in Oregon and now owns two fine hay and stock ranches, comprising one hundred and sixty acres and two hundred and forty acres of land respectively. In 1902 James Trimble married Miss Lena Wonder, who was born in Baker county, Oregon, on the 3d of February, 1878, and is a daughter of Fred Wonder of Buffalo Gulch. Unto them have been born three children: Elsie, Alfred and Arthur.

In politics Mr. Trimble is independent, supporting men and measures rather than party. His fraternal relations are with the Masons and he is a worthy exemplar of the craft. Believing that the northwest offered opportunities unrivaled in any other part of the country, he took up his abode here in early manhood and has since worked his way steadily upward to a position of prominence and prosperity.

EDWARD KURTZ is one of the principal stockholders in The Dalles Fruit Company and gives his entire attention to the interests of that business. He was born in Morgantown, Berks county, Pennsylvania, March 31, 1864, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Gabriel) Kurtz, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. The father passed away in 1882 and the mother in 1886. To Mr. and Mrs. John Kurtz ten children were born, of whom eight are living. Thomas, deceased, was the father of two children, both of whom are living in Maryland. He was a veteran of the Civil war. William is a resident of Portland, Oregon. Jacob is an employe of the Plow postoffice, Berks county, Pennsylvania. B. Frank is a resident of Joanna, Berks county, Pennsylvania. Mary is the wife of William Sheeler, a resident of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Tamson is the wife of Bankson Wells and resides at Joanna, Pennsylvania. Margaret is the wife of Frederick Albright, who resides in York, Pennsylvania. Clara is the wife of W. E. Given, of Honeybrook, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Ruth is deceased and Edward the subject of this review.

Edward Kurtz was reared at home and received his early education in the public schools of Berks county, Pennsylvania. After completing his common-school course he was for one year a pupil of the State Normal School in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was obliged, on account of failing health, to discontinue the further pursuit of his normal course and removed to Haley, Idaho, where he obtained employment in 1883 as clerk in the postoffice and a stationery store, being also engaged in the stage and express business. In 1885 he entered the United States mail service, being routed on the Oregon Short Line and continued in that service for a period of three years, after which he was employed as traveling messenger for the Pacific Express Company for two years and as cashier for the same company at Walla Walla for one year and then was put in charge of the office of that company at The Dalles, in which capacity he continued to serve until September 19, 1907. At that time he invested in The Dalles Fruit Company and has since given his entire attention to the interests of that business. He is also a stockholder in The Dalles Box & Lumber Company, of which he is the manager. In addition to these interests he is also a stockholder in two profitable fruit ranches of Oregon.

Mr. Kurtz was united in marriage, February 23, 1887, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Bentley. Both of her parents are deceased, having passed from the life many years ago. To Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz five children have been born: Alice, who resides with her parents; Laura, who is a resident of Portland; and Doris, Marguerite and Ruth, under the parental roof. Mr. Kurtz is loyal to the democratic party and for the past six years has filled the office of city treasurer of The Dalles. He is also the president of the Business Men's Association. His fraternal relations are with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and also with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which order he was treasurer for nine consecutive years.

Mr. Kurtz since 1907 has been recognized as one of the enterprising and representative business men of his part of the state of Oregon. He is a man whose integrity in all matters of business is never questioned and a citizen who interests himself vitally in every measure of public interest, seeking the improvement of the people in his state and county.

HON. SQUIRE FARRAR is postmaster at Salem, Oregon, to which position he was called in 1906, so that his incumbency in that office now covers six years. He previously served as state senator from his district and in both positions has made a creditable record. In addition to his public service he has proven himself a successful business man, his sound judgment being evidenced in the success which has attended his efforts in commercial lines. At the present writing he is vice president of the Thomas Kay Woolen Mills, thus retaining active connection with a line of business in which he embarked when he started out in the world on his own account. He is a native of Yorkshire, England, born September 8, 1840, and was a lad of eight years when his parents, John and Emma (Field) Farrar, came with their family to the United States, settling in Lawrence, Massachusetts. The father had been employed in the woolen factories of his native land and after crossing the Atlantic secured employment in the mills at Lawrence. About 1864 or 1865 he established his home on the Pacific coast, bringing his family to Salem, Oregon, where he secured a position with the Willamette Woolen Mills Company, thus being employed in the first mill built in this section of the country. That he was faithful, industrious and capable is indicated in the fact that he was retained in the employ of the Willamette Woolen Mills Company to the time of his retirement in old age. He died in the year 1902 and his wife, surviving him for about two years, passed away in 1904.

Squire Farrar following the arrival of the family in Lawrence, Massachusetts, became a public-school pupil there but in his thirteenth year began earning his own living and from that time to the present has depended for a livelihood entirely upon his own labors and resources. He, too, was employed in the woolen mills of New England until he sought a home on the Pacific coast, arriving in California in 1862, at which time he had passed the milestone on life's journey that indicates that one has attained his majority. He made his way westward with the intention of working in the mines of California but in the fall of the year of his arrival in that state he came northward to Oregon, settling in Salem. Here he at once found employment in the woolen mills, spending his time in that way until 1870, when, with the capital he had acquired through industry and frugality he purchased a stock of groceries and opened a store in Salem, where for twenty years he figured prominently as a leading grocer. As his trade increased—and it grew rapidly—he enlarged his stock to meet the growing demands of his business and throughout two decades remained as one of the foremost factors in the commercial circles of the city. Ere retiring from the grocery business he became interested in the organization of the Thomas Kay Woolen Mills Company, of which he was elected vice president and one of the directors, his official connection with the business so continuing to the present time. His long experience in this field of labor enables him to pass upon questions of vital interest to the business in a manner to contribute much to its success and development. His judgment is sound, his discrimination keen and his enterprise unfaltering. After discontinuing the grocery business in 1892, he engaged in the hop commission business and thus in various ways has proven himself a progressive and valuable factor in the commercial and financial development of his part of the state.

His fellow townsmen, appreciative of his worth and ability, asked that Mr. Farrar serve them in public office and in 1902 he was elected to the state senate, of which he remained a member for the full term of four years, giving careful consideration to the questions which came up for settlement throughout that entire period. In 1906 he was appointed postmaster of Salem, which office he now acceptably fills. He served as a member of the town council for one term. Whether in business or out of it he is always loyal to the best interests of the community and state and gives his aid and influence on the side of general progress and improvement.

Mr. Farrar has been married three times. In 1866 he wedded Miss Ellen Hatch, of Salem, who was a native of Oregon. The only child of this marriage died in infancy and the mother passed away at the same time. Mr. Farrar afterward wedded Miss Martha Watt, of Salem, and to their union was born a son, Joseph, who is living in eastern Oregon, but his birth cost his mother's life. Mr. Farrar's present wife bore the maiden name of Isabelle C. Atkinson. She, too, was a resident of Salem prior to her marriage and she has become the mother of two children: Gladys A., who was graduated from the University of Oregon with the class of 1909; and Russell J., who was graduated from the Colorado School of Mines at Golden, Colorado, in the class of 1910.

Mrs. Farrar is a member of the Episcopal church and Squire Farrar is connected fraternally with Salem Lodge, No. 4, F. & A. M., and also with Salem Lodge, No. 336, B. P. O. E. He is a member of the Salem board of trade and in strictly social lines is connected with the Illihu Club of the capital city. He ranks with the influential, prominent and representative men of Salem, whose intelligently directed efforts in business have brought them to a creditable position in trade circles, while in public life he has made an unassailable reputation, ever placing patriotism before partisanship and the general welfare before personal aggrandizement.

FRANK DAVEY. There is no more exhilarating activity and exciting profession in this country than that of journalism. The newspaper is vital and its pages appearing fresh from the press each day reflect the life of the world. Into the making of a newspaper go the brains and energies of brilliant men and its news columns give space to stories of the ambitions and sorrows, the joys and the hates of a lifetime. To be a successful publisher a man must be more than a mere business executive and he must have his hand upon the pulse of the community. He must possess a discriminating news sense, the knowledge of human nature and a power of vivid and dramatic writing.

A journalist in this class is Frank Davey who has been active in the newspaper world since 1880. He is a native of Ireland, having been born in Sligo, that country, on the 18th of August, 1850. His parents were Michael and Mary (Finigan) Davey, the former a successful farmer in his native country. Frank Davey was the youngest of a family of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters. He received his education in the national schools of Ireland and came to America in 1867, where he joined his brother Patrick, who had crossed the Atlantic some years before. Patrick Davey is now a resident of California. Upon arriving in the United States Frank Davey settled first in Keokuk, Iowa, in which city his sister was then living. He made his home in Keokuk and also Carthage, Illinois, until the summer of 1871, when he went to Fort Dodge, Iowa. In the fall of the same year he removed to Emmet county, Iowa, where he remained until the fall of 1886. He spent some years in this county as a teacher and held the position of superintendent of schools for four years. He was county auditor there for four years and county surveyor for two years. It was during his residence in Iowa that he first took up newspaper work. He was editor and publisher of a newspaper in that state for six years. He was admitted to the bar in 1880 but never followed the legal profession, preferring to concentrate his energies on journalism in which activity he was intensely interested and for which he showed natural aptitude. He came to Oregon in 1886 and carried on newspaper work principally in Salem. In May, 1907, he removed to Burns, Oregon, to make his home here, having purchased the Harney County News which he still conducts. His position at the head of the most important periodical in his city makes him an influential factor in municipal life. The power of the press in America is never questioned. Newspapers have made and unmade more public men than any other one force in the country. They have made policies popular and have put many officials into office. Mr. Davey has never used the power which his paper gives him in any unworthy cause and his record as a journalist is unsullied by any hint of corruption. He has been a lifelong republican. He served for two terms as a member of the state legislature from Marion county, Oregon, being elected first in 1902 and reelected in 1906. He was speaker of the house in 1907. In December, 1907, he was appointed receiver for the United States Land Office at Burns and is the present incumbent of that office. He was an active factor in the passage of the bill favoring the direct election of senators in 1904. He is a member of the city council of Burns and is president of that body.

Mr. Davey was married on April 4, 1877, to Miss Villa A. Pike, a daughter of Stillman Pike of Wisconsin, and they have four children: Merle, the wife of J. C. Bowen of New Bridge, Baker county, Oregon; Vera, who is deceased; Robert Emmet, who received his education in the Salem schools and Columbia University, and who is engaged in newspaper work; and Alice Lou, a pupil in the Burns public schools. Frank Davey is a member of the Burns Commercial Club and in 1911 was its president. He has been an active member of the A. O. U. W. since 1889 and was state lecturer for that organization for two years and also conducted the A. O. U. W. Reporter, its official state organ for two years. He is an active member of the Maccabees.

Frank Davey is an efficient official, holding as he does the active management of a newspaper which is a vital force in his community. His position is a responsible one, yet he always uses this influence to favor movements which contribute to the progress and development of his city and lends his aid to no corrupt policy or no unworthy cause.

WILLIAM BRUCE HAMILTON, who owns one hundred and sixty acres of valuable land on Butter creek, which he devotes to alfalfa and stock-raising, was born in Ontario, Canada, June 11, 1850, his parents being John and Jane (Ketterson) Hamilton. They were both natives of Ireland, where they were married previous to going to Canada in 1838. They spent the remainder of their lives in Ontario, where Mr. Hamilton was engaged in agricultural pursuits. To them six sons and one daughter were born, of whom William B. is the sixth in order of birth.

Until he was eighteen years of age William B. Hamilton remained under the parental roof, attending the district schools and at the same time acquiring his first experience in agricultural pursuits under the able direction of his father. When he left home he took contracts for clearing land until he was over twenty-two years of age. At that time he purchased a ranch in Ontario and for six years was engaged in cultivating it. In 1882 he removed west and came to the United States, locating at Walla Walla, Washington. The following spring he returned to his former home and persuaded the family to make this section their future home. For nearly eleven years he was engaged in the livery business in Walla Walla and was superintendent for the Oregon Land & Construction Company in the Umatilla Meadow district for eleven years, at the end of which time he became manager of a summer resort at Bingham Springs. He purchased his present ranch on Butter creek in 1894 and there owns one hundred and sixty acres of irrigated land, which he devotes to alfalfa and stock-raising, feeding at the present writing four hundred and ninety-seven head of beef cattle. He also breeds horses and hogs. At Ranch Center he owns a one-quarter section of land and in Coos Bay owns twenty lots, which are situated along the water front. Recently he disposed of his property interests in Walla Walla.

On the 15th of July, 1872, Mr. Hamilton was married to Miss Cordelia Anna Goodall, who was born in Ontario. To them three children have been born: Rachel Elizabeth, who is a graduate of Whitman College and who has been a student at the University of Paris at Paris, France; John G., who is re siding at home; and Mary Anna, who is the wife of Robert Stewart, of Seattle.

Fraternally Mr. Hamilton is a member of the Odd Fellows. The agricultural interests and the development of the natural resources of Oregon require the efforts and attention of such men as William B. Hamilton in order to be brought to the high state of productiveness which they are capable of. His efforts have always been along the lines of progress and improvement and the results which have been his prove their success.

JAMES B. BARNES, who resides on his farm one mile southwest of Gervais, was born in Perry county, Ohio, in 1846, his parents being Elisha and Beckie (Heinbau) Barnes, the former a native of Washington, D. C., and the latter of Pennsylvania. They were married in 1842 and resided in Ohio before going to Adair county, Missouri, in 1851, where they were engaged in agricultural pursuits for thirteen years. But the northwest seemed to offer greater opportunities for success, and on May 8, 1864, they set out for Oregon, arriving on November 24, on the French prairie, where he purchased one hundred acres of land. This is the property upon which James Barnes now resides. The father was twice married. His first marriage was to Beckie Heinbau and to them five children were born, namely: Mrs. Mary E. Lambright, who resides in Alberta, Canada; James Barnes, the subject of this sketch; Mrs. Margaret J. Markwood, who is a resident of Portland, Oregon; Mrs. Susan Groshong, who resides in St. Louis, Oregon; and Mrs. Angeline Miles, deceased. Mr. Barnes' second marriage was to Mary Middleton in 1857 and to this union seven children were born, namely: Zachariah, who is a resident of Linn county, Oregon; Caturia, deceased; George, who resides in Jefferson, Oregon; Mrs. Lurana Fitzgerald, of Aberdeen, Washington; and Mrs. Frances Bingham, Mrs. Ellen Johnston and Mrs. Anna Nys, all of whom are residents of Oregon.

James Barnes began his independent career at the age of twenty-one years and since then his time and energies have been given largely to agricultural pursuits, his labor having brought him success in more than an ordinary degree. After his father's death, in 1883, he purchased the home place which consists of the original one hundred acres. This he devotes principally to hop growing but also raises grain and hay.

In 1882, in St. Louis, Oregon, Mr. Barnes was married to Theresa Dotson, whose birth occurred in 1864 and who is the daughter of Frederick M. and Martha (Barnes) Dotson, the former being one of nine children and the latter, one of twelve. Mr. and Mrs. Dotson were married in 1855 in Missouri and they made this state their home for the ten years before they crossed the plains with ox teams and came to Oregon. After a year's residence in Grant county, spent in mining for gold, they settled on a forty acre homestead on the French prairie, where they remained for two years before removing to Grant county, and after a two years' residence there they went to Linn county for an equal length of time. Returning to Grant county, they resided there for one year and then took up a permanent residence in Linn county, on the McKenzie river. It was here that Mr. Dotson passed away in 1902. To Mr. and Mrs. Dotson the following children were born besides Mrs. James B. Barnes: Mrs. Mary Robinson, of Redding, California; Solomon C., a resident of Los Angeles, California; Mrs. Kate Barnes, who resides in Portland, Oregon; and Osborne M., also a resident of Portland. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes have been the parents of three children. The eldest, Simon A., was born in 1883 and resides at home. In addition to a common-school education he took a short college course. Ralph E., who also resides at home, was born in 1885 and received a district-school education. Mrs. Mary N. Schwab, who was born in 1891 and received a district-school education, is the wife of Arthur Schwab, an agriculturist of Gervais. To them one child, Henry A., has been born.

Mr. Barnes gives his support to the democratic party but has never sought office as a reward for party fealty. He has little time from his regular agricultural duties, in which he has displayed indefatigable labor and able management. He is a member of the Roman Catholic church and here again he has shown a consistent attitude and a loyal constancy.

T. J. CONRAD, who lives retired in Portland, was born in Indiana, March 25, 1843. He was a son of Simeon and Mary Esther (Flock) Conrad, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of Germany. The latter was brought to America by her parents when she was a small child. She married Mr. Conrad in Indiana and they both resided there until their deaths, she passing away in 1881, while Mr. Conrad died two years later. He was a cooper by trade but in later life owned a farm which his sons operated. To Mr. and Mrs. Conrad were born seven children: Simeon, of Huntsville, Washington; Christena, who is the widow of Isaac Crabill and resides at Freewater, Oregon; Thomas J., of this review; Peter, of Washington; Joseph, of Arkansas; and America Kline and Hannah, both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad had both previously been married and by his first marriage Mr. Conrad was the father of five children, and by her first marriage Mrs. Conrad was the mother of seven children. Of the twelve children only one now survives, Mary Esther, of California.

T. J. Conrad received only a limited education on account of the lack of school facilities at that time. He started out in life for himself in 1865, at the age of twenty-one. In that year he left Indiana and crossed the plains by horse and mule teams, joining a train of ninety-three wagons, three hundred men, besides women and children, being in the party. They were four months and nine days in making the trip, their destination being Napa, California. There Mr. Conrad was engaged in farming for six years. He then returned to Indiana, was married and farmed there for six years. At the end of that period he again went to California, where he spent six more years in farming. He then came to Portland and a short time afterward went to Pendleton, he and his three oldest children being obliged to walk part of the way, while his wife and their five youngest children rode on a freight wagon. There Mr. Conrad took up a tract of four hundred and eighty acres of railroad land which was located twenty-one miles north of Pendleton. He resided on this farm for nine years when he sold it and bought six hundred acres near Milton, on which he remained until 1911, when he retired from active life and moved to Portland. He still owns this farm of six hundred acres and he also has a fine home in Portland which is located at No. 238 East Fiftieth street.

MR. AND MRS. J. B. BARNES

In 1871 Mr. Conrad was married to Miss Louisa J. Brandenburg, who was born in Indiana, a daughter of David and Laura Brandenburg, both of whom were natives of that state but of German ancestry. They both passed away in Indiana. In their family were sixteen children, eleven of whom are now living. They are: Mrs. Martha Longbottom, of Indiana; Margaret, the wife of Louis Franks, of Indiana; Marion, also of that state; Mary C., residing in Indiana; John, of Indiana; Samuel, of New Mexico; Annie, the wife of Simeon Conrad, of Washington; Henry, of Indiana; Mrs. T. J. Conrad; Laura, the widow of James Parker; and Ada, the wife of Charles Crawford, of Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad have become the parents of fifteen children, as follows: Rovilla Jane, who was born in 1872 and became the wife of Albert Cull, of Okanogan, Washington; Amanda E., who was born in 1873, and married John Shaver, of Yakima, Washington; David Henry, who was born in 1874 and resides in Eagle valley, Oregon; Addie Dickinson, a resident of Milton, Oregon, who was born in 1876; Annie, born in 1877, who is now the wife of Gustavis Sprague, of Canyon, Washington; Charity E., who was born in 1878, and who married Albert Vincent, of Blackfoot, Idaho; Grace, who at the age of four years was burned to death when the house was destroyed by fire; Jessie T., who was born in 1882 and passed away at the age of thirty years; Mary M., who was born in 1885, and is the wife of Fred Johnson, of Milton, Oregon; Rhoda E. Bertha, who was born in 1886 and is the wife of Lester Hammer; Maggie Olive, who was born in 1888, and who wedded William Kinney, of Milton, Oregon; Lydia Edith whose birth occurred in 1891, and who is the wife of Orman J. Fox, of Milton; John, born in 1893, and now attending school; Dottie Dorcas, who was born in 1894 and is now attending business college in Portland; and F. Blossom, a student in the Washington high school. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad also have thirty-nine living grandchildren. Two granddaughters and a grandson, the children of Mrs. Hammer, now live with their grandparents. They are: Loa B., born in 1905; Bessie L., whose birth occurred on the 20th of October, 1907; and Carl L., born in May, 1911. The older members of Mr. Conrad's family were all given good educational advantages.

In politics Mr. Conrad is a democrat but is very liberal in his views. He has never cared to hold public office, preferring to give all of his time to his business interests. He and his family are members of the Christian church and they are well known and highly respected throughout their community. Mr. Conrad has been successful in his business interests and is now able to live retired, enjoying the fruits of a well spent life.

JOSEPH GREER was numbered among Oregon's pioneer settlers of 1852, coming to this state when a youth of seventeen years. He was born June 17, 1835, in Park county, Indiana, and was a son of Henry Greer. His mother died when he was a small boy and in 1852 he accompanied his father on the long journey westward to Oregon. They drove across the country, meeting the usual experiences and hardships of such a journey in pioneer days and took up their abode near Lebanon in Linn county, where they remained for several years. In the family were four children: William, who died at Oakesdale, Washington; Joseph, a twin brother of William; George, a resident of Texas; and Mrs. Jane Kees, deceased.

As previously stated, Joseph Greer was a youth of about seventeen years when the family came to Oregon and after living in Linn county for about six years he took up his abode on the Umatilla river in 1858. He lived in the vicinity of Walla Walla until he came to the farm upon which he died, a mile and a half south of Weston. His entire active life was devoted to general agricultural pursuits and stock-raising and his well directed labors brought him a goodly measure of success, so that he was enabled to leave his family in comfortable circumstances when death claimed him on the 28th of March, 1879.

About ten years before his demise, Joseph Greer had married, on the 9th of October, 1869, Mrs. Harriet (Courtney) Kees. She was the widow of William Kees, whom she had married on February 18, 1866, at Walla Walla, Washington, and who died February 1, 1868. Mrs. Greer was born in Linn county, Oregon, March 3, 1851, a daughter of John and Caroline (Buell) Courtney, who were natives of Illinois and Indiana respectively. They were reared in the east but were married in Linn county, Oregon, where Mr. Courtney had arrived as a young man in 1845. He remained at Whitman Fort for a few days and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Osborn, escaped the Indian massacre there. Mr. Courtney proceeded on his way into the Willamette valley but was one of the volunteers who returned and fought the Indians. He resided in the Willamette valley until 1859, when he removed to Walla Walla, Washington, and afterward established his home in Spokane. Subsequently he resided in Arizona for several years but spent his last days in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Greer. He devoted his life to farming and stock-raising. His wife also passed away at the home of her daughter. They reared a family of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Greer became parents of two children: Minnie, who is the widow of Hugh Walker and lives in Weston; and Frank, who married Jennie Waddingham and has three children, Vida, Fred and Cecil. By her first marriage Mrs. Greer had a daughter, Fannie Kees, who is the wife of William Barnes, of Weston.

Oregon will ever owe a debt of gratitude to her pioneer settlers—the men who with courageous spirit made their way into the northwest, facing hardships and privations and meeting also many dangers owing to the hostility of the red men. Mr. Greer was of the number who aided in sowing the seeds of civilization in this section of the country. He lived here during the Cayuse Indian war of 1856-57 and was in the regular service during a part of two years, seeing about six months of active military duty in the attempt to subdue the red race. Although a third of a century has passed away since he was called to his final rest, he lived to see many changes as the country became populated by an enterprising and progressive class of citizens. At all times he bore his part in the work of general improvement and progress. He is remembered by many of the older settlers of this part of the county, all of whom respected him for his sterling worth.

ALEXANDER McKENNA is one of the prominent and well known agriculturists in Grant county, Oregon, and the eight hundred acres which he is operating is a valuable addition to the development and expansion of this section of the country. He was born in Ireland, September 23, 1847, and is a son of William and Sarah McKenna. He came to America when he was very young and settled in Humboldt county, California, where he received his education in the public schools. He remained there until 1863, in which year he came to Oregon, locating in Canyon City, Grant county, where he prospered as a hotel keeper for many years. He later disposed of his hotel property and engaged in the sawmill business on Pine creek for eighteen years, first as an employe and for the last twelve years as owner of a mill. He met with a fair degree of success in this enterprise but eventually sold the mill in order to buy a farm eight miles from Canyon City, which he brought to a high state of cultivation during the years he was connected with it. In 1899 he sold his land and purchased a livery business in Canyon City which he carried on successfully for a number of years. He later located on his present property near Mount Vernon on the John Day river and has since given his time to progressive agriculture.

In 1881 Mr. McKenna was united in marriage to Miss Alice Jenkins, a daughter of David and Annie (Riley) Jenkins, the former a native of Scotland and the latter of New York. Mrs. McKenna's father came to America in 1833 and was employed for eleven years in the Brooklyn navy yard. In 1844 he went to Galveston, Texas, and after two year's residence in that city moved into Mexico, where he remained for two years. In 1848 he went to California, locating near the Golden Gate, one year before the famous discovery of gold in 1849. He built a vessel and followed the sea for a short time. He was one of the pioneer settlers in San Francisco and built some of the first houses ever erected on the site of the present city, being a resident of that locality when the famous gold strike was made. He spent five months in the mines and at the end of that time returned to San Francisco, where in partnership with two others he bought a vessel with the intention of going to sea. Every day, however, reports of new gold discoveries came from the mountains and the whaling project was eventually abandoned in favor of mining. Mr. Jenkins met with a fair degree of success in the California gold fields and in 1863 came to Oregon, where he followed mining for some time. Eventually he took up land in the John Day valley, six miles below the city of John Day, and here he engaged in stock-raising until his death. To Mr. and Mrs. McKenna have been born eight children: Anna, who is now Mrs. Claude Ingle, of whom further mention is made on another page in this work; David, who resides in Silver City, Idaho; Dora, now Mrs. Schuyler Walker; Amy, who married Burt Howard of Prairie City, Oregon; Velma, Charles, Edward and Hazel, all of whom reside at home.

The eight hundred acres of land which Mr. McKenna is now actively operating constitutes the old Jenkins homestead. Previous to the removal of the family to this property the land had been neglected for some years but Mr. McKenna is now giving his personal supervision and his undoubted agricultural talent to the building up and improvement of the place. A portion of the land is under irrigation and is being gradually improved along progressive and scientific lines. Mrs. McKenna is one of the remarkable women of Oregon, endowed with a high degree of refinement and much culture of an unusual sort. She is well known in social circles of Grant county as a charming and hospitable woman. Mr. McKenna gives his allegiance to the democratic party but has never sought public office. He is a member of Hobah Lodge, No. 22, I. O. O. F., having been a member since he was twenty-one years of age. He is one of the many farmers in his section of Oregon whose individual activities have been vital forces in agricultural upbuilding and have aided materially in raising the standards of modern farming.

W. J. TOWNLEY, a merchant of Union, owns a sixteen hundred acre farm near Hot Lake, and has an orchard of thirty-five acres lying within the city limits of the town of his adoption. He is doing a large stock-raising business on his farm and is meeting with success. He was born at Briggsville, Wisconsin, January 19, 1862, a son of Robert and Mary (Wilkinson) Townley, both of whom were natives of England. The father emigrated to the new world when a young man, settling first in Boston, where he remained for six or eight years, removing to Wisconsin in the late '50s.

W. J. Townley spent his boyhood days principally in Waukesha, Wisconsin, where he received a good high-school education. In 1887 he removed to Oregon and began work as a gold miner at Sanger, being thus employed for about eight years. There he represented a Milwaukee company and continued in that firm's employ until the panic of 1893, after which he went into business on his own account, purchasing the home farm lying on the north side of Union, within the city limits. In 1894 he planted on his land what became the first commercial orchard in the Grande Ronde valley, comprising about thirty-five acres of apple, peach, pear, and prune, as well as other varieties of trees. In 1897 Mr. Townley engaged in the general mercantile business in Union and has since added to his stock, which now occupies the entire first floor of the new Masonic Temple building. He also owns a farm of sixteen hundred acres at Hot Lake, surrounding the land upon which is located a sanitarium. He is there carrying on a large stock-raising and feeding business, usually feeding about seven hundred head of cattle annually for the market. He also raises registered shorthorn cattle and registered Percheron and Kentucky saddle horses and pure bred Poland China hogs. He occupies a residence in Union which is modern throughout.

Mr. Townley was married in June, 1884, to Miss Mary F. Gale, of Waukesha, Wisconsin, and to this union have been born two children, Wythel G. and Alice Dorothy. Mr. Townley has capably filled several local offices and always gives his influence and support to any enterprise that tends to develop the city and community. He belongs to the Masonic order, having attained the Knight Templar degree in the York Rite and the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite. He is one of the successful business men of eastern Oregon and is widely known as one of its leading citizens.

ERNEST E. EHELER, blacksmith and machinist of Helix, was born in Valley county, Nebraska, on the 22d of December, 1883, his parents being Edgar and Mary Jane (Nay) Eheler. The father was a native of Brookfield, Nova Scotia, where his birth occurred on the 15th of August, 1857, and the mother was born in Dundee, Scotland, on the 8th of June, 1865. Their marriage occurred in Bracebridge, Ontario, previous to their removal to Nebraska in the autumn of 1881. After residing in that state for nineteen years they went to California. The mother is making her home in Sonoma and the father, who was an agriculturist throughout his active career, is living with his son Ernest E.

Ernest E. Eheler is the eldest of nine children and at an early age it was necessary for him to take up some of the duties which fell upon his father in the management of the home farm. After acquiring a meager education in the public schools he learned the blacksmith's trade, which he has since followed. He made Stockton, California, his headquarters until July, 1910, when he removed to Helix, Oregon, where he has since resided. Since 1903 he has devoted a part of his time to mechanical work and acted as engineer in Stockton for a short time. For one winter he was employed by the Hall Manufacturing Company and while in that position he opened a shop for himself, where he has since been engaged as a blacksmith and automobile repairer. He seems to possess innate ability in mechanical lines and, although he has had little or no scientific training in this line, he is meeting with a good degree of success and is one of the most successful representatives of his trade in Helix.

On the 24th of December, 1908, Mr. Eheler was married to Miss Edith Leola Doidge, whose birth occurred in Silver City, Nevada, on the 20th of October, 1889. She is a daughter of William and Mary Doidge, the former now deceased and the latter a resident of Madera, California. To Mr. and Mrs. Eheler one child, Ernest, has been born.

In the west many of the men who are forging to the front in the various lines of industry and commerce are among the younger generation and among these Ernest E. Eheler stands out prominently as a skilled blacksmith and general machine repairer a reputation which has been won by hard and unremitting labor and by conscientious attention to his business undertakings. He holds the respect and regard not only of those who know him in a business way but also those whose acquaintance he has made socially because of his stability and integrity.

T. D. TAYLOR. Among the well known residents of Pendleton is T. D. Taylor, who for the past ten years has filled the office of county sheriff while for four years previous to that time he had served as deputy sheriff. His record in office has been a creditable one characterized by faithfulness to duty in every relation. He has become widely known through his business connections and is now interested in farming and stock-raising in Grant county. He was born in Marion county, Oregon, but at an early age became a resident of eastern Oregon, settling in Umatilla county in September, 1870. His father, David Taylor, was born in Indiana and made the long journey across the plains to Oregon in 1852; here he at first became interested in farming but for the past twenty years has been engaged in the grain business at Athena. He married S. Ann Gerking, also a native of Indiana, and to them have been born three children of whom two are living, the younger being W. R. Taylor who makes his home at Athena.

T. D. Taylor acquired his education in the common schools of Oregon and was reared to farm life. He started out in the business world as an employe in a hardware store in Athena, and afterward came to Pendleton, securing a clerical position with a hardware company. He was called from commercial pursuits to enter public office and after serving for four years as deputy sheriff was called to the office of sheriff of Umatilla county, in which position he has continued for ten years. He discharges his duties without fear or favor and his promptness and reliability are qualities which have led to his reelection, so that his incumbency in office covers an entire decade. His political support has always been given to the Democratic party and in addition to his connection with the office of sheriff he has served as city treasurer of Athena. In business circles, too, he has been active for he and his brother are owners of land in Grant county, where they engage in stock-raising.

In November, 1889, Mr. Taylor was united in marriage to Miss Sadie A. Smith, who died leaving a son, Sheldon, who is attending the Portland business college. In August, 1909, Mr. Taylor was again married, his second union being with Miss Clara Nossu. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity in which he has attained the Knight Templar degree. He is a charter member of the Knights of Pythias lodge at Athena. He likewise holds membership with the Artisans and has the friendly regard and good will of his brethren of these fraternities. His record as a business man and citizen and also in his social connections places him with the foremost citizens of his county.

WILLIAM J. MARINER is one of the foremost of the active, progressive and influential business men of Oregon and to none other is greater credit due for the reclamation and development of the arid lands of the state. He has been an untiring worker along that line, spending time and money without hope of direct remuneration. He has given uncontrovertible evidence of his public spirit not only in this way but in innumerable other directions, particularly in his support of the interests of navigation on the Columbia river. That his efforts in that direction have been forceful, practical and of lasting benefit finds its proof in the activity of the United States government in its work along the Columbia, especially in building the Celilo canal near The Dalles. With notable prescience Mr. Mariner recognizes what the future has in store for this broad and growing western country and seeks in every possible manner to further the work of general improvement, development and progress.

A native of Lebanon, Tennessee, he was born September 25, 1853, a son of William and Nancy Agnes (McPherson) Mariner, who were natives of Maine and Tennessee respectively. The father was professor of languages and mathematics in the Cumberland University prior to the Civil war and after the close of hostilities entered upon a similar connection at Lincoln, Illinois. Later he continued his educational work at Mount Zion, Illinois, and next became connected with Whitman College, at Walla Walla, Washington, where he remained for a number of years. He then retired and moved to Spokane, where he passed away. His widow still survives, at the age of eighty-four years.

William J. Mariner acquired his early education in Lebanon, Tennessee, and in the public schools of Illinois, but ill health prevented him from utilizing to the full the opportunities that were afforded him in that direction. In 1873 he became a resident of Walla Walla, Washington, being much benefited by this change. He was connected with the cattle industry in the eastern part of the state and with farming until 1880. Since coming to the northwest he has realized much of the possibilities of the country and his labors and efforts have ever been directed in those channels through which flows the greatest good to the greatest number. His efforts have largely been of a character that has contributed to public progress as well as to individual success. He had charge of the building and operation of the flume for ties that were used in the construction of the line of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company through Washington to Portland, Oregon. In 1880 he removed to Wasco county, now Gilliam county, Oregon, where he took up a claim, and has added to his holdings from time to time until he now has about three thousand acres. He has demonstrated clearly that this method of farming may be profitably followed and his practical labors have been attended with gratifying results. Mr. Mariner has taken an active part in opening up the Columbia river to navigation and for a time in connection with his partner, J. A. Smith, operated a line of boats on the upper Columbia river. His identification with river transportation has continued long and has been of immense value to the public. At one time he and his partner had a complete survey made at their own expense for a portage road on the Washington side of the river and he is now one of the three commissioners in charge of the Oregon State Portage Railway from Celilo to The Dalles. In 1905 they organized the Baker Irrigation Company, of which Mr. Mariner is the treasurer and manager. This company expect to handle fifteen thousand acres of land in their project which they are making a profitable proposition. Mr. Mariner is the second vice president of the Oregon Irrigation Congress which was recently organized and he has studied systematically and along scientific lines the subject of introducing water to the arid country and thereby promoting its fertility. He was active in advancing the Umatilla extension government reclamation project. He has always contended that the government should cooperate with the settlers and build the main canals and reservoirs whereby the responsibility would fall on the reclamation bureau. He believes that the government should not compete with private enterprises in the development of irrigation and reclamation projects. In all public improvements he has been active and his cooperation can ever be counted upon to advance the welfare of the community or the state at large.

Local interests have also profited by the cooperation and ability of Mr. Mariner who in 1887 was appointed postmaster at Blalock,

WILLIAM J. MARINER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

Gilliam county, and has since held that position continuously. In politics he has ever been a republican but never places partisanship before the general welfare. He was one of the commissioners appointed when Wheeler county was created to adjust the financial interests of the involved counties of Grant, Gilliam and Wheeler and in 1889 he was chosen county commissioner of Gilliam county for a term of two years. In 1891 he was elected county judge of Gilliam county and served continuously on the bench for twelve years, his decisions being strictly fair and impartial and causing his retention in office. In 1908 he was elected a representative to the state legislature from Wheeler, Gilliam and Sherman counties and such was the creditable record which he made in the general assembly that he was reelected in 1910. During his first term he assisted effectively in securing the passage of the bill extending the Oregon State Portage Road from the Big Eddy to The Dalles and he was also active in the good roads movement. By appointment of the governor he was made a member of the commission on the consolidation of the Oregon State University and the Oregon Agricultural College. In 1912 he was appointed a member of the state tax commission and all this makes his activities very wide and far-reaching. He is directly responsible for the present system of taxation, eliminating the state equalization board and cutting out additional classifications. His work on assessment taxation was the most important feature in his career as a member of the legislature.

Mr. Mariner is a remarkable example of the self-made man. Ill health retarded his progress in early life but he overcame all his early disadvantages and as the years have gone by has made wise use of time, talents and opportunities. He has firm faith in the future of Oregon, recognizes its possibilities and resources, has long been prominent in the public life of the state and has made a record which reflects credit and honor upon Oregon for all time. The west is making her history and Mr. Mariner is numbered among those who are writing some of its most important chapters.

FERDINAND H. HUDEMANN is the owner of three quarters of a section of wheat land northeast of Connell, and seven and one quarter sections of wheat land upon which he is now residing. His birth occurred near Gibson City, McLean county, Illinois, September 6, 1879, a son of Julius and Maggie Hudemann. When he was but five years of age he was brought by his parents to Adams, Umatilla county, where he has since resided continuously excepting during the three years he was farming in Franklin county, Washington. For the past five years he has been cultivating the home place which comprises seven and one quarter sections of land, all devoted to wheat growing. Its appearance and general development attest its good management and high cultivation.

On the 19th of May, 1909, Mr. Hudemann was married to Miss Minnie Kemper, whose birth occurred in Pendleton on the 26th of July, 1889, and who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kemper. Politically Mr. Hudemann is an independent democrat, and also holds membership in the Lutheran church. Many of the most profitable and highly productive agricultural tracts in Umatilla county are at present being cultivated by young men. These men bring the same enthusiasm and enterprising spirit into their work which their fathers did, and where the latter found their greatest labor in clearing the land the sons now have the opportunity of proving the worth of the soil which had previously been prepared for them. Mr. Hudemann is no exception to the long list of progressive, industrious and energetic farmers who are making this district one of the best wheat-growing sections in the northwest.

HENRY YOUNG, a well known merchant at Rock Creek, Baker county, was born in Canada, June 1, 1876, a son of William C. and Isabella (Hatch) Young, both natives of England who emigrated to Canada at an early day. The father remained a resident of the Dominion until his death and the mother now makes her home in Quebec.

Henry Young was one of a family of fourteen children of whom nine are still living. His youth was spent in Canada where he received a good common-school and business college education. He remained with his parents until he attained his majority when he was married, in Montreal, to Miss Jessie Graham Stewart, a school teacher, who was also born in the Dominion. She is a daughter of James and Catherine Stewart, both of whom are still residents of Canada. After his marriage Mr. Young came to Oregon, settling at Rock Creek, Baker county, in 1907, and there engaged in mercantile business, a vocation which he has since followed. To Mr. and Mrs. Young were born two sons: Henry R. W., deceased; and Graham S.

Mr. Young is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge, in which he has occupied all of its official chairs, and also belongs to the Encampment and the Rebekahs. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America Camp, No. 8816, at Rock Creek, and of the L. O. L. Politically he is a democrat and religiously both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in the work of which they are actively interested and of which they are liberal supporters. Mr. Young is well known in business, fraternal and church circles in Baker county. Just in his business dealings with his fellowmen, affable in his relationship with all, he has built up a lucrative business and has a large acquaintance in his community and throughout Baker county. He is one of the substantial men of his section and among all classes he is universally respected.

VERNON V. KERLEY, a well known blacksmith of Helix, was born in Mexia, Texas, on the 21st of August, 1882, his parents being Thomas T. and Willie C. (Meaks) Kerley. The father was also a native of Mexia but the mother's birth occurred in Louisiana. They are now residing in Chillicothe, Texas, where Mr. Kerley is employed.

Vernon V. Kerley acquired his education in the public schools of Texas and remained with his parents until he was eighteen years of age. Two years previous he had learned the blacksmith's trade, which he has since followed. He resided in Texas until 1900, when he located in Helix, Oregon. For the last three years he has conducted an independent business and at present owns a shop, where he is doing a general blacksmith and machine business and repairing of all kinds. Because of his excellent work and the courteous treatment which his patrons receive his business is constantly growing and he is one of the foremost blacksmiths of Helix.

On the 21st of December, 1904, Mr. Kerley was married to Miss Grace Gladys Titsworth, of Athena, Umatilla county. Her birth occurred on the 15th of August, 1885, and she is a daughter of George and Amelia (Stone) Titsworth, who are residing near Midvale, Idaho. To Mr. and Mrs. Kerley three children have been born, Vernon Emmett, Robert Venson and Rova Maxine. Although he is still a young man, his record is one which contains valuable lessons concerning perseverance, energy, determination and fidelity, his success being attributable to these qualities.

GEORGE LOVECTOR HIBBARD, who has been a resident of Portland for more than fifty years, has the distinction of being the first manufacturer of boots and shoes in Oregon. His birth occurred on the 18th of July, 1835, in Troy, Vermont, his parents being Joel and Lucy E. (Cleveland) Hibbard. The father was a native of Canada, while the mother was born in Vermont, and it was in the latter place that they were married. To their union six children were born, all of whom are deceased with the exception of George L.

After attending the common schools for a few years, George L. Hibbard started at the early age of thirteen years to earn his own livelihood. He first accepted a position as day laborer and was thus employed until he was seventeen years of age, when he removed to Boston, where he served an apprenticeship as carpenter and joiner. He remained in that city for several years, and then made a trip to Minnesota but not caring to establish himself in that locality he returned to New York and built a tannery at Wellsville for A. S. French and A. L. Hibbard. In 1859 he went west and located in San Francisco, California. After living in that city for a few months he came to Portland arriving here on the 18th of June, of that year, and has since been connected with the business activities of the west. After coming west he was first employed at St. Helen at a dollar a day but remained only a short time. Subsequently he was employed for eight days for four dollars per day and was urged to remain with that concern, which manufactured wagons. He returned to Portland, however, but, being unsuccessful in securing employment, he went to Oregon City and while there erected a house for Colonel Jennings. Afterward he worked at Vancouver Barracks until the war broke out, and then opened a shop at Vancouver, making doors and windows. He was thus engaged for a short time but was again employed in the government service at Walla Walla, Washington, for two years before erecting the Umatilla landing. Until 1863 he was in the mercantile business in Idaho before locating permanently in Portland in 1865, where he has since resided. At first he engaged in the produce business, which he conducted until 1872. In that year he suffered heavy losses by fire. The following year he again engaged in business in the manufacture of boots and shoes. This was the first factory of its kind to be established in Oregon and he was associated with it until 1895. In 1905 he again suffered financial reverses and since that time he has lived in Montavilla. He is the owner of a large amount of real estate and was the promoter of what is known as the Montavilla Reality Company. He marked out the first plat and subsequently made the first addition to Montavilla. He has been active in building up this part of the country and is one of the most enthusiastic promoters and business men of the city.

Mr. Hibbard has been twice married. In 1867 he was married, in Portland, to Miss Josephine Jeffers, whose birth occurred in Oregon City and who was a daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Hurford) Jeffers, natives of West Virginia. Mrs. Jeffers died at the advanced age of ninety-four years and the father passed away when he was sixty-eight years of age. To Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard four children were born: Charles, of Portland; George L., Jr., deceased; Frank, who is also a resident of Portland; and Carrie, who is the wife of Fred Irwin, of this city. Mr. Hibbard was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Joseph Harned, a sister of his first wife. Her mother was born in Ohio, on the 21st of September, 1808, a daughter of Benjamin and Charity Hurford. In November, 1829, she was married to Joseph Jeffers and in 1847 came to Oregon. They left Burlington, Iowa, on the 26th of March, and arrived at Oregon City on the 12th of September. They finally located in Clatsop county on the Lewis and Clarke river, taking up a donation land claim, situated between Astoria and Portland, where they spent their remaining years. Mrs. Hibbard has two children by her first union: William J., of Seattle, Washington; and William M., of Kalama, Washington. To Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard four children were born: John Beacher, who is a resident of Portland; Guy Arthur, of Portland, who is married and has one child, Guy A., Jr., Ernest T. who is married and has one son G. L., and lives in Portland; and Victor C., also a resident of Portland.

In politics Mr. Hibbard is a republican and, although he is thoroughly alive to the issues of the day and takes a citizen's interest in exercising his right of franchise, he has never sought office as a reward for party fealty. His religious faith is indicated in his membership in the Presbyterian church. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Throughout his long residence in Oregon he has always proven himself a citizen of sterling worth, his enterprising spirit, his perseverance and his industry having won him the regard and esteem of his associates in business and social circles.

JAMES T. WISDOM, prominent in commercial and financial circles in Baker City was born in Randolph county, Missouri, November 22, 1841. His father, Thomas Barnes Wisdom, was born in Kentucky in 1814 and died in Oregon in 1893. The mother, Lucinda (Gess) Wisdom, was born in Kentucky in 1821 and died in 1866. The father was an agriculturist and followed the occupation of farming throughout his entire life. In 1863 he came to Oregon with his family, taking up a government claim near Wingville, Baker county. In his family were thirteen children, five of whom are still living.

James T. Wisdom was educated in the common schools of his native state, graduating from the high school of Trenton, Missouri. He assisted his father with the farm work and while thus engaged learned valuable lessons of industry and economy which have served him well in later years. After the removal of the family to Oregon James T. Wisdom added to his knowledge by pursuing a course in a commercial college at Portland. Shortly afterward he entered the drug business in Baker City in 1870 and continued in that line of trade for twelve years, during which time he succeeded in building up a fine business that in later years became a source of considerable profit. Being alive to the superior advantages which Baker City offered at that time to a man of experience, wide acquaintance and capital, he embarked in the real-estate business, buying, selling and renting properties and also loaning money for many years and, having keen business judgment, a knowledge of values and possessing the happy faculty of interesting people in what he had to offer, he soon built up a thriving and lucrative business. Some years since, he retired from active business, sold his farm properties and concentrated his investments in Baker City, where he now owns a number of good properties and where he is interested in some of the prominent financial institutions.

On the 28th of January, 1892, Mr. Wisdom was married to Mrs. Lavina (Toney) Shinn, a native of Illinois, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Toney. Her father was a successful farmer and both parents are now deceased. Mr. Wisdom has always given his political allegiance to the democratic party and has taken a commendable interest in civic affairs. In 1872 he was elected county superintendent of schools, a position in which his broad education and wide business experience served him in good stead. During the time in which he served in that office he was enabled by wise management as well as by business skill to place the school system upon a much better footing than it had hitherto been and his labors in that direction were of inestimable value. Important factors in the successful life work of Mr. Wisdom were his good parentage, the excellent training he received as a boy at home, the school advantages which he enjoyed even at an early day and the wise and careful management which he has always exercised in his business affairs. He has possessed the faculty of forming warm and lasting friendships and during his residence in Baker county has surrounded himself with a large number whom he holds in the closest intimacy. His arduous labors during his active business career now enable him to live retired and enjoy the fruits of his former years of toil. While engaged in farming and stock-raising he bred one of the finest herds of registered shorthorn cattle in Oregon and was the breeder of a prize steer weighing 2,584 pounds which, when dressed, was 76.32 per cent of his gross weight—a remarkable record in stock-raising.

A. B. COOLEY, a leading agriculturist of Pendleton, was born in Henderson county, New Jersey, forty miles from New York city, on the 29th of October, 1863, his parents being James and Margaret (Jones) Cooley, also natives of Henderson county. They resided in their native state until 1867, when they removed to McDonough county, Illinois, where they resided four or five years before going to Wilson county, Kansas, where they now reside. The father is a retired ranchman and is living in Neodesha, Kansas. To them ten children were born, six of whom survive, A. B. Cooley being the second child and the eldest living.

A. B. Cooley remained at home with his parents attending the district school and assisting his father upon the farm until he was twenty-one years of age. After having cast his first vote at the time James G. Blaine was a nominee for president he came to Oregon, and since April 5, 1884, has been a resident of Umatilla county. Upon his arrival here he secured one-half section of railroad land in Middle Cold Springs, and began growing wheat. So successful was he that he was able from time to time to add to his property until at one time he was the owner of eleven hundred and twenty acres, all of which was planted to wheat. After disposing of that property he removed to Pendleton and for the past five years has been residing there. He was engaged in farming on the Umatilla reservation, and with his son cultivates twelve hundred and eighty acres of land which he rents from the Indians. He has devoted his whole attention to grain growing, and during the year of 1901 raised sixty-three thousand bushels of wheat and barley. His work is carried on along the most modern and scientific lines, and his success proves the practicability of the various theories he has put into practice. For about eight years Mr. Cooley had as extensive a cattle ranch as was to be found in the county, owning from seven to nine hundred head. He at present raises horses and mules and has about ninety head. Whatever he has undertaken he has carried out on a very large scale, thus attesting his remarkable ability.

On the 1st of October, 1887, Mr. Cooley was married to Miss Mary E. Gibson, whose birth occurred in Wilson, Kansas. She had been a schoolmate of Mr. Cooley and is a daughter of George Gibson, who resided in Oregon for some time before his death. By this union three children were born: George, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in partnership with his father; Margaret, who is the wife of C. C. Rasor, of Medina county, Ohio; and Walter, who is residing at home.

In politics Mr. Cooley gives his support to the republican party. He holds membership in the Masonic order, belonging to the blue lodge and chapter. He is also affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

NICHOLAS STEPHEN SCOLLARD, who is residing in Woodburn, Marion county, was born in Terre Haute, Indiana, December 26, 1852, his parents being Morris and Margaret (O'Conner) Scollard, both of whom were born in County Kerry, Ireland. After their marriage in their native land they immediately removed to Canada and resided first in Quebec and then in Montreal previous to going to Michigan in 1848. There they remained for one winter and subsequently removed to Indianapolis where they made their home for three years before taking up their residence in Terre Haute for two years. Mr. Scollard was employed by a railroad and Mrs. Scollard managed a hotel. They next removed to St. Louis, Missouri, and remained there for a short time before going to Omaha for a two years' stay, during which time he acquired one hundred and sixty acres of land one hundred miles up the Missouri river near Punka, Dixon county, Nebraska. Upon this property he began farming and remained there for nine years before going to Montana in 1864 and thence to the mines at Virginia City. Here Mr. Scollard was employed for from five to twenty dollars a day. At another time he was earning seven dollars a day when his eldest son was receiving twelve dollars per day, which attests their ability and their value to their employers. After a residence of two years in Virginia City they came to Oregon, locating upon rented land in St. Louis, Marion county. This tract consisted of two hundred acres, but after cultivating it for two years Mr. Scollard again took up railroad work, in the employ of the Oregon and California railroad at Turner for two years. At the expiration of this service he came to French Prairie and purchased a farm of one hundred and ninety-two acres, two and one-half miles north of Gervais, and this property was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Scollard until their deaths which occurred September 18, 1882, and April 22, 1892, respectively. They were the parents of six children: John, of Woodburn, Oregon, who is married and has seven children, Charles, Rose, Morris, Frank, Robert, Joseph and Edwin; Julia, the widow of John Kennedy of Woodburn, Oregon, who has four children, Anna, Margaret, Joseph and Thomas; Nicholas S., who is the subject of this sketch; Thomas, deceased; Mary, who is married to Albert Crosby of Woodburn and has three children, Cyrillus, Edgar and Walter, the latter two being twins; and William of Portland, who is married and has six children, Helen, Roy, Jacob C., Mona, Mabel and Alvoid.

At the age of twenty-five years Nicholas S. Scollard started upon his independent career by renting land from his father and running a threshing machine which he owned and operated for a number of years, but after his marriage he purchased three hundred and twenty acres near Woodburn, upon which they resided for twenty-seven years. So energetically and diligently did Mr. Scollard cultivate his land that he met with the gratifying results this rich agricultural district affords and, in consequence of his labor and efforts, he is now enjoying a comfortable, retired life at Woodburn. Their present comfortable circumstances have been made possible by the profits derived from their farm which consists of two hundred acres, and which Mr. Scollard is renting.

On the 17th of November, 1884, at Gervais, Oregon, Mr. Scollard was wedded to Miss Catherine I. Fitzgerald, the daughter of Thomas and Mary (O'Laughlin) Fitzgerald, both of whom are natives of Ireland, the former of the city of Cork and the latter of Tipperary. Mr. Fitzgerald came to America when he was fifteen years of age and made the trip alone. His father had died when he was very young and finding it necessary to earn his own livelihood and being ambitious Mr. Fitzgerald set out in 1832 for the new world where equal opportunities for success were offered to all. He first settled in Keokuk, Iowa, where he was married to Miss Permelia Eldridge. They crossed the plains with ox teams in 1847 and settled near where Woodburn now stands, on a donation land claim of six hundred and forty acres. This was his home for the remainder of his life. In the spring of 1853 he was again married, his second union being to Mary O'Laughlin. His death occurred on the 17th of May, 1860. By his first union he had three children: Hanora, who is the widow of John Murphy; Mary, deceased, who was the wife of James Murphy; and Julia Ann, deceased. By his second union he also had three children: J. Thomas Fitzgerald, of Pendleton; Dr. P. H. Fitzgerald, of Salem, Oregon; and Mrs. Scollard.

Mr. and Mrs. Scollard are the parents of five children. Mary, the eldest, was born on the 28th of August, 1885, and since her graduation from the public school and later from Mount Angel Academy, from which institution she holds a normal school diploma, she has been engaged in teaching in the public schools at Woodburn. Margaret was born July 30, 1888, and is living at home. She also was graduated from Monnt Angel Academy, having taken the Latin scientific course. Stephen, who successfullly completed the high-school course is now taking a law course in Notre Dame, Indiana. His

MR. AND MRS. N. S. SCOLLARD

THE
PUBLIC
AETOR
TILDEN

birth occurred June 17, 1892. Edward B., who is residing at home, was born April 9, 1895. Cecil Joseph is attending public school, his birth having occurred February 13, 1900.

Mr. Scollard gives his political allegiance to the democratic party. Although he is not an office seeker he takes a citizen's interest in all which pertains to the social and moral welfare of his community, and does what he can to promote its progress. In religious faith he is a Roman Catholic, holding membership in the Roman Catholic church of Woodburn. In his agricultural pursuits he has been successful because of his diligence, his persistency and his thrift, and in his social relations he has won the esteem and the regard of those who know him, because of his integrity and his high sense of honor.

DANIEL WEBSTER BUTLER, who was a familiar figure in the political circles of Oregon, was born in Muscatine, Iowa, January 12, 1848, a son of William and Caroline (Limbocker) Butler. They had the following children: Cornelia married John Bredenstein, of Red Oak, Iowa, and they have six children, including Mary, John, Carrie, Sheridan and Ellen. John, who resides in Omaha, Nebraska, is married and has two children, Delia and John. Sarah Ann became the wife of S. E. Christolier of Mosier, Kansas. Daniel Webster Butler, the subject of our sketch, and Henry Clay Butler are twins. The latter died, leaving four children. Jeannette, the deceased wife of Lovesam Briggs, was survived by one child, Fred. Jennie became the wife of Frank Luckey, of Iowa, and has four children. William has also passed away. Hamlin, who is a railroad employe at Mexico, is married and has four children. George is deceased, and one died in infancy.

When he was but fifteen and a half years of age Daniel W. Butler laid aside his textbooks and enlisted in the Federal army in the Seventh Iowa Infantry, for service in the Civil war. He served under General Sherman for two years and was discharged at Davenport, Iowa. He saw active service throughout the time of his enlistment and was wounded at Resaca, Georgia. He was in the battle of Corinth and was also with Sherman on his march to the sea. After he was discharged from the army he returned to Iowa and engaged in agricultural pursuits, and in 1871 he removed to Kansas, where he took up a claim and made his home. About this time he became interested in the political issues of the day and in 1876 left the republican party and joined what was known as the greenback party. He participated in all the campaigns of this party and was active in the overthrow of the republican party in 1878 when W. E. Peffer was elected United States senator. In 1890 he came to Oregon, settling in Portland, where he immediately entered politics. He organized the Farmers Alliance and was appointed lecturer for that association. He made a strong fight for the initiative and referendum and measures of reform which the legislature had been dealing with. He was present when Judge Gaston joined the populist party. Few men have had more active political careers in this state. Whenever his influence is exerted for any man the latter's position is immediately strengthened.

Mr. Butler has been twice married. On the 10th of October, 1872, he was married to Mrs. Emma Henderson, of Kansas, whose birth occurred on the 20th of December, 1848, and who is a daughter of William Patterson. To this union two children were born: Richard, who is a railway conductor of Gooding, Idaho, and who is the father of one child, Arlene; and William, of Arlington, Oregon, who is superintendent of telephone construction and who is married and has three children, William, Cassidy and Daniel. On the 21st of July, 1909, Mr. Butler was married to Miss Carrie K. Bentley. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Rebekahs. Many of the advanced measures which have found their way into the political organization of Multnomah county have been initiated by Mr. Butler. He is untiring in his efforts to further any cause from which he thinks benefit to the community may accrue, and he is one of the most genial, cordial and business-like men of Portland.

GEORGE EMMET REES, a resident of Pendleton, is engaged in growing wheat in Umatilla county. He was born in Lovelady, Houston county, Texas, April 8, 1880, his parents being William Henry and Dora Wilhelmina (Wolf) Rees, the father a native of Marion county, Ohio, and the mother of Wurtemberg, Germany. The mother came to America with her parents when she was twelve years of age, locating in Ohio, in which state she was married. In 1878 she removed with her husband to Texas, where she passed away in 1900 at the age of forty-seven years. The father now resides at Melrose, New Mexico. The greater part of his life he followed the occupation of farming, though in youth he was a wheel maker by trade. In his family were five children: Jacob Fred, who resides near Pendleton; George Emmet, of this review; Lewis Orville, of Umatilla county; Dora Minnie, who is married and resides in Chillicothe, Texas; and Cecil Culvert.

George Emmet Rees received a common-school education in Texas, and grew to manhood on his father's farm, where he remained until 1902. In that year he came to Oregon, locating in Helix, where he worked for about two years in the machine shops. He then went to Idaho and spent two years in the engineering department in the government Indian schools. Subsequently returning to Oregon he took up farming, operating his father-in-law's farm until the fall of 1911. He then rented a tract of one and a half acres of land near Helix, where he engages extensively in the growing of wheat. He is very prosperous, and is becoming a prominent man in this industry.

In 1902 Mr. Rees married Miss Bessie Nadene Raymond, who was born at Helix, June 18, 1885, the daughter of Raphael Raymond. She is a graduate of the Baker School in Walla Walla, Washington, has a business-college training, and has spent much time in the study of art. To Mr. and Mrs. Rees has been born one son, Raymond Emmet, on October 7, 1911. Fraternally Mr. Rees is a member of the Knights of Pythias, belonging to that lodge at Helix. He is active and energetic, has made a steady advancement in life, and has the unqualified respect and good-will of his fellowmen. He is progressive in his farming, and employs the latest scientific methods known today.

VIRGIL C. BELKNAP, M. D. "To build up a great and useful life is a better business than the mere gathering together of a great fortune." Such is the homely philosophy of Abraham Lincoln. A living example of this bit of practical wisdom is presented to us in the life and accomplishments of Dr. Virgil C. Belknap, of Prairie City, Oregon, who enjoys a reputation as the leading surgeon of the John Day country. His birth occurred in Benton county, this state, on the 7th of November, 1871, his parents being Harley A. and Thurza (Inman) Belknap, who were natives of Ohio and Kentucky respectively. His paternal grandparents emigrated to Oregon in 1848, crossing the plains with ox teams. The family home was established in Benton county, three miles northwest of Monroe, where the grandfather made an entry on a donation claim. The place was known for many years after as the Belknap Settlement. The maternal grandparents of our subject came to Oregon in 1852 and settled two miles south of Monroe, where Mr. Inman filed on a donation claim.

Harley A. and Thurza (Inman) Belknap, the parents of Dr. Belknap, came to Oregon with their respective parents. Their marriage was celebrated in Benton county, Oregon, in 1855. In 1874 Harley A. Belknap removed to Crook county and located near Prineville, where he engaged at once in the sheep business and later in contracting and building. Here he erected the Crook county courthouse and also the Prineville schoolhouse. He died in 1904 in San Jose, California, at which place he was seeking health at the time of his death. His wife, who survives him, is still living in their old home at Prineville.

Virgil C. Belknap was reared at home and received his education at Prineville, attending the high school at that place. Having determined to follow the practice of medicine as a life work, he pursued the necessary preliminary studies under the tutelage of his brother, Dr. H. P. Belknap, a resident physician of Prineville. In the fall of 1891 he entered the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. There he took the required course and was graduated with the degree of M. D. in the class of 1894. In the fall of that year he opened his first office, settling at Prairie City, Grant county, Oregon, where he has since remained in the continuous practice of his profession. During the eighteen years in which he has devoted his attention to his chosen life work he has built up a most enviable practice, the results of which have placed him in the front rank among the members of his profession. His skill in the delicate and scientific field of surgery has brought relief not only to his suffering patrons but well merited renown as well to himself throughout the John Day valley.

In 1896 Dr. Belknap was united in marriage to Miss Clara McHaley, a daughter of George W. McHaley, one of the early pioneers of Oregon. To them three children have been born: Roderick R., Virgil V. and Janice.

In Masonry Dr. Belknap has attained high rank, belonging to the following organizations: Prairie City Lodge, No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 7, R. A. M., of Canyon City; Union Council, No. 5, R. & S. M., of Union, Oregon; Oregon Consistory, No. 1, S. P. R. S., of Portland; Al Kader Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Portland. Both he and his wife are members of Deborah Chapter, No. 43, O. E. S., of Prairie City. Dr. Belknap likewise belongs to Mountain View Lodge, No. 33, I. O. O. F., and to Blue Mountain Encampment. He is also identified with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, belonging to Baker City Lodge, No. 338. In the line of his profession he is connected with the American Medical Association. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Episcopal church, to which his wife also belongs. His political allegiance is given to the republican party. He has been several times honored by election to the office of mayor in Prairie City and is ably serving in that capacity at the present time.

Dr. Belknap represents in his chosen field, as well as in character and social affiliations, the highest type of citizenship. He possesses the iron moral and mental fiber inherited from his pioneer ancestors. These qualities have been largely the tools with which he has raised the superstructure of a life wisely consecrated to the relief of suffering humanity and the uplift of his fellowmen.

WILLIAM H. GULLIFORD, who resides in Pendleton, was for many years a prominent stock dealer in Umatilla county. He was born in Lane county, Oregon, July 10, 1861, the son of John L. and Julia A. (Hardesty) Gulliford, both of whom were natives of Illinois and crossed the plains in 1852 with their parents, being in the same wagon train. They located in Lane county, near Eugene. The paternal grandfather was William Gulliford and the maternal grandfather was Henderson Hardesty. The parents were married in Lane county and resided there until 1872, when they came to Umatilla county, locating on Butter creek. Later they removed to Pendleton, where the father passed away in 1903, at the age of sixty-one, and where the mother now resides. The father became a very prosperous man, owning in this county over four thousand, five hundred acres of land. He later sold the same to his two sons, the subject of this sketch and A. V., who managed it for several years. John L. Gulli-ford was residing in this county at the time of the trouble with the Indians on Big Butter creek and he was near the scene of action and was shot at several times. One of the men from his ranch was killed by the Indians. In the family of John L. and Julia A. (Hardesty) Gulliford were six children: A. V., who now resides at Eugene; William H.; C. J., of Echo; James, of The Dalles; Lillian B., who is the wife of Dr. C. J. Smith, of Pendleton; and J. F., of Milton.

DR. V. C. BELKNAP

William H. Gulliford received his education in the public schools in Oregon and remained under the parental roof until 1890, when he and his brother purchased the father's farm and the parents removed to Pendleton. He and his brother operated this ranch until 1908, when they sold the same and the subject of this sketch removed to Pendleton, where he now lives. They engaged while on the farm principally in raising sheep and for over seventeen years had in their possession constantly between five thousand and ten thousand sheep. They became very prominent men of this county in that industry. William H. Gulliford now owns two hundred and thirteen acres of alfalfa land at Echo, which is under irrigation. He is also a stockholder and a director in the Nissen Implement Company of Pendleton and owns two dwellings here.

On the 10th of May, 1893, Mr. Gulliford was united in marriage with Miss Myrtle E. Montgomery, who was born in Illinois in 1876 and came to Oregon in 1887 with her parents, George and Laura (Corley) Montgomery. Later the father went to Texas, in which state he died. The mother now resides here. To Mr. and Mrs. Gulliford has been born a daughter, Lillian C., who is at home. Mr. Gulliford is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Farmers Union. He is a man of strict business integrity, of a genial disposition and pleasing manner and is held in the highest respect by all. A native resident of Oregon, he has long been an interested witness of the development of the state and has ever been an active helper in furthering all measures of reform and progress that have here been made.

MANUEL PEDRO, who is extensively engaged in sheep-raising in Umatilla county, was born in Portugal, April 4, 1864, a son of Joseph and Mary L. (Leo) Pedro. The father spent his entire life on the sea and for many years was captain of a ship that sailed from New Bedford, Massachusetts. He passed away in Portugal and the mother is now residing in that country. In their family were ten children, seven of whom are now living, the eldest being Manuel of this review. All except one daughter, who now resides with the mother, have come to America. Five are now living in Oregon and one in California.

Manuel Pedro remained in his native country until he was seventeen years of age and then in 1881 he came to America, landing at Boston, and in that same year he went to California joining an uncle, Manuel Leo. He was employed for three years in looking after thoroughbred sheep for J. H. Strawbridge, in California. During that time he made two trips to Oregon for the purpose of selling sheep. In 1885 he located at Pilot Rock, where he was employed until 1888 by William Ross, in the sheep business, Mr. Ross being killed in that year. Mr. Pedro then started in the sheep industry for himself. He now, together with his brother Frank, owns four large bands of sheep and they have over thirteen thousand acres of land in Umatilla and Union counties. They are giving their entire time to the sheep industry and are among the largest and most successful sheep-raisers in Umatilla county.

In his political views Mr. Pedro is a republican and he was reared in the faith of the Catholic church. Fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias, with the Woodmen of the World and the Artisans. He is an extremely successful business man and has become a highly honored citizen of the country where he has chosen to make his home.

E. STEWART. The great state of Oregon has been wrested from a wilderness and made productive and prosperous by men who in the early days of its settlement carried on the cultivation of the soil, hampered not only by the crude conditions of civilization but by the constant depredations of the Indians. A man who has been an important factor in the evolution and advancement is E. Stewart, who has been identified with ranching and stock-raising in Grant county for more than forty years.

Mr. Stewart was born in Putnam, Ohio, in 1843, and is a son of Benjamin Elliott and Ann (Krumbacker) Stewart, the former a native of America and the latter of Germany. In 1847 Benjamin Stewart left Ohio and crossed the plains by ox teams to Oregon. The Indian depredations were almost constant at this period but the caravan with which Mr. Stewart was identified fortunately met with no attack. The first settlement was made in Yamhill county where Benjamin Stewart carried on farming and stock raising with unusual success until his accidental death in 1883.

E. Stewart was educated in the public schools of Yamhill and spent his time until he was eighteen years of age in that district. He went to Portland and for three years attended school in that city, devoting a portion of his time to clerking. In 1864 he came to Canyon City, where he engaged in mining for one year, after which he bought land and operated a stock ranch with a remarkable degree of success. During the Indian troubles of 1878 he lost a large number of his horses and stock and spent many days and nights upon the range watching for the marauding savages. He was alone in his vigil while many of the brave men of the valley were protecting the improvised forts. Mr. Stewart is very modest about his conspicuous bravery and achievements during this time but his services are still remembered in Grant county. He is now the owner of a large amount of land in the vicinity of Dayville and is accounted one of the successful men of eastern Oregon. He has had as many as fifteen thousand sheep, twelve hundred head of cattle and five hundred horses on his range at one time, and his entire ranch is carried on along progressive and scientific lines. He has been connected with the development and upbuilding of a great agricultural section. The fertile lands of eastern Oregon afford pasture for large herds of his sheep, cattle and horses and his activities form an important source of the wealth of the district. Every day his methods of breeding and raising stock are becoming more systematic and scientific and he has become a factor in state expansion and development.

In 1888 Mr. Stewart was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Officer, a native of Oregon and a daughter of Casey Officer, one of the earliest settlers in this state, having come with his parents in 1845. A more extended mention of Mrs. Stewart's father is made on another page of this work. To Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have been born three children: Benjamin, Edna, and Wayne, all of whom are attending school. Mr. Stewart is a modest and unassuming man, taking no credit to himself for his long nights upon the range and his laborious days afield.

FRANK G. MICELLI. America numbers among her citizens many able, distinguished and worthy men of foreign birth who have come to this country and been amalgamated with the civic and industrial life of the great melting pot of nations. Frank G. Micelli, now a prominent lawyer in Roseburg, Oregon, is a man of this class. He was born in Resia, Italy, July 26, 1866. His father, Frank Micelli, was born in the same place and came to the United States in 1871. He is now engaged in ranching in Idaho, where he previously worked as a contractor. The mother of our subject, Margaret (Biancolini) Micelli, is also a native of Italy and now a resident of Idaho, where her husband is in business. They are the parents of three children: Mary, the wife of Emanuel Inama, now a resident of Idaho; Joseph; and Frank G., of this review.

The last named was educated in the common schools of Italy and also in the public schools of Hailey, Idaho. He studied the English language in his native country and in 1887 came to America and settled in Hailey, Idaho, where he worked as a mason for six months. At the end of that period he removed to the Silver mountains in the same state and with his brother Joseph, started a brickyard, which he operated for six months. He then moved to Tacoma, Washington, where he engaged in the same business of brickmaking and after a few months sold out and came to Roseburg, in December, 1889. Here he entered into partnership with his brother Joseph in the operation of a large brickyard which he still owns and conducts.

In 1896 Frank G. Micelli determined to make law his life's profession and in that year entered the office of his brother-in-law, C. L. Hamilton, where he studied until 1899. He was admitted to the bar at that time and has followed the profession continuously ever since. In 1904 he was admitted to practice before the federal courts of the United States. He has become in the course of his career eminent and distinguished along the lines of his profession. He is well known in Roseburg as a thorough student of the law, well versed in its intricacies and delighting in its problems. He always keeps his legal knowledge fresh and up-to-date by much reading, and his depth of study and broad intelligence have gained him a distinguished place among his colleagues. He does a general law practice in Roseburg and has his offices in the Review building.

Mr. Micelli in the course of his career became connected with various commercial enterprises, and today is the vice president and a director of the Skelley Lumber Company, located at Skelley, Oregon, a one hundred and fifty thousand dollar corporation, with the stock all paid up. He also serves as the secretary of the Roseburg Building Homes Association of Roseburg, Oregon, and is attorney for this company. This organization has for its purpose the loaning of money to working people to aid them in building their own homes and paying for them on the installment plan. It is practically a building and loan association which is doing much toward promoting the welfare and the building up of the community and encouraging the wage earner to own his home. Furthermore he is a director and the secretary of the Roseburg Brewing & Ice Company.

On December 25, 1895, Mr. Micelli was united in marriage to Miss Inez Hamilton, a daughter of Dr. S. Hamilton, a pioneer physician of southern Oregon who came to this state in 1851 and is still living here.

Politically Mr. Micelli gives his allegiance to the democratic party and is a stanch upholder of its principles and policies. His ability as a lawyer has gained him recognition along public lines and he has served in various official capacities. He was president of the city council from 1904 to 1906 and was city attorney for four years. He prepared the charter under which the city of Roseburg is operated and twice codified the civic laws and ordinances. Mr. Micelli is prominent and active in the fraternal life of Roseburg. He has gone through all the branches of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is past grand representative of that organization. In 1906 he was elected by the grand lodge of the Odd Fellows to codify their laws. He is past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias and past president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. He holds a life membership in the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of Roseburg and is great senior sagamore of the Improved Order of Red Men. He is a devout member of the Roman Catholic church, adhering to the tenets and doctrines in which he was reared. He takes an intelligent interest in municipal affairs and his cooperation in any movement looking toward the progress and development of Roseburg is never asked in vain. He is a prominent member of the Commercial Club of that city and is a dominant influence in its affairs. Mr. Micelli is now in the full tide of his career. An able politician, a brilliant lawyer and a worthy citizen, he can look back upon a period of life which has been successful in an eminent degree, and he can look forward to many years of honorable activity in his chosen profession.

FRANK G. MICELLI

JOHN H. WASHBURN, a well known and prosperous agriculturist of Baker county, is the owner of four hundred and eighty acres of land which is splendidly adapted for the cultivation of grain and for grazing purposes. His birth occurred at St. Martin's, in St. John county, of the province of New Brunswick, his parents being Abel H. and Patience A. (Howard) Washburn. This family has the same origin as the Washburns of Maine. At the time of the Revolutionary war one branch of the family, having large grants of land from the English government, removed to Canada. The parents of our subject were married in the province of New Brunswick. Abel H. Washburn preached the gospel as a minister of the Baptist denomination. He came to Oregon about 1904 but passed away soon afterward, while the demise of his wife occurred in Portland some years later. They were the parents of nine children, three sons and six daughters. William, is engaged in mining; Rachel gave her hand in marriage to Thomas Brown, with whom she resided in Iowa and by whom she had two sons and two daughters. Howard, a carpenter and millwright residing in San Diego, California, was married in Iowa to a Miss Embree and now has one daughter. Clara, residing in Portland, is the wife of James Floyd, a mining amalgamator. Bessie gave her hand in marriage to Fred Smickel, a quartz miner of California. Frances is the the mother of one daughter and the wife of James Dewey, a carpenter of Iretta, Washington. John H., of this review, is the next in order of birth. The next child of Mr. and Mrs. Abel H. Washburn died in infancy. Minnie, the wife of James Carter of Baker City, Oregon, is the mother of one son and one daughter.

In the acquirement of an education John H. Washburn attended a parochial school and a seminary in St. Martin's. After putting aside his text-books he learned the carpenter's trade and worked at that occupation in Iowa. Subsequently he operated a grist mill in Des Moines and later conducted a meat market at that place. About 1905 he came to this state by railroad, by way of the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line. Locating at Baker, he began mining and prospecting for gold quartz and placer deposits in the Virtue mining district. He discovered some excellent prospects in quartz, made locations and subsequently sold them to good advantage. He likewise mined and prospected in the Cornucopia and Mormon basin mining districts. In both camps rich quartz ledges have been discovered and are now being extensively mined, yielding good returns in gold bars. In 1910 Mr. Washburn turned his attention to general agricultural pursuits, taking up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in Baker county and a desert claim of similar size. He also purchased a tract of one hundred and sixty acres, so that his landed holdings now embrace four hundred and eighty acres near the railroad in Baker county. He has fair water rights and his land is excellently adapted for the raising of grain and for grazing purposes. During the seven years of his residence in Baker county he has enjoyed an enviable reputation as a substantial and esteemed citizen.

In 1893, in Des Moines, Iowa, Mr. Washburn was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Lulu McClelland. Her father, Samuel McClelland, who was a tailor in the city of St. John, province of New Brunswick, Canada, is deceased. Mrs. Washburn was one of a family of four children, the others being as follows: Alexander, who is a resident of Boston; William, living at St. John; and one who passed away in early life. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Washburn have been born ten children, four of whom died when young. Carrie, whose birth occurred in 1894, is the wife of Chester Cartwright, a representative of the Cartwright family of Rye valley, who are wealthy mine and land owners. Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright have a son, Marvin, who is the only grandson of our subject. The other surviving children of John H. Washburn are as follows: Beulah, who was born in 1898; Leonard, whose natal year was 1900; Harry, whose birth occurred in 1902; Fred, born in 1904; and Violet, who was born in 1908. The first three named are attending school.

Mr. Washburn is a democrat in politics, loyally supporting the men and measures of that party. In social circles he and his wife are popular, their many sterling traits of character winning for them warm and lasting friendships.

THOMAS B. LITTIG, a resident of Baker, has now reached the venerable age of eighty years. He crossed the isthmus en route to the coast in 1852 and he participated in Indian warfare in the northwest. These and many other experiences have acquainted him with life on the frontier and no one rejoices more heartily in what has been accomplished along the lines of development and improvement. He was born in Baltimore, Maryland, September 13, 1832, and is a son of Dr. Thomas and Sarah Jane (Bond) Littig, who were also natives of the same state. The father died in the year 1886, having for a decade survived his wife, who passed away in 1876. In their family were thirteen children, of whom three are now living, the two sisters of Mr. Littig being Harriet and Matilda, the latter the wife of John May, of Baltimore.

Thomas B. Littig remained at the place of his nativity until nineteen years of age and during that period pursued his education in the schools there. He afterward went to California, where he engaged in mining, spending about a year in that state. Subsequently he came to Oregon, settling at Fort Orford, Curry county, where he again took up mining, which he followed for about ten years. On the expiration of that period he removed to Baker in 1865 and has since been identified with mining interests in this section of the state. For a time he was connected with placer mining in the Mormon basin and he afterward went to Malheur county, where he continued for about twenty years. When the two decades had passed he returned to Baker, where he now makes his home.

On the 30th of September, 1868, Mr. Littig was married to Miss Mary Meyers, a daughter of Henry and Mary Meyers. Her father is deceased, but her mother is living in Baker. In their family were three children: Henry, a resident of California; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Frank Maneman, of Vancouver, British Columbia; and Mrs. Littig. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Littig have been born four children: James, born October 22, 1883; Harry, born May 23, 1887; Mary, born May 7, 1889; and Bert, born November 2, 1893. All of the children are yet at home.

Mr. Littig votes with the republican party which he has supported since its organization. He was candidate for sheriff in 1870 and again in 1890. He was elected to represent Malheur county in the state legislature for a two years' term. Fraternally he is connected with the Masons and has always been a loyal adherent to the teachings of the craft, exemplifying in his life the helpful and benevolent spirit inculcated by that organization. To give his life history in full would be to present an accurate picture of pioneer times and conditions in Oregon. From experience he is acquainted with the history of mining development and of other lines of material progress in this section of the country. His memory goes back to the time when there was not a railroad in the state, all travel being by steamboat or by wagons across the plains. He chose the water route when he came to the west, where for sixty years he has now lived—an interested witness of all the changes that have occurred.

HERBERT BOWEN CRANSTON, whose death occurred June 26, 1910, was one of the leading stockmen and agriculturists of Baker county. Self-made, he was likewise prominent and highly respected and his record may well serve as a source of inspiration and encouragement to others. He was born in Auburn, Oregon, December 21, 1864, a son of Edward P. and Anna (Comnaughty) Cranston, who were natives of Ohio and New York respectively. They were the first couple married in Idaho City, the wedding being celebrated in 1860. The father was active in mercantile pursuits, operating in various localities in Idaho, Washington and Oregon. He finally entered the live-stock business and took up general agricultural pursuits, in which he continued for some time. In his family were the following named sons and daughters: Herbert B.; Walter B., who died January 5, 1895; Edward P.; Earl F.; Anna E.; and Maude.

Herbert Bowen Cranston was educated in various localities, according to the removals of the family, and he learned business methods through practical contact with the world. He finally took up ranching in the Lower Powder river valley in Baker county, twenty miles from Baker City, having there six hundred and twenty acres of land which he devoted to stock raising and to the cultivation of cereals and fruits. His methods were practical, his plans of a progressive character and his enterprise took him to a point along the highroad of success beyond that to which many of his fellow travelers on life's journey had attained. He served as postmaster of Keating from 1902 until 1907 and in office made a record as creditable as he did in business circles.

On the 5th of March, 1889, Mr. Cranston was united in marriage to Miss Laura Saunders and unto them were born three sons and a daughter: Walter A., Herbert C., Florence M. and George A. On the 13th of September, 1899, Mrs. Cranston died and on the 9th of January, 1901, Mr. Cranston wedded Margaret Flynn, who was born in England on the 26th of February, 1869, and is a daughter of Francis and Mary (Danglier) Flynn. Her parents emigrated to the United States from the mother country, settling in Kentucky, and there Mrs. Flynn passed away, while the father and children afterward removed to the state of New York. Mrs. Cranston was but two years of age when she came to America with her parents, and in St. Mary's Academy in New Jersey she was educated. In 1900 she came with her brother to Oregon and has since made her home in this state. Upon the death of her husband she inherited the ranch and has manifested excellent business ability in its control and management. She is a woman of sound judgment and practical ideas, as evidenced by her capable direction of her business affairs. Mrs. Cranston is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church and possesses the charm of manner, refinement and culture that characterize many convent bred women. She displays as marked executive ability and sagacity in directing the operation of her ranch as in supervising her household affairs. She has made many friends during the period of her residence here and is very popular in the social circles of her community.

Mr. Cranston was a republican in his political views but never an office seeker. He was, however, active in citizenship and cooperated in many plans and projects for the public good. He was identified with no clubs nor fraternal organizations, preferring to give his leisure hours to his home, and his many sterling traits of character made him one of the best liked and most highly esteemed men of Baker county.

J. W. STURDIVANT resides on a finely improved ranch of five hundred and sixty acres in Umatilla county, located near Ukiah, where he engages in the stock-raising business. His life was begun in Virginia on the 9th of April, 1849, his parents being Robert and Rebecca (Manlove) Sturdivant. They were likewise natives of the Old Dominion where they resided until 1870, when they removed to California. There the father passed away in 1871, but the mother lived in that state until 1881 when she came to Umatilla county and filed on a homestead in Camas valley, residing here until her death in 1908, at the age of eighty-seven years. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sturdivant were the parents of seven children, five of whom are living.

J. W. Sturdivant passed the first twenty-one years of his life in his native state, where he received a common-school education. He accompanied his people when they came to California, and later removed with his mother to Umatilla county. When he first came here he filed on a quarter section of land to which he added by purchase from time to time until he now owns five hundred and sixty acres of well improved land. Here he engages in stock-raising, making a specialty of cattle and horses, and meets with good success in his undertakings. A man of practical ideas, clear judgment and progressive methods, he has always given his personal attention to every detail of the work of the ranch, the appearance of which is a credit to his management and supervision.

In 1885, Mr. Sturdivant was united in marriage to Miss Etta Gibbs, who is a native of Texas and a daughter of Elijah and Mary (Gilliland) Gibbs. Her father was born in Iowa and the mother in Pennsylvania, and in 1882 they came to Oregon, settling in the Camas valley. The mother died in 1896, but the father is still living and makes his home in Roseburg, Douglas county. Five of seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs are still living.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturdivant are the parents of nine children: Lola E., the wife of I. R. Lawrence, of Ukiah; Herschel, who is deceased; M. C., who married Miss Muriel M. Martin and is living at home and assisting his father with the operation of the ranch; Elmer C., also at home; Francis, who is attending business college at Portland; Ila L., attending high school at Pendleton; Lena and Eneta, both of whom are deceased; and Cloyd K., who is at home.

J. W. Sturdivant gives his political indorsement to the democratic party and has served on the school board and as assessor, having discharged the duties of the latter office in his district for the past twelve years. Fraternally he is a member of the Artisans. Both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Sturdivant is a man of many fine qualities, as has been manifested during the long period of his residence in the county, and is fully entitled to the esteem and respect he is accorded in his community, where he has proven himself to be loyal and trustworthy in all of the relations of life.

T. B. MOORE resides at No. 2230 Resort street in Baker, spending there the winter months, while the summer seasons are passed upon his ranch in Baker county. He has extensive land holdings, owning eight hundred and forty acres all in one body and under fence, near Durkee. The greater part of his life has been devoted to general farming and stock-raising, and success has attended his efforts, bringing him to a prominent position among substantial business men of his part of the state. He was born near Trenton, Grundy county, Missouri, March 13, 1847, and is a son of Milton and Samyra (Payton) Moore. The latter's mother was Sarah Carson, a sister of the famous "Kit" Carson, soldier, explorer and guide. Mr. and Mrs. Milton Moore were both natives of Kentucky, and just after their marriage removed to Missouri, where they continued to make their home upon a farm until called to their final rest. The father was a soldier of the Mexican war and accidentally shot himself while in the service. Those who buried him in the mountains afterward related the incident to his son, T. B. Moore, who was the youngest of the family of four children, and was but six months old at the time of his father's death. After the death of her husband Mrs. Moore became the wife of William Cochran, and there were three children by that union, a son and two daughters.

T. B. Moore resided in Missouri until the fall of 1877, when at the age of thirty years he came to Baker county, Oregon. His education had been acquired in the schools of his native state, and during his boyhood and youth he had the usual experiences that fall to the lot of the farm lad. Believing that good business opportunities might be secured on the Pacific coast he made the journey by train to Baker county, but afterward returned and drove some horses across the country. He began farming and ranching and was also employed in the construction of the railroad of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. He freighted until the railroad was built and since that time has been engaged in general farming and stock-raising, owning eight hundred and forty acres of valuable land all in one body and under fence. The place is conveniently and pleasantly situated near Durkee, and upon the ranch Mr. Moore spends the summer months, while during the winter seasons he resides in Baker, having an attractive home at No. 2230 Resort street. His ranch is well equipped with all the accessories and improvements of the model farm of the twentieth century, and his stock-raising interests constitute a profitable source of income, while the sale of his crops also adds considerable to his financial resources. In addition he owns a number of dwellings and one business property in Baker, and his success has been such that he is now engaged in loaning money. He also owns about three hundred acres of timber land and altogether his holdings aggregate twelve hundred acres. At one time he was the owner of twenty-six hundred acres, and he has never given mortgage on any of his property.

In 1867 Mr. Moore was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Robinson, who was born in Indiana, in 1850, and died in Eugene, Oregon, in 1877. Their children were: Flora, now the wife of D. L. Wyatt of Baker; L. N., who died in Missouri; Letitia, who also passed away in that state; and Milton, who died in San Francisco while the family were en route to Oregon. In 1877 Mr. Moore was again married, wedding Edith Robinson, a sister of his former wife. She was born in Indiana in 1855, her parents being William and Catherine (Platter) Robinson, who were also natives of the Hoosier state and arrived in Oregon in 1879. The father died in Baker county and the mother now makes her home in the city of Baker, at the age of eighty-seven years. There are four children of the second marriage. William M., who is a graduate of the State Agricultural College at Corvallis, is living on a ranch at Durkee and has one thousand acres of land, much of which he received as a gift from his father. Milton, a graduate of the Baker high school, owns and operates a good ranch of five hundred acres near Durkee. June Belle is the wife of Gene Reynolds, a farmer of Baker county who was born in Baker City and is now a candidate for the office of county clerk. Thomas Platter, the youngest, is living on the home ranch.

Mr. Moore gives his political allegiance to the democratic party and has filled several offices, serving as justice of the peace for six years and as postmaster of Pleasant Valley for six years. In both connections he was loyal to the trust reposed in him and prompt and faithful in the execution of his duties. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church. Wherever known they are held in high esteem and their circle of friends is an extensive one. Mr. Moore deserves great credit for what he has accomplished, for when he arrived in Baker county he had practically no capital. As the years have passed he has carefully managed and conducted his business affairs, and by reason of his unfaltering diligence and keen business discernment he has gained a position among the foremost ranchers of Baker county.

GEORGE M. FRY, who is now living retired, was for many years one of the foremost business men of Hubbard and he is still identified with various local enterprises. He was born in Shawstown, Pennsylvania, and is a son of John and Sarah Fry, who were members of the colony that went from the Keystone state to Missouri, subsequently locating in Aurora. The father was born on the 11th of October, 1801, and died on the 4th of January, 1854, while the mother's birth occurred on the 6th of April, 1811, and she died on the 22d of November, 1848, both parents passing away in Missouri. They were married in Pennsylvania in 1828 and to them were born eight children, as follows: Margaret, who is living in Aurora, Missouri; Carolina, who died leaving one child, Sarah Kyle; Elizabeth and William, who are deceased; John, of The Dalles, Oregon; George M., our subject; Henry, a farmer of Aurora and the father of four children, Elma, William, Lizzie and Arthur; and one who died in infancy.

Left an orphan in early childhood George M. Fry at the age of ten years began making his own way in the world. He remained a member of the colony at Aurora until 1878, and then severing his connection with this community became a jeweler's apprentice. He continued to follow this trade until he had sufficient means to engage in business for himself, when, in 1890, he established a store in Hubbard which he successfully conducted until 1896. In the direction of his interests, Mr. Fry always manifested clear judgment, excellent foresight and the sagacity that invariably result in prosperity. Disposing of his jewelry business in 1896 he turned his attention to general mercantile pursuits, and for six years thereafter concentrated his entire attention upon the development of his new enterprise. As he carried a carefully selected assortment of merchandise to meet the varied tastes and needs of the community, he succeeded in building up an extensive and profitable patronage and was enjoying an excellent trade when he disposed of his store to H. A. Beebe. He subsequently became associated with John Scholl and together they established a hardware business. Mr. Fry was identified with this for three years, when he sold his interest to George Scholl, who is still connected with the enterprise. Next, he engaged in the warehouse business, but five years later disposed of this also and in 1911 severed his active connection with commercial interests, and has ever since lived retired. He is still financially interested in various local concerns and is one of the directors of the State Bank of Hubbard. Mr. Fry applied himself closely to business, using much discretion and sagacity in estimating the possible results of a contemplated venture and as a result his judgment seldom leads him astray. He has acquired valuable realty holdings and now has a ranch of two hundred acres in addition to which he owns a fine home in Hubbard and several blocks in the residence section of the town.

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Fry chose Miss Caroline Scholl, a daughter of Frederick and Annie (Baker) Scholl, whose family numbered seven, as follows: Louisa, who is a resident of Hubbard; David, John and Mary, who are deceased; Mrs. Fry, who was born on the 4th of February, 1845; John, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work; and Fred, of Hubbard. Two children, a daughter and son, have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fry. Sarah, who was born on the 5th of June, 1871, is the widow of Harvey A. Hinkle, by whom she had one daughter, Lona, whose natal day was the 6th of August, 1894. Frank, whose birth occurred on November 15, 1873, is living in Hubbard. He married Miss Nellie Dimick, a daughter of J. B. and Elmira (Eberhart) Dimick, well known residents of Hubbard.

Fraternally, Mr. Fry is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, while his political support is given to the republican party. He has always taken a deep inter-

GEORGE M. FRY AND FAMILY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

est in municipal affairs and at the present time is serving as city treasurer. Such success as has attended the efforts of Mr. Fry is entirely attributable to his inherent qualities, as he made his own way from early boyhood, never having been rendered any assistance other than such as is given to every business man of recognized efficiency and reliability.

JAMES M. McCULLOCH was numbered among Oregon's pioneers of 1852 and maintained his residence in this state until his death in 1885. He was one of the best known miners along the coast and took active part in the development of the rich mineral resources of the state but spent his last days upon a ranch. He was born October 29, 1829, his parents being James and Mary (Waller) McCulloch, both of whom were natives of Virginia. James M. McCulloch was a lad of twelve years when the family left the Old Dominion and removed to Missouri where they resided until 1851. Both his father and mother died in that state, the latter reaching the very remarkable old age of ninety-three years. In their family were eight children, of whom three are yet living, two sisters and a brother.

Farm life in the middle west became familiar to James McCulloch in the days of his boyhood and youth, and his training was of a thorough and practical character, well qualifying him for the responsibilities of later life. In 1851, not long after he had attained his majority, he crossed the plains to California and engaged in mining, remaining in that state for about twelve years, or until gold was discovered at Auburn, Oregon. He then came to this state and operated in the mines at Auburn for some time. He also conducted a meat market for a brief period in connection with a Mr. Smith. He was one of the best miners on the coast, buying up mining land wherever he worked, and his knowledge concerning values was largely unassailable.

From Auburn he went to Alomen basin, where he continued for three years, and then took up a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of land on Sutton creek. He died on the old homestead on the 24th of December, 1885, being then fifty-six years of age.

In early manhood Mr. McCulloch was united in marriage to Miss Eliza J. Hays, a daughter of Henry and Susan (Guerin) Hays, who were natives of New Jersey and North Carolina respectively. The father's birth occurred in January, 1817, and the mother was born April 30, 1822. He died when crossing the plains in 1852, his death being occasioned by cholera when the party were on the Snake river. An uncle of Mrs. McCulloch then took charge of the company. There was a train of forty wagons and a large herd of cattle. Mrs. McCulloch was born August 5, 1846, and was therefor only six years of age when the family made the long and arduous trip across the country. She walked most of the way, and she yet remembers many of the incidents of the journey. Her mother long survived the husband and father and passed away in Woodburn, Marion county, Oregon, in January, 1905, at an advanced age. In the family were five children, of whom three are yet living: Mrs. McCulloch; T. F. Hays, who is justice of the peace at Woodburn, and wedded Miss Mary Brown, by whom he has four children, Henry, Cynthia, Leona and Oddie; and H. T. Hays, a farmer of Marion county who married Miss Hannah Mulkey and has twelve children. At the time they were en route for Oregon the mother, Mrs. S. G. Hayes, composed a poem concerning the trip, entitled "Crossing the Plains." This is greatly prized by their descendants as the story of their long and arduous journey in order to establish a home in the northwest. It reads as follows:

We left our homes in fifty-two,
It was April twenty-first,
We set our course for Oregon,
The land of pine and furs.

Chorus

My native land, farewell,
I cannot linger on the shore;
My native land, farewell.

We crossed Missouri's troubled waves,
It was the ninth of May,
We landed safe on the Indian side,
And thus we spent the day.

It was on the twelfth we crossed the Horn,
A very pretty stream,
The place was thronged with savages,
It banks were lined with green.

Lope Fork came next, we forded it,
And camped upon its bank;
The day was bright, we sunned our clothes
And gave our oxen rest.

On the tenth of June Fort Laramie
Began to heave in sight,
The first thing like a house we'd seen
For many days and nights.

We spent three days in the Black Hills
And one we did lay by;
'Twas there we left one of our crowd
In her silent grave to lie.

We buried her the twentieth of June,
The first out of our train;
She left a husband and two sons,
But their loss was her gain.

We went up Platte three hundred miles,
Without a stick of wood,
Except some "chip," a substitute,
Proved to be very good.

'Twas there the bluffs of various hues
Stood towering to the skies,
And there, alas, oh dreadful thought,
Poor Scott among them lies.

The savages, they murdered him,
I heard it was for gain,
And left his mangled body there
To moulder on the plain.

Some of them stood like battlements,
And some were red as blood,
While others of a deeper hue
Had been there since the flood.

The chimney rock stood quite erect,
As if it were a light
Ereeted by the hand of God,
To keep the traveler right.

We met with packers on our way,
Some of them looked distressed;
They had spent some time in the field of gold,
And never shaved their face.

On the river Sweet, we had a storm,
It was very bad indeed,
Our cattle ran before the wind,
The hail was shoe-top deep.

Between Sweet Water and the Platte,
Was Saleratus Lake,
Bushels and bushels around the edge,
Just right for making cake.

For weeks and weeks on Sweet Water
We had no wood but sage;
It stood quite thick all o'er the plains,
How far I cannot say.

Independence Rock, it was a sight
Most curious to behold.
Its flowers bright and grass so green,
And water pure and cold.

A thousand names adorn its walls
Of men who passed it by;
While many others met with death
And at its feet do lie.

A river clear flowed by its side,
Its waters were called sweet;
And burning mountains towered their heads
To make the scene complete.

Still farther on we camped one night,
Near to the Devil's Gate,
An opening through the solid rock,
The depth, five hundred feet.

We met with crickets on our way,
Of an enormous size;
The ground was strewed for miles and miles.
Their course did eastward lie.

Near the South Pass we almost froze,
'Twas on July the fourth.
It snowed and blowed like winter time—
Wind from the chilly north.

We left Big Sandy at mid-day
And traveled with all might;
We pitched our tent near Sulphur Spring,
And Margaret died that night.

We buried her by the big road side,
Near to a desert drear.
Her parents and one sister dear
Were grieved to leave her there.

With water there we filled our cans
And traveled on 'till night.
We stopped and supped in the desert wild,
But the grass was very light.

We started then and traveled on
'Till some the next day,
When all at once the welcome sight,
Green river before us lay.

On Bear river, the Soda Springs,
We have come to them at last,
The teams were stopped, the cups got out,
We all must have a taste.

Our captain told us what to do,
As he had drunk before;
Sweeten the acid, pour it in
And then the soda foamed.

We met with Indians on our way,
But few did us molest.
We gave each one due time of day
And thus we fared the best.

Our captain wounded was one night,
The ground was strewed with blood,
But ere the morning light had dawned
Our enemies had fled.

We passed Fort Hall July the twelfth,
And camped not far from it;
That day I found my brother Frank
And he was very sick.

Not far from there for several days
The mosquitoes were so thick
It seemed to me they would eat us up,
In spite of all our smoke.

On Snake river our cattle died,
The first that we had lost;
The weather hot and water scarce,
And oh, the dust, the dust!

The hardest times we had by half
Were on the River Snake.
The grass so scarce and sand so hot,
And such long drives to make.

The twenty-seventh of July
We crossed the River Snake,
We traveled on two days and stopped,
Oh, dreadful to relate.

Our crowd was well, except one man
Was taken tale that day,
But ere the morning sun arose
He in his shroud did lay.

So then we buried two that day,
Two more were taken sick,
One of them was my husband dear—
I never can forget.

It seems to me his dying words
Are printed on my heart,
I could not think that he would die—
That we must forever part.

But oh, his sufferings found an end
  August the second day,
Beside the little stream so clear
  Five of our number lay.

We loaded up and started on,
  Which we were bound to do,
Leaving the spot on earth most dear,
  Forever from my view.

We traveled on ten days or more,
  The place was called Fort Boise,
We crossed the river back again,
  The Indians helped us cross.

We started then and drove all night,
  We saw the Snake no more.
In the morn we found a muddy creek
  And spent the Sabbath there.

'Twas Burnt river we came to next,
  A dismal place indeed.
The only pass was on its bank
  And sometimes in the stream.

We spent two days or more on that,
  With very little grass;
We got our wagon wheels swelled up,
  And got out safe at last.

On Goose Creek we found wild currants,
  Both red and yellow too;
We gathered some and stewed them up
  And they were good as ever grew.

Two little children died one night,
  We were camped near a cold spring.
We buried them both in one grave
  On a high hill so green.

Between Fort Boise and the Grand Round
  I can say and tell the truth,
We had no compass to set up
  But we traveled every point.

We spent two days on the Grand Round
  And left one wagon there,
We thought it best, our teams were weak,
  And the mountains were before.

The Blue Mountains were naught but hills,
  We had seen the same before,
The grass was good, the timber thick
  We had such good pine firs.

Powder river was a nice stream,
  We stopped there half a day,
We washed some clothes and baked pies
  And then went on our way.

From Battle Creek we traveled on 'Till two o'clock at night;
We chained the oxen to the wheels
  To starve, oh shameful sight.

We waited then for day to break
  And then went on our way,
At nine o'clock we breakfasted,
  The place was called Well Spring.

Then on again, we found no grass
  That was worth stopping for,
But at our next camp the grass was good—
  The water very poor.

Then on again early next morn,
  The Columbia we must reach,
Our cattle then were very dry,
  The water had been so scarce.

We reached the Columbia at midnight,
  Our cattle tired and weak;
We "dropped our oars" 'as you might say,
  And all hands went to sleep.

The Columbia was a noble stream
  We left it the next morn,
Crossed the Deshuts, went on five miles
  And found both meat and corn.

Our next camp was on Ten Mile Creek,
  The best of all I've named,
Water and grass, a stone fire-place
  And table of the same.

But two more camps and the Cascades,
  And toll-gate we must see.
Five dollars each for wagons there,
  But widows went through free.

The roughest road that ever was
  Is that through the Cascades,
The stumps so thick and grass so scarce,
  Stones thick as could be laid.

The third day there arose a hill,
  It was about mid-day,
Off to our right about six miles
  Mount Hood in splendor lay.

Don't think the hills were hard to climb,
  We doubled teams but twice,
The hardest work was getting down
  Without the loss of life.

We spent six days in the Cascades,
  Then stopped at Foster's too;
Making two days and four months just
  From the Missouri getting through.

If all the changes in those months
  Were taken down with care
It would take a bunch of paper sure,
  I think about three quire.

We found our claim the twentieth,
  Moved on it right away,
We set our stakes in Oregon
  Resolved here for to stay.

If ever you should cross the plains
  Be sure of a good guide,
Provisions plenty and a strong team,
  For the road is long and wide.

The Hays family located at Mount Angel, near Portland in Marion county, when they first came to Oregon, and later the daughter, Eliza J., gave her hand in marriage to Mr. McCulloch. As previously stated, his last days were spent upon the ranch, and there Mrs. McCulloch lived until 1891, when she removed to Baker City and erected her present home. Mr. McCulloch was a democrat in his political views, but never sought nor desired office, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs. Mrs. McCulloch is a member of the Presbyterian church and is a lady of many admirable and excellent traits of character which have won for her the high esteem of all with whom she has been brought in contact.

PHINEAS C. WARREN, who has lived retired at Warrenton for the past few years, is an extensive landowner and one of the most prosperous and respected residents of Clatsop county. His birth occurred in the state of New York on the 19th of March, 1833, his parents being Danford and Amanda (Pike) Warren, who were natives of Vermont and Massachusetts respectively. Their marriage was celebrated in the Empire state. Danford Warren, who followed farming as a means of livelihood, passed away in New York in comparatively early manhood. Ten years later his widow became the wife of Gardner Baxter, a native of New York, with whom she removed to Illinois, passing away at Princeton, that state, when seventy-two years of age. Our subject was one of four sons, his brothers being as follows: John F., who was extensively engaged in the lumber business and who died at Knappa, Oregon; George W., who was accidentally killed at his logging camp in the '70s; and Daniel K., whose demise occurred in 1893. By her second husband the mother of Phineas C. Warren had one daughter, Adeline, who is now the wife of James Hamilton, of Princeton, Illinois.

Phineas C. Warren began earning his own livelihood when a youth of fifteen, renting a tract of land in Bureau county, Illinois, and cultivating it for three years. On the expiration of that period he came to Oregon, locating at Astoria, where he worked in a sawmill for one year. At the end of that time he became connected with mining interests, digging gold for a brief period in Jacksonville, Oregon. Subsequently he was engaged in the logging business until 1860 and then went east on a visit to New York. Returning to Illinois, he there carried on general agricultural pursuits until 1870, when he sold his property and again came to Oregon in the hope that his wife's health might be benefited by the change of climate. He was actively engaged in the logging business for ten years, and for a number of years was extensively engaged in buying and selling cattle, but for the past few years has lived retired in the enjoyment of well earned rest. His property holdings include four hundred and eighty acres of land, three hundred and twenty acres of which is covered with timber, while the remainder lies in Warrenton and vicinity. Recently he disposed of eight hundred acres in Tillamook county, Oregon.

In 1867 Mr. Warren was united in marriage to Miss Adeline Keller, who was born in Ohio on the 6th of February, 1847, her parents being Isaac W. and Keziah (Cash) Keller. They were born, reared and married in the Buckeye state and there continued to reside until their children were grown. Subsequently they spent some years at Princeton, Illinois, and then removed to Iowa, where Isaac W. Keller passed away at the age of eighty years. The demise of his wife occurred four days later, at the age of seventy-five years. They had five children, four of whom are still living, as follows: Mrs. B. D. Lee, who resides near Los Angeles, California; Elizabeth, the wife of James Palbert, of Longbeach, California; Mary, who is the wife of William Dodge and also makes her home in California; and Mrs. Warren. The last named is the mother of a son and daughter. Carrie E. gave her hand in marriage to Charles F. Lester and resides in Warrenton, Oregon. Frank, who is married and lives on his father's homestead, is the owner and operator of a logging camp in partnership with his brother-in-law, C. F. Lester. Both children were afforded excellent educational advantages, the daughter being a high-school graduate and the son having pursued courses of study in two business colleges.

Mr. Warren is a stanch republican in politics but has never had any desire for the honors and emoluments of office. In religious faith he is a Presbyterian. He has now passed the seventy-ninth milestone on life's journey and enjoys the respect and veneration which should ever be accorded one who has traveled thus far on this earthly pilgrimage and whose career has been at all times upright and honorable.

AUGUST KUPERS. Among the sons of Germany whose industry and sturdy qualities have added much to the worth and development of Umatilla county is August Kupers, who came to the United States when a boy and at an early age took up farming and has since become a substantial agriculturist and stock-raiser of Helix. His birth occurred in Holstein, Germany, May 24, 1873, a son of John and Margaret (Hone) Kupers, both of whom resided throughout their entire lives in Germany where the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was twice married and by his first union two children were born. By his second marriage he had eight children, of whom August was the fourth in order of birth.

The common schools of his native land afforded August Kupers his educational advantages and upon completing his studies he remained at home assisting in the duties on the farm until he was eighteen years of age. He then immigrated to the United States, settling at once in Oregon in 1891. His brother Henry accompanied him upon this trip but later returned to Germany and August Kupers is the only surviving member of the family in this country, a brother, John, having died soon after his arrival. When he came to America our subject had little except an ability for hard work, abundant energy and an eager desire to succeed but, undaunted by the difficulties which confronted him, he at once took up agricultural pursuits and for six years was engaged as a farm laborer before purchasing a part of his present home,

P. C. WARREN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

at that time comprising a one-half section one mile north of Helix. He subsequently purchased the entire section and now owns two adjoining ranches. All the improvements upon the farm are due to Mr. Kupers' progressive spirit and his untiring labor. The crops which he harvests attest his ability as an agriculturist and his fine home and commodious outbuildings show that he keeps abreast with the times. The greater part of his attention is given to wheat growing, in which he is meeting with remarkable success. He has also become interested in the Bank of Helix, of which he is a stockholder.

In 1898 Mr. Kupers was married to Miss Augusta Kupers, whose birth also occurred in Holstein, Germany. She came to Oregon fourteen years ago with her parents, who are now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Kupers five children have been born, all of whom are residing at home, John, Marie, Henry, William and Winnie.

Mr. Kupers' political allegiance is given to the republican party and he holds membership in the Lutheran church. His life has been such as to merit the respect of the citizens of his adopted country and by honesty, uprightness and industry he has contributed much toward the upbuilding of the community in which he lives.

MANSFIELD A. HARRISON, an ex-Judge of Union county residing in La Grande, was born in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, September 1, 1841, a son of Orville and Sibyl (Trescott) Harrison. Both parents were natives of Pennsylvania and were married in that state. They had three children, Edward L., living on the old Pennsylvania homestead; Mansfield A., of this review; and Truman T., a resident of Luzerne County, Pennsylvania.

Mansfield A. Harrison was reared and received his education in his native state, spending most of his time with his grandfather. The family being of a mechanical turn, he took up the study of mechanics. On August 21, 1865, he started overland for Oregon and on arriving here located in the Grande Ronde valley, where he turned his attention to such work as he could find and helped to erect some of the first buildings in La Grande and that locality. He also engaged in teaching school for a couple of years and after that began contracting and building, which he has followed ever since.

In 1873 Mr. Harrison was united in marriage with Miss Harriet Jane Buchanan, who was born in Iowa, October 20, 1857. Her parents were William D. and Ellen Jane (Cullen) Buchanan, who came overland from Iowa to Oregon in 1865 and settled two miles south of Island City, where they resided until 1885. In that year they removed to Harney county, where the father died in 1906, at the age of seventy-six. The mother is still living in La Grande, having now reached the advanced age of eighty-two years. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison have become the parents of two children: Mansfield A., Jr., of La Grande; and Rosella, the wife of G. H. Elmer, of Pine Valley.

Fraternally Mr. Harrison is identified with the Masonic order and he was one of the first to make application for membership in La Grande Lodge. In politics he is a democrat and has spent much time in public work. For twenty years he served as justice of the peace at Island City and for four years was county judge of Union county, being elected in 1902. At the time of his election the county was in debt two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars and during his term, besides making many important improvements, he reduced the public debt one hundred and forty-six thousand dollars. This required great effort, good judgment and considerable knowledge of actual conditions. He is a man of keen discernment, conscientious and upright, and these qualities made him a most capable and efficient judge and won for him the great respect of the residents of the county.

HENRY McGOLDRICK, who has devoted his attention to the raising of grain and stock in Union county for more than a quarter of a century, is the owner of a well improved and valuable farm of two hundred and nineteen acres. His birth occurred near Glasgow, Scotland, on the 4th of December, 1866, his parents being Thomas and Mary (Henry) McGoldrick, both of whom were natives of Ireland. The father emigrated to the United States in 1866 and the following year was joined by his wife and children in New York, where the family home was established. Subsequently Thomas McGoldrick removed to Pennsylvania, where he was engaged in coal mining, at which he had worked before coming to this country. In that occupation he continued throughout the remainder of his life, mining in Tennessee and Colorado. Unto him and his wife were born nine children.

Henry McGoldrick was the seventh in order of birth in his father's family and remained under the parental roof until twelve years of age. During the following year he worked on a ranch with his brother-in-law and subsequently became a water boy in a railroad grading camp, being thus employed until he had reached his nineteenth year. At that time he again took up ranching and in 1884 came to Oregon, locating in the Baker valley. The following year he took up his abode in the Grande Ronde valley and has here been actively engaged in general agricultural pursuits to the present time. He owns over two hundred and nineteen acres of land and devotes his attention to the growing of grain and the raising of Hereford cattle, standard bred draught horses and hogs. In 1897 he became one of the incorporators and a stockholder in the Imbler Mercantile & Stock Company, with stores at Imbler. This enterprise claimed a part of his attention until the year 1912, when he sold his interest.

On the 18th of October, 1893, Mr. McGoldrick was united in marriage to Miss Lettie Hull, of Imbler, Oregon, her parents being William and Sarah (Neville) Hull, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Buffalo, Iowa. Mrs. Sarah Hull was a daughter of E. T. and P. J. Neville. William Hull came to Oregon in 1862 and took up his abode among the earliest settlers in the Grande Ronde valley, locating three-fourths of a mile east of Imbler, on the farm which is now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. McGoldrick. Unto our subject and his wife have been born two children: Edwin, who died at the age of four years; and Eugene, who is attending school.

Mr. McGoldrick has served as a member of the school board for six years. He is an enterprising, public-spirited citizens and has taken an active part in the progress and development of the Imbler district. He belongs to the Modern Brotherhood of America, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Farmers Union. Commendable principles have governed his life and shaped his conduct in his relations with his fellowmen. His career has been one of continuous activity and today he is numbered among the prosperous agriculturists and representative citizens of his state and county.

PETER CLEMENS, owner of nine hundred and eighty acres of land in Harney county, Oregon, all under cultivation and planted in the most suitable grains and fruit orchards, was born in Lorraine, France, on July 5, 1850. He is a son of Nicholas Clemens, who left his native country for America in 1855 and located for a short time in Montreal, Canada, later removing to the Menominee river in Michigan.

Peter Clemens was educated in the public schools of Montreal, Canada, and the state of Michigan and in 1868 came to the Pacific coast around the Horn. He settled in California where he remained for a few months before moving northward to Victoria, British Columbia, whence he went to the Cassiar mines where he remained for three years, meeting with gratifying success. Subsequently he went to Buenos Ayres where he remained for eighteen months, working in partnership with an uncle. He followed mining until 1878 in the Black Hills and Nevada and later came to White Horse in the southern part of Harney county. He was interrupted on his journey northward by Indian troubles and it was not until 1880 that he finally arrived in the Harney valley, locating after a year or two on Poison creek, six miles north of Burns. Mr. Clemens is the owner of nine hundred and eighty acres of land, constituting the home ranch and besides this is the proprietor of two other fine properties in Harney county. He has the entire tract of land upon which he lives under cultivation and has developed his holdings along progressive and modern lines. He has made all the necessary improvements upon his farm and has installed in all of its departments up-to-date and efficient machinery including a complete threshing outfit. His acres are largely irrigated. He is known throughout the section in which he resides as an upright man and a successful ranchman.

In 1883 Mr. Clemens was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Uhlen, a daughter of John Uhlen, a pioneer of Douglas county, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Clemens have been born three children: Clay, who is engaged in the sawmilling business on Poison creek; Calvin, a ranchman residing near Burns, Oregon; and Glen, who lives at home.

In his political affiliations Peter Clemens is consistently democratic and never seeks public office. He is a blue lodge Mason and this is his only fraternal connection. He seeks no success beyond attainment in a purely agricultural walk of life. He has made his farming career upright and honorable and has achieved prosperity.

L. D. SMITH, who has the distinction of being the oldest resident of Helix, was born in Huntsburg, Geauga county, Ohio, on the 15th of March, 1849, his parents being A. H. and Samantha (Smith) Smith. The mother was a native of New York state and her death occurred in Huntsburg when her son L. D. Smith was but two years of age. The father died in Pendleton, Oregon, in 1904, at the age of seventy-eight years. Throughout his active career he followed agricultural pursuits, both in Ohio, and subsequently, after 1880, in Ione, Morrow county, Oregon. By his first marriage the subject of this sketch was the only child but he was married a second time and by that union there were nine children. In 1851 he removed to Minnesota and resided there for twelve years before returning to Ohio, where he remained until the spring of 1879. He next spent a few months in Kansas, but the following spring came to Oregon and passed the remainder of his life in this state.

L. D. Smith resided at home with his father until he was twenty-one years of age. In 1882 he took up his residence in this state and has since resided in Helix. After he left home he continued farming and engaged in mechanical pursuits. He is at present conducting a carriage and wagon repair shop and also does general machine repair work. He was the inventor and manufacturer of the O. K. windmill, which he began making in 1885, and continued manufacturing until five years ago. In addition to repair work he is now manufacturing the O. K. pump jack which is extensively used with gasoline engines. He has met with a good degree of success in his undertakings, and is at present the owner of the shop where he carries on business, and the home in which he resides.

In 1878, in Orwell, Ohio, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Alwilda D. Haines, whose birth occurred in that state in 1860 and who is a daughter of Silas D. Haines, a veteran of the Civil war, in which he served for three years under General Lyons. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith two children have been born: Guy E., the elder, who is a resident of Helix and a painter and paper hanger by trade, married to Miss Lula Stanton, a native of Helix, and they have one child, Wayne Pearl, is the wife of Charles Alspach, of Helix, and they have three children, Gale, Wanda Margaret and Blain.

Mr. Smith gives his political support to the republican party and is thoroughly alive to the issues of the day. For fourteen years he served as constable, his last term expiring about nine years ago, and he has since been a member of the city council of Helix. He holds membership in the Commercial Club. He was one of the incorporators of the town and his generous and helpful cooperation has been given to many projects for its upbuilding and improvement. Thus he ranks among the valued and progressive citizens as well as the enterprising and prosperous businessmen of the place.

D. H. SHAW is the owner of one of the historic places of Baker county, Oregon. He is the owner of five hundred and twenty acres of land devoted to stock-raising and general farming. Upon this place is situated Ogden's Fountain, well known to all of the early travelers through this part of the country.

Mr. Shaw was born in Putnam county, Missouri, April 10, 1845, his parents being Theophilus and Elizabeth (Leachman) Shaw. The father was born in Georgia, in March, 1795, and the mother's birth occurred in Virginia, in April, 1799. They were married in Kentucky and afterward became residents of Boone county, Missouri. Later they established their home in Putnam county, that state, and in 1867 they made their way across the country to Baker county, Oregon, settling on what was known as the Ogden Fountain farm and later the Cold Spring farm, six miles south of Baker. This is a place of great historic interest. The clear waters of the spring upon this place furnished refreshment to many a weary traveler in pioneer times, and it seemed a rendezvous not only for the emigrants, but for the trappers who hunted fur-bearing animals through this part of the northwest.

There are now three routes between Powder river and Burnt river. The central one is by Sutton creek where the railroad now runs; another, farther east, passes through Virtue Flat and was used by the pioneer emigrants as a part of the "Old Oregon trail" for wagons; a third route is west of Sutton creek by way of Beaver creek. This seems to be the route used by the Hudson Bay trappers as they were catching beaver and so followed the streams where beavers abound. At this point an old trail led to the south to the headwaters of Burnt river and across the mountains to Malheur river and to central Oregon and Nevada. The ranch on which Ogden's Fountain is situated is now the property of Dan H. Shaw. The Hudson Bay trappers seemed to have used the Spring as a sort of landmark, the various parties separating here from the main expedition. This section abounded in beaver which gave the name to Beaver creek and the Powder river by the "Fountain" which has always been a favorite spot for those animals, and their dens and houses can still be seen and some beavers in all probability still exist there. Peter Stene Ogden, head of the Hudson Bay Company in this section of the west, records in his diary an overland expedition from the Columbia to the Snake. After following Powder river to a point beyond the present site of Baker he camped at the "Fountain" and sent detachments to trap on the headwaters of Burnt river and to the head of Malheur river. From the "Fountain" he ascended Beaver creek, crossed to Burnt river and then went down to the Snake near the present site of Huntington. The diary reads:

"Sunday, September 28, 1828. Reached the fork of Powder river (where North Powder now stands). Trappers came in with nine beaver.

"Monday, September 29. Encamped on Powder river (probably between Haines and Powder); heat very great. Seven beaver.

"Tuesday, September 30. Sent off six men with lodges to Burnt river, thence to go up river Malheur where we shall meet; also sent off five men across country to rejoin company on the forks of Malheur. . . . Encamped at the 'Fountain.' One trap gave us eleven beaver."

As the party could only have reached the "Fountain" in the afternoon the fact that they caught eleven beaver in one trap shows how plentiful they must have been at this point. Ogden, Utah, is named for the Mr. Ogden, as is also the spring herein mentioned. The way in which he writes of "the fountain" makes it seem probable that it was a well known spot and probably a rendezvous. In later years the trail of Beaver creek to Burnt river was used by the miners at Auburn, but was not adapted to wagons, so the wagon road left the Powder between Baker and Haines and crossed to Burnt river by Virtue Flat. This "Fountain," or spring, was well known by the Auburn miners who called it the "Cold Spring" and would stop here to rest. The trail southward was made into a wagon road, called the Dooly road. During the war of 1878 soldiers would pass and re-pass over this road with gattling guns. The building of the railroad up Sutton creek and on to the Snake river and eastward, and the Sumpter valley railroad to the south, have made Baker the central point instead of "Ogden Fountain," but when packed horses were used this point was where the trails met.

It will thus be seen that the place at which time the Shaw family located is a most interesting and historic one. The parents of D. H. Shaw remained there until called to their final rest. The father passed away in February, 1873, and the mother in September of the same year. He was a farmer all his life and for thirteen years was a distiller when in Kentucky, but he did not use liquor himself. Both he and his wife were lifelong members of the Baptist church and he always gave his political support to the democratic party, advocating the policy and principles of Jackson. In the family were eleven children: Mary, the deceased wife of L. G. Battee; Martha, the deceased wife of Calvin Morrow; Sampson, who has also passed away; Albert, who married Jessie Morrow and has departed this life; Minerva, who became the wife of Hiram Snyder and is deceased; Sarah, the deceased wife of Jesse Sumpter; Julia, who married Alfred E. Miller and lived for a time on the Cold Spring ranch, but now resides in Idaho; William S., who died in California; Eliza, who died at Elkhorn Station while crossing the plains; one who died in childhood; and D. H., of this review.

The last named remained at the place of his birth until he came to Oregon in 1863 when eighteen years of age, arriving at Union county, in September. There he engaged in freighting until December, 1867, when he came to Baker county with his parents and has here since made his home, engaged in farming and stock-raising He owns five hundred and twenty acres constituting a fine place, upon which he has all the modern improvements and equipments. It was upon this place that William Price hunted and camped in 1811 and here Peter Stene Ogden camped on September 28 and 29, 1828, giving it the name of Ogden Fountain, because of the fine spring here which flows continually. The place is situated six miles south of Baker on the Powder river, having a beautiful location and many natural advantages. Here Mr. Shaw has lived continuously since 1867.

On the 15th of March, 1879, occurred the marriage of D. H. Shaw and Miss Pauline F. McKinney, who was born in Ottumwa, Iowa, April 1, 1862, but was brought to Oregon in 1864 by her parents, Alfred G. and Jane McKinney, both of whom died in Baker. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw have become parents of six children: Frances, who was born December 5, 1879, and died in infancy; a second child who died in infancy, unnamed; D. Alfred of Spokane; Samuel T., who married Mabel Sipp, of Baker, and is living on the farm with his father; Mamie Belle, who is the wife of Durk Steadman, and has one child, Cleta; and Pearl J., who is the wife of W. R. Cavin of Caldwell, Idaho, and has one child, Pearl Marie.

Politically Mr. Shaw is a democrat, having supported the party since age conferred upon him the right of franchise. He belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church and his has been a well spent life, honest and honorable in every particular.

JUDGE THOMAS LUTHER DAVIDSON, agriculturist and ex-Judge of Marion county, was born October 14, 1833, in Greene county, Illinois. His parents, James and Amelia (Ament) Davidson, who were both natives of Kentucky, where they were married, came to Oregon in 1847. Early in life James Davidson had learned the carpenters' and joiner's trade and for many years was thus engaged. During that time he was one of the most efficient interior finishers in his community. After a seven years' residence in Tennessee they removed to Illinois, where they lived for a short time before going to Burlington, Iowa. Here he followed his trade and also purchased considerable property, which he sold for ten thousand dollars when he removed to Oregon, and which is now said to be worth about a hundred thousand dollars. The trip across the plains was fraught with the many dangers which all of the early pioneers experienced and, although their train consisted of thirteen yoke of oxen, they encountered many hardships. Upon their arrival in this state Mr. Davidson took up a donation land claim of six hundred and forty acres one-eighth of a mile from the present city limits of Salem. Judge Davidson is the owner of part of this property, being one of the two heirs to his father's estate. His sister Francis Louisa is deceased. Mr. Davidson invested heavily in real estate in Salem and in addition to following his trade and engaging to some extent in agricultural pursuits was also very active in the political circles of the community. He was elected to the state legislature, of which body he was a prominent member for one term. His death occurred in 1871, when he was eighty-five years of age, and his wife passed away two years later, at the age of eighty years. Of their nine children only two survive.

Thomas Luther Davidson received his early education in Iowa and after his removal to Oregon with his parents again entered school. At the same time he gave much of his time and attention to assisting his father on the home farm and from the experience then gained subsequently became a capable agriculturist. At the time of his father's death he inherited three hundred and twenty acres of land and upon this property he has since made his home, although he has disposed of all but seventy acres. His entire life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits except during his one term of judgeship when it was necessary for him to divide his energies between the farm and the courtroom. Because of his intuitive sense of justice he ably discharged his duties as judge and during his term of office he did much to establish the integrity of the record of the court.

In 1868 Judge Davidson was married to Miss Mary Susan Melson, a daughter of S. D. and Julia (Jones) Melson. To Judge and Mrs. Davidson three children have been born. Julia Loretta, the eldest, died at the age of five years. Thomas L., whose birth occurred on the 14th of July, 1882, is married and has two children. He is residing on the home place and is active in its cultivation. Lester Melson, the youngest, passed away at the age of eleven years.

In politics Judge Davidson is a democrat, his political allegiance being accorded that party because after an intelligent study of the platforms of the various political parties of the country he decided that the policies set forth by the democracy prove most efficient in promoting those measures which tend to establish good government. He has been prominent in the activities of his party and has frequently been elected to office. For five years he was a member of the school board and has been elected to the office of road supervisor. He has attained high rank in Masonry, being identified with the Mystic Shrine. He belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the State Grange. He holds membership in the Methodist church, in whose circles Mrs. Davidson was very active until her death, which occurred

MR. AND MRS. T. L. DAVIDSON, SR.

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

on the 30th of July, 1902, when she was fifty-one years of age. Judge Davidson's active and honorable life may well serve as an example to the younger generation, who find in him the salient characteristics necessary for success—integrity, industry, energy and fidelity.

JAMES F. BATER is one of the most widely known and accomplished musicians of eastern Oregon, having long been a leader of the bands of Enterprise, Union and Elgin. He is the successful and capable secretary and general manager of the Elgin Flouring Mill Company of Elgin, Union county, of which place he is a resident. He was born in Devonshire, England, December 5, 1859, and is a son of Henry E. and Maria (Kiddle) Bater. His parents emigrated to the United States in 1865 and on reaching this country took up their residence in Janesville, Wisconsin. Henry E. Bater was by trade and occupation a miller and for sixteen consecutive years was in full charge of large milling enterprises at Janesville and Beloit, Wisconsin, and also at Rockton, Illinois. In 1881 he removed to Hamilton, Missouri, at which place he became superintendent and general manager of the flouring mills of that city, and here he spent the remaining years of his life, dying in 1905 at the age of sixty-seven. He was a Knight Templar Mason and one of the influential men of his district. His wife still survives him and maintains her residence at Hamilton, Missouri.

James F. Bater was reared in his father's home, acquiring his early education in the public schools and learning the miller's trade under his father, perfecting himself in every detail of the milling business from the construction of the plant to the production of the finished product ready for the market. At the age of twenty-one years he started in life for himself. Leaving the parental roof he removed to Kansas City, Missouri, where he was employed in the installation of machinery in various flouring mills. The roller process at that time was just coming into general use and the demand for his services extended all over the country. After spending sometime in Kansas City he removed to Nortonville, Kansas, at which place he took charge of the flouring mills located there for four years. At the expiration of that time he returned to Hamilton, Missouri, and was employed as second miller under his father for the following four years. In 1888 he removed to Enterprise, Oregon, where he was engaged to superintend and install the machinery and take charge of the mill of the Island City Mercantile & Milling Company. For a period of seventeen years he successfully operated their mills, making for himself a reputation as a high grade constructor and operator of flouring mills. In 1905 at the earnest solicitation of Kiddle Brothers, who were the owners of five mills at different points in Union county, Oregon, he removed to Union, where he accepted the management of the Union Flour Mills Company, now known as the Oregon Roller Mills. In 1908 his employers transferred him to their mills at Elgin, where he has since continued in charge of their milling interests.

James F. Bater was married in Nortonville, Kansas, in September, 1884, to Miss Cora E. Daniels and to this family two children were born: Elsie, now the wife of Guy McMillan; and Ida, at home. The mother died in January, 1893, at her home in Enterprise. Subsequently, in April, 1894, Mr. Bater married Miss Rae E. Ratcliff, of Enterprise, and by this union one child has been born, Muriel.

Mr. Bater is one of the enthusiastic and solid supporters of the republican party and as a representative of that party he has served as the mayor of Enterprise, while for nine consecutive years he was a member of the city common council. He is a member of the Grande Ronde Valley Lodge, No. 56, A. F. & A. M.; of Enterprise Chapter, No. 30, R. A. M.; and Council, No. 5, R. & S. M., at Union. Both himself and wife are members of the Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 52, O. E. S., Mrs. Bater being the matron of that order at both Enterprise and Union. Mr. Bater was a delegate to the Grand Lodge of Masons at Portland in 1905 and at the same time his wife was the accredited delegate to the Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, in which capacity she has since served. Mr. and Mrs. Bater, together with their three daughters, are all members of the Presbyterian church of Elgin, he being one of the board of trustees. He is widely known throughout eastern Oregon not only for his success in his business career, but being a cornet player of unusual talent he has been much in the public eye during his residence in the state of Oregon. His wife also enjoys enviable distinction as a vocalist of rare attainment and her services as a public entertainer make her one of the best known and most popular of singers throughout the intermountain districts.

JOHN I. STURGILL, a well known resident of Durkee, is engaged in teaching and in farming, having for a long period divided his time between those two vocations. He was born in Missouri, December 5, 1852, and is a son of F. H. and Caroline (Richmond) Sturgill, both of whom were natives of Virginia. They went to Missouri in 1841 and resided there for almost a quarter of a century, starting across the plains with ox teams in 1865. The mother died on the way and her grave was made by the side of the Snake river. The father, with his family came on to Baker county and settled on a farm here, making his home in this region until called to his final rest. In the family were thirteen children of whom seven are yet living.

John I. Sturgill was a youth of twelve years at the time the long and arduous journey across the plains was made. His youth was devoted to the acquirement of an education and to the work of the home farm, in which connection he largely assisted his father. On attaining his majority he began teaching school. He had graduated from the Baker Academy, which is now known as the Baker high school and for twelve years he devoted his entire time to teaching. He then began farming and stock-raising, in which he still continues. He owns two hundred acres of land on which he has a large number of sheep and in addition to the management of his ranch, which is situated near Durkee and on which he lives, he devotes the winter months to teaching.

In 1882 Mr. Sturgill was married to Miss Mary F. Stevenson, who was born in Marion county, Oregon, and is a daughter of M. A. and Marilda Stevenson, both of whom were natives of Iowa. In 1862 they arrived in Marion county, Oregon, where they still reside. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson have become parents of four children: Walter, deceased; Francis M., who is now attending normal school; William, upon the home farm; and Marilda. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson are consistent members of the Baptist church and fraternally he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World. His political support is given to the democratic party and for three terms he filled the office of county assessor while for two terms has served as deputy county clerk. In his official positions he has been loyal, discharging his duties with promptness and fidelity, and his work as a teacher and as a farmer has been a vital element in the progress and uplifting of the county in which he lives.

WILLIAM HOWARD, who has the distinction of having located on the first claim in the Camas valley, where for over forty years he has engaged in the stock-raising business, was born in Fulton county, Illinois, on the 13th of December, 1848. He is a son of William and Elizabeth Howard, natives of Ohio, who came to Oregon in 1862, settling in Lane county where the father acquired some government land. They made the long journey across the plains with an ox team, as did the majority of the pioneers, and passed the remainder of their days in the Northwest. The mother died on the home ranch, but the father passed away in Umatilla county. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Howard numbered ten children, all of whom, with the exception of one, are still living.

As he was only a youth of fourteen years when he accompanied his parents on their journey across what at that time was called the "great American desert," the greater part of the life of William Howard has been passed in the state of Oregon. He was given the advantages of a common school education, most of which was obtained in his native state, as but little provision had been made for schools in this section of the country when his people located here. He shared with his parents and other members of the family the hardships and discomforts of pioneer life, early assuming the duties of manhood by assisting his father with the care of the ranch and the stock, thus fitting himself through practical experience for the business in which he has always engaged. Upon attaining majority he started out for himself, his first act being to file on a claim, which today form the nucleus of his holdings. Having but limited means at his command it was necessary for him to start in a small way, and although he met with the usual obstacles and difficulties which every man encounters when he first engages in business, he kept on persistently with a determination that never accepts defeat. During the first few years he did little more than hold his own, but once established his affairs ran smoothly and as the years passed he gained in prosperity. He has never had occasion to regret locating where he did and is today the owner of a well improved and valuable ranch, which he has called "home" for the greater part of a half century. In connection with the cultivation of his land, Mr. Howard engages in raising stock, making this activity his specialty. Stock-raising has always proven an excellent source of revenue to him and he has become so attached to the work, that although his present circumstances would warrant his retiring from active life he continues to devote his attention to this activity.

In 1870, Mr. Howard completed his arrangements for a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Wildia Oliver, a native of Oregon, who passed away in 1884. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Howard, as follows: Edward, who is living in this county; Lillian; Rose, the wife of Doc Holmes; Maud, who married Clarence Moore; C. L.; and Margaret, who is deceased.

William Howard is a democrat and although he has never been an aspirant to public office he meets the requirements of good citizenship by voting at the polls on election day. He has always taken an interest in local educational affairs, and has served with efficiency as a member of the school board. During the Indian war of 1878 the Indians camped on his ranch, killed his stock and destroyed his buildings. Many changes have occurred in the Camas valley during the long period of Mr. Howard's residence there, the vast expanses of prairie having been broken up into ranches, which are well improved and fully equipped with every essential appliance necessary to their successful operation, while flourishing villages and enterprising towns have sprung up where there was not a vestige of habitation when he first located here.

GEORGE M. TETREAU resides at No. 2406 Grove street in Durkee and his time is largely given to the solution of the problems of farming in this part of the state. Attention in Oregon is closely concentrated upon the subject of dry farming and Mr. Tetreau is demonstrating what can be done according to this method, scientific knowledge and experimentation as well as practical labor, proving elements in his success. He was born in Lowell, Massachusetts, September 29, 1864, a son of C. P. and Margaret (Marrotte) Tetreau, both of whim were born near Montreal, Canada, where they were reared. Following their marriage they removed to Lowell, Massachusetts, in the spring of 1864 and in 1870 arrived on the Pacific coast in San Francisco. For six years, thereafter, they continued residents of that place and then went to Columbus, Nevada, where Mrs. Tetreau died in 1882, at the age of forty-nine years. The father passed away soon afterward in San Francisco and was forty-seven years of age at the time of his death. He was a bookkeeper and clerk during the greater part of his life. In the family were two children, George M. and Ed L., the latter of whom was killed on the railroad, November 24, 1911. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, October 30, 1867; was a clerk and bookkeeper and was in the employ of the United States government at the time of his death.

George M. Tetreau remained at home until his mother's demise in 1882. He had acquired the greater part of his education in the schools of San Francisco and was eighteen years of age when he started out on his own account. He acted as bookkeeper and clerk for a mining company in Nevada until 1885. On the 20th of May of that year he came to Baker county, Oregon, where he turned his attention to the live-stock business on Burnt river. He located two ranches of three hundred and twenty acres and improved them, afterward selling the property at a good figure. In 1893 he returned to California but again came to Baker county in 1895 and was foreman for a large land company for two years. He has since made his home in Baker yet has spent much time in traveling and upon his ranch. He owns three hundred and twenty acres of land in Baker county on which he grows wheat and also raises stock. He had in 1911 fifty acres sown to wheat that yielded from forty to forty-five bushels per acre. This result attracted wide attention for he was following dry farming and this was the first wheat grown in Lost Basin. The ranch is situated five miles due south of Durkee and is becoming recognized as one of the well developed properties of this state. Mr. Tetreau has also been identified with various mercantile interests since he came to Baker. He is a man of marked energy and enterprise and his association with any undertaking insures its prosperous outcome.

In 1886 Mr. Tetreau was married to Miss Sarah Alice Fleetwood, who was born in Union county, Oregon, in November, 1867, a daughter of James Fleetwood, a prominent old settler of this state. He is now residing in California. Mr. and Mrs. Tetreau had four children, of whom Ruth met an accidental death at the age of nine years and Clara passed away at the age of seven. The surviving children are Esther and Paul, aged respectively twelve and eight years.

Mr. Tetreau belongs to Sumpter Lodge, No. 162, I. O. O. F. He adheres to the Presbyterian church, which organization he gives his moral and material support. In politics he is a republican and while he does not seek nor desire political office he has done much to further public progress and promote the welfare of the community in other ways. He was largely instrumental in securing the building of the county road from Durkee to Mormon Basin. He is the pioneer of the Lost Basin district which through his efforts is being developed into an agricultural district, it having been previously regarded as only a mining country. Mr. Tetreau was the first to till the soil here and was instrumental in locating four other families in this region. His labors are proving resultant and he has taken the initial step in utilizing this region for agricultural purposes and thus adding greatly to the value of the property and the appearance of the district.

JOSEPH BUCHTEL. As each year is added to the cycle of the centuries the ranks of the pioneers are becoming thinner and Portland numbers less of those sturdy and substantial citizens who were the vanguard in making their way into the state of Oregon. It is right, therefore, that the history of the early settlers should be written while they can still relate it so that the authentic record shall not perish. While they came to the west to secure homes and, if possible, win a substantial little fortune, they built better than they knew, for they established here a commonwealth and a civilization which shall endure for all time. One of the oldest residents of Portland is Joseph Buchtel who has been associated with the pioneer history of the west for more than sixty years. He was born in Stark county, Ohio, November 22, 1830, a son of Michael Buchtel and Mary Harvey, and was twenty-one years old when he came to Oregon. His mother was married a second time, this union being with John Johnson, and to them one child, Addie, was born. She became the wife of Thomas Maxwell and both are deceased.

Joseph Buchtel was reared at home and attended the common schools of his native state, where he acquired such knowledge as was afforded the country youth at that early day. His father's death occurred when he was very young and, being the eldest son, it was necessary for him to help in the support of the family as soon as possible. At a very early age he began learning the tailor's trade and was thus engaged for four years, after which he accepted various positions on farms and in stores before entering the brick manufacturing business. Not finding this sufficiently remunerative nor to his liking, he accepted a clerical position in his brother-in-law's store. While he was working there one of the partners of the firm was elected sheriff and because of the ability which Mr. Buchtel had already displayed as a clerk he was given charge of the sheriff's office and collected the taxes. During this time he met Abraham Lincoln and became intimately acquainted with him. Mr. Lincoln was practicing law in that district and, as the courthouse in which Mr. Buchtel was employed was in Urbana, Champaign county, they met frequently. Mr. Lincoln was attorney for one case which extended over two weeks and during that time Mr. Buchtel had many opportunities to talk with him. Many of the pleasantest memories of Mr. Buchtel's life are of this time when he had the opportunity of associating with one of the biggest and broadest men whom this country has ever known. After he gave up his clerical position he entered the portrait business, first purchasing a dagnerreotype outfit. He was thus employed for six months. In 1852 he came to Oregon and in the spring of 1853 located in Portland. From that time he was in the photograph business, taking pictures during the summer and working on a river boat as steward during the winter. He was elected sheriff of Multnomah county and during his incumbency in that office leased his gallery to Mr. William Towne. Mr. Buchtel may well be called the pioneer photographer of the Pacific coast. He introduced every kind of photography in Oregon and took the first pictures of all interesting and prominent places along the Pacific coast. In 1853 he took the picture of Front street, Portland, which appears elsewhere in this edition. After he discontinued his work as sheriff he engaged in the real-estate business and has had more or less to do with real estate since that time, at present having an office on the east side. He has been a factor in the development and progress of the community both through his active labors and his influence. In community affairs he has also been active, holding many different offices, including that of sheriff, chief of the fire department in Portland in 1865 and later chief of the paid department of the city. In politics he has ever been a stalwart republican and he helped organize the republican party in Oregon. He was one of the first body of men who ever represented any fraternal order in a southern convention, having attended the grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in Atlanta, Georgia, and he is also a Royal Arch Mason.

Mr. Buchtel was married to Miss Josephine Latourette in Oregon City, in 1855. She is a daughter of John Latourette of Michigan, who died in California after having removed there in 1849. She crossed the plains with her uncle Minor Swiek, who later settled in Yamhill county, but subsequently she lived in Oregon City. To Mr. and Mrs. Buchtel seven children have been born, four of whom survive. Lucy L., the eldest, was born in Oregon City in 1856 and is the wife of Norwood L. Curry, a son of ex-Governor George Law Curry. She received her education at St. Helen's Hall in Portland. Albert Z., the second member of the family, was born in Portland, on the 5th of August, 1857. He was educated in Portland and pursued a course in a business college here. His death occurred on the 11th of August, 1880. Addie E. is married to Wilbur G. Kerns, who has a position in the county clerk's office in Portland. Frank S., who received a business education and was in the police department of the city of Portland, died May 8, 1901. Archie L. was born June 6, 1867, and is at present living in Portland. He married Miss Minnie Cronk, of Salem, Oregon. Joseph, the next in order of birth in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Buchtel, was born August 11, 1872, and died October 30, 1877. Fred G., the youngest, was born March 30, 1878, and was educated in the Portland high school and subsequently in a business college. He holds the office of sealer of weights and measures of Portland.

Mr. Buchtel has lived to see a remarkable transformation in this city as pioneer customs have been replaced by the evidence of a progressive and advanced civilization. Pioneer homes have been replaced by the commodious and substantial residences built in modern styles of architecture and prairie grasses and uncultivated land have been replaced by parks and well cared for streets. In all the work of general improvement Mr. Buchtel has borne his part and well deserves mention in this work.

CASPAR JUNKER, one of the most prominent residents of Sandy, Clackamas county, was born in Hessen, Germany, on January 12, 1865, a son of Hieronymus and Katerina (Röder) Junker. Both parents were natives of Germany and spent all their lives there, the father passing away in 1871 and the mother in 1894. The father was a prominent contractor and builder in his native country, and kept in his employ between fifteen and twenty men. In their family were six children: Caspar, of this review; Katerina, who is the wife of Henry Koch, residing in Sandy; Mary, who died in California and was the wife of L. Schafer; Hieronymus and Heinrich, both of whom are living in Germany; and Carl, who died in Germany in 1871.

Caspar Junker received his education in his native country and remained there until twenty-three years of age, when he came to America, making his way direct to Sandy, arriving here October 10, 1888. For a time he worked for his brother-in-law, Henry Koch, on the farm, but afterward went to Portland, where for seven years he was employed in a hotel, working all that time for the same man. He then returned to Sandy where he purchased a hotel and conducted the same until February 4, 1910, when he sold his interests there, and since has given his attention to the handling of mortgages and loans. He has been very successful in his financial operations, and now owns twenty-seven acres within the corporation of Sandy, on which he has built eight business houses, and he also owns a beautiful residence here.

In 1895 Mr. Junker wedded Miss Katie Schwankhart, who was born in Bavaria, Germany, November 10, 1862, a daughter of Johann and Magdalena S. Schwankhart. The parents were both natives of Germany, and the father died there in 1887. The mother yet lives in her native country, having reached the advanced age of eighty years. In their family were eight children, of whom four are living. They are: George and Hans, both of whom reside in Germany, the latter being a teacher; Fannie, who is the wife of Hugo Ungefroren of Alaska; and Mrs. Junker. Mr. and Mrs. Junker have become parents of five children: Katie B., who was born August 26, 1896; Mary M., who was born August 30, 1898; Henry, born December

CASPAR JUNKER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDAT

4, 1900; Frederick, born November 1, 1903; and George, who died in infancy.

In his political views Mr. Junker is a republican. He has always taken an active interest in local party work, and has served in the city council ever since the town of Sandy was incorporated. Both he and his family are faithful and earnest members of the Catholic church. Over twenty-three years have come and gone since Mr. Junker arrived in Sandy, and throughout the intervening period he has been a prominent factor in the advancement of the commercial interests upon which the growth and prosperity of a town always depends. Capable and enterprising, he is a highly honored citizen of the country in which he has chosen to make his home.

LEMUEL D. KING. Associated with the interests of Baker county since 1887 in the capacity of miner, ranchman, sawmill operator, and more recently postmaster, Lemuel D. King is a prominent and influential man of his county. He was born November 3, 1861, in Siskiyou county, California, a son of Flavius J. and Nancy C. (Fencher) King, the former a native of Arkansas and the latter of Alabama. Their wedding was celebrated in Arkansas and shortly afterward, in 1859, the parents crossed the plains with ox teams and settled in California. When Lemuel D. King was three years of age the family removed to Oregon, settling in Canyon City, Grant county. The father was by trade a cabinet-maker and furniture designer and in that capacity was employed during the earlier part of his life but after removing to California he devoted a great share of his attention to mining. He was also actively associated with the various other interests of the state, being a prominent citizen during his period of residence there. The mother passed away in Susanville, Grant county, Oregon, in 1883, while the father's death occurred in Washington, December 18, 1897. They were the parents of three children: Lemuel D., of this review; Mary, the wife of William Burdick, of Washington; and Jessie, the wife of L. B. Hardman, also residing in Washington.

Lemuel D. King began mining from early boyhood and upon settling in Oregon followed this occupation, meeting with reasonable success. Later he began to raise stock and engaged in agricultural pursuits, in which he continued until 1883, making Susanville his headquarters. In the year mentioned he sold his cattle and disposed of his other farming interests, settling in the John Day valley, where he followed farming and teaming until 1887, when he removed to Baker county, acquiring land eight miles southeast of Whitney, where he still resides. He has there continued the business of mining, farming and stock-raising, having formed a partnership with his uncle, Lemuel Barnett, and together they own three hundred and twenty acres of land, which was obtained from the government, and handle one hundred and twenty-five head of cattle. They are interested in the Phoenix and other mines of the county, which give great promise. In 1902 a postoffice named in honor of Mr. King was established and mail is delivered twice a week at that place. Eight families are served in that way and Mr. King acts as postmaster. Mr. King is also operating a sawmill which produces about two hundred thousand feet of lumber a year. In the fall of 1911 he purchased a new steam threshing outfit, all the previous machines in the vicinity having been run by horse power. He was the first man to settle in this locality, and his nearest neighbor lived five miles distant.

Mr. King was married July 18, 1882, to Miss Hattie J. Gillinwater, a native of Grant county, and a daughter of Joseph C. and Sarah J. (Dimmick) Gillinwater. To Mr. and Mrs. King seven children have been born: H. Pearl, who is the wife of Joseph B. Hardman; Lemuel J., who married Maude Freeman; William C. and Mary Z., twins, the former of whom resides at home, while the latter is married; Audry M., the wife of Charles Davidson, of Baker county; Fred, born in 1903; and Ralph, born in 1904. Mrs. King's parents were early settlers of Grant county, her father being a native of Pennsylvania, while the mother was born in Illinois.

Mr. King belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and takes an active interest in the affairs of that organization. Among the many men of Baker county there are few who lead a more strenuous life or who have accomplished more for the upbuilding of the county than Mr. King. Being engaged in so many different lines of endeavor he is necessarily a very busy man and finds little time for other than his business duties, yet he has formed an extensive acquaintance and is regarded by all who know him as a man of uprightness and ability, being held in high esteem wherever known. He is one of the really valuable men of his county, earnest, enterprising and aggressive such as any community is fortunate in possessing.

FRANK A. BENNETT, who has continuously resided in Baker county for more than four decades, was at one time the most extensive sheep raiser in the county. For the past twelve years he has owned and operated a ranch of three hundred and twenty acres on the Lower Powder river, sixteen miles northeast of Baker City. His birth occurred near Salem, Oregon, on the 2d of June, 1858, his parents being James and Mary Jane (Dill) Bennett, who were natives of Iowa and Indiana respectively. James Bennett and Mary Jane Dill crossed the plains as members of the same company, the latter being accompanied by her parents. They were married near Salem, Oregon, and subsequently removed to Walla Walla county, Washington, Mr. Bennett devoting his attention to general agricultural pursuits. Here he met death by accident, being drowned in the Touchet river. His widow then came to La Grande, Oregon, and later to Baker county, where she wedded John Farman, and they are now residing at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada. By her first husband she had two children, namely: Frank A., of this review; and Rosa B., the wife of W. S. Love, of Baker county.

Frank A. Bennett came to Baker county with his mother about 1870 and has resided within its borders continuously since. He drove a stagecoach between Baker and Sparta for three or four years and then turned his attention to the sheep business, in which he has remained to the present time. Mr. Bennett and his brother-in-law, W. S. Love, were at one time the most extensive sheep raisers in Baker county, the former having as high as eight thousand sheep. Beginning with three hundred ewes, they raised the largest flock of sheep in the county. For the past twelve years Mr. Bennett has resided on a ranch of three hundred and twenty acres on the Lower Powder river, sixteen miles northeast of Baker City, which he has brought under a high state of cultivation and improvement and on which he carries on general farming.

In 1882 Mr. Bennett was united in marriage to Miss Hallie J. Hulick, who was born at Cove, Union county, Oregon, on the 1st of May, 1865, a daughter of Mrs. Margaret Ann (Gobel) Hulick. The parents crossed the plains from Indiana to Oregon, settling in Cove, Union county, where Mr. Hulick passed away. His widow still survives and resides at that place. Unto our subject and his wife were born the following children: Mary Margaret, who is the wife of A. B. Matthews, of Mayfield, Idaho; Claude E., residing on the Lower Powder river in Baker county; George F., a resident of Baker City; Viola, the wife of Claude Turner, of Baker City; Myrton W., at home; Odie, living in Richland, Baker county, this state; and Earl G., also at home. Fraternally Mr. Bennett is identified with the Woodmen of the World at Baker City. He possesses the enterprising spirit of the northwest, which has been a dominant factor in producing the wonderful development of this section of the country, and he has steadily worked his way upward until today he stands among the prosperous and representative citizens of his county.

RODNEY T. McHALEY, one of the most progressive and wealthy ranchmen of Grant county, was born near Monument, that county, on the 31st of October, 1873. His parents, George W. and Mary (Jackson) McHaley, are mentioned at greater length on another page of this work in connection with the sketch of Judge Rice R. McHaley, a brother of our subject. Rodney T. McHaley was reared at home, acquiring his education in the common schools. He is the youngest son of his father's family and operated the home farm until the death of his father. He still makes his home on this place, having inherited the property under the terms of his father's will. His principal business is that of stock-raising, his attention being given to horses, cattle and sheep. He has a beautiful residence on his home ranch, which consists of one hundred and sixty acres, and in addition to which he owns twenty-five hundred acres of land in Grant county. He is also the owner of three profitable irrigation ditches and is one of the most progressive ranchmen in Grant county. In addition to the stock products of his own ranch he is a heavy buyer and feeder of cattle, which he prepares and ships to the open market.

In 1902 Mr. McHaley was married to Miss Fay Hartley, a daughter of Bentley Hartley, who is one of the pioneers of Oregon, having emigrated to this state in 1849. He is still living and resides in Prairie City. To Mr. and Mrs. McHaley have been born three children: Hilda, Zelda and Norma. The mother of these children enjoys the unique distinction of being one of the most accomplished and handsome women in Grant county. Rodney T. McHaley is a republican but, having no political aspirations and being a man of affairs, he has been content to look after his own household at the same time doing his loyal duty as an enterprising and law-abiding citizen of Grant county.

LAWRENCE SWEEK. Agriculture in one of its most important phases finds a worthy representative in Lawrence Sweek, who now has over three thousand acres of farm and pasture land in Grant county, Oregon, where he is running several thousand sheep and large herds of horses and mules. He was born February 26, 1858, in Portland, Oregon, and is a son of John and Maria (Beard) Sweek, both natives of Missouri. They were numbered among the earliest pioneers in the state, starting on the trip to the northwest by ox team three days after their marriage. They met with no trouble from the Indians although the caravans immediately behind them were molested during the entire journey. Mr. Sweek settled in the Willamette valley, where he took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres ten miles from Portland and he cultivated the soil until his death. He passed through the severe winter of 1852-53 and lost practically everything he had when the season was over he was obliged to get his food from Oregon City, packing his flour and and other meager provisions upon his back and journeying to his home on foot. He was a successful agriculturist and a prominent man in local affairs, holding various public offices and always ready to serve his community to the best of his ability. He died in 1892 at the age of sixty years. His wife is still living in the seventy-eighth year of her age and is residing on the old homestead near Portland.

John Sweek and his wife were the parents of six children: Cyrus Minton, who is now a prominent attorney in Burns, Oregon; Alice, now Mrs. William Smith, of Portland; Lawrence, the subject of this sketch; Alex, a lawyer in Portland; Lillie, who is now Mrs. Harting; and Thad, who is engaged in the real-estate business in Portland.

Lawrence Sweek was reared in his native state and was educated in its public schools. He finished his studies in Forest Grove,

Oregon, and at the age of twenty started in farming for himself. He located first near his present ranch and was successful in the cultivation of the soil and stock-raising for some time. He later bought the property upon which he now resides three miles above Monument, where he is in active operation of three thousand acres of land. He has a portion of his land under irrigation and gives his personal attention to the raising of sheep, keeping seven thousand head in his pasture at all times. He also raises thoroughbred horses and makes a specialty of the breeding and care of mules. He carries on general farming along practical and progressive lines and has been successful in every branch of agriculture which he has undertaken.

In February, 1878, Mr. Sweek was united in marriage to Miss Emily L. Harding, of Telmook, Oregon, a daughter of Benjamin Harding who was a pioneer settler in this state and who met his death at the hands of the Indians on Thorn creek when he was defending his horses against their depredations. To Mr. and Mrs. Sweek have been born eight children: Fleming, who is now engaged in ranching; Rex L.; Ona, who is now Mrs. Wilson; Belle, now Mrs. Neal; Blanche, who married Fred Putnam; Calvin, who is attending the State University at Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he is studing law; and Gladys and Ruth, who live at home.

Mr. Sweek is a blue lodge Mason and prominent in the affairs of the Woodmen of the World. His wife affiliates with the Order of the Eastern Star. He has progressed with the advancement of agriculture and bases his undoubted success upon his efficient methods of work and his excellent general and specialized knowledge. He represents a class of farmers and ranchmen who are making the cultivation of the soil and the breeding of high grade stock among the most honorable occupations open to men.

THOMAS F. THOMPSON, who has made his home in Oregon for about three decades, is the owner of a fine stock farm of three hundred and twenty acres situated eight miles northwest of Unity. His birth occurred near Harriettsville, Noble county, Ohio, on the 9th of May, 1863, his parents being Jacob and Rebecca (Cox) Thompson, who were likewise natives of the Buckeye state. They removed to Wisconsin in 1876 and at the end of two and a half years, in the fall of 1878, took up their abode in Phillips county, Kansas, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Jacob Thompson, who followed general agricultural pursuits throughout his active business career, passed away at the age of seventy-two years. His wife was called to her final rest in 1911, when she had attained the age of sixty-six years. They were the parents of eight children, six of whom survive.

Thomas F. Thompson, who was the oldest of the children, remained under the parental roof until eighteen years of age, when he went to Denver, Colorado, and spent eighteen months at work on the High Line canal, twenty miles west of that city. Subsequently going to Idaho, he was there employed for one summer on the construction of the Oregon Short Line Railroad. In 1883 he came to Baker City, Oregon, and from that time to the present has resided continuously in Baker county. He worked for wages during a period of about ten years and then homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of land and preempted another tract of similar size. His holdings now embrace three hundred and twenty acres of land on sections 18 and 19, township 12, range 37, eight miles northwest of Unity. He operates this ranch as a stock farm, owning fifty-five head of horses and eighty head of cattle. His undertakings in this connection have been attended with a gratifying measure of prosperity and he has long been numbered among the substantial and enterprising citizens of his community.

Mr. Thompson is married and has one son, Joseph R., whose birth occurred in Baker county, Oregon, on the 29th of September, 1894.

WARREN R. PARKER, who is residing in Idaho, was born in Albion, Orleans county, New York, September 10, 1856 a son of William H. and Betsy J. (Wescott) Parker, who spent their entire lives in Orleans county. His paternal great-grandfather, William Parker, was a native of Massachusetts and went to western New York as one of the first settlers who took up their residence in that section. He resided two miles west of where Albion now stands and owned one hundred and twenty acres of land in that place. He erected a log cabin upon it and during their residence there they were forced to endure many of the experiences to which every pioneer is subjected. The grandfather, Isaac Parker, lived upon the same farm from the time he was seven years of age until his death. The mother of our subject died in 1907, when she was seventy-four years of age. His father is at present residing upon the home farm at the advanced age of seventy-nine years. To their union four children were born: Warren R., who is the subject of this sketch; David L., who is living at Porter Corners, New York; William H., of Batavia; and Jesse C., of Albion.

Warren R. Parker acquired his education in the common schools of New York state. Later he attended the Albion Academy for two terms before engaging in teaching during 1876 and 1877 at the old round schoolhouse made of cobble stones. In the spring of 1877 he left home and removed the Cheyenne, Wyoming. Shortly after arriving there he went into the Black Hill country during the mining excitement and had the usual experiences of the uninitiated. In the spring of 1878 he went to Greeley, Colorado, and rode the range there for two years before going to Leadville during the mining excitement there. He remained in that place for two years, at the end of which time he went to the Gunnison country for three years. In 1884 he came to Umatilla county, Oregon, and he made this county his home until four years ago. Since that time he has been residing in Buhl, Idaho. In 1884 he ran horses over the hills and was thus engaged for twenty-five years. He is at present planning to return to Umatilla to reside as soon as his business interests will permit him to do so. He owns one hundred and sixty acres of irrigated land one-half mile south of Umatilla and he also has eighty acres planted to alfalfa in Idaho. In whatever he has undertaken he has met with success, which has been due to the thorough study he makes of the various enterprises with which he has been connected. His industry and energy have found substantial reward in a most gratifying degree of prosperity.

On the 22d of November, 1887, Mr. Parker was married to Miss Alma D. Markham, whose birth occurred in Umatilla county, on the 9th of June, 1869, and who is a daughter of Samuel and Frances (Bleecher) Markham. The parents came from Michigan via the Isthmus of Panama to Oregon, locating in Salem in 1856. About two years later they settled on the Umatilla river and Mr. Markham erected a flour mill just above the falls. He was a participant in the last skirmish which occurred with the Indians in 1878. Both he and Mrs. Markham died in this county and they are buried in Echo. To Mr. and Mrs. Parker three children have been born, Betsy J., Dixie and Warren Russell. They are all living at home. Mr. Parker belongs to the Masonic fraternity and has filled all the chairs in the local lodge. He has made a creditable record in business, his course being marked by steady progress gained through ready utilization of every opportunity that has been presented. He is a man of strongly marked character and has come to be recognized as a forceful element in the community, his sterling personal traits of character having won him the high regard and confidence of all with whom he has been associated.

MRS. ELLEN M. LALLY, who owns and conducts a mercantile store at Hammond, has built up the business until it is now one of the largest establishments of its kind in Clatsop county. Her birth occurred at Lee, Massachusetts, on the 25th of May, 1862, her parents being John and Mary (McCarty) McLoughlin, both of whom were born in the town of Loughrea, County Galway, Ireland. They emigrated to America in the late '30s, settling at North Lee, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, where their marriage was celebrated. There Mr. McLoughlin continued to reside for seven years, working in a paper mill. In 1864 he removed to Michigan, spending four years in that state. He next took up his abode at Mount Pleasant, Henry county, Iowa, there making his home until 1896, when he came to Clatsop county, Oregon. The remainder of his life was spent at Hammond, where his demise occurred on the 19th of April, 1908. During the period of his residence in this county he was employed by the government, carrying the mails to and from the trains. He was eighty-one years of age at the time of his death, having been born in 1827. He made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Lally, having lost his wife on the 12th of April, 1869. His children were five in number, as follows: Lawrence, who resides at Hammond, Oregon, and manages the mercantile establishment of his sister; Martin, engaged in business at Hammond; Mrs. Lally, of this review; John, who died at North Lee, Massachusetts, at the age of one year; and John James, who was but six years of age when he passed away at Mount Pleasant, Iowa.

Losing her mother in early life, Mrs. Ellen M. Lally was deprived of educational advantages but has gained wide general knowledge through reading, experience and observation. In July, 1894, she embarked in the confectionery business at Seaside, Oregon, there remaining until the following November, when she opened a similar establishment at Hammond. As her financial resources permitted she gradually acquired a stock of merchandise and now conducts one of the most extensive mercantile stores in Clatsop county. She is a woman of splendid business ability and unflagging energy and well deserves the prosperity which has crowned her efforts. Hers was originally the only store at Hammond, where she also acted as the first postmistress. She likewise has other city property in Hammond and owns some unimproved land at Portland. She is a faithful communicant of the Catholic church, to which her parents also belonged. Mrs. Lally is well known and highly esteemed throughout the community, her many excellent traits of heart and mind having endeared her to all with whom she has come in contact.

WILLIAM H. BOYCE, who is living in Baker, where he is enjoying the quiet seclusion of his own well appointed home, has for a long term of years been an honored and valued citizen in this community. He was born in the state of Missouri, December 23, 1840, his parents being W. P. and Sarah Jane (Bullock) Boyce, both of whom were natives of Kentucky. In an early day they changed their place of residence to Missouri, where they spent the remaining years of their lives and where they passed away. They were the parents of eight children, three of whom are still living.

William H. Boyce spent the period of his childhood and boyhood in Missouri, where he was educated in the common and high schools and where he later taught for several years. He also received valuable training from his father in all branches of farm work. On attaining his majority he enlisted in Company F, Missouri Volunteers, and served his country gallantly for four years, participating in many battles, among those were those of Wilson Creek and Pea Ridge. In one engagement he was wounded by a shot through the right arm but otherwise escaped uninjured. At the conclusion of the war he returned to Missouri and engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1880, when he crossed the plains with

MRS. E. M. LALLY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

teams and located in Baker county, Oregon. Here he took up a homestead in Pleasant Valley and later bought a ranch four miles distant from Baker, on which he lived until 1908, where he is now residing. His landed interests now comprise four hundred and eighty acres of highly improved land, and besides this valuable farming property he owns four residence properties in Baker.

In 1862 Mr. Boyce was married to Miss Laura E. Davis, a native of Ohio. To this union five children have been born, John W., Robert E., Marcus A., Amontus A., and Daniel W., the last named being deceased. Mr. Boyce has always given his political allegiance to the democratic party and although he has not taken an active part in politics he has helped as best he could to further the interests of his party in his community. Mr. and Mrs. Boyce are both affiliated with the Presbyterian church, being regular in their attendance upon its services and aiding materially in the work which this organization is accomplishing. It is fitting that a long life devoted to earnest toil, particularly when four years of manhood's prime have been given to the service of one's country, facing almost certain injury or even death, should be amply rewarded in all those things which make for comfort and happiness. Mr. Boyce's faithful labors during his boyhood on his father's farm, the studiousness with which he applied himself when in school, his service in the war, his helpfulness during his years as teacher and his unremitting industry as a farmer have all combined to make his life useful to the nation, the state and the community and to yield him abundant means, enabling him to live retired in the enjoyment of a comfortable competence.

IRA C. SCOTT, who is successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits upon his present farm one mile southeast of Helix, was born September 21, 1884, his parents being W. M. and Anna (Caplinger) Scott. They were both natives of Illinois, where the father was born seventy-four years ago and the mother seventy years ago. The mother crossed the plains with her parents when she was very young and Mr. Scott came at the age of twenty-seven years. He settled at once in the Willamette valley, where he was married. He resided near Salem until he removed to Umatilla county in 1877, where he took up a homestead and resided until six years ago. They are now living retired in Walla Walla, Washington. He is the owner of one section of land all devoted to wheat growing in this county, which has been well improved by him. In politics he is a democrat and is a most active citizen in political, educational and social circles. He holds membership in the Christian church at Helix and in the Farmers Union. To Mr. and Mrs. Scott eight children were born, three of whom passed away at one time with diphtheria. One son, Ray, died in 1905, when he was sixteen years of age. Those surviving are: Mary L., who is the wife of J. M. Richardson, of Ritzville, Washington; Emma, who married E. A. Mann, who is engaged in the practice of medicine at Portland, Oregon; J. A., of Walla Walla, Washington; and Ira C., who is the subject of this review.

The last named acquired his education in the public schools of this state and has resided here throughout his life. He attended the Pendleton Academy for one year and also pursued a course in a business college. Since his father's removal to Walla Walla he has resided upon the home farm and under his management he has kept it in the high state of productivity which it enjoyed under his father's direction. Although he is a young man, he has already shown his capabilities in agricultural lines and is regarded as one of the successful farmers of Pendleton. He owns one and a half sections of fine wheat land in Whitman county, Washington, and this property is also under the same high state of productivity as his Oregon property.

In June, 1907, Mr. Scott was married to Miss Ethel Kern, whose birth occurred near Helix, in June, 1891. She is a daughter of J. M. Kern, who resides two miles north of Helix. To their union one child, Velma Maxine, was born. Both Mr. and Mrs. Scott have the warm esteem and friendship of many with whom they come in contact and the hospitality of the best homes of the locality is cordially extended them.

JOHN SYLVESTER MILES. John Sylvester Miles, who is actively interested in agricultural pursuits in Baker county, his home being near the town of Miles, was born in Joliet, Illinois, August 24, 1880. His father, William Miles, was born in the county of Wexford, Ireland, January 8, 1837, and was a son of James Miles. He married Bridget Doolen, who was also a representative of one of the old families that, like the Miles family, had long been connected with farming interests there. They were originally descended from the Normans.

William Miles began his education in what are called the national schools of Ireland and later became a pupil in the public schools of New York and Illinois. He was only about ten years of age when his father, James Miles, emigrated with the family from Ireland and settled in the Empire state. When his school days were over William Miles engaged in farming in Will county, Illinois, near Joliet, and largely devoted his time to agricultural pursuits until after the outbreak of the Civil war. His patriotic spirit being aroused by the continued attempt of the south to overthrow the Union, he enlisted on the 9th of August, 1862, for three years, as a member of the Ninetieth Illinois Infantry, under Captain O. Marah, commanding Company C. He was mustered out June 5, 1865, at Washington, D. C., after having participated in the battles of Coldwater, Mississippi; Vicksburg, Mississippi; Jackson, Mississippi; Collierville, Tennessee; Missionary Ridge, Tennessee; Knoxville, Tennessee; Dallas, Georgia; Kenesaw Mountain, Georgia; Atlanta, Georgia, July 19th, 22d, 28th, and August 3d and 17th; Jonesboro, Georgia;

Lovejoy Station, Georgia; Rome, Georgia; Gadsden, Alabama; Jennison Bridge; Ogeechee River, Georgia; Savannah, Georgia; Charleston, South Carolina; Columbia, South Caroline; and Bentonville, North Carolina. He was wounded at Fort McAllister in the right forearm but as soon as possible was again engaged in active duty and proved a loyal advocate and defender of the Union cause. With the close of hostilities he returned to Illinois, where he resided until 1884. For about four years of that time he was foreman of the steel rolling mills at Joliet, Illinois. In 1884 he came over the Northern Pacific railroad to Oregon, accompanied by his family, and settled on a tract of two hundred acres of farming land on the Lower Powder river in Baker county. For a number of years he devoted his time and energies to general agricultural pursuits but at length put aside arduous and active business cares and removed to Baker. In the meantime he had sold the farm to his brother, who in turn sold it to John S. Miles and his brother. William Miles also owned a sixth interest in a mile ditch which was built from Powder river to cover and irrigate a large tract of land, but he also disposed of his interest in that project. On removing to Baker he purchased a pleasant home there, now occupied by himself and wife. For about seven years he served as postmaster at the village of Miles and he filled the office of school director and clerk of the school district at Miles for about twelve years. His early political allegiance was given to the democratic party until about twenty years ago and during the past two decades he has supported the republican party. He belongs to Joe Hooker Post, No. 5, G. A. R., at Baker, and served as its senior vice commander for three or more years. He was formerly identified with some secret societies but has withdrawn from these. His religious faith is evidenced by his membership in the Roman Catholic church.

On the 28th of November, 1872, Mr. Miles was married at Dwight, Illinois, to Miss Annie E. Harrison, a daughter of John Harrison, of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and Mary (Hoover) Harrison, who was of German descent. Her father removed from Pennsylvania to Illinois about 1855 and afterward became a resident of Nebraska, where he followed farming—his life work—until his death on the 31st of July, 1878. He was then about fifty-six years of age, having been born in 1822. In his family were nine children, of whom eight are now living, three sons and five daughters. Unto Mr. and Mrs. William Miles were born eight children and the family circle yet remains unbroken by the hand of death. The eldest, Mary L. Miles, born October 4, 1873, was married November 18, 1902, to Charles Hemming, a locomotive engineer of Chicago. Ellen B., born December 23, 1875, was married November 20, 1895, to Milton Martin, who is engaged in quartz and placer mining at Rupert, Idaho, and they have five children, two sons and three daughters. James F. Miles, born December 23, 1877, is a farmer living at Rupert, Idaho. John S. is the next of the family. William J., born November 2, 1882, is associated in business with his brother John. Agnes G., born February 23, 1886, is the wife of Claude Bennett, whom she married January 4, 1904. They are now living at Keating, Oregon, and have three daughters and a son. Katie R., born June 24, 1888, is living in Chicago. Edward N., born December 11, 1892, is employed by his brother-in-law, Mr. Bennett, at Keating.

John Sylvester Miles, whose name introduces this record, was only about four years of age when the family came to Oregon. He pursued his education in the public schools of Baker county and was trained to the work of the home farm, assisting his father in the cultivation of the fields through the period of his boyhood and youth. When he started out in life for himself it was as a farmer and stock-raiser, and to this work he still gives his attention. He and his brother William are partners in the ownership and conduct of an excellent tract of land of one hundred acres on the Lower Powder river, which they have brought under a high state of cultivation and equipped with many modern improvements, adding all of the accessories of a model farm of the twentieth century.

Both brothers are active in community affairs and their support can always be counted upon to further any measure or movement for the public good. John S. Miles is now a director in school district No. 29 of Baker county, and his brother William is clerk of that district and also supervisor of road district No. 5. Their political allegiance is given to the republican party and they are members of the Order of Moose, being affiliated with the local society at Baker. The former is a Catholic in religious belief.

John S. Miles was married to Miss Mary M. Johnson, who was born September 6, 1889, in Union, Oregon, a daughter of George W. and Nellie (White) Johnson. Her father was a farmer and dairyman and is now living in Union, Oregon. Unto him and his wife have been born three sons and three daughters, of whom the eldest died in infancy. The others are: Chester, who was born August 8, 1887, and is living in Union; Mrs. Miles; Margaret, who was born August 21, 1891; Ruth, born September 21, 1895; and Vernon, born December 6, 1902. The younger children are all at home with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles have many friends in Baker county and are well known as people of the highest respectability, enjoying and meriting the confidence and good will of all with whom they have come in contact.

GEORGE W. CLEVENGER. A public official is a servant of the people. His duty is to look after their interests, carry out their desires and give his time and attention to the welfare and development of their public institutions. George W. Clevenger, mayor of Burns, Oregon, since 1910, is an official of this class. He never lets his personal prejudice interfere with his political duties. He was elected by the people and to their interests he gives his energies and talents.

G. W. CLEVENGER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

He is a native of Greene county, Pennsylvania, born in August, 1858, and his family is of old Pennsylvania German stock. His father, Alex Clevenger, left his native state for Missouri at an early day and remained there until his death. His son was educated in the public schools of that state and in 1876 took up carpentering in which he became an expert workman. He came to Oregon in 1881 and worked at his trade. He also ran a sawmill in Malheur county for two years and at the end of that period he added to his business stock farming. He still worked at carpentering, hiring a man to take care of his stock and run his farm. Under these conditions he was not remarkably successful and he sold his holdings after a short time and removed to Idaho, where he remained until 1899, working as a carpenter and builder. He became well known and widely popular in this state and was a prominent figure in public affairs, being elected to the state legislature in 1893. He returned to Oregon several years later and located in Burns. Determining to enter the undertaking business he went east in 1906 and took a course in the Philadelphia Training School for Embalmers, under Professor H. S. Eckles. He learned the art of undertaking and embalming and became thoroughly acquainted with the details of the business, in which he was remarkably successful. He soon acquired a large clientage in Burns and gained a reputation for honest and efficient business methods. He later added furniture to his stock and is now conducting both enterprises. He carries a large assortment of carefully selected household and office furniture and his taste and knowledge of values have brought him increasing business each year.

In 1891 Mr. Clevenger was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Johnson, a daughter of R. D. Johnson of Grant county, Oregon. They have two children: Asal and Morton Geary. The picture of the younger child, a most handsome boy with beautiful abundant hair has appeared in many papers together with his pet dog "Stubs," who has rescued him from several perilous situations, on one occasion saving his life. The photograph of the boy and the dog side by side has been produced in various papers and magazines including the Boston publication called, "Our Dumb Animals," in which the story has been told to indicate the fidelity of the dog to his young master.

Mr. Clevenger was first elected mayor of Burns in 1910 and has served in this capacity ever since. He has made a conspicuous record for himself for honesty and efficiency in public office. He is one of the most popular mayors the city has ever had and his work has always tended toward the progress and development of the municipality. He is essentially a public-spirited citizen and takes an intelligent interest in educational affairs. He is now serving a three years' term on the school board and his work in this capacity has brought remarkable results. Since his election to the board the city has commenced the erection of a beautiful public school building. It is to cost thirty thousand dollars and will be upon its completion one of the most modern and efficiently equipped public schools west of the Mississippi.

In the fall of 1892, while a citizen of Idaho, he was elected a member of the state legislature from Ada county for a term of two years.

Besides his political and business interests in Burns, Mr. Clevenger is also interested in the country surrounding the city. He owns a fine farm eight miles east and two miles south of Burns, planted with wheat and oats, His harvest each year of these two products adds materially to the output of the county. He has also recently placed under cultivation a large farm fourteen miles up the Silvies river, in the development and management of which he is personally interested. In the capacity of a builder he has erected some of the finest residences and public buildings in this city. His home is one of the finest and most modern in that section of the country. It is situated on an elevation which commands a magnificent view of the valley and mountains surrounding Burns and is a hospitable meeting place for Mr. Clevenger's many friends. Fraternally he is a blue lodge Mason and a member of the Eastern Star, and has occupied the various chairs in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is also a member of the Chamber of Commerce. His work as mayor has been distinguished by broad and high-minded public service and he is interested in everything which makes for the development of the resources of his city and county. Under his administration new streets have been opened up and he is now trying to get modern and efficient water and sewage in the city. His cooperation in any movement looking toward municipal development along educational, political or business lines is never sought in vain. He is an excellent citizen, public-spirited, intelligent and cultured and is in addition a thoroughly honest man.

REV. FRANK L. YOUNG, the subject of this sketch, was born in Bureau county, Illinois, in October, 1859. His boyhood days were spent in the states of Iowa and Kansas, and with his parents he emigrated to Washington Territory in 1878. Mr. Young's opportunities for an education were limited to the facilities, books and studies of the public schools. In 1881 he was united in marriage to Miss Addie J. Thornbrue, at Spokane. In 1882 he was licensed by the Methodist Episcopal church to enter the ministry of that church, and commenced his ministerial career as a circuit rider, traveling over the vast, and at that time, sparsely settled regions of eastern Washington. In this missionary work Mr. Young had to found and build up churches where none of any denomination had previously existed. Preaching in private dwellings, barns or in "Gods' First Temples" the groves, and where the settlers were few and far between, and finding a welcome at every fireside, the young minister laid the foundations of churches now strong and self sustaining in populous towns and thickly settled farming communities.

In this self-sacrificing work, Mr. Young and his equally self-sacrificing wife, traveled among and preached to white settlers over practically the same great territory which Elkanah Walker and H. H. Spalding and their wives preached to Indians forty years preceding.

Mr. Young's first pastorate in Oregon was at Baker City, from which point he made missionary excursions to all the regions in and about the Blue mountains. In the year 1900 the conference sent him to Portland to labor in the north end of that city. There and in the suburb of St. Johns he and his wife labored for nine years, building up strong churches in both places. Feeling the imperative demands of providing for a growing family, he declined a reappointment to regular service for the church. He then located on public land in Lake county and took charge of the mining property of the Oregon Borax Company, still preaching and teaching on Sundays, marrying the living and burying the dead, doing missionary work whenever the opportunity offered without fee or reward.

Mrs. Young was born in Oskaloosa county, Kansas in October, 1867, and emigrated to Spokane county, Washington Territory with her parents in 1879. There the family located on public land and were among the first farmers of that part of the country. With a devoted spirit she united with the church in girlhood days, and gave twenty-seven years of her life to the special service of the Methodist church, leading the music at all services and teaching in Sunday schools everywhere. Possessed of the rare gift of a sweet soprano voice, which attracted the young people to her and delighted every public or private gathering, that voice and the sweet spirit of its possessor powerfully aided the husband in his labors as a Methodist preacher.

FRED C. MOULLEN, B. S., proprietor of the Mozach Garage in Eugene, in which connection he has built up a growing and gratifying business as agent for several standard automobiles as well as in the conduct of a garage and repair shop, was born in Grayson, California, July 5, 1885, his parents being Frederick C. and Elizabeth (Elfres) Moullen. The father was a native of Sweden but when a boy ran away from home and went to sea. Finally about 1849 he settled in the neighborhood of San Francisco, California, and after being employed on the ranches for a time he began farming and stock-raising on his own account. He prospered in his undertakings and acquired fourteen or fifteen hundred acres of rich wheat land in the San Joaquin valley, becoming one of the prominent and influential residents of that district, where he made his home to the time of his death, which occurred in 1893, when he was sixty-one years of age.

Fred C. Moullen was a pupil in the public schools and also attended the California School of Mechanical Arts at San Francisco, from which he was graduated with the Bachelor of Science degree in 1905. He then attended the University of Oregon, pursuing the mechanical engineering course for three and a half years. He later took a leave of absence to go into the automobile business, in which he engaged in the spring of 1909. He now has the oldest establishment of this character in the city. He took for a partner, Roy C. Zacharias and their business interests were conducted under the style of Moullen & Zacharias. Using the first syllable of their two names they coined the name of Mozach for their garage. After a year Mr. Moullen purchased his partner's interest but the name of the Mozach Garage is still retained by him. He became agent for the Studebaker and the E. M. F. cars and the same year added the agency for the White motor cars. He continued to handle these three makes of automobiles until 1912, when he discontinued the sale of the White and substituted the Chalmers. He does an extensive garage and repair business, having the most complete equipment in this line in the city. He has both technical and practical knowledge of engineering, combined with good business instincts and keen discernment, and it does not require the gift of propheey to predict for him a successful future. Fraternally he is connected with Eugene Lodge, No. 357, B. P. O. E. He gives almost all of his time and energies to his business affairs, in which he is now meeting with gratifying success.

CHARLES LEONARD LOW is a native of Oregon and the son of a pioneer. He has been identified with agricultural pursuits since his early childhood and his mature career which has been steadily successful has been a force in progress and development. He is now residing upon the farm where he was born and his acres comprise his father's original homestead claim in Baker county. He is systematic and progressive in his methods and thoroughly modern and up-to-date in his agricultural standards and is carrying on in his conduct of the enterprise the honorable and upright policies of his father who evolved out of a wilderness of undeveloped land an excellent modern farm.

Charles Leonard Low was born on September 7, 1871, upon the old homestead known as "Low's Ranch" on Alder creek, a tributary of Burnt river. He is a son of Leonard Low whose birth occurred in Maine, in May, 1829, and who was among the early settlers in Oregon. Upon the paternal side he is of Scottish ancestry and his father was a first cousin to the late governor of California, Frederick F. Low, famous as one of the first breeders of fine stock in that state. Leonard Low went to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama in 1852. He made the journey on sailing vessels probably on the White Ball line and worked in the mines on the American river for three or four years. He was in San Francisco during the stirring times when justice was administered by a vigilante committee and he followed mining in the vicinity of the city for some time. He met with success and determined

FRED C. MOULLEN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
TILDEN

to return to his native state. On his journey, however, he was shipwrecked upon the Florida coast and was obliged to continue his travels overland. He finally reached Maine and after a short residence there came west again, spending the years from 1857 to 1858 in the central states. At one time he started for Pikes Peak which was then the center of the gold excitement but abandoned his original intention and crossed the plains to southern Oregon arriving near Jacksonville in the fall of 1859. From that year until 1862 he mined in that vicinity and then attracted by rumors of gold in Idaho started for Florence. He reached The Dalles, Oregon, at a time when gold had been discovered in the Powder river and large numbers of miners were journeying in that direction. He joined the gold seekers and arrived at what was afterward the town of Auburn in August or September of the year 1862. He formed a partnership with an old Maine lumberman, Daniel Smith, and together they built and operated the water-power sawmill on the Blue Canyon above the site where the town was afterward built. He continued in association with Mr. Smith in this business until 1865 receiving sometimes sixty-five dollars for a thousand feet of lumber. He was successful in this enterprise and made a moderate fortune because he had an appreciation of favorable opportunities and the energy and ambition which made him seize them and put them to use. In 1865 he located a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres on Alder creek which he improved and developed. He did general farming and specialized in the breeding and raising of high-grade cattle and horses continuing in this occupation until his death.

About the year 1867 Leonard Low was united in marriage to Mrs. Malinda V. Smith and to their union were born five children. Rosita, whose birth occurred in 1869 and who is the wife of John Farley, by whom she has four children. Her husband is a farmer and the family make their home in Eagle Valley, Oregon. Charles Leonard is the subject of this review. Alice married Frank Haynes and they became the parents of four children. Mrs. Haynes is now deceased. Amy J. became the wife of James Anderson and they have one son who lives in Portland. The youngest daughter of the family is Melinda, now Mrs. J. W. Burke of Baker, Oregon, and the mother of three daughters. By her former marriage the mother of our subject had two children: Nellie, who married John Rizor of Baker; and Lavinia, who became the wife of Abraham Clement of Weiser, Idaho, by whom she has five children. The mother of our subject died in 1906 after a long period of residence in Oregon. When she first settled with her husband upon the Low ranch there was a stage station operated upon their property and the farm was one of the earliest agricultural enterprises in the county.

Charles Leonard Low attended the public schools in Baker City and afterward became a pupil in the Leighton Academy at Cover in Union county studying under William Smith, who is now circuit judge of Baker county. At the age of sixteen he began assisting his father with the work of the farm and was also identified with stock-raising. He has never left the homestead and after his father's death the land was willed to him. He has made it one of the most highly improved and valuable farms in the county and has operated it always along systematic and modern lines. It has become historic as one of the earliest ranches in the section. For two generations it has been conducted intelligently and progressively by standards of efficiency and expansion and it is now one of the attractive and model enterprises in Baker county.

Mr. Low was married in August, 1898, to Miss Lyda Stewart, a daughter of William Stewart, a farmer near Baker. Mrs. Low is one of a family of seven children. The others are: Anna, who married Robert McCaulay of Newport, by whom she has four children: Emma, who became the wife of Gilbert Simmons of Walla Walla, Washington; May, the deceased wife of William Rash; Elizabeth, who married James D. Hannon, a farmer in Pleasant Valley, by whom she has three children: Callie, who married Edward Wise, a farmer in Iowa by whom she has three children; and William Stewart, a contractor and general builder in Walla Walla, Washington, who married Miss Cora Fate. Mr. and Mrs. Low are the parents of three children: Frederick C., who was born on July 7, 1900, and who is now in the sixth grade in school; Amy, whose birth occurred on August 3, 1904, and who has been four years in school; and Charles Stewart, born on the 24th of July, 1909.

Mr. Low has been affiliated with the republican party since he attained his majority, being a firm believer in the principles and policies for which it stands. He, however, never seeks public office preferring to concentrate his attention upon the management of his ranch. He belongs to the Baker lodge of the Woodmen of the World, this being his only fraternal connection. He is at the present time numbered among the individual forces in the agricultural development of Baker county. The standards of efficiency and progress by which he operates his enterprise have been handed down from father to son and by him have been faithfully adhered to, to his own benefit and to the advantage of modern farming in Oregon. Mr. Low is a successful agriculturist and a resourceful business man, capable, enterprising and progressive and is a native son whose worthy and upright life is a credit to his community.

WILLIAM O. DENNIS. Among the industrious, enterprising and successful farmers of Morrow county is William O. Dennis, the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of valuable land on Butter creek. His birth occurred in Robertson county, Tennessee, on the 30th of January, 1873, his parents being Joseph Henry Ellis and Celestine Hawkins (Dement) Dennis. They were both natives of Tennessee, where they resided throughout their lives until the father removed to Oregon about six weeks before his death. He and his youngest son, Carl, were drowned in the flood which occurred on the 14th of June, 1903. They had come to Oregon to visit William O. Dennis. Over two hundred and twenty lives were lost in the flood. The mother's death had previously occurred in Tennessee. Of the children born to their union four grew to maturity: William O.; Lina Isabelle and Viola Vesta, both deceased; and Carl Edgar.

William O. Dennis spent his youthful days under the parental roof, attending the public schools in pursuit of an education. He also engaged in agricultural pursuits upon his father's farm and was thus employed until he came to Oregon in 1902. He has since resided on his homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres on Butter creek. He is engaged in dry farming and devotes his energies to raising wheat. For the last four years he has rented the Hoskins ranch of two hundred and eighty acres, which is under irrigation and which he devotes to alfalfa growing and stock-raising. In partnership with C. W. Garrison he also rents seven hundred acres of the William J. Waltenberger ranch and is engaged in alfalfa growing and stock-raising. He has improved his own farm and the substantial residence, the commodious barns and outbuildings attest his progressive and substantial methods of agriculture.

In politics Mr. Dennis is independent, voting for man and measure rather than party. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the United Brethren church of Pine City. He has resided in Morrow county for ten years and has become well known as a reliable and straightforward business man, fully meriting the confidence and good-will which are extended him by his fellow citizens.

GEORGE H. HOLMES. A man of keen business sagacity and superior judgment is George H. Holmes, who occupies a foremost place among the representative and successful agriculturists of Union county, being the owner of a finely improved farm about two miles north of Cove. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, August 12, 1858, a son of Lovic R. and Jane (Gabriel) Holmes, and a brother of W. R. Holmes, extended mention of whom appears elsewhere in this volume. The father, a native of Ireland, came to the United States in early manhood, locating first in New York, where he remained for a short time and then went to Cincinnati, Ohio, there accepting a position as bookkeeper for the firm of L. M. Duncan, furniture manufacturers. Subsequently he removed to Memphis, Tennessee, where he was identified with the branch house of a Cincinnati firm, and remained in that city until the outbreak of the Civil war. He left Memphis on the last boat to leave that city before the blockade of the river, returning to Cincinnati in 1861, and during the intervening period until 1863 was there engaged in the grocery business. In the latter year he went to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and made preparation to join a party that was about to start over the plains for Oregon. He bought eight yoke of oxen and several mules, for the company was large when they started and was increased from time to time by other parties joining them along the route. They had considerable trouble with the Indians, who stampeded their cattle, and Mr. Holmes lost two of his oxen, but he followed the Indians and succeeded in recovering some of the meat. In the fall of 1863 they arrived in Bannock City, Montana, and there the Holmes family spent the winter. Mr. Holmes, however, went to the Box Elder country in Utah, where he engaged in freighting during the winter, and then in the spring of 1864 he took his family to Walla Walla, Washington, where they lived for four years. In the fall of 1868 they arrived in Oregon and here Mr. Holmes homesteaded the farm upon which his son George now resides. Later, on the 1st of July, 1875, he obtained a patent to the land, signed by President U. S. Grant, and he subsequently purchased one hundred and twenty acres adjoining his original homestead. He also became the owner of three hundred and twenty acres four miles west of his home place, and there he spent his remaining days, engaging in general farming and stock-raising. He was one of the well known and influential citizens of his community, serving as a member of the county board of commissioners for some time. He was a Mason in fraternal relations and politically supported the democratic party. While a resident of New York he married Miss Jane Gabriel, who was also a native of Ireland, and unto them were born seven children.

George H. Holmes, the second in order of birth in his father's family, was a lad of ten years when brought to Oregon, and in the district schools near his father's home he acquired his education. Under the direction of his father he gained thorough practical experience along agricultural lines and in 1877, before he was yet twenty years of age, he made his initial step in the business world, engaging in driving cattle from Wallowa to the Greene river and from the latter point taking them by rail to Chicago. In this capacity he was employed by his uncle, with whom he remained for one year, and then, after the latter's death, he operated independently for two years. At the end of that time, in connection with the Masterson brothers, of Elgin, he drove cattle to Imnaha, Wallowa county, their herd being the first cattle to be taken into that district by white men. Shortly afterward he began raising horses in partnership with his father, operating a ranch on Crow creek in Wallowa county for three years. When they discontinued business there they had two hundred and sixty head of horses, which they drove to Wyoming, wintering at Fort Federman on the Platte river, and disposing of their stock in the following spring in that district and at Plum Creek, east of Platte City, Nebraska. A few years were then spent on the home farm, which he assisted in operating until 1888, when he went to Wallowa county and there accepted a position in the Wallowa National Bank at Enterprise, with which institution he was identified until July, 1892. He then returned home to assume the management of the place, upon which he has since continued to reside. It consists of two hundred and eighty acres of land well located about two miles north of Cove, and he is also the owner of a good tract of timber land. The home place has been excellently developed, its fields being under a high state of cultivation and its buildings being substantial and in good repair. The house, a commodious and comfortable dwelling, is located in the midst of a fine poplar grove, and the neat and attractive appearance of the place adds considerably to the beauty of the landscape. Mr. Holmes' time is divided between his general farming and stock-raising interests, raising wheat, oats and barley, and making a specialty of Clyde horses.

On the 21st of September, 1891, Mr. Holmes was united in marriage to Miss Susie A. Zurcher, a native of Ohio and a daughter of John and Helen Zurcher. Her parents, who are both deceased, were pioneer settlers of Enterprise, Oregon, their homestead farm being now a part of the town site. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Holmes were born four children, John Lovic, Jane Margaret, Louise Ruth and Charles Zurcher. In his fraternal relations Mr. Holmes is a Mason, while his political support is given to the progressive democratic party. He served on the local school board for many years. Few men in his locality have attained to a higher degree of success than has he, and his keen sagacity and excellent judgment have made him one of the most forceful and influential business men of his district.

NORMAN C. LONGFELLOW. The man who begins his career amid the most unfavorable conditions, encounters innumerable hardships and practically unsurmountable obstacles and by the sheer force of his own will and determination conquers conditions and achieves success before he has attained middle age is highly worthy of the respect and commendation of his fellows. One of such men as these is Norman C. Longfellow, one of the largest sheep-raisers in Wallowa county and a progressive and substantial citizen of Joseph. He was born on the Pacific ocean on the 2d of November, 1864, and is a son of Abraham and Kate (O'Neil) Longfellow. The father was born and reared in Palermo, Maine, but in his early manhood he went to Australia in search of gold. He prospected there with considerable success and had already acquired several thousand dollars—quite a fortune for that period—and had a most promising future, when his life was terminated by an accident in 1870. He was working in a placer mine when the bank caved in, burying him beneath the debris. Some time previous to that he had married Miss Kate O'Neil, who was born and reared in Belfast, Ireland, and came to Australia with a party of friends. In the early years of their domestic life they made a journey to the United States to visit his people and some of her friends, and on the return journey to Australia, their son, Norman C., was born. Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Longfellow came to the United States with her six children, settling in Maine among his people. She managed to keep her family together until her funds were exhausted, when she gave them out among the neighbors to be reared. The latter years of the mother were passed in Boston, Massachusetts, where she died in 1902.

As a lad of six years Norman C. Longfellow was placed in the family of George Bawler to be reared. The latter was a farmer living in the vicinity of Liberty, Maine, and while he was not particularly unkind to the little stranger, his wife was most abusive in her treatment. The lad bore it uncomplainingly, as children will, but her hardness aroused a spirit of rebellion and when he was ten he ran away, making his way to Augusta, Maine. Ten years is a very tender age at which to be thrust out into the world, but the previous four years had inured the boy to all manner of hardships and privations and he faced the future without any fear, although he was in a strange city, without employment and practically penniless. He subsequently obtained employment as general utility boy in a drug store, being engaged in this establishment for four or five years. During that time his mother made a trip to Montana and upon her return told her son of the many opportunities and advantages afforded industrious young men in the west. Believing that he would there find better chances for advancement in 1880, he gave up his position and removed to Butte, Montana. He remained there for six or seven years, following various occupations which enabled him to earn an honest living. Part of the time he was in the employ of Knapton Brothers, prominent sheep men of that state who subsequently removed to Oregon, settling on Bully creek in the vicinity of Westphal, Malheur county. He continued in their service and was subsequently sent by them into Idaho, where they were also ranging sheep. It was his ambition to have herds of his own and in 1893 he severed his connection with this company and invested his capital in sheep and located in Soda Springs, Idaho. Two years later he sold his flock and went to work for Evans & Bluett, well known sheep men of Oregon, where they had extensive herds. Their headquarters were at Fremont, Nebraska. He remained in their service for a brief period only and then came To Wallowa county and engaged in sheep-raising for himself. Naturally he had to begin in a small way, but he was thoroughly familiar with the business and was well qualified for its successful pursuit. His prosperity has been gratifying and he has acquired about twenty-five hundred acres of land in the Wallowa valley and ranges as high as twelve thousand sheep. He is one of the leading representatives of the sheep industry not only in this valley but in the state and is recognized as one of the most capable business men of Joseph. His success has been the achievement of many, long, hard years spent on the range, often alone and miles from a fellow being, and is highly merited. He is the owner of one of the finest residences of Joseph, which home is fully equipped with every modern convenience and comfort. Mr. Longfellow is a man who takes great pleasure in his success and finds much enjoyment in spending his money in the entertainment of his friends. He has not forgotten his own childhood and early youth with its many privations and few pleasures and generously contributes to assist the unfortunate.

On the 28th of December, 1898, Norman C. Longfellow was married to Miss Grace Barnard, a daughter of Dr. J. W. Barnard, a well known physician and druggist of Joseph. Public-spirited and enterprising in matters of citizenship, Mr. Longfellow takes an active interest in all municipal affairs, giving his support to the men and measures of the republican party. His fellow townsmen fully recognize his worth and ability and have elected him to various local offices. At the present time he is a member of the town council and is serving efficiently in this capacity. Mr. Longfellow is a man of many sterling qualities and admirable traits of character, whose progressive, enterprising spirit in matters of citizenship, sagacity and industry in business activities and honor and integrity in transactions with his fellowmen make him a much desired acquisition in any community.

ROBERT G. ROOKE was one of the enterprising, respected and successful agriculturists of Coos county. His home ranch was located on the north fork of Coos river, twelve miles from Marshfield, where, prior to his death on the 10th of June, 1912, he was successfully engaged in truck and dairy farming. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, January 28, 1840, and was the son of Robert and Eliza T. (Adams) Rooke, both of whom were natives of that country. They were the parents of four children: Harry, deceased; Thomas, who makes his home in Ireland; James William, whose death occurred in Marshfield, Oregon; and Robert G., also deceased, of this review.

Robert G. Rooke was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the schools of his native land. At the age of ten years he started in life for himself as an apprenticed carpenter in England and continued in that occupation until he became a master of his trade. On emigrating to America he spent his first year in the new world in New York city, where he was employed at the carpenter trade. At the end of that time he moved to Oregon, settling at North Bend, in Coos county, and there followed the occupation of a carpenter. In 1867 he purchased of Joseph Lane a homestead consisting of one hundred and sixty acres, upon which he established his residence, living for some time alone upon that property. He afterward bought one hundred and sixteen acres, eighteen acres of which is at present in a high state of cultivation and is used for truck-garden farming, a branch of agriculture that, under the capable management of Mr. Rooke, proved to be one of very great profit. In addition to his truck-farming interests he also conducted a small but well equipped dairy, using in his business about twelve selected dairy cows. During the last year that he conducted his dairy business he had the enviable reputation of having produced twenty-six hundred pounds of butter from the milk supply of ten cows. That fact established the record for Mr. Rooke as one of the successful and scientific dairy farmers of his portion of the state.

In 1880 Mr. Rooke was united in marriage to Miss Mary Rebecca Gurney, a daughter of Robert M. and Elizabeth (Anthony) Gurney, who were the parents of eight children: Helen and Voltaire, both deceased; Volney, of Myrtle Point, who is married and has six children; Martin, of California, who is married and has four children; Mary Rebecca, now Mrs. Robert Rooke; Asa, residing in Douglas county; Margaret, the wife of Mr. Robinson, of Douglas county; and James, also residing in Douglas county. To Mr. and Mrs. Rooke seven children were born. Kate, born in July, 1881, is the wife of Frank Prey, of Springfield, Oregon. Edith, who was born June 21, 1884, resides with her mother. She is the widow of P. H. Breier and has two children, Vesta, who is four years of age, and Elma, aged two years. Helen, born July 28, 1886, is the wife of Luther Judy, of Coos county, and they have one child, Theodosia. Robert born April 8, 1888, resides on his farm in Douglas county. Theodosia, born October 30, 1889, was educated in the public schools and is now residing at home. Mary Florence, born February 3, 1892, is also at home. George, the youngest member of the family, was born February 14, 1894, and attended school in California, where he pursued a course in electrical engineering, but he has taken charge of the farm for his mother.

Mr. Rooke was a member of the progressive wing of the republican party but never allowed his name to be used as a candidate for public office. He was a member of the Masonic lodge and a charter member of the Improved Order of Red Men, of Marshfield. He was one of the progressive and up-to-date truck and dairy farmers of Coos county and was always identified with every measure of public interest tending to improve the agricultural and educational interests of the residents of his portion of the state.

HENRY M. SOMMERER, the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of valuable farm land three and one-half miles northeast of Hermiston, has long been numbered among the substantial agriculturists and esteemed citizens of Umatilla county. He was born in Jefferson City, Missouri, January 23, 1882. His parents, John A. and Anna (Kreager) Sommerer, are both of German descent, the father having been born in Missouri. The grandfather of our subject, Matthew Som-

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT G. ROOKE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

merer, was born in Germany. He came to America in 1834 and settled in Missouri, where his death occurred in 1908, when he had reached the advanced age of ninety-eight years. He prospered in his undertakings as an agriculturist and made his farm in Missouri his place of abode until the time of his death. He served in the Civil war. The maternal grandfather, Adam Kreager, was born in Missouri and lived there until he enlisted for service in the war. The mother's death occurred when her son Henry was but fifteen years of age. The father is residing upon his farm near Jefferson City. To their union eight children were born, of whom the subject of our sketch is the eldest.

Henry M. Sommerer was reared at home and acquired his education in the district schools. After he reached the age of twenty years he came to Oregon, locating in Echo, this county. After being employed for five years by the month on Butter creek he came to Hermiston and purchased a desert claim of one hundred and sixty acres, which has since been his home. It is now rich and productive land and is highly improved, the buildings thereon including a substantial residence. The soil, which has been made arable, yields abundant annual harvests, which prove a source of gratifying revenue to him, while his good business ability and close application have already gained for him, although a young man, rank among the progressive and prosperous agriculturists of the county. All of his land is irrigated and he has sixty acres in alfalfa. The improvements which are noticeable on the property have been made by Mr. Sommerer during the four years which he has spent on the farm. At present his sister is residing with him. That he is interested in every progressive movement started in agricultural lines is manifested by the fact that he has been president of the Farmers Union since its organization. He has served as director of the Water Users Association and also as director of the Third Eastern Oregon Fair Association. In each of these connections he gives not only his time and valuable opinions at the meetings but also uses such influence as he can to stimulate their interest throughout the county. He holds membership with the Masons and the Odd Fellows. That many of his stanchest friends are numbered among those who have been interested in watching his progress as an agriculturist and as a citizen is an indication that his has been an energetic, industrious, honorable and upright life and he is worthy of the esteem in which he is uniformly held.

ROBERT F. STUBBLEFIELD, one of the public-spirited men of Enterprise, whose labors have been of substantial and material value to the community in the line of general progress, is the owner of thirty-six hundred and sixteen acres of land, which he cultivates and devotes principally to sheep-raising. He is classed with the prosperous and progressive farmers and stock-raisers of Wallowa county. His birth occurred in Cedar county, Missouri, on the 3d of August, 1855, his parents being Thomas J. and Martha R. (Kennedy) Stubblefield, the former a native of Missouri and the latter of Tennessee. The mother was brought to Missouri by her parents when she was a child and after her marriage located upon a farm in Cedar county, where her death occurred in 1857. Subsequently the father married Miss Mary E. Kennedy and in 1879 they emigrated to Oregon, locating in Union county, near Elgin, where his death occurred in less than two years after his arrival. In politics he was a republican but never sought office as a reward for party fealty.

On the home farm Robert F. Stubblefield spent the early years of his life, acquiring his education in the public schools. However, his schooling was limited owing to the outbreak of the Civil war, which caused a discontinuance of many of the schools in Missouri, and after the close of the war the work on the home farm required his attention and would not permit him to take up his studies again. Later he worked by the month as a farm hand and in 1875, when he was twenty years of age, he made arrangements to rent land and farmed on his own account. For a few years he carried on general agricultural pursuits and in 1878 came to Oregon, locating in Union county, where he has since lived. He preempted this property, which was on Cricket Flat, near Elgin. A year and a half later, however, he disposed of this place and removed to Union county. In August, 1882, he removed to Wallowa valley and there took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, on which a part of the town of Enterprise was subsequently built. With his characteristic energy he turned his attention to the development of this property and so persistently did he continue in that pursuit year after year that he turned what was open and uncultivated prairie into a well improved property, classed with the model farms of this section. With the exception of some six years when he was engaged in the raising of horses Mr. Stubblefield has devoted the greater part of his attention to sheep-raising and is among the most extensive sheep growers in the county. He owns thirty-six hundred and sixteen acres of land, all of which lies in Wallowa county excepting one hundred and sixty acres, which is across the boundary line and lies in the state of Washington. He is often spoken of as the father of Enterprise, having laid out the town in 1886. His residence was the first house erected within the limits of the town and he donated the ground and lumber for the erection of the first business buildings to those who would locate and start the town. The establishment of the Enterprise Mercantile & Milling Company was the first firm to locate and was the deciding point in the success of the town. Mr. Stubblefield also donated the land, purchased the lumber and paid for the building of the first schoolhouse and from that time he has been the most influential man in the growth and development of the present educational system of Enterprise. To him more than to any other man is due the present state of high efficiency of the schools.

In 1875 Mr. Stubblefield was united in marriage to Miss Mary C. Foust, a daughter of William and Nancy (Montgomery) Foust, of Cedar county, Missouri, both being natives of Tennessee. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Stubblefield ten children have been born, nine of whom survive, namely: Orpha, who is married to Lee C. Henderson, of Pasco, Washington; Omar J., who is engaged in sheep growing on his ranch in Wallowa county; Ethel, who is the wife of E. J. Cord, of Wallowa county; J. Everett, who is an agriculturist of Wallowa county; Owen F., who is also engaged in the sheep industry, operating a ranch in Wallowa county; Ralph F., a ranchman of Wallowa county; Nellie E., who is at present in her senior year in the high school; Vera L., who is in her junior year in the high school; and Mary L., who is in the third grade of the public schools.

Mr. Stubblefield always votes with the republican party and in all matters of public moment displays a spirit of marked devotion to the general good. He has served many times as a member of the town council and for several years as a member of the school board. Both he and Mrs. Stubblefield hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, of which organization he is one of the trustees. He is also a member of Enterprise Lodge, No. 94, K. P., and is one of the most prominent citizens of Enterprise. In analyzing his life record it will be seen that persistent effort has constituted the foundation upon which he has built his prosperity and his diligence may well serve as an example for others to emulate.

GEORGE S. SIZEMORE is one of the earliest settlers of Burns. He came to this city in 1886, when the conditions of living were extremely primitive and the total population consisted of only a few scattered families. He is today one of the veterans in the legal profession in this city and has built up his practice with the growth of the municipality. He is a native of Missouri, having been born in Marysville, that state, April 9, 1860. His parents were Eli and Rebecca (Johnson) Sizemore, both natives of Kentucky. The family is of Scotch origin, early representatives of the line having come to America in early times. Some settled in Maryland and others in Kentucky, in both of which states the name is prominent. The grandfather of our subject removed to Iowa in its pioneer days. He later went to Andrew county, Missouri, where he and his partner, named Stout, built the first house ever erected in that locality. He later removed to Nodaway county, where he with his son, the father of our subject, lived for some time. His life was an extremely eventful one. In the early days in Kentucky he participated in numerous battles with the Indians and many of his ancestors were killed in Indian depredations. He died in Nashville, Missouri, where the family had removed, at the age of seventy-nine years. His son, Eli Sizemore, the father of our subject, remained in Missouri for many years, coming to Oregon toward the close of his career. He died in Baker City in 1908. His wife is still living at the age of eighty, making her home with her children in Harney county.

George S. Sizemore received his early education in Nashville and Carthage, Missouri, and later went to school in St. Louis. It was in that city that he commenced the study of law. He came to Oregon in 1886 and located in Burns. His ability along many lines soon gained him general recognition and opened the way to a public life. He served as city marshal for some years and also held the office of city recorder. Although his duties as a public official were arduous yet he never permitted them to interfere with his legal studies, to which he devoted his attention continuously until 1900, when he was admitted to the bar of Oregon. During his twelve years of practice he has gained a local reputation as an expert in criminal law. He has served for three years as a member of the school board and has recently been elected for another term. He takes an active and intelligent interest in politics, giving his allegiance to the democratic party. He is at present chairman of the central committee of Harney county and his work in this capacity is of a high order.

On May 9, 1889, George S. Sizemore was married in Harney county to Miss Alta McGee, a daughter of Dr. M. J. McGee, who moved from Texas to Oregon, where he lived for a short time, his death occurring in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Sizemore have the distinction of being the first couple to take out a marriage license in Harney county. They now have two children: R. L., an employe of N. Brown & Company, of Burns; and Leonora, a pupil of the State Normal School at Monmouth, Oregon.

An uncle of George Sizemore, named Samuel Johnson, was a pioneer of the American northwest at the time of the Whitman massacre at Walla Walla, Washington. He did brilliant service for his country. The Indians had taken many captives who were unable to help themselves in any manner on account of their lack of ammunition. Samuel Johnson, from his point of vantage on a mountain side, saw their difficulty. He filled a large wagon full of powder and shot and, locking its wheels together, slid down the side of the mountain and arrived in time to be of service to the unfortunate captives.

THOMAS M. HURLBURT, city engineer of Portland, was born in Albia, Iowa, March 28, 1860, his parents being John Q. A. and Mary (Adams) Hurlburt. In early colonial days the family was planted on American soil by ancestors who came from England in 1630 and settled in New England. The father came of that branch of the Adams family that has given to the country two of its presidents. He was born in Vermont in 1833, and his life record covered the intervening years to October, 1909, when he was called to his final rest. He was quite young when his parents removed with their family to Canada, where he was reared, pursued a college education and became a civil engineer, entering upon the practice of that profession in Iowa a short time prior to the Civil war. Following the outbreak of hostilities between the north and the south he enlisted in the Thirty-sixth Iowa Regiment and was wounded at Marks Mill, Arkansas, in which engagement he was captured and held as a prisoner of war for a time but later was exchanged. Following his recovery from his wounds he rejoined his regiment and served until the cessation of hostilities, when again the old flag floated over the entire south. Not long after this he entered the employ of the Burlington & Missouri Railroad Company, engaged as a civil engineer, locating the line of the road from Burlington to Omaha. In 1870 he came to Portland in his professional capacity and was employed in connection with railroad construction in the northwest, especially on the Oregon & California Railroad. As chief engineer he built the road from St. Joseph to Corvallis but with the death of his wife his interest in the things of this life failed and within a year he, too, passed away. He had gained prominence and success in his profession and his activities constituted a valuable element in the development and progress of different sections in which he labored. He was made a Mason in Iowa and following his removal to the west demitted to Troutdale Lodge, F. & A. M. While living in Multnomah county he served for three terms as county surveyor and was otherwise prominent and active in public affairs.

Thomas M. Hurlburt was a lad of only ten years when the family came to Oregon and in the schools of Portland he pursued his education until graduated from the high school. He afterward learned civil engineering under the direction of his father, mastering not only the technical side of the profession but also the business in its practical phases. He was associated with his father for seven years, or until 1884, when he was elected surveyor of Multnomah county, which position he filled from 1886 until 1891. In the latter year he was made city engineer of Portland and served in that capacity for five years, at the end of which time he was appointed United States examiner of surveys in the interior department, thus continuing until 1907. While in the employ of the Federal government he visited every wild section of the country west of the Mississippi. He knows what the term "roughing it" means and his life in the wilds brought him some thrilling experiences. He and his father have been identified with practically every important civil engineering project in Portland and with all the important early work of this character in the state. In 1907 on his retirement from his Federal position Thomas M. Hurlburt became district engineer for the city and filled that office until 1909. During the two succeeding years he was the principal assistant engineer and in July, 1911, was again appointed city engineer, so that he is the present incumbent in this position. In 1890 he explored Bull Run from its source to its mouth and made a report on the water supply of this stream, which now furnishes pure mountain water to Portland. In the following year the legislature passed the Bull Run water bill. Mr. Hurlburt also made the first railroad survey to Astoria from Gobel and the road was later located on the line of his survey. His work has indeed been of a most important character, constituting an initial step in much of the later development, progress and improvement of the state.

In 1884 occurred the marriage of Mr. Hurlburt and Miss Clara L. Files, a daughter of J. C. Files, a native of Portland, to which city her parents, Candace Laidy and J. C. Files came in the '50s, settling near what is now the northeast corner of the city on the Columbia river. Mr. and Mrs. Hurlburt have three sons, Raymond F., Rodney A. and Ralph J. In Masonry Mr. Hurlburt is quite prominent, being a past master of Washington Lodge, F. & A. M., a past high priest of Washington Chapter, R. A. M., a past thrice illustrious master of Washington Council, R. & S. M. and a past thrice illustrious grand master of the grand council, having been its chief officer for two years. He also holds membership in Oregon Consistory, A. A. S. R. and in Al Kader Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He has a wide acquaintance in the fraternity not only in Portland but throughout the state and is also well known in professional circles, holding membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers and the Oregon Society of Civil Engineers, while his ability has gained him extensive recognition as one who stands high in the field of his chosen calling.

HON. EDSON WATSON is superintendent of the Klamath Training School at Klamath Agency, in which connection keen sagacity, tact and high ideals, combined with ability to impart knowledge readily and clearly, have gained him more than local fame as an educator. He was born in Meigs county, Ohio, March 25, 1867, and is a son of Thomas M. and Rhoda A. (Jennings) Watson, who were natives of Pennsylvania but were married in Ohio. Following the outbreak of the Civil war, the father enlisted in 1861 as a member of the Seventh Ohio Battery of Light Artillery and served for three years. In days of peace his attention was given to general farming. He died in the Buckeye state in 1893, at the age of fifty years, and his widow now resides in Chicago. In their family were four children: Edson; Elza, who is living at Roseburg, Oregon; Eva, the wife of the Rev. E. H. Wilson, of Chillicothe, Ohio; and Ethel, the wife of Aldo Mitchell, of Chicago, where he is employed as a postal clerk.

The public schools of his native county afforded Edson Watson his educational privileges during his early boyhood. He resided at the place of his birth until twenty-two years of age, his youthful days being spent upon his father's farm. At the age of eighteen he began teaching, following that profession in Ohio from 1886 until 1889. He then went to Kansas, where he taught school for six years except the year of 1893-94. In the meantime he had supplemented his early educational privileges by a course in a private seminary at Tuppers Plains, Ohio, from 1883 until 1886. The year in Kansas not devoted to teaching was spent as a student in the Fort Scott Normal School. In the spring of 1895 he took the examination for the Indian service and in October of that year became connected with the service at Cheyenne Agency, South Dakota, being made a teacher in the day school. He there remained for four years, resigning in 1899, when he went to Wellsville, Kansas, where he worked in a lumberyard office until February, 1900. He was then reinstated in the Indian service at Pawhuska, Oklahoma, where he remained as principal teacher until October, 1902. He was then transferred and promoted to the position of clerk in charge at Kaw Agency, Oklahoma, where he continued until July 1, 1904, when he was made superintendent of the Kaw Agency, thus serving until April, 1908. He was there during the allotment and final settlement with the government. In April, 1908, he was transferred to the Pottawatomie Agency, Kansas, and in May 1910, he came to Klamath Agency, Oregon, where he has since remained.

On the 23d of December, 1891, at Wellsville, Kansas, Mr. Watson was united in marriage to Miss Carrie H. Stoner, a native of Pennsylvania and a daughter of J. W. and Martha (Oglevie) Stoner. Mr. and Mrs. Watson have become parents of two children, Inez and Dorothy. In his political views Mr. Watson is a republican and he attended the first republican state convention in Oklahoma as an alternate and took the delegate's place part of the time, sitting with the delegation. He has, however, never been an office seeker. He belongs to the Odd Fellows and Masonic lodges at Klamath Falls and is a consistent and faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church, guiding his life by its teachings and finding in its principles the motive springs of his conduct.

PHILIP J. BARTLE, M. D., one of the successful practicing physicians and surgeons of Eugene, engaged in general practice as a member of the firm of Bartle & Scaiefe, was born in South Addison, Steuben county, New York, June 4, 1874, his parents being the Reverend William and Hannah M. (Baxter) Bartle. The father is a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church and is a native of Steuben county, New York, where he pursued his education. At the time the Civil war broke out he enlisted in the Eighty-second New York Regiment and served for three years and nine months. He participated in the battle of Bull Run and took part in McClellan's campaign. He was shot in the face at the battle of the Wilderness and the ball was later taken out of his neck. He fought in the battle of Gettysburg and many other important engagements and lost his leg during the siege of Petersburg. Determining upon the work of the ministry, he became a member of the Genesee conference and continued his preaching in New York until 1885, when he removed to Kansas, where for twenty years, he was located in different pastorates. In 1905, he arrived in Eugene, where he is now living retired.

Dr. Bartle was quite young when the family removed to Kansas and in the public schools of Kinsley, he continued his education, passing through consecutive grades to the high school. He afterward read medicine under Dr. J. B. Ingles of Larned, Kansas, and spent two years as a student in the Keokuk Medical School of Keokuk, Iowa, and one year in the Barnes Medical College at St. Louis, Missouri, from which he graduated with the class of 1906. Dr. Bartle also holds a post-graduate diploma from the New Orleans Polyclinic which he received in 1905. After his graduation he at once entered upon the active practice of his profession, which he followed for eight years in Woods county, Oklahoma, and in 1905 he came to Eugene, where he was joined by his brother, Ira B., also a physician who practiced with him until 1907, when Ira B. Bartle sold out to Dr. Scaiefe, who thus became a partner of Dr. Philip J. Bartle. They engage in general practice and Dr. Bartle is also doing considerable hospital work, serving on the staff of the Eugene hospital. He belongs to the Lane County Medical Society, of which he was at one time the secretary; the Oregon State Medical Society; and the American Medical Association; and through the proceedings of these bodies, keeps in touch with the progress of his profession, enabling him to employ the most advanced and scientific methods in the care of his patients.

In 1899, Dr. Bartle was united in marriage to Miss Willie Westfall, a daughter of William Westfall, who was one of the victims of the notorious James boys of Missouri, at a time when he was serving as a conductor on the Rock Island Railroad. To Dr. and Mrs. Bartle have been born two children: Marion Ruth, and William Westfall. The parents are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and Dr. Bartle also is connected with the I. O. O. F. in Oklahoma. He has not been an active worker in the latter organization, however, since coming to Eugene, where his professional duties are making a continuous and increasing demand upon his time and attention, his ability being recognized by his growing patronage.

CHARLES A. AULT, M. D., who is well known as a physician and surgeon in Enterprise, was born at Plattsburg, New York, on the 24th of July, 1864. He is a son of Dr. Alexander and Jane A. (Martin) Ault, natives of Canada and New York respectively. The father was reared in Canada and educated in the medical department of McGill University at Montreal, Canada. After he completed his course in that institution he came to the United States and located at Mooers, New

DR. P. J. BARTLE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

York, where he was engaged in the practice of medicine at the outbreak of the Civil war. He volunteered his services as a surgeon to a New York regiment and served in that capacity during the hostilities. Following the close of the war he removed to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, where he practiced successfully for a number of years, and in 1909 he located in Brooklyn, New York, where he is now living retired. His ability is so recognized that he is not allowed to rest entirely from labor and he is frequently called upon in consultation in cases of unusual complexity. Mrs. Ault passed away in 1903.

Charles A. Ault spent his boyhood and youth, at home acquiring his education in the public schools of Oshkosh and at the Oshkosh Normal School. After he completed his normal school course he taught for three years in the country schools and in the Oshkosh city schools. Subsequently he accepted a position on the staff of teachers in the Denver, Colorado, schools but before he had completed his last term there he resigned to take up the study of medicine. At first he read under his father's preceptorship and later under Dr. W. A. Gordan, who afterward became superintendent of the Northern State Hospital for the Insane at Oshkosh. In 1886 Dr. Ault entered the medical department of the McGill University at Montreal and was graduated from that institution with the class of 1890. Subsequently he located in Lampasas county, Texas, having been induced to take up his residence in that city by a friend who was then residing there. He remained there for only a short time before removing to the northwest coast, locating first, in Colfax, Washington, where he was engaged successfully in the practice of medicine for five years and later, in 1896, in Enterprise. In the latter city he has built up an extensive and remunerative practice. He possesses an almost intuitive knowledge and is seldom, if ever, at fault in the diagnosis of a case. He keeps in constant touch with the advancement made in the medical science and through his extensive reading and thorough study he is always increasing his capabilities and his proficiency.

In 1891 Dr. Ault was married to Miss Biffie A. Moore, a daughter of John Moore, a prominent ranchman of Texas. She is a granddaughter of Captain John B. Moore, who is captain of the famous Texas Rangers. To Dr. and Mrs. Ault four children have been born: Ella M., who is a student in the senior class of Belton Female College of Belton, Texas; Byrd M. and Indiana, both of whom are in the senior year of the Enterprise high school; and William M., who is in the seventh grade in public school.

Dr. Charles A. Ault holds membership in the Oregon State Medical Society, the Eastern Oregon District Medical Society, the Texas State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He also holds membership in Wallowa Lodge, No. 82, A. F. & A. M., Enterprise Chapter, No. 30, R. A. M., Enterprise Lodge, No. 153, I. O. O. F., Enterprise Lodge, No. 94, K. P., and Enterprise Camp No. 535, W. O. W. He is serving as special United States pension examiner and is division surgeon of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company and examiner for various life insurance companies. He and his family hold membership in the Presbyterian church. He is one of the most able physicians in eastern Oregon and his ability is recognized as evidenced by the large practice which he enjoys.

JAMES L. GAULT is the cashier of the First National Bank of Burns. He has held this position for a number of years and his work in a difficult and responsible office has been of a high order. During the time of his connection with the bank the business of the institution has more than trebled and its surplus at the present time amounts to three times its capital. James L. Gault has contributed his full share toward this gratifying result. He was born at Monticello Iowa, January 31, 1872. His father, Joseph Gault, who was born in 1826, was a prominent Iowa pioneer who removed to that state from Wayne county, Ohio, in the '60s. In 1874 he went to Kansas and made his home near Great Bend, where he remained until he returned to Ohio in 1885, where he resided until his death on the 8th of July, 1912, at the age of eighty-six years. He was active during the many years of his life and always followed agricultural pursuits. His wife bore the maiden name of Caroline Zinn and was a native of Wayne county, Ohio. Her death occurred at Great Bend, Kansas, in the year 1884.

James L. Gault is the youngest of three children. His elder brother, F. B. Gault, is now president of the University of South Dakota at Vermilion. The second brother is Lincoln F., a merchandise broker of Tacoma, Washington. James L. Gault received his early education in the public schools of Kansas and this was supplemented by a course in the Wooster University at Wooster, Ohio. His first position after his graduation was as a clerk and bookkeeper in Tacoma, Washington. He began his banking career as bookkeeper in the First National Bank at Moscow, Idaho, in 1896, remaining in that position until 1899. In that year he was made deputy county auditor and recorder of Latah county, Idaho, continuing in that capacity for two years. In 1902 he came to Grants Pass, Josephine county, Oregon, where he became associated with the Booth & Kelly Lumber Company of that city. He continued his banking career at Glendive, Montana, where he acted as assistant cashier of the First National Bank for two years, resigning that office to accept the position of cashier of the First National Bank of Burns, which he now holds. This institution is of foremost importance in this city. They carry on hand a much larger cash balance than the law requires and the object of its management and the policy of its directors is to maintain a strong financial institution. To this aim they have been remarkably successful. The capital stock of the bank at the present time is twenty-five thousand dollars and its surplus and undivided profits amount to seventy-five thousand. The deposits on hand amount to a total of three hundred and eighty-five thousand, while it does a loan and discount business of three hundred thousand dollars, and its cash on hand and in various banks amounts to over one hundred and thirty thousand dollars. James L. Gault in his capacity of cashier handles many thousands of dollars a day. His honesty is proverbial and his reputation as an excellent banker and able business man has grown with each year of his connection with the First National Bank. In addition to his banking connections Mr. Gault is interested as an officer and director in several industrial enterprises that tend to develop the country in the immediate vicinity.

In June, 1899, James L. Gault was married in Portland, Oregon, to Miss Gertrude Conser, a daughter of W. Shannon Conser, a native of this state and a prominent resident of Portland. Our subject and his wife have two children, Joseph Wellington and Lester Shannon. James L. Gault is an important figure in business circles in Burns. He is a well known member of the local Commercial Club, has occupied nearly all of the chairs of the Masonic order and is president of its building association. The Masonic Temple is a beautiful structure, fifty by one hundred feet. It is made of brick, with stone facings, is two stories high and one of the most imposing structures in this city. Mr. Gault has made a reputation in eastern Oregon as an excellent banker and a worthy citizen. His energies and efforts have been in a large measure responsible for the growth and development of the business with which he is connected and his many friends are numbered among the rising and important people of this section of the state. The activities of Mr. Gault and his associates cover a wide range of territory and their operations are of a wide nature, extending throughout the greater part of southeastern Oregon.

JAMES A. MASTERSON, who is the president of the First National Bank of Elgin, is numbered among the leading citizens of this town. He was born in Kentucky, October 10, 1841, a son of William A. and Elizabeth J. (Violet) Masterson. The father was a native of Kentucky and the mother, of Pennsylvania. They were married in Kentucky and in 1842 removed to Missouri, residing there until 1851, when, with ox teams they crossed the plains to Oregon. They left St. Louis, Missouri, on April 5, and arrived at The Dalles on the 10th of the following October. There they loaded their baggage on a boat and went down the river to Portland. At that time, they could have purchased for three thousand dollars, one hundred and sixty acres of land, which is today in the heart of the city of Portland. From Portland they continued their journey to Eugene, where they located. The father was a millwright by trade and built the Eagle mills in Ashland and many other mills in Lane county. He died at Soda Springs in 1889 at the age of ninety-one years. The mother passed away in 1909 at the age of eighty-six years. They were both active members of the Presbyterian church.

James A. Masterson was only one year of age when his parents removed to Missouri, and ten years of age when they came to Oregon. Coming in a wagon with his parents, he rode a Cayuse pony all the way. He grew to manhood in the city of Eugene and received his early education in the public schools there. When eighteen years of age he became an apprentice in the blacksmith shop of his uncle, J. A. Masterson, at Eugene, and continued in the work there until 1863. In that year he went to the Grande Ronde valley where he followed the blacksmiths' trade until 1870. He then came to Wallowa county and engaged in the stock-raising business, in which he is still greatly interested. He owns six hundred and forty acres of land in the Wallowa valley upon which he lived until 1888, when he removed to Elgin. He has since operated his ranch from the latter location. In 1890 Mr. Masterson was one of the leading factors in the organization of the First National Bank of Elgin and was made a member of the board of directors of the same. In 1905 he was chosen president of that institution to succeed D. B. Hendricks, who removed to California. He is efficiently and conscientiously filling that position at the present writing.

In 1867 James A. Masterson was married to Miss Almira Blanchard, of Union county. She came to Oregon from New York with her parents in 1865. To Mr. and Mrs. Masterson have been born four children, three of whom are living. They are: Hattie, the wife of R. C. Mays, postmaster of Elgin; Harry G., who is engaged in the hardware business in Elgin; and Rena, the wife of Clay Rinehart of Wallace, Idaho. Mr. Masterson is fraternally associated with the Elgin Lodge No. 48, A. F. & A. M., and both he and his wife are members of the Elgin Chapter No. 52, of the Order of the Eastern Star. He belongs to the La Grande Lodge, No. 334, of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. Mrs. Masterson is a member of the Presbyterian church. Our subject throughout his residence here has been widely and favorably known both in Elgin and in its vicinity and has attained a most creditable position in both business and social circles, through his well directed efforts and merit.

JEHIAL TALLMADGE SWAYZE. For almost fifty years Jehial T. Swayze has lived in Oregon and during that time has witnessed the marvelous changes which the rapid development of the country has caused and to a great extent has assisted in it. A true type of the western pioneer, he joined his fortunes with those of a newly opened country and faced dangers, hardships and losses in the accomplishment of his success. His eventful and forceful life calling at all times for prompt decision, quick action and the determined upholding of his convictions has developed in him qualities of initiative, resourcefulness and courage and has been made successful in the truest sense, making him respected, esteemed and honored in the section to which he came as a pioneer. During the period of his residence he has been engaged in various representative industries and is now successful in the breeding, buying and selling of high-grade horses. He was born on the 6th of February, 1833, in Oakland county, Michigan, a son of Sanford and Experience (Brands) Swayze, natives of New Jersey. Their marriage occurred in Warren county, that state, in 1832 and there the father carried on farming and stock-raising for a short time. Eventually, however, they moved to Michigan and there purchased a tract of timber land which had to be cleared before the work of cultivation could be begun. The father of our subject was among the first settlers in Oakland county and because he was a resourceful and keen business man, saw the opportunities in his way and took advantage of them, acquiring large tracts of land, upon which he carried on general farming and stock-raising. He became one of the most prominent men in that part of Michigan and remained in Oakland county until his death in 1852. He left to his wife and children a large estate, which he had acquired in the course of an active, useful and valuable life. He never cared for political office but was an old line whig of the Henry Clay type. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was active and influential in the pioneer settlement of Michigan and is still remembered as one of the early settlers of Rochester and Canandaigua. His wife continued to reside on the homestead until her death in 1880, when she was about eighty years of age. They had six children, five sons and one daughter, the latter of whom died in infancy. The subject of this sketch is the eldest child. The second son, David B., was born in 1835 and married Miss Euphemia Chenecy, who bore him one son, George, who is a prominent farmer. David B., who passed away about 1898, was one of the wealthiest farmers in Oakland county. William B. was born in 1837 and lives in Portland, Oregon. He and his wife had four children, one of whom died in infancy. The others are: Clara, who is married; Elmer A., who is an expert telegraph operator in Portland; and Ella, who is a stenographer. The fourth child born to Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Swayze is Abel Warren, whose birth occurred in 1841. He was a farmer and came to Oregon in 1868, following general farming and stock-raising for a number of years. He eventually retired and died in Baker in 1908. John Wesley was born about 1843. He is married and lives in Kansas, where he is engaged in the operation of a livery stable. He has three children.

Jehial Swayze was educated in the common schools of Michigan, which in his day were supported by subscriptions. He remained at home and worked upon the farm until 1859, when he started for California. He took a roundabout route, going from Michigan to New York and from there by steamer to San Francisco by way of Panama, arriving in the latter city about the 7th of July, 1859. On his journey he met with some interesting experiences and recalls one incident which he considers typical of the times. On the train crossing the Isthmus of Panama many natives of the country were aboard. A man slightly intoxicated amused himself by kicking these men upon the shins as they passed along the aisles. He was told by a sea captain, also a passenger, not to do this and immediately wheeled about and stabbed the captain twice, killing him instantly. Mr. Swayze afterward learned that the murderer had been shot by the authorities of Panama.

From San Francisco the subject of this review went to Lakeville and there operated a threshing machine for one year. At the end of that time he began farming on shares but during his first year all his property was burned, leaving him practically without resources. He sold what was left and went to the Washoe mining camp, arriving in that district in its most prosperous days. The camp was a wild, lawless and reckless assembly—a typical frontier mining town—and human life was held so cheaply that it was a common saying that they had a man or two for breakfast. There Mr. Swayze worked at various occupations, although he never mined, and gained success in all by reason of his adaptability and industry. After two years he went to Placerville, California, arriving there in 1862, and from there journeyed to Sacramento, taking up his residence in that city at the time of the great flood. Everywhere he encountered evidences of ruin and damage done by the water, the disaster having covered all of the Sacramento river valley, the loss amounting to millions of dollars. At this time there was a recruiting officer at Sacramento, enlisting men in the service of the United States government for the Civil war. Mr. Swayze joined the first Washington territory volunteers, which were then being recruited in California, and entered upon his duties on the 8th of March, 1862. He belonged to Company B, under Captain S. W. Shulark, and was stationed in California for two months. At the end of that time his regiment was sent to Vancouver, Washington, and afterward to Fort Colville, where they remained for two years. During most of this time Mr. Swayze was detailed on special duty to take care of the government stock and now draws a pension for able service in the Federal army. He was mustered out with his honorable discharge at Vancouver at the expiration of his three-year term and remained in that city for some time. He speculated in greenbacks, buying at the lowest price and selling when they were worth seventy-five cents on the dollar, realizing thus a considerable profit. Determining to leave Vancouver, he journeyed in the interests of the United States government to Camp Watson, near Canyon City, driving teams. From there he went to Walla Walla, Washington, and in 1865 took up his residence in Oregon, settling in Durkee, where he now resides. He here bought a half-interest in two hundred acres of land in association with John Richardson. Afterward his brother Warren purchased the interests of Mr. Richardson and the two brothers carried on general farming and stock-raising upon their property, later specializing in the raising of high-grade fruit. For ten or twelve years they continued active in this work and then Mr. Swayze disposed of his holdings to Eugene Smith. During the period he made and lost money, encountered discouragements and hardships, being left at one time practically penniless after a fire which destroyed his buildings and his home. In the end, however, he was prosperous and successful and by developing his farm and orchards along the most progressive and scientific lines made his enterprise one of the most important in this part of the state. During this time he added to his activities by prospecting in the mines of the country and at one time lost in this way fifteen hundred dollars. He afterward disposed of his interest in the claim and went to Washington near Seattle, driving a herd of horses to sell in the markets. He obtained for these animals a handsome price and has since been active and successful as a horse dealer. He also breeds fancy stock and has some of the finest thoroughbred horses in Oregon. His life has been filled with hardships and discouragements which he met with steady courage and perseverance—difficulties which have been factors in his ultimate success. He has had many narrow escapes from death and delights in telling of one incident which recently occurred. He was breaking a fractious horse and at a critical moment a railroad train passed close by him and the animal became frightened. Mr. Swayze got off in order to hold the bridle and the horse jumped upon him, knocking him down and running the buggy over his body. He was taken to a hospital at Baker and for some time his life was despaired of. He is, however, now entirely recovered.

In his early years Mr. Swayze was a republican but for many years past has been independent in his political convictions, voting for the man whom he believes best fitted for the office. He does not give his allegiance to any particular religion but believes in the doctrine of kindness and good-will. For thirty-four years he lived on the main traveled road from Umatilla on the Columbia river to Idaho and it is impossible to estimate the number of travelers who stopped at his door for shelter and food and whom he helped with money and with advice, the result of knowledge gained by hard experience in hard conditions and acquired in the midst of dangers always bravely and courageously encountered.

CURTIS W. POWELL. One of Dayton's honored pioneers, who valiantly served his country for three years on the battlefields of the south, is Curtis W. Powell, whose residence here covers a period of thirty-three years. A native of Ohio, his birth occurred in Knox county on the 17th of August, 1830, his parents being John and Mary (Scoles) Powell. The parents were born and reared in Maryland, whence they removed to Ohio, settling on a farm which for many years was the family home. Both spent the remainder of their lives in the Buckeye state. Their family numbered eight children, six of whom lived to attain maturity, but all are now deceased with the exception of William S., who is living in Portland; and our subject.

Curtis W. Powell received a common-school education remaining on the farm with his parents until he attained his majority. He then left the parental roof and began life for himself, and as he had no trade, worked at common labor until the breaking out of the Civil war. When the call came for troops in 1861, he responded by enlisting on the 21st of September of that year in Knox county, Ohio, to serve three years, or during the war, and was mustered into the United States service at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio, as corporal under Captain John N. Cassels, in Company G, Twentieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Colonel Charles Whittelsey commanding. This was originally a three months' regiment but was reorganized for three years' service and during the year 1861-62 was employed in guarding a number of batteries in the rear of Covington, Kentucky. Four companies were sent during that winter into an insurrectionary district near Warren, Kentucky, and on the 11th of February, 1862, the entire regiment with the exception of Company K embarked for the Cumberland river, arriving at Fort Donelson, Tennessee, on the evening of the 14th and participating in the engagement of the 15th although placed in the reserve of the extreme right of the army. After the surrender of the fort the Twentieth was sent north in charge of prisoners and was scattered all over the land, but by the middle of March seven companies had been brought together and proceeded up the Tennessee river to Yellow Creek. On the 6th of April, 1862, the booming of the guns at Pittsburg Landing was heard and at three p. m. the regiment marched to the field and on the next day participated in the battle of Shiloh, or Pittsburg Landing, remaining there until the fall of Corinth, Mississippi, when they marched to Bolivar. There they were placed on garrison duty June 6, 1862, and on the 30th of August took part in the engagement at that place. The regiment was also engaged at Iuka and Hatche River, Mississippi, and the following December was assigned to the Second Brigade, Third Division, Seventeenth Corps, Army of the Tennessee, and afterward participated in the following engagements: Hankinson's Ferry, Raymond, Champions Hill, the assault and siege of Vicksburg and Jackson, Mississippi. In January, 1864, the regiment reenlisted as a veteran organization and on the 3d of February joined the celebrated Meridian expedition. It went north in March on veteran furlough, after which it joined Sherman's army June 9, 1864, and was then in the Atlanta campaign, taking part in the engagements at Kenesaw Mountain, Lost Mountain, Nickajack Creek, the siege of Savannah, Georgia, and the Carolina campaign, including the engagements at Pocotaligo, Orangeburg, Columbia and Cheraw, South Carolina; Bentonville and Goldsboro, North Carolina, besides minor engagements and skirmishes. After Johnston's surrender, when the regiment was stationed at Raleigh, North Carolina, they marched by way of Richmond, Virginia, to Washington, D. C., taking part in the Grand Review May 24, 1865, and then proceeded to Columbus, Ohio, for final muster out. Mr. Powell was promoted to sergeant of his company June 1, 1862. At Warsaw, Kentucky, during the winter of 1862, he was accidentally shot by a comrade, the bullet entering the left shoulder above the collar bone. The wound was treated at the county hospital at Warsaw. He was captured at Bolivar, Tennessee, with a part of two companies of his regiment and taken to Jackson, thence to Vicksburg, Mississippi, but was exchanged ten days later. He bore a gallant part in all engagements of his command to and including Peach Tree Creek, Georgia, and rendered faithful and meritorious service to his country at all times. He received an honorable discharge near East Point, Georgia, on the 27th of September, 1864, by reason of the expiration of his term of service. He veteranized with his regiment in January, 1864, but was not mustered in on account of smallpox.

CURTIS W. POWELL

NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

When mustered out Mr. Powell returned to Ohio, where he remained for a year and then removed to Illinois, residing there until 1878. The west had always had a strong attraction for him since his boyhood and in the latter year he came to Oregon, locating in Dayton, where he has since made his home. Since settling here he has prospered in his undertakings and now owns a very pleasant residence, where he is living, and a store building, the rental of which yields him a comfortable income.

At the age of twenty-three years, in 1853, Mr. Powell was united in marriage to Miss Martha R. Stockett, a native of Maryland. To them were born four children: Arthur J. E., who is living in New York city; Mary E.; and two who are deceased. Mrs. Powell passed away in Illinois in 1866, and in 1868 he was married to Mrs. Cornelia Wintringer, by whom he had three children: William O., who is living in Portland; Angie A., the wife of J. Belk, of Idaho; and Mattie, who married D. K. Hadley of Dayton. The wife and mother passed away in 1903 and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Dayton. She was a member of the Evangelical church.

In his religious belief Mr. Powell is a Methodist, and for thirty-one years he has been a trustee and clerk of the church of Dayton. He is a stanch republican in politics and always gives his support to the men and measures of that party. Public-spirited in matters of citizenship, he takes an active interest in community affairs and has served both in the city council and on the school board of Dayton, giving efficient service in both capacities. He maintains pleasant relations with his comrades of old through the medium of the Grand Army of the Republic, being an honored member of the local post of Dayton. Through the long period of his residence here Mr. Powell has ever been loyal to the best interests of the town, the development of which he has promoted by giving his indorsement and cooperation to every progressive movement that he deemed likely to serve the purpose for which it was inaugurated. He has always taken much pride in the growth of the place, which was little more than a settlement when he first became numbered among its citizens, and has ever had the utmost confidence in its development into one of the leading commercial centers of the state.

WALTER L. MARSDEN, M. D. The career of Dr. Walter L. Marsden has been an eventful one and typical of our growing western civilization. In the course of his life he has been a newspaper man, telegraph operator, politician and member of the state legislature and finally a practicing physician in which capacity he is now acting in Burns, Oregon. The events of his youth and early manhood were an excellent preparation for his medical career. Technical education, while it is an important part in a physicians preparation for his life work, yet counts for no more than does a knowledge of humanity, the keen sympathy of the ills and difficulties of men and a broad tolerance for human weaknesses. These lessons can never be learned except in the schools of human intercourse and the years which Dr. Marsden spent in mining camps and in primitive western settlements taught him many things which are now invaluable to him. He was born in Washington, Iowa, June 20, 1858. His parents were Henry L. Marsden, who was born in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1828, and Almeda Luella (Carll) Marsden, a native of Farmington, Maine. The first of the name in America was the grandfather of the subject of this review, who came from Lancashire, England, at an early date and settled in Maryland. He removed later to Columbus, Ohio, where he remained several years. He next went to Iowa and was one of the earliest settlers of Washington county, that state. His son, the father of the subject of this sketch, removed to California in 1852, going overland via Salt Lake. At that time the cholera was raging in the middle west and all along the overland trails. On this account he remained at Sacramento and Yolo county until 1855 where he followed the trade of a carpenter and builder. In the same year he returned to Iowa and married, remaining in that state until 1861, going again to California in that year. The family joined him in 1864 and they settled in Alpine county for two years. His next move was to Empire City, Nevada, where he remained only a short time, later going to Gold Hill, on the Comstock road. In 1869 reports reached him of the wonderful gold mines around the White Pine district in Nevada where his father was engaged in the contracting and building of mining houses. He went to this district with his family in that year and remained until 1872 when he removed to Eureka, Nevada. Here his wife and family remained while he and his brother pushed on to Compton and Whittier, California, where he resided until his death, which occurred in March, 1911, at the age of about eighty-one years. At the time of his demise he was the owner of productive orchards in California and had acquired a comfortable competence. His wife survives him and makes her home at Whittier.

Dr. Marsden received his early education in various mining camps in California and Nevada. His schooling was limited and was received under very primitive conditions. His early life was spent in various occupations. He learned the telegraph business and was operator for the Overland Company which owned the first telegraph line across the continent. In this capacity he made his home at various points between Virginia City, Nevada, and Salt Lake City, Utah. For two years he was manager of the Atlantic & Pacific Line, competitors of the Overland Company. In 1882 he took up newspaper work and his activities in this regard made him very prominent politically and led to his election to the Nevada state legislature. After his term expired he became acquainted with Dr. Bishop and was employed under him for some time in the state insane asylum. He grew interested in the science of medicine and attended the lectures in the California Medical College. He later studied his profession in the Kentucky School of Medicine, from which he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1891. He started practice in Bellevue, Idaho, where he remained until 1897 when he removed to Drewsey, Oregon, and has lived in this state since that time.

In October, 1891, Dr. Marsden married Clara A. Byram of Canyon City, Oregon, a daughter of a prominent pioneer of that section. They have one son, George Byram, a graduate of the Burns high school and the State University of California at Berkeley, who is now a student in the medical department of the Oregon State University at Engene.

Dr. Marsden is a prominent Mason. He has taken his thirty-second degree and is a member of the Portland Consistory. He is past master of Burns Lodge, No. 97. His wife has been grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star. Dr. Marsden is one of the leading men in his profession in the northwest. He specializes in surgery and has gained an enviable reputation for his skill in this branch of medicine. He has never let his medical knowledge become out of date. He supplemented his education by a postgraduate course in the New York Medical School and Hospital. For nine years he was the only doctor in Harney county. This meant that his life was practically devoted to the service of his fellowmen. His duties were arduous and his hours of work practically unlimited. He is an indefatigable student not only in matters connected with his profession, but also along various other lines. He is master of the Shoshone Indian language and is intensely interested in the grammar and history of that tongue which is now being published by the University of California. Dr. Marsden retains all the old-school ideas regarding the duties of a physician in conjunction with the most modern knowledge along medical lines. His practice has increased wonderfully year by year until he is now regarded as the leading physician in his section of the country.

SIMON LEWIS, now serving in the capacity of county treasurer, which office he has held since June, 1911, is a native of Ohio, having been born in Hocking county, that state, June 16, 1853. His parents were John and Electa (Benson) Lewis, natives of Ohio, who removed to Iowa in 1857 and founded one of the pioneer families of that state. John Lewis remained in Iowa until the close of the Civil war, when he removed to northwestern Missouri and lived there until 1874. His earlier travels were made with teams but when he came to Oregon that year traveling facilities were somewhat improved and the journey was made by boat and rail. He located near Eugene, where he followed the occupation of farming until his death.

Simon Lewis, the subject of this sketch, was the oldest of a family of three children. He was educated in Iowa and came to Oregon with his father and family in 1874. He left the paternal roof at that time and located in Lake View, where his financial success was remarkably rapid. He entered the hotel business and in a few years was one of the owners of the second hotel in Lake View. On selling his interests there he removed to Surprise valley, Modoc county, Oregon, where he engaged in the cultivation of the soil for some time. He sold his farm in 1882 and removed to Grant county, locating on Silver creek. He was one of the pioneer settlers of that region and at the time he first moved into the district he found only eight others. He engaged in the stock business and his success in that line of industry was a natural result of his hard work. He met with many obstacles incident to the opening of a new country and to overcoming these he gave his keen intelligence and knowledge of men. He raised many different kinds of cattle, but was principally engaged in the breeding of Hereford and Durham graded stock. Mr. Lewis sold his place on Silver creek and bought another on Silvies river in the same district. The progress and development of his stock business is a remarkable testimony to his ability and power of organization. He is well and prominently known as a conservator of cattle. His success in the breeding of high-grade stock is a result of his personal attention to detail and his appreciation of the value of continuous industry. He removed from his stock farm on the Silvies river to Burns in 1902 and has since made this city his home. Here he became interested in the livery business and has conducted this successfully for some eight years. He was elected to his present position of county treasurer in June, 1911. He is a popular official, well known throughout the city as being capable and efficient in the conduct of business affairs. He was a

SIMON LEWIS

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND

director of the local school board for some time and was a member of the council.

Mr. Lewis was married in August, 1878, to Miss Edna Garrett, of Arkansas, a daughter of J. C. Garrett, who came from that state to Oregon in pioneer times. They are the parents of two children: Pearl, who is now the wife of Henry Vulgamore of Silvies river; and Della, deceased.

Simon Lewis fulfills his duty in the public capacity in which he is now serving in an intelligent and upright manner. His official life has been distinguished since its beginning by conspicuous honesty and unquestioned integrity, qualities which are indispensable to worthy public service.

WILLIAM M. SCOTT, who since 1905 has has lived retired in Walla Walla, Washington, was for many years prominently identified with the farming interests of Umatillia county, Oregon. The son of John B. and Rena (Halsey) Scott, he was born in McLean county, Illinois, December 29, 1837. In his native state he obtained the education afforded at that time by the common schools. The first nine years of his life he resided with his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Halsey, and then went to live with his uncle, Dr. A. K. Scott, whose home was sixteen miles from Bloomington.

In 1855, starting out in life for himself, he went to Coffey county, Kansas, and remained there one year, when he started to return to Illinois, but stopped in Davis county, Missouri, where he remained until 1859, when he returned to Kansas and in the spring of 1860 started across the plains. He intended to go to the Walla Walla valley but was attracted to the gold fields in California. He was one of the party of which J. L. Stubblefield was a member. In 1861 he came to Oregon and located at McMinnville, where he attended college for a time. During the year of 1862 he turned his attention to freighting, with ox teams from Wallula to Lewiston and later from The Dalles to the Idaho mines. In the fall of 1863 he went to Salem and resided there for seven years. He then crossed the mountains, locating near Prineville, and was engaged in the stock business for eight years. In 1878 he returned to this county and took up near Helix a homestead, which he cultivated and improved and resided on until 1905, when he retired to Walla Walla, where he now lives. During his early years of residence in this county he went through all the hardships of pioneer life and twice in the year of 1878 was forced to leave Helix on account of the Indians and seek refuge in Walla Walla. While connected with farming interests he engaged principally in raising wheat, owning some land which produced forty bushels per acre annually and he farmed altogether about eight hundred acres. He had an excellent homestead in this county and his house had all the modern conveniences of an up-to-date city home.

Mr. Scott married Miss Anna D. Caplinger, who was born January 21, 1845, a daughter of Jacob and Jane (Woodside) Caplinger of Salem. The father was born in August, 1815, and the mother on January 11, 1823. They were pioneers in this state, having come from Fulton county, Illinois, in 1845, and located in Oregon city. After two years they removed to Salem settling on the prairies four miles east of there, where they resided until 1904 when the father died on June 20 and the mother on July 26. In 1845 on their way to Oregon, having come by the route of Mount Hood, they were snowbound there for more than three weeks, without any food except coffee. In their family were ten children: Emily, deceased; Henry; Anna D., who is now Mrs. Scott; John, Mary, deceased; Samuel; George, deceased; Thomas; Josephine; and Bertha deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Scott have been born the following children: Mary L., who is the wife of J. M. Richardson; Emma J, who is the wife of Dr. E. A. Mann of Pendleton; John A., who in 1901 married Miss Maude Crockerline of Helix, and now resides near Walla Walla; Ira C., who married Miss Ethel Kern of Helix; Ray W., who died in 1902 at the age of sixteen years; and Alexander, Charles, Walter and Bertha, all of whom are deceased.

In his political views Mr. Scott is a democrat and in 1890 he was running for county judge. Both he and Mrs. Scott are members of the Church of Christ and for over twenty years he was an elder of the church of that faith at Helix. For more than one half a century Mr. Scott has been an interested witness of the development of Umatilla county and has ever been a most helpful factor in the changes that have been made here. A successful and highly honored citizen he has many friends throughout the country. Since 1905 he has lived retired in his beautiful home at Walla Walla and he usually spend the winters in California. In front of his present home is an excellent spring of running water which supplies the house and also furnishes the power for the electric light plant for the home.

EDWIN G. KIRBY, M. D., physician and surgeon at Elgin, Oregon, was born in Blair, Nebraska, November 11, 1870. His parents were Thomas M. and Sarah R. (Sommeis) both of whom were natives of Illinois, in which state they were married. In 1868 they removed to Nebraska, where they homesteaded and resided there until 1866, when they came to Oregon, locating in Marion county. There they purchased a tract of land and resided on the same until 1911, when they removed to Portland, where the father is now living retired. The mother passed away in 1911 while on a visit to the home of Dr. Kirby of this review. She was a faithful and devoted member of the Baptist church.

Edwin G. Kirby grew to manhood under the parental roof and acquired his early education in the public schools. Later he became a student at the Willamette University and in 1896 took up the study of medicine, reading under B. H. Bradshaw. The following fall he entered the medical department of the Willamette University, from which he was graduated in the class of 1900. Immediately afterward he came to Elgin where he entered upon the practice of his chosen profession. He has an extensive and remunerative patronage and is an extremely busy and successful practitioner.

In 1892 Dr. Kirby was married to Miss Anna M. Pepper of Elgin, a daughter of Jacob Pepper of this city. To Dr. and Mrs. Kirby have been born four children, three of whom are now living. They are: Dorothy M., Marjorie C., and Edwin G. Dr. Kirby is a republican and he has ever been greatly interested in educational work and has served as a member of the school board of Elgin for the past eight years. Fraternally he belongs to the Elgin Lodge No. 198, F. & A. M. and both he and Mrs. Kirby are members of the Blue Mountain Chapter No. 52 of the Order of Eastern Star. He also belongs to the Orion Lodge No. 73, Knights of Pythias, and to the Elgin Lodge No. 92 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Dr. Kirby is ever through study and investigation broadening his knowledge of his chosen profession and through his membership in various organizations, keeps in touch with the work that is done in the medical world today. He belongs to the Oregon State Medical Society and to the Eastern Oregon District Medical Society and is numbered among the leading physicians in Union county.

JUDGE ROBERT EAKIN. The legal profession demands not only a high order of ability but also a rare combination of talent, learning, tact, patience and industry. The successful lawyer and competent judge must be a man of well balanced intellect. He must be thoroughly familiar with the law and practice, of comprehensive general information, possessing an analytical mind and a self-control which enables one to lose his individuality, his personal feelings, his prejudices and his peculiarities of disposition in the dignity, impartiality and equity of the office to which life, property, right and liberty must look for protection. Possessing these qualities, Judge Eakin justly merits the high honor which was conferred upon him in his elevation to the court of appeals.

Judge Eakin is a native of Illinois, his birth having occurred in Elgin, that state, March 15, 1848, his parents being S. B. and Catherine (McEndowney) Eakin. He supplemented his preliminary education by a course in the Willamette University at Salem, from which he was graduated with the class of 1873 with the degree of B. S. Pursuing there his preparation for the bar he was ultimately given the LL.D. degree. After his admission to the bar he practiced in Union, Oregon, from March, 1875, until March, 1895. While he was well grounded in the principles of common law when admitted to practice, he continued through the whole period of his connection with the active work of the courts, a diligent study of those elementary principles which constitute the basis of all legal science, and this knowledge served him well in many a legal battle before the circuit and appellate courts where he successfully conducted many cases. When he came to the discussion of the most intricate questions his powers as a lawyer showed to the best advantage. With a thorough knowledge of the subjects he discussed and of the legal principles applicable to them, his addresses before the courts were models of clearness and logic. Twenty years of active practice brought him to the point where the public demanded his services in a judicial capacity, and he was appointed judge of the circuit court for the eighth district. The following year he was elected to the position and again in 1902, so his service as circuit court judge covered eleven years. In 1906 he was elected a justice of the supreme court of Oregon, and is now sitting on the supreme bench.

On the 21st of June, 1876, in Eugene, Oregon, Judge Eakin was united in marriage to Miss Mary Walker, a daughter of M. E. Walker. To Judge and Mrs. Eakin have been born five children, three of whom are living: Robert S., who is an attorney at La Grande, Oregon; Gertrude M., who is in college; and Harold E., a high school student in Salem. Judge Eakin has always given his political support to the republican party but has not been an active worker in its ranks since first called to judicial position. He belongs to the Masonic lodge and to the Presbyterian church—associations which indicate much of the nature of his interests and the rules which govern his conduct. Few lawyers have made a more lasting impression upon the bar of the state, both by ability of a high order and by individuality of a personal character which impresses itself upon the community.

WALLACE G. TRILL, attorney at law of Wallowa, was born in Kent county, Michigan, February 9, 1880, a son of Thomas and Melinda (Cooper) Trill, both of whom were natives of England. The father accompanied his parents on their removal from their native land to Canada when a boy of twelve years and the mother was taken by her parents to that country in her infancy. The boy attained his majority and the girl reached womanhood in Canada and there they were married. In 1861 they crossed the border into the United States, settling on a farm in Kent county, Michigan. The father was a cabinet-maker and carpenter by trade and for many years was engaged in contracting and building in connection with the cultivation of his land. His was a busy and useful life, characterized by unfaltering industry. In 1889 he came to Oregon but did not bring his family here until 1891. On first coming to this state he engaged in the saw and planing mill business in La Grande and was prominently identified with that industry until 1899, when his mills were burned to the ground, causing a heavy loss to him for he had no insurance. Since that time he has made two trips to Alaska in the quest of gold and has been otherwise engaged. Both he and his wife still reside in

ROBERT EAKIN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

La Grande and are highly esteemed residents of their county.

Wallace G. Trill, during the period of his youth, had but limited educational advantages for at a comparatively early age he began working in his father's mills. However, he has wisely used his time, talents and opportunities as the years have gone by and has made continuous progress along those lines demanding keen intellectuality and unfaltering diligence. In June, 1898, he enlisted for service in the Spanish-American war, becoming a member of Light Battery B, Oregon Volunteers. That battery was never sent to the front, however, being held at Camp H. C. Corbin, near Portland, until the 15th of October, when, the war having been successfully terminated the men were honorably discharged. Mr. Trill returned home and after the fire which destroyed his father's mill the planer was sold to Fox & Sargeant, who moved it to Granite, Grant county. Mr. Trill went with that firm to take charge of the planing mill and lumber yards and continued with them until the summer of 1900. He then returned home and the following fall went with his brother Charles to Portland, where they obtained engagement in the chutes of the Western Lumber Company for night work. The second night after they went to work the brother, Charles Trill, met with an accident and Wallace G. Trill had for the next month to make enough money to keep them both. Subsequently he secured a position with the Oregon Furniture Factory and while thus employed promoted his education by attending night school as a member of the Young Men's Christian Association classes. For almost three years he utilized this opportunity and during the summer vacations he studied English under Dr. Hoadley, minister of the Clark Methodist church, who had formerly held the chair of English in the Willamette University. In September, 1903, Mr. Trill entered that university in which he completed the eighth grade in the preparatory department the first year, studying with mere boys. The elemental strength of his character was shown in his pursuance of such a course. False pride would have deterred many but Mr. Trill realized his lack and resolved that education should prepare him for life's practical and responsible duties. He graduated from Willamette University in law and oratory in 1908, receiving the degrees of LL.B. and B. O. From the time when he entered college he paid his way by working during the summer months as advertising solicitor and in various other ways in order to meet the expenses of his course. At length the desired result was successfully accomplished and Mr. Trill found himself ready for the practice of law. He then returned to Portland and opened an office in connection with L. D. Mahone in the Board of Trade building.

In the spring of 1909 Mr. Trill was married to Miss Augusta C. Booth, of Salem, Oregon, who had graduated from the university in the same class of which Mr. Trill had been a member. She is a daughter of the Rev. George M. Booth, a prominent Methodist Episcopal minister, who at one time was presiding elder of the Columbia river district. Following his marriage Wallace G. Trill removed to Joseph, Wallowa county, and was there made city attorney. He sought the broader field of labor offered by a larger town and in the fall of 1910 came to Wallowa, where he has since been engaged in active practice. He prepares his cases with great thoroughness and care. The same determination and laudable ambition which actuated him in the acquirement of an education are manifest in his practice and he is making gradual and substantial advancement, his ability being widely recognized.

Mr. and Mrs. Trill became the parents of one child, Wallace G., but were soon called upon to mourn the loss of the little son. They are well known in Wallowa, having gained many friends during the period of their residence here. They hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church and their influence is always given on the side of progress, improvement and substantial upbuilding. Mr. Trill votes with the republican party and his opinions carry considerable weight in its local councils. Fraternally he is connected with Kinsman Lodge, No. 87, K. P., and is prominent in the local organization of Masonry, also belonging to Washington Lodge, No. 46, F. & A. M., of Portland; Martha Washington Chapter, No. 18, O. E. S., of Portland; and Washington Chapter No. 18, R. A. M. His wife is a member of Jessica Chapter, O. E. S., of Wallowa. The necessity of taking upon himself the responsibilities of life at an early age developed in Mr. Trill a self-reliance and force of character that have constituted the foundation upon which he has built his later progress and success. He is yet a young man but is well established in the practice of law as an able representative of the bar. In no profession does advancement depend more largely upon individual merit and energy, determination, close study and careful preparation than in the practice of law and these qualities have been the elements which have brought Mr. Trill to a creditable position in the regard of his fellow townsmen.

JUDGE H. A. THIESSEN, needs no introduction to the people of his county or state. He is one of the business men of Oregon, having widely diversified interests in various parts of the state and occupying a position in the first rank of her successful citizens. In November, 1910, he was elected to the office of county judge of Gilliam county and is still serving in that capacity. His birth occurred in San Jose, California, on the 25th of November, 1879, his parents being Henry and Selina (Derry) Thiessen, the former a native of Germany and the latter of England. They emigrated to America in young manhood and young womanhood, locating in the western part of the United States at a time when the west was still young and its future yet to be known. Henry Thiessen, on reaching the west, located at Portland, Oregon, and later removed to San Jose, California, at which place Mrs. Thiessen was living with her parents, and there they were married. In the spring of 1881 the family came to Oregon, locating near Oak Grove, Clackamas county, where they still reside on a beautiful farm of one hundred and thirty acres. Mr. Thiessen is non-partisan in politics but nevertheless has always been prominent in the reform movements which have presented themselves to his consideration in the interest of better government and morals in the social and political life of his county.

Judge H. A. Thiessen was reared at home on his father's farm and educated in the public schools. At the close of his common-school course he entered the Portland Business College, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1901. Having completed his studies in the commercial school, he found employment with Balfour, Guthrie & Company, exporters of grain, in Salem, Oregon, with whom he has since been associated. He was employed in the Salem offices for three years, afterward spent a short time in the Portland offices and from there was sent as assistant manager of the Arlington office, where he remained for a term of three years, having in charge the interests of his company. In 1908 he was placed in charge of the Condon office, where he has since had the care and management of the company's business in this district. In November, 1910, he was elected on the republican ticket to the office of county judge of Gilliam county, a position calling for the exercise of the highest type of integrity and faithful, efficient service and which position he is now filling to the complete satisfaction of the entire constituency of the county. He is part owner of a beautiful ranch of thirteen hundred and twenty acres west of Clem and also owns an interest in an alfalfa ranch on Rock creek. He is also the owner of an entire section of grazing land in Gilliam county, as well as his home residence in Condon.

In March, 1903, Judge Thiessen was married to Miss Mildred Gower, of Oak Grove, Oregon, by whom he had two children, one of whom survives, Usona M. Mrs. Thiessen is a member of the Episcopal church. Fraternally Judge Thiessen is identified with Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 95, A. F. & A. M., and Endymion Lodge, No. 66, K. P. His extensive business interests, together with his sterling type of manhood in the full exercise of his unusual business ability, combine to place him in the forefront of all the influences which make for the high moral tone and rapid development of his county and state. He is still a young man and bids fair to contribute many years of valuable service to the community in which he makes his home.

FREDERICK ELLIOT BROWN, who owns and operates the Queen City Dairy, is one of the prosperous business men of Baker City. He was born in Jasper county, Missouri, on the 2d of August, 1878, and is a son of W. T. and Anna Brown, the father a native of the state of New York and the mother of Missouri. They were married in the latter state and there they passed the early years of their domestic life. In 1886 they came to Oregon, locating in Baker county, but they are now residing at Prairie City. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Brown, five of whom are still living, F. E., our subject, being the eldest. The others are: Edna, the wife of S. H. Jackson; Leo, also married, who makes his home in Prairie City, as do also Walter and Jessie.

The early education of Frederick E. Brown was obtained in the public schools, but he later supplemented this by a commercial course, thus better qualifying himself for the pursuit of a business career. He has been identified with the dairy industry for nineteen years, having first engaged in this with his father. His training has been very thorough, and he fully understands every detail of the business. He is a capable man, practical and progressive in his methods and is conducting his establishment in strict accordance with the highest sanitary principles. He remained at home until he was twenty-seven years of age, at which time he left the parental roof and started in business for himself and has ever since been engaged here. He is meeting with success in the development of his enterprise and is building up a good patronage among a most desirable class of people.

In 1900 Mr. Brown was united in marriage to Miss Mattie Wright, likewise a native of Missouri, and a daughter of Samuel and Magdalen Wright, who were born and reared in Kentucky. The father is living in Malheur county, this state, but the mother is now deceased.

Fraternally Mr. Brown belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and he is also a member of Elkhorn Lodge, No. 166, I. O. O. F., while his political support is given to the democratic party. Although he takes an active interest in all municipal matters he has never sought political honors, but maintains the standards of good citizenship by appearing at the polls on election day. Mr. Brown is well known in Baker county, where he has resided since he was a lad of eight years, and has many friends, the majority of whom were the comrades of his boyhood days.

RALPH M. ERWIN, M. D., a well known physician and surgeon of Joseph, was born in Van Wert county, Ohio, December 6, 1884. He is a son of David J. and Lepha (Dudley) Erwin, the former a native of Indiana and the latter of Ohio. The parents were married in Van Wert county, and subsequently located in Wren, that county. At the time of his marriage David J. Erwin was attending the College of Medicine & Surgery at Fort Wayne, Indiana, and was graduated from that institution in the following year. He then practiced in Wren, Ohio, for about four years, after which he removed to Lake City, Michigan, where he built up an extensive practice and resided until his death in 1906, passing away at the age of forty-five years. He was one of the foremost democrats in that state and was once a candidate for congress from his district. Although the republican party had a nominal plurality of twenty thousand votes, Dr. Erwin was defeated by only eight thousand—a fact which shows his popularity throughout the district. He was state central committeeman for a number of years and was asked to serve as a delegate to the national convention at St. Louis, that nominated Alton B. Parker, but refused and named in his stead a friend. His wife is now living in Valparaiso, Indiana. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Ralph M. Erwin was reared in the home of his parents and acquired his early education in the public schools of Lake City, Michigan, graduating from the high school of that place in the class of 1900, when he was yet under sixteen years of age. For two years he was a student in the preparatory department of Ferris Institute at Big Rapids, Michigan, and in 1904 he entered the medical department of Valparaiso University, from which he was graduated in the class of 1908. The same spring he came to the western coast, spending the summer in Oakland, California, and in the fall of that year he came to Oregon, locating in Roseburg. He remained there only about six months, and then removed to Joseph, Wallowa county, where in the intervening four years he has built up an extensive and remunerative practice. He is also district surgeon for the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company.

On February 22, 1908, Dr. Erwin married Miss Blanche Lawson, a daughter of Thomas A. Lawson, who for many years was a prominent railroad official of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Company and of the Southern Pacific system, but is now living retired in Portland. To Dr. and Mrs. Erwin has been born a son, Ralph M., Jr.

Dr. Erwin is a member of Silver Lake Lodge, No. 84, I. O. O. F., and is now past grand. He also belongs to Chief Joseph Camp, No. 10012, M. W. A. In politics he is a democrat and he has ever been greatly interested in all that pertains to public advancement. He is a member of the Wallowa County Medical Society and by study and investigation keeps in touch with the work that is being done in the medical world today. He is an extremely busy and successful practitioner and is numbered among the leading physicians of Wallowa county.

WILLIAM GEORGE AYRE is living retired and the success which makes this possible was well merited, because for many years he was active and energetic and was one of the largest sheep-raisers in Oregon. He was born in Devonshire, England, a son of Thomas and Mary Elizabeth (Opperley) Ayre. He pursued his education in Blundell's school at Tiverton, Devon, and in London and in the school of experience has learned many valuable lessons, while reading and observation have also broadened his knowledge, making him a well informed man. He became a resident of America in 1886. He took up his abode in Baker county and made a success of sheep-raising, becoming one of the largest, if not the largest owner of sheep in Oregon. He disposed of his interests, however, in 1907 and is in a large measure living retired, although he is doing a good business as a dealer in wool. His long experience in connection with the sheep industry made him an expert in that line and brought him into prominence in his community. Moreover, he is a man of sound judgment, unfaltering industry and keen discrimination and carries forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes.

Mr. Ayre gives his political allegiance to the republican party and keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day, but the honors and emoluments of office have no attraction for him as he has always preferred to concentrate his energies upon his private interests. His religious faith is that of the Episcopal church and he is a prominent Mason, having attained the Knight Templar degree of the York Rite and the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite. He has also crossed the sands of the desert with the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and is in full sympathy and accord with the beneficent spirit which underlies these organizations.

JOHN L. BLACKWELL. One of the most progressive and enterprising stock-raisers and general ranchmen in Grant county, Oregon, is John L. Blackwell, who is operating an extensive tract of land in this section, specializing in sheep, mules and high-grade hogs. He occupies his father's homestead two and one-half miles up Long creek and is recognized as a stockman of unusual ability and as a man of modern and progressive tendencies. Mr. Blackwell is a native of Johnson county, Arkansas, where his birth occurred on March 16, 1867. He is a son of C. C. Blackwell who was born and educated in Tennessee and who later married Miss Jane Morris of the same state. The progenitors of the Blackwell family in America were three brothers who came from England in colonial days and settled in the south. Mr. Blackwell's grandfather, Joseph Blackwell, was born in Georgia and located in his early manhood in Tennessee. He later removed to Arkansas where he remained until his death in 1858. The family was established in Oregon by the father of our subject who came to the Long creek district in 1875 and took up a homestead claim which comprised the property now occupied by his son. He was one of the pioneer agriculturists of the section in which he settled and was representative of the class of men who founded the present greatness of the state.

John L. Blackwell came to Oregon with his parents when he was eight years of age and received his education in the district schools. He has remained at home with the exception of three or four years when he and his brother, H. N. Blackwell, drove stock in Harney county. His brother is now recognized as the pioneer stock buyer in eastern Oregon and is still in the business buying for the market. In 1898 he brought a herd of cattle to the Klondike country. He is now making his headquarters in Ontario, Oregon, and is one of the successful men of the state. John L. Blackwell early became acquainted with the details of general ranching and with the conditions governing the buying, selling and raising of stock. He was brought up upon his father's farm and is now occupying the original homestead. He has added to his holdings from time to time and now has one of the largest ranches in eastern Oregon. For a time he and his father ran sheep and were prosperous and successful in this line of activity. Mr. Blackwell is now making a specialty of the raising of mules and hogs. He has some of the finest mule colts in Grant county and his success is founded upon his attention to detail and his unflagging industry. He has made extensive improvements upon his property, has built barns, granaries and other outbuildings and has installed a complete equipment of modern farm machinery. He has built a fine home which has all the aspects of a model dwelling. He is recognized in Grant county as a man of constructive ideas and one whose activities in promoting his individual prosperity have reflected credit upon the county in which he resides and have redounded to the interests of the whole state of Oregon.

On January 7, 1903, Mr. Blackwell was united in marriage to Miss Mattie Settle, of Long Creek, Grant county, Oregon, and a daughter of W. G. Settle, one of the pioneer residents of the state. Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell have four children. Mr. Blackwell takes an intelligent interest in public affairs although he never seeks office. He has aided in the advancement and development of stock-raising in the state and has brought unusual ability and quickness of resource to the improvement and growth of his substantial interests.

F. H. BRIGHAM is one of the well known and respected citizens of North Bend, Oregon, where he is engaged in the real-estate business and is also city engineer of that place. He was born in Massachusetts, April 9, 1849, and is a son of John W. and Martha E. Brigham. The former was a native of Massachusetts and the latter of Vermont. They celebrated their marriage in the east and in 1865 removed to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where the father operated a flour mill for some time and later engaged in the hotel business. Mr. and Mrs. John W. Brigham continued to make their home in Minneapolis during the remaining years of their lives. They were the parents of five children, namely: a son who died in infancy; Warren L., who was editor of the Boston Times when he passed away; Ella M., the widow of George W. Marchant, whose demise occurred in 1912; F. H., of this review; and Lura E., the wife of C. M. Doutt of Coos county, Oregon.

F. H. Brigham was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in Massachusetts. In 1869 he removed to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he was in the employ of the government as engineer and surveyor, continuing in that position for twelve years. He then removed to Nebraska, where he was engaged in surveying until 1888, at which time he went to Spokane, Washington, and there for some time followed his profession of surveying. He then took up his abode in Pendleton, Oregon, at which place he was married and continued to reside until 1891, when he removed to Portland and there accepted a position as chief clerk in the United States surveyor general's office. He continued in that position for a period of two years, after which time a change in the political administration of that department of government work necessitated his discontinuance in the office. Two years later he was appointed inspector of government surveys by the commissioner of the United States land office in Washington and in 1904 he settled at North Bend, Coos county, Oregon, where he has since continued to reside. He built one of the first residences in the southern part of that town and is now the owner of one of the very fine homes in North Bend. He still holds his commission as inspector of United States surveys, is the city engineer of North Bend and is also engaged in the real-estate business. He was for four years employed by the Mexican government in engineering work and while he lived in the east served for two and a half years in the United States navy.

Mr. Brigham was united in marriage, in 1891, to Miss Sadie Adams, of Pendleton, Oregon, daughter of John and Elizabeth Adams, both of whom died at Pendleton. To Mr. and Mrs. Brigham two children have been born. Ruby, whose birth occurred in 1893, is a high-school graduate and still resides under the parental roof. Hawley B., whose natal year was 1894 and who likewise has a high-school education, is now in the service of the City Water Company of Portland.

Mr. Brigham supports the republican party and is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and also of the United Artisans. One of the enterprising citizens of North Bend, he is well known throughout his portion of the state. He is always interested in the moral and civic well-being of the community in which he resides and is a man whose integrity in business matters has never been questioned.

FRANK DAVID McCULLY, by right of discovery, conquest and occupancy, is justly entitled to the nom de plume of the father of Wallowa county, Oregon. It is true he has established his residence at Joseph, but he lives throughout the entire county. Follow the direction indicated by either of the four points of the compass and you will soon see the evidence of his work and influence written on the walls of her active history. He was born in Salem, Oregon, on the 2d of June, 1859, his parents being David and Mary (Scott) McCully, the former a native of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and the latter of

F. H. BRIGHAM

Ohio. The paternal grandparents of our subject emigrated to the United States and settled in Mount Pleasant, Ohio, when David McCully was but six years of age. Mr. and Mrs. David McCully were united in marriage in Mount Pleasant, Ohio, at which place they had both grown to years of maturity. In 1846, shortly after their wedding, they removed to Burlington, Iowa, where Mr. McCully engaged in the manufacture of fanning mills. Later closing out his interests in his manufacturing plant, he became identified with the merchandising business at Burlington. In 1849 he emigrated to California, crossing the plains with ox teams, but remained in the Golden state only a few years, returning to Burlington, Iowa, in 1852. The following year he recrossed the plains this time making Oregon his objective point. This land of the far west he reached in due time without accident, effecting his settlement in Linn county. On his land he built a small store, in which he opened a general merchandising business, this being the first of its kind to be established in the settlement, and this particular location in the county later proved to be the initial step in the founding of Harrisburg. Thus to David McCully belongs the credit of being the father and founder of that city. Being a man of abounding energy and unusual business ability, he saw his opportunity to improve the transportation facilities of that part of the state, and with this end in view he organized the People's Transportation Company. This company built and put into commission a line of steamers plying between Portland and Harrisburg and also between Portland and Lewiston on the Willamette and Columbia rivers. After a residence of six years at Harrisburg, in 1858 he removed to Salem and there opened a general merchandising establishment, which he conducted for twelve years. This business he cared for in connection with his interests in the transportation company. In 1870 the transportation company was sold to Ben Holliday and thereafter was known as the Ben Holliday Transportation Company. He conducted his mercantile establishment until 1880, at which time he retired from active business and spent the remaining years of his life in retirement. He passed away at Salem, in December, 1906, at the advanced age of ninety-three years. His wife preceded him in death in 1900, when eighty-five years of age.

Frank David McCully was reared in his father's home and was educated in the public schools of Salem and at the Willamette University. In addition to his literary studies he received a technical business training under the tutelage of his father, being employed in his store while still pursuing his studies in the educational institutions of Salem. In 1874 he was commissioned by his father to go to the Wallowa valley and there look after stock which he maintained on the public range. He was thus engaged during the years of 1874 and 1875. In 1879 when twenty years of age, he left the parental roof and moved to the Wallowa valley locating on Prairie creek, where for one year he looked after the stock belonging to his father. In 1880 he preempted one hundred and sixty acres of land and opened a merchandising establishment in Joseph, his store being the second of its kind in what at that time was a part of Union county. His competitor had located some distance from him, at Alder, during the previous year. The town of Joseph was founded in 1879, was first known as Lake City and continued under that name until the postoffice was established, at which time the government refused to accept that as a suitable name for the office and the name Joseph was substituted. Only a few houses were built and occupied at the time Mr. McCully built his store and established his residence at Joseph in 1880. At that time the business was not sufficiently large to engage all of the time and abilities of its owner and manager. Being ever on the lookout for new opportunities to improve and enlarge his business, he soon discovered that near-by settlements offered good openings for investment in his particular line and accordingly he later established merchandising houses at Flora, Lostine, and Enterprise. These stores he conducted under the name of the F. D. McCully Company. He continued as sole proprietor and business manager of these stores until some time in the '90s, when he disposed of his interests at Lostine and Flora. In 1905 he sold his establishment at Enterprise. Seven years after he became a resident of Joseph he organized and established the First Bank of Joseph, it being the first institution of its kind in that portion of northeastern Oregon. Its doors were opened for business on the 26th of August, 1887.

In the year 1886 it became the consensus of public opinion that the best interests of the people could be served by the organization of a new county out of the excessively large territory of Union county, and in order to accomplish this desired result Mr. McCully was made the candidate for the legislature by the people favorable to such a measure, and on that issue he was elected to the legislature as representative of Union county in the fall of that year. In the winter following his election at the first meeting of the state legislature, Mr. McCully was successful in his efforts to accomplish the will of the people in this particular, and the bill, as prepared by himself, to divide Union county and establish the boundary lines of a new county out of a part of her territory, was passed February 1, 1887. Thus a new child was born into the political family of counties in this state, bearing the name of Wallowa county, whose political father was Frank David McCully. In 1880 he preempted one hundred and sixty acres of land, a portion of which later became the town site of Joseph, and on this the city was built, Mr. McCully donating all the necessary ground for school purposes, he being one of the enthusiastic leaders in the building of the first schoolhouse in the place. Later, in 1889, he installed the present public waterworks system of that place and in 1900 he built the first electric light plant, which in 1909 was reconstructed and equipped with all the latest modern improvements, thus giving the city one of the most efficient, serviceable electric light plants in this portion of the state.

In 1905 the mercantile interests of Mr. McCully were consolidated and incorporated under the name of the McCully Mercantile Company, of which concern he is the official and active president. He is the owner of twenty-five hundred acres of farm, timber and grazing lands in Wallowa county and of this large body he now operates four highly developed farms, while the remainder is used as grazing land for sheep, a class of the stock business of which he makes a specialty. He raises and is also a very large buyer of sheep, which he feeds and prepares at his own feeding quarters for the open market. He is the founder of a line of warehouses from Joseph to Elgin, in which he has a large interest, and at the present time is the president of the Joseph Milling Company.

Mr. McCully has been twice married. In 1881 he wedded Miss Hamilton, of Wallowa county, by whom he had three children: Wilmer D., now cashier of the First Bank of Joseph; Roy C., who is a resident of San Francisco, California and Lelia M., who is the wife of W. H. Ballinger, a mail clerk. On the 19th of November, 1908, Mr. McCully was again married, his second union being with Miss Martha E. Van Vactor, of Portland. Her father, William Van Vactor, who was born in Kentucky, emigrated to Oregon in 1847, settling in Linn county.

Mr. McCully has always been affiliated with the republican party and is one of the enthusiastic and influential leaders of this great political organization. He is a member of Joseph Lodge, No. 884, F. & A. M., and also belongs to La Grande Lodge, No. 433, B. P. O. E. Both he and his wife are consistent and devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Frank David McCully is descended territorially, by way of Mount Pleasant, from the salt-sea-washed shores of Nova Scotia. The virile blood of his Celtic ancestors has given him a life of magnetic, tireless momentum which finds its greatest rest in constant action. He received the benefit of the common schools and later a literary and scientific university education. With this splendid intellectual equipment he has been able to bring to bear the strength and acuteness of a cultivated mind upon the varied and perplexing problems incident to a large and greatly diversified business career and, in addition to these, his moral life has been carefully guarded by the beneficent influence of a highly cultivated Christian faith. These are among the things which have united to make Mr. McCully one of the most enterprising and successful business men of northeastern Oregon and at the same time a practical philanthropist, extending assistance wherever needed in such a way as to enable his less fortunate and weaker brother to attain strength with which to stand alone and successfully fight the battles of life. He is a man of large vision and optimistic temperament, ready to follow the light from the star of hope when no other well and clearly defined course is available. Time and again he has stepped in the breach of business disasters which seemed to foreshadow great hardships, if not utter destruction, to the people of Wallowa county, and saved the day by his willingness to carry the obligations of others that they might go forward while he carried their load and placed his faith in the future. Frequently he bought cattle, sheep and grain from the struggling ranchman and farmer when there was no market for the products of the farm or the stock of the ranchman, taking his own chances on the rise and fall of future markets. He has had supreme faith in the skies of Oregon and the soil of Wallowa county. He has often, without security other than his faith in the honesty of every man, loaned money to many with which they were enabled to start in a small way as farmers or stockmen or in other lines of business, and thus in the most practical and unselfish way he has come to be recognized as the foremost business man and generous, helpful force in the building up of the agricultural, stock and mercantile interests of his adopted county. He comes of a long-lived ancestry and, being now scarcely above fifty years of age, he is in the very midst of his matured and most useful manhood and many years of useful service await him in the future. Frank David McCully will leave behind him monuments to his memory in the substantial, enduring business enterprises with which he has been connected, as well as monuments in the grateful hearts of his fellow toilers, among whom he is today recognized as a helpful brother and friend.

WILMER D. McCULLY, cashier of the First Bank of Joseph, is a worthy representative of the younger business men of the town. He is a native of Wallowa county, his birth having occurred in Joseph on the 10th of May, 1882, and a son of Frank D. and Julia (Hamilton) McCully, both of whom are mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work.

Reared at home in the acquirement of his preliminary education, Wilmer D. McCully first attended the public schools of Joseph and La Grande, after which he was sent to the Bishop Scott Academy at Portland. He remained there for two years and then spent a year in the Hill Military Academy of that city, and at the end of that time entered Yale University. Two years later he laid aside his studies to qualify for a paymastership in the United States navy, but did not enter the service but returned to Joseph and took a position in his father's bank, where he has ever since been employed. He began in a minor capacity, but having resolved to make this his life vocation he applied himself earnestly to mastering the principles of banking and thoroughly familiarizing himself with financial matters generally. Painstaking and efficient in his work he was advanced steadily and in 1908 was promoted to the position of cashier, the duties of which he is still discharging. He is a genial young man of gracious and accommodating manner and is popular with the patrons of the bank. During the period of his connection with this institution he has manifested more than average ability and foresight and proves himself to be a capable financier.

Mr. McCully was married on the 24th of December, 1908, to Miss Martha Cohoon, a daughter of S. L. Cohoon, a well known commercial salesman of La Grande. Fraternally he is affiliated with La Grande Lodge, No. 433, B. P. O. E., and his political support is given to the republican party. He is one of the progressive and enterprising young business man of the town, where he is widely known and held in high regard by reason of his integrity and upright principles as well as his many substantial personal qualities.

ARIE RYSDAM. Among the pioneers of Union county, Oregon, few men are better known and few have been more successful than Arie Rysdam. He emigrated to Oregon from Marion county, Iowa, where he was born August 23, 1849. His parents, Garrett and Magdalene (Valden) Rysdam, were born, reared and married in Holland. They emigrated to America and settled in Marion county, Iowa, in 1846. There they homesteaded land upon which they lived until 1864. In that year the father, two daughters and one son, came to Oregon. The mother was to have followed but died before she could make the journey, in 1867. They began the long overland journey with a mule team and traveled without interruption until they reached Deer Creek Station on the North Platte river in Nebraska. Here one of the tragedies common to the travelers of the plains in those days interfered with their further progress for a time. Their camp was raided by Indians, who fortunately confined their depredations to the stealing of stock. None of the party suffered injury and their commissary stores remained untouched. However, they were compelled to remain at Deer Creek until, by a stroke of good fortune, they were enabled to purchase an ox team and also a team of cows. With this strange combination their journey was finally completed in five months. On reaching Oregon they went direct to Union county, locating on land comprised within the present corporation limits of Island City. Garrett Rysdam there passed away in 1880, when he had attained the age of seventy-seven years.

Arie Rysdam was reared at home and educated in the common schools of the district. After attaining his manhood he followed farming for several years and was also employed as a freight driver by John Creighton. He had the distinction of driving a ten-mule team, with which he carried the freight from Umatilla Landing to the surrounding mining camps. This business took him into various parts of Idaho and also to Harney county, this state. In 1882 he filed on a homestead in that part of Union county known as the flats. On this he proved up, securing his title from the government, and here remained for the following twenty-six years. He is now the owner of eight hundred acres of land eight miles northeast of Elgin, which is operated by his sons. In 1909 he removed to Elgin, where he now resides.

In 1873 Mr. Rysdam was united in marriage to Miss Louisa Cruikshank, of Marion county, Iowa, her parents, William and Hannah (Cowing) Cruikshank were natives of Scotland and England, respectively. Both are deceased. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Rysdam have been born ten children nine of whom survive: William H. and Garrett, both of whom are engaged in farming in Union county; Hannah, the wife of Philip Conley, who resides in Cove, Union county; Margaret, who gave her hand in marriage to Lincoln Wood, an agriculturist of Union county; Janie, who is the wife of Roy Hardy an agriculturist, of Union county; Clara, who is the wife of Jay Brashears, a farmer of Union county; Albert and John G., both living on the home ranch; and George, who is still with his parents and is pursuing his studies in the schools of Elgin.

In politics Mr. Rysdam is a democrat. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to Elgin Lodge, No. 98. During his long residence in Union county he has grown prosperous with the years and gained favor with the people of his community, among whom he is highly respected.

LUTHER LLOYD, who is the owner of nine hundred and sixty acres of valuable land near Joseph, Oregon, was born in Howard county, Missouri, March 30, 1860, his parents being Granville and Rebecca A. (West) Lloyd, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Illinois. At an early age they were taken to Missouri by their parents, and in that state their marriage occurred. There the father died when his son Luther was but twelve years of age. Early in life he had been one of the many to come to the Pacific coast in 1849, making the trip via the Isthmus of Panama. In 1876 the mother removed to Oregon with her son Luther, and her death occurred January 19, 1910, while she was visiting in Boise City, Idaho.

Luther Lloyd was the eldest of a family of six children, and after the death of his father the operation of the home farm naturally fell largely to his lot, so that consequently his opportunities for securing an education were meager. However, he attended the district school for several terms, at the same time giving many hours of each day to farm work. In 1876, when sixteen years of age, he came to Oregon, locating in Pine valley, Union county. He was employed there as a farm hand until he was twenty-one at which time he took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres in Pine valley, residing upon that property for about nineteen years. In the autumn of 1900 he removed to Wallowa county, locating in the Imnaha valley, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land. He has added to his holdings from time to time as he has been financially able to do so, and at present owns nine hundred and sixty acres, upon which he is extensively engaged in the cattle business. His operations in this line have been very successful, and he is considered one of the most prominent and prosperous cattle-raisers of Wallowa county.

In December, 1883, Mr. Lloyd was married to Miss Mary R. Tater, a daughter of Daniel and Nancy J. (Harrison) Tater, who crossed the plains at an early date with ox teams, starting out from Nebraska in 1864. They spent their first winter near Boise City, and in the spring of the following year came to Oregon, locating first in Eagle valley. They took up a claim in that region, but after two years removed to the Willamette valley, locating in Benton county, where they remained two years. At the end of that time they returned to Eagle valley, and, with the exception of one year spent in California, continued residents of Eagle valley where Mr. Tater was a well known cattle-raiser. To Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd three children were born: Edna Augusta, the wife of Henry Mehlorn of Half Way, Oregon; Nancy Rebecca, who is married to Roy Snell, of Imnaha, Oregon; and Luther Cleve, who is assisting in the management of his father's ranch.

In politics Mr. Lloyd gives his support to the democratic party, and he has served for two years as a member of the school board. He holds membership in Silver Lake Lodge, No. 84, I. O. O. F. He is progressive and energetic, of marked force of character, and is most esteemed where known best.

HENRY CLAY LUTTRELL. For almost a quarter of a century Henry Clay Luttrell has farmed in Coos county, Oregon, and his activities guided by wide experience have added each year to his prosperity while contributing to the agricultural development of the district. He was born in Macoupin county, Illinois, on February 22, 1842, and is a son of Daniel and Katie K. (Gonterman) Luttrell, natives of Kentucky. The parents were married in Illinois and remained in that state until 1849, when they moved to Texas, where the father died in the fall of that year. The mother maintained her residence there until 1860, when she went to Missouri and later came to Oregon and located in Coos county where she resided until she passed away on the 9th of October, 1890, when she was eighty-five years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Luttrell were the parents of nine children of whom our subject is the only one still living. He received his education principally in the public schools of Texas and remained at home until 1862. In that year he enlisted in the Confederate army, serving in Vard Cockrell's Regiment, and later he was escort to General Hymnan. Subsequently he became a member of the Tenth Missouri Confederate Cavalry and continued in the service until the close of the war and was mustered out at Louisiana when Lee surrendered at Appomattox. He was wounded at Lone Jack, Missouri, being shot through the thigh.

After the close of the war Mr. Luttrell removed to Illinois, where he started farming in Madison and Coles counties. He continued in agricultural pursuits in that state until 1878, when he moved to Texas and cultivated the soil with much success in that state until 1880. He removed from there to Oklahoma and farmed until 1888, in which year he established his residence in Oregon. He settled in Coos county and for two years leased land where he has farmed since that time. He engages in general farming and brings to his activities in this line an industry and intelligence of a high order, combined with a personal knowledge and experience in the details of agriculture. He makes a specialty of dairying and stock-raising. He keeps a large herd of cows for dairy purposes and is known throughout the county as an expert judge of high-grade horses and cattle.

In 1871 Mr. Luttrell was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Geers, a native of Madison county, Illinois, and a daughter of Oswald and Cecelia (Gonterman) Geers, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Illinois. Their marriage occurred in Illinois and they remained in Madison county until after the death of Mrs. Luttrell's mother, who passed away when she was thirty-six years of age. Her father came to Oregon in 1888 and made his home with his daughter until his death in the following year. Mr. and Mrs. Geers had nine children, four of whom are still living: Jennie, the wife of our subject; Thomas and William, who live in Illinois; and Caleb, who resides in Oklahoma. Mrs. Luttrell received her education in the public schools of her native state and has resided in Oregon for many years. She and her husband are the parents of eight children: John B., residing on the Coquille river, who was born December 4, 1873, and married Miss Alice Stemler, by whom he has three children, John M., Jennie E. and Henry B.; Roy S., a resident of Missouri, who was born March 5, 1876, and married Miss Laura Anderson, by whom he has two children, Margaret L. and Jennie Alice; Henry Elmer, born April 4, 1879, who is now deceased; Leona M., whose birth occurred on October 5, 1882, and who has also passed away; Charles F., born September 26, 1885, who lives at home; Archie E., who was born on January 7, 1889, and who is now deceased; Harry A., who resides in Missouri and who was born on August 23, 1892; and Mabel A., whose natal day was August 18, 1897, and who is now living with her parents and attending school. All of the elder children received good business educations.

In his political beliefs Mr. Luttrell affiliates with the democratic party but has never sought public office although when a resident of Oklahoma he served for a number of years as postmaster. He and his family affiliate with the Methodist Episcopal church of Myrtle Point, Oregon. Agriculture in this state has been aided in its development by Mr. Luttrell's long identification with it. He is now seventy years of age, an active, intelligent and kindly man who has earned rest but is still laboring, seeking always the welfare of his county and state and promoting it by efficient attention to his own affairs.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY C. LUTTRELL

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

WILLIAM FRIZZELL, who is a well known resident of Cascade Locks, was one of the pioneers of Oregon, having come to this state in 1852. He was born near Springfield, Missouri, December 7, 1840, a son of Porter and Lily (Porter) Frizzell. The paternal grandfather, Jason Frizzell, a native of Wales, came to America and settled in Missouri, being one of the pioneers of that state. The mother, Lily (Porter) Frizzell, was born near Nashville, Tennessee. In 1852 the family started across the plains for Oregon with ox teams but were beset with many difficulties, having five deaths in the family on the way. Jason Frizzell died at Meacham, in the Blue mountains. The father, Porter Frizzell, died at John Days river and one of the father's sisters and her husband and son also died on the way. The mother, Lily (Porter) Frizzell, with her six children survived. They were in a train of thirty wagons with about sixty able-bodied men in the party. They arrived at The Dalles, and, leaving their stock there, they took a boat down the Columbia river to Portland. At that time there was only a few buildings in Portland and they were forced to camp in emigrant tents. They intended to go to Salem but the Willamette river was so low that they could not proceed directly on the trip. Later the mother with her family worked their way to Salem and after one winter there went to Polk county, where they took up a donation land claim of one hundred and sixty acres. They went through many of the hardships of pioneer life and during the severe winter of 1851-2 all their stock were killed and the family was destitute. On this farm the mother died at the age of seventy-three years. In her family were six children, of whom the subject of this sketch is the oldest. The others were: Mrs. Catherine McNary and Mrs. Mira Holmes, both deceased; Joseph, who passed away in 1910; Jason, of Salem; and Lafayette, of Polk county.

William Frizzell remained with his mother on her donation land claim until he was twenty-two years of age. He then went to the mines at Boise, Idaho, where he worked at freighting for a number of years. Subsequently he located five miles south of The Dalles, on a farm of one hundred acres. After a few years he went to the Columbia river, above Cascade Locks, and erected a sawmill in partnership with his father-in-law, Mr. Cates. The mill was known as the Cates & Frizzell Mill and they operated the same for about fifteen years. Mr. Frizzell then came to Cascade Locks and has resided here ever since. He owns near here a ranch of fifty acres. He was well acquainted with many of the prominent pioneers of Oregon, among whom was Dr. McLaughlin, who was later governor of Oregon and he often visited at his home when he was mayor of Oregon City.

In 1872 Mr. Frizzell married Miss Sarah Cates, who was born in Missouri in 1851 and was brought across the plains in 1853 by her parents, John and Sarah Cates. The mother died soon after their arrival in Oregon and the father passed away in September, 1909. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Frizzell were four children: Lilly, who is the wife of George W. Harris, of Portland; Ella, now Mrs. William Ash, of Cascade Locks; Maude the deceased wife of Orville Ross, who passed away in October, 1911; and Lottie, whose death occurred in October, 1894.

Coming to Oregon in 1852 as a youth of only twelve years Mr. Frizzell drove a team all the way across the plains and since that time—a period of almost sixty years— he has made his home in this state. During that time he has seen the country develop from its pioneer condition into the present prosperous state and he has not only been an interested witness to the changes that have here occurred but has also been a helpful and cooperant factor in the general advancement.

JOHN STEPHEN EDWARDS is president of the First National Bank of Vale and has been thus associated with the financial interests of his county for about four years. Previously, he was engaged in farming and stock-raising. At every period of his life he has been energetic and determined, wisely utilizing his time and opportunities not only for his personal benefit but also in behalf of the community in which he lived. He was born near Oskaloosa, Iowa, November 25, 1849, a son of Thomas D. and Barbara (Rinehart) Edwards, the former a native of New York and the latter probably of Illinois. The parents were married near Oskaloosa, Iowa, in 1847, and were farmers in that state until 1854, when they crossed the plains to Oregon with ox teams, the father acting as captain of the train a part of the way. One day while en route the Indians stole some of their stock but they recovered all but one ox the next day. They traveled by way of the Landers cut-off, ultimately arriving at the present site of the city of Vale on Malheur river. From that point they went up the river and southward to Harney lake, crossing thence to a point on Crooked river, from which they made their way over the Cascade mountains to the Willamette valley, settling three miles east of Springfield in Lane county. Thomas D. Edwards there secured a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, which he improved and on which he made his home until a few years prior to his death. His wife died on the old homestead in 1883, and he passed away in Eugene in 1894. He never cared for public office and never filled public positions save that he served for one or two terms as county commissioner. In his family were four sons and six daughters. Henry D., the eldest, born April 21, 1848, married Eliza Clearwater and lived on a farm about four miles east of Springfield for a number of years but is now residing in Eugene. In his family are a son and four daughters. John S. is the subject of this review. Martha J. married William Miller, who died leaving two sons and two daughters, and she later married Al Farrow, a farmer living in Paisley, Lake county, Oregon. Webly J., a farmer and stock-raiser of Mayville, Oregon, married Jane Gross and they have three sons and a daughter. Mrs. Alice E. Geiger, deceased, had one daughter. Mary is the wife of Doc McPherson. They have two daughters and reside on her father's farm east of Springfield in Lane county. Sarah is the wife of Robert Drinkwater, by whom she has three sons and two daughters and they reside on a farm near the city of Harney in Harney county, Oregon. Thomas E., a retired farmer living in Eugene, married Jane Griffiths and they have two daughters and three sons. Leona is the wife of Price Withers, a farmer and stock-raiser living near Harney, Oregon, and they have three sons and two daughters. Emma is the wife of James Dyer, a farmer and stockman residing near Mayville in Gilliam county, and they have six children.

John S. Edwards attended the public schools in Lane county, near the old home place, and first engaged in business on his own account when in 1871 he went to Baker county, now Malheur county, where he engaged in stock-raising. He took up an eighty-acre tract on Willow creek and there made a specialty of breeding and dealing in horses, until about four years ago, when he sold out and removed to Vale, the county seat of Malheur county. Since that time he has engaged in banking and is now president of the First National Bank.

On the 27th of July, 1876, John Stephen Edwards married Sarah F. Smith, a daughter of George W. Smith, who was a farmer and lived near Island City in Union county, Oregon. Both Mr. and Mrs. George W. Smith are deceased. Their family numbered four sons and five daughters, including Mrs. Edwards, who passed away November 2, 1908. To Mr. and Mrs. Edwards were born four sons and five daughters. Thomas, born January 26, 1878, died April 19, 1879. Nora, born October 24, 1880, died September 24, 1899. Pearl E., born January 3, 1882, taught school for several years but is now living at home. Harry C., born January 26, 1884, married Merle Bogart. He resides with his son at Ironside, Oregon, where he follows farming. Alma R., born April 16, 1886, is the wife of E. A. Boyd, an electrician who has charge of the electric light plant at Vale. Phil, born November 26, 1888, is a farmer living in Cow valley, Malheur county. Irma, born August 30, 1891, is a student in Link's Business College at Boise, Idaho. Clariee, born October 29, 1894, is attending St. Margaret's Academy at Boise. Willard R., born June 25, 1897, attends public school in Vale. After losing his first wife John S. Edwards married Mrs. Cora Adeline Kirwin, who was first married November 29, 1896, to William Kirwin at Klamathon, California, and had one son, by Mr. Kirwin, born January 11, 1898, and a student in the public schools of Vale. Mrs. Kirwin Edwards bore the maiden name of Cora Adeline Freeman and was born in July, 1873. Her father was Clifford Dwight Freeman, a farmer of Siskiyou county, California, and to him were born two sons and five daughters, all living, of whom Mrs. Edwards is the first born. The second member of the family is Paul G. Freeman, who was born February 22, 1875, and conducts the leading general mercantile store in Vale. He married Maud Clancey of Vale in January, 1905, and they have two children: Clancey Gerald, born in August, 1908; and Herald, born in January, 1910. The third member of the family, a son, born in August, 1877, lives at the home place in Siskiyou county, California. Grace E., born in January, 1879, was married in 1900 to James Dickey, a railroad engineer who died in 1906. His widow, who is a normal school graduate, is a teacher in Dunsmuir, California. Mabel E., born in 1881, was married in December, 1910, to Charles E. Bayles, a building contractor of Vale, and they have a son, Charles Clifford, born in November, 1911. Nora M., born in 1885, was married in 1905 to Lewis White and they reside near the old home place in Siskiyou county, California, with their son, Byron Freeman, born in July, 1912. Mary A., born in November, 1891, is a graduate of the San Jose State Normal School and is a teacher in the public schools of Siskiyou county, California.

Cora Adeline Freeman was born in July, 1873, and was married at Vale, Oregon, on the 7th of February, 1910, to John S. Edwards. She is engaged in the millinery business, conducting the leading millinery house in Vale. She is a charter member of the Eastern Star chapter here and is well known in this city, where both Mr. and Mrs. Edwards have an extensive circle of warm friends. They are not only prominent factors in the business circles of the city but also in its social life.

JAMES HENRY PAUL was seventeen years old when he left his native country of Scotland and journeyed to America, settling in Canada. One year later he made his way to Oregon, finally locating in the eastern part of the state. He was young and very poor. His assets were his energy, his native thrift, his industry and ability and they have brought him today their natural reward. He is one of the prominent and wealthy ranchers of Harney county, an important sheep breeder and wool grower, and has attained splendid prosperity. He has lived in Oregon since 1890 and is numbered among the representative, substantial and valued citizens of the state. Mr. Paul was born in Kincardineshire, Scotland, October 20, 1872, and is a son of William and Jessie (McPhail) Paul, natives of that county. His father was a blacksmith and farmer and remained in Scotland until his death, which occurred in 1907. His wife died two weeks later.

James H. Paul received his education in the common schools of Aberdeen, whither his parents had removed when he was still a child. He continued his studies until he reached the age of fifteen and then assisted his father in blacksmithing and farming until 1889. When he was seventeen years of age he crossed the Atlantic, landing at Quebec. He remained in Canada for one year, working as a farm hand, and then came to the western part of America, settling in Portland, Oregon, where he secured employment on the Hazel Fern Farm, owned by W. S. Ladd. Here he remained for a year and then came to the eastern part of the state, locating in Malheur county, where for two years he worked as a sheep herder. His natural thrift and native canniness soon brought him success, his prosperity being founded upon his industry and strict attention to the interests of his employer. During the period of his service he never missed a day's labor and although his wages were but forty dollars per month he saved in two years eight hundred dollars. When he resigned his position with Mr. Ladd he entered the employ of Guthrie & Gibson, sheep ranchers, trailing herds from Harney county to Sidney, Nebraska. For two years he continued this occupation, saving his money and working industriously. When he returned to Oregon in 1895 he had accumulated a sufficient sum to purchase his present ranch in Happy valley, near the Steen mountains. He bought one hundred and sixty acres, homesteaded an adjoining one hundred and sixty and now has his property in a high state of development and improvement. He has planted grain, alfalfa, hay and also garden truck. A portion of his land he has under cultivation as orchard, all of his trees bearing splendid fruit. At the time he purchased his ranch he bought also his first band of sheep, consisting of twenty four hundred head. He met with rapid success in this line of occupation and has continued to prosper through the years. He now runs eight thousand head of sheep and his wool crop is heavier every year, as he specializes in the breeding of pure-blooded Delanes. Besides his sheep he has one hundred and fifty head of horses and fifty head of high grade cattle. His property is well improved and both his tracts of one hundred and sixty acres are equipped with fine barns and outbuildings. There is a residence upon each ranch, modern corrals for his stock, and fine drainage irrigation being made easy as a creek runs through his property. He has recently added to his original holdings and now possesses six hundred acres of deeded land. He is one of the wealthy and prominent ranchers of eastern Oregon, devoting his entire attention to his enterprise, in which he has been highly successful.

On December 25, 1909, Mr. Paul was united in marriage to Miss Alala Horstman, a native of Germany, who was educated in Virginia. She is a daughter of August Horstman, who is a prominent rancher in Harney county. Mr. and Mrs. Paul have one daughter, Dorothea Margaret.

In his political affiliations Mr. Paul is a consistent republican and has been justice of the peace and clerk of the school board. He is now serving as deputy state inspector of sheep, in the employ of the United States agricultural department. He never seeks to evade his public obligations and is actively and usefully interested in the growth and upbuilding of his section of the state. He is a member of Burns Lodge, No. 97, F. & A. M. and is well known in the affairs of that organization. He is a fine example of a man who makes wise use of the opportunities which the new western country offers to one who works with energy, ambition and determination. Coming to Oregon as a youth of seventeen, without money or friends, he has by persistent effort, close application and his native Scotch shrewdness accumulated a handsome fortune and has made his activities effective in many directions, being today numbered among the representative, successful and valued citizens of Harney county.

WILSON E. BROCK, who is a member of the Taylor Hardware Company of Pendleton, was born in Gaston, September 21, 1868, his parents being George and Eunice (Davis) Brock. They were early pioneers of Oregon and in their family were three children, the subject of this sketch being the youngest. The others are: James W., of Gaston; and Florence D., who is Mrs. H. D. Bryant, of Gaston.

Wilson E. Brock received his early education in the public schools of Gaston and at the age of fifteen he entered the Pacific University and later Tualitin Academy at Forest Grove, being a student there for two years. At the age of seventeen he took up the drug business and was a clerk for two years in a drug store at Forest Grove. Subsequently he spent one year as a clerk in a similar store and then started in the drug business at Hillsboro under the firm name of Brock & Sox. This partnership continued until 1895, although in 1896 Mr. Brock had opened a drug business at Heppner, under the firm name of Brock & Brock, continuing in the latter connection until 1899. At that date he came to Pendleton, where he established a drug store under the firm name of Brock & McComas. In 1905 he retired from the drug business and opened his present hardware store in partnership with F. C. Taylor, under the firm name of the Taylor Hardware Company. This firm now has one of the leading hardware establishments in Pendleton and carries an extensive and representative line.

In October, 1899, Mr. Brock was married to Miss Mary E. Rhea, of Heppner, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rhea. To Mr. and Mrs. Brock has been born a son, Harold E. In politics Mr. Brock is a republican and he has served as a member of the city council for the past two years. He has ever been greatly interested in school work and has been a member of the school board for two years. Fraternally he is affiliated with Pendleton Lodge, No. 77, F. & A. M., with Pendleton Chapter, No. 23, R. A. M., and with Pilot Commandery, No. 13, K. T. He also belongs to Al Kader Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Portland, and is likewise identified with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Brock has passed his entire time in Oregon and as a native resident has been greatly interested in the general advancement of the communities with which he has been connected. He has been very successful in both the drug business and the general hardware business and is a well liked and prosperous merchant.

WILLIAM THOMAS WRIGHT, known to the pioneers of eastern Oregon as Tom Wright, has lived in Union continuously since 1865 and with the passing years his activity and his usefulness have increased, placing him among the most prominent and valued residents of this part of the state. He has at different times been connected with merchandise and milling, and since 1883 has been continuously connected with the First National Bank as cashier and president.

Mr. Wright was born in Mount Carmel, Illinois, July 28, 1845, a son of George and Naomi (Ulm) Wright, the former a native of Scarborough, Yorkshire, England, and the latter of Ohio. The paternal grandfather, Thomas Wright, always remained a resident of England and there passed away when his son George was twelve years of age. In the maternal line W. T. Wright comes of German ancestry. His great-grandfather was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, and came to America with the Hessian soldiers who were hired by King George III to do battle with the colonists in the Revolutionary war. Learning much of conditions which here existed he deserted the English army and joined the American forces, allying his interests forever afterward with the people of the new world. The war over he settled in Pennsylvania, where he remained until his death. His son, Edward Ulm, the grandfather of W. T. Wright, removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio and later to Illinois, taking up his abode near Mount Carmel. He there engaged in farming and also devoted part of his time to preaching the gospel.

George Wright early became interested in maritime affairs. His father was a shipbuilder, and when a young man the son went to sea, spending a number of years on the ocean, but in the meantime he established his home on this side of the Atlantic, and when he left the sea it was to engage in sailing on the Great Lakes. Three times he suffered shipwreck, once off the coast of Newfoundland, again in the Bay of Biscay and for the third time when sailing on the lakes. In 1841 he wedded Naomi Ulm and took up his abode near Mount Carmel, Illinois, at which time he engaged in farming, there remaining until the 1st of May, 1852, when he started for the Pacific coast. The journey was made by wagon across the plains, and although the trip consumed six months the party had no serious trouble beyond the usual hardships and privations of such a journey. Mr. Wright and his family arrived at Portland, Oregon, on the 1st of November, 1852, finding there a little city containing only about one thousand inhabitants. For several years he was engaged in business there but in 1861 went to Idaho, where he spent a large part of the time in the mines until the fall of 1864 when he located permanently in Union, Oregon. Here he was joined by his son William in 1865 and later by other members of the family who came from Portland. There were three sons of whom John T. died in 1905, while Josiah, born in Portland, is still living in Union. The father continued to make that place his home until his death, which occurred May 11, 1893. He had long survived his wife who died in Union in 1875.

William T. Wright was a little lad of about seven years when his parents crossed the plains, in fact, the anniversary of his birth occurred during the journey. His education was acquired in the schools of Portland and in 1865 he was graduated from the old Portland Academy. Immediately afterward he joined his father in Union and with him continued in merchandising and milling, the business being carried on until 1882. He was then elected county clerk and served for two years. In 1883 he organized the National Bank of Union, of which he became cashier, continuing in that position until the death of his father, who from 1884 to 1893 had been president, to which office the son succeeded. He has since remained at the head of this institution, carrying the bank successfully through the great financial panic of 1893 without asking assistance and without the loss of a dollar to a single individual. From the beginning the bank has enjoyed a prosperous career and shows a splendid annual report. A general banking business is conducted and the institution now has many depositors and patrons.

So complex and important have been the business interests of Mr. Wright that he has had little time for public office even had he had ambitions in that direction. However, he has never neglected his duties of citizenship, and when he felt it incumbent to serve the public in an official capacity he has done so without hesitancy. On one occasion he was mayor of the city to which he gave a practical, businesslike and progressive administration. He has also done effective service on the school board, and the cause of education has ever found in him a warm friend. A life-long republican, Mr. Wright cast his first vote for General U. S. Grant for president and has always been active in the party councils in Oregon. He served continuously for over a quarter of a century as a delegate to the state conventions and twice was secretary of the convention. Many of his fellow citizens, recognizing his ability and patriotism, urged him in 1906 to become a candidate for congress, but he steadily refused, preferring that his public service be done as a private citizen and not as an official. He gives his aid and cooperation to every movement which he deems of value to the community, and his support of any measure is an influencing factor in winning for it further support from his fellow townsmen.

On the 10th of February, 1870, Mr. Wright was married to Miss Bell Mallory of Greenwood, Steuben county, New York. She is a daughter of Augustus Mallory, a brother of Rufus Mallory, a former member of congress and one of Oregon's leading citizens now practicing law as a member of the firm of Dolph, Mallory, Gearin & Simon of Portland. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Wright have been born eleven children. Annie passed away at the age of nine years. William T., Jr., who was educated in Union, became cashier of the First National Bank when seventeen years of age, being the youngest bank cashier in the United States. He afterward spent a year in Denver and in Salina, Kansas, and upon his return received the appointment of state bank examiner from Governor Benson. When the new law of 1911 was passed he was made state superintendent of banks, having been the author of the law which has now a most beneficial influence on the banking system of Oregon. Frances Wright, a graduate of Mills College of Oakland, California, is now the wife of S. D. Townley, a professor of the Stanford University of California. George, the third of the family, died when but three months old. Edith married W. T. Phy and has four children. Ina, now Mrs. Herbst, is a graduate of the Ann Arbor (Michigan) College of Music and other musical schools of this country. She went abroad for further study in Germany, and for three years was a pupil of Herr Mueller Kahnberg. For three years she was the leading soprano of the Coburg-Gotha Grand Opera Company, but is now devoting her time to concert work and teaching. She lives at Weimer, Germany, and has two children. Rufus Wright, the next in the family, was educated in the schools of Union and in the Oregon University and is now engaged in the hardware business in his native town. Elmer, who supplemented his public-school course by study in Whitman College, the University of Oregon and the University of California, is a mining engineer and metalurgist located in Portland. Charles W., after attending the schools of Union, entered the First National Bank, of which he is now cashier. Irwin D. is assistant cashier of that institution. Lucille, the youngest, died when but two years of age.

W. T. WRIGHT

While Mr. Wright has made for himself a prominent position in business circles, this by no means embraces the extent of his activities. He is recognized as one of the leading Masons of the state, having affiliated with the craft since 1872. He passed through all the chairs of the local lodge and became a member of the Grand Lodge of the state in 1875. He then filled all the offices of that organization, serving as grand master of Oregon in 1893-4. He was also grand high priest of the grand chapter in 1899-1900, and was grand commander of the Grand Commandry of Knights Templar in 1901-2. He was also one of the first members of the Al Kader Temple of the Mystic Shrine of Portland, its membership being fifty-nine while it now has eighteen hundred members. In Union, not to know W. T. Wright is to argue one's self unknown, and throughout the state he has a very wide acquaintance because of his business and fraternal activities. He was president of the Oregon State Pioneer Association in 1905; served as alternate commissioner to the Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893, and as Oregon State Commissioner at the Alaska Yukon Exposition at Seattle in 1909. He was also a member of the committee appointed to present the silver service to the battleship Oregon. Anyone meeting Mr. Wright face to face would know at once that he is an individual embodying all the elements of what this country would term "A square man"—one in whom to have confidence, a dependable man in any relation and any emergency. His quietude in deportment, his easy dignity, his frankness and cordiality of address with a total absence of anything sinister or anything to conceal, foretoken a man who is ready to meet any obligation of life with the confidence and courage that come of conscious personal ability, right conception of things and an habitual regard for what is best in the exercise of human activities. Someone has said that the quotation might well be applied to him "And long he bore without abuse the grand old name of gentleman."

A. M. ELAM has been a resident citizen of Oregon for nearly fifty years. During all this time he has been actively identified with the agricultural, political and business development of the state. He is one of the ex-mayors of Milton and was one of the incorporators of the bank in Milton, which institution upon its reorganization, became the First National Bank. He is a native of Tennessee, his birth having occurred in McNary county, that state, June 4, 1840. He is a son of Andrew and Miss (Laughlin) Elam, both of whom were natives of Virginia, in which state they were married. Some time after their marriage Andrew Elam moved with his family to Tennessee where he engaged in farming and where he remained during the rest of his life. He died in that state in 1869, which was many years after the demise of his wife. A. M. Elam had the misfortune of losing his mother early in life, at a period when he was too young to retain any memory of her parental love and care. He was reared in his father's home to the interests of which he gave his entire time during the early years of his boyhood. Educational advantages were very meager at that time and his knowledge of business methods and other intellectual acquirements are the result of individual application and constant study. He remained under the parental roof until he was nineteen years of age and in 1859 started in the battle of life for himself. His first venture on leaving home led him to seek his fortune in western Texas, locating on the Brazos river in that state, where he engaged in stock-raising and continued until the spring of 1862. At that time the Civil war was in progress and the call for men reaching every quarter of the country found Mr. Elam on his far-off Texas ranch ready to drop his business affairs and answer the call of his country. He enlisted in 1862, in the Tenth Texas Volunteer Infantry and remained with that command during the following three years and three months. In the spring of 1865 he obtained a furlough for one month and returned to his home on the Brazos river in Texas. During the period of his absence from his company he was overtaken by an unexpected attack of sickness and upon application received an extension of his furlough until such a time as his recovery might make his return possible and safe. Eventually he became well and started at once to rejoin his regiment at the front. He had not, however, completed his journey before meeting with his regiment on their return home. Peace had been declared; the war was over; and the men were on their way to their homes to take up again the burden of life where it had been laid down in the interest of a cause so near to their hearts. Mr. Elam returned to his Texas home and began anew in the struggle of life. Here he remained for two years, and in 1867 came to Oregon, crossing the plains with a mule team. This long and difficult journey, full of hardships, required six months to complete. On reaching Oregon he made his first settlement in Umatilla county and in the fall of 1868 removed to Portland in that state and there engaged at once in the livery business and continued to give his attention to that line of work for the succeeding eight years. In 1876 he returned to eastern Oregon and located on a ranch in Umatilla county, seven miles southeast of Milton. Here he made a specialty of raising horses and remained in this occupation for three years. In the spring of 1880 he left his ranch and established his residence in Milton, Oregon. He continued, however, to maintain his stock interests on the ranch from which he had removed and in addition entered into a partnership with Nathan Pierce and John C. Long, and these men built the Peacock Mills of Milton.

Mr. Elam for the following fourteen years was prominently identified with the milling business. In addition to his farm interests and his connection with the Peacock Mills he also became one of the incorporators of the Bank of Milton, a financial institution which has become one of the best known and most successful banks in eastern Oregon. For many years he has been a member of the board of directors of this bank. He is one of the largest land owners in Umatilla county, having in his possession five hundred acres of excellent farm land located near Milton.

A. M. Elam was married on November 8, 1865, to Miss Martha Frazier, daughter of William and Rachel (Williams) Frazier. She is a native of Hardin county, Tennessee. Her parents, however, removed to Texas in the early '50s. To Mr. and Mrs. Elam five children have been born, two of whom are living: Varnie, the wife of J. H. Piper, of Milton, Oregon; and Bertha, who lives at home. Mr. Elam from early manhood was a stanch and loyal democrat. In recent years, however, he has been identified with the cause of prohibition and has for many years been one of the recognized leaders of that party in eastern Oregon. At one time he was the candidate of that party for the state legislature and failed of election by a narrow margin. His strong personality and his reputation throughout the county as a citizen of unquestioned integrity and loyalty to the interests of the people almost overcame the large majorities of the old line dominant parties of Oregon. He is a member of the Milton Commercial Club, also a member of Milton Lodge, No. 96, A. F. & A. M. Mr. Elam and his daughter Bertha are members of the Order of the Eastern Star and for many years he and his family have been members of the Christian church of Milton. He has served for a number of years as one of the trustees of that communion.

A. M. Elam is in every respect one of the representative and valued citizens of Umatilla county. He has the distinction of having been elected the first mayor of Milton. In that office he successfully guarded the interests of the public in such a way as to lay permanently the foundations for the civic life of a new western city which has come to be one of the important business centers of eastern Oregon. For the past ten years he has been living a retired life and is fully entitled to this well earned rest and also to the gratitude of his fellow citizens among whom he has lived a life of exemplary usefulness for so many years.

RANSOM BEERS. In the spring of 1853 a young man, twenty-two years old, left Mount Pleasant, Iowa, and journeyed westward to the Pacific coast. He drove ox teams, working for his passage, traveling through the wildernesses, hampered by difficulties, but constantly hopeful and finally safely reached the mining camps of Hangtown, now Placerville, California. He pushed northward to Oregon in 1864, a fine type of a western pioneer. For forty-eight years he has lived on Willow creek in the Mormon basin, mining, merchandising, farming and stock-raising, spending an active, useful and upright life among his friends. He has imbibed the spirit of the west, the energy, the ruggedness and the honesty. He has been prominent in politics, active in fraternal circles and widely known in representative business enterprises. He has seen the section in which he lives grow and develop, has aided in the progress and been active in promoting it until now when he is eighty-one years old there is no more valued, honored and widely beloved citizen in his section.

Ransom Beers was born near Columbus, Ohio, on March 27, 1831, and is a son of Conrad and Jemima (Zin) Beers the former a native of Pennsylvania of German stock and the latter of Ohio of Welsh descent. Mr. Beers is a representative of a very old American family. It was founded in the United States by his paternal grandfather who came from Germany with his wife in colonial times. He served as a soldier in the Continental army in the Revolutionary war. He was among the earliest Ohio pioneers, moving to that state in 1802 and settling in what is now called North Columbus. Here he built a flour and sawmill and operated this successfully for a number of years. He erected a fine residence in Columbus on the hill just above his mill and moved into it in 1805. The house is still in existence and is owned by the nephew of the subject of this review, James Spencer. The grandfather died on the 17th of May, 1851, having reached the remarkable age of one hundred and two years. He had long survived his wife and both are buried in the Union cemetery of North Columbus, Ohio.

Conrad Beers, the father of our subject, was the second of the name in America. He served in the War of 1812. He and his wife had seven children. The oldest was Moses Beers, who married in Columbus, Ohio, Miss Jane Long. He and his wife have passed away.

Reuben Beers moved when he was a young man to Iowa, where he married. He and his wife are also dead. The third son, Elijah Beers, also established his residence in Iowa and was there married to Miss Mary Ann Long. They had seven children. Their eldest son, E. T. Beers, served for several years during the Civil war and has been for a long time commander of the Joe Hooker Post, G. A. R., of Baker, Oregon, where he is engaged in the contracting and building business. A brother of E. T. Beers, Frank Beers, is married and has several children. He lives in Nebraska where he is engaged in the hardware business. E. T. Beers, has three sons and three daughters, of whom Charles is the eldest son; Harry makes his home in Baker, Oregon; William is a newspaper man in Utah; two daughters live in Caldwell, Idaho; and there is another daughter. The fourth son born to Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Beers was Ransom, the subject of this sketch. Catherine married Alfred Spencer, who has passed away. She now lives in Columbus, Ohio, which has been her home since her birth. She has seven children, all of whom are still living. Elizabeth married Mr. Lyndes and lives near Cleveland, Ohio. They had five children, four of whom are now living. The youngest of these, Lola Folhe, is a widow with one son. She lives with the subject of this sketch, near Malheur, Oregon. Her three sisters live in Columbus, Ohio. Amanda was the youngest child born to Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Beers. She married Aaron Keller, by whom she had three daughters. She and her husband have both passed away.

Ransom Beers was educated in the public schools of Clinton township, Franklin county, Ohio. He grew up upon a farm and until 1850 assisted in the duties connected with its operation. In that year he started for the west, going first to Mount Pleasant, Iowa, where he spent one year with his brothers, Reuben and Elijah, the former a lawyer and district attorney and the latter a general farmer. Here Ransom Beers worked upon his uncle's farm for one winter and then following the latter's advice journeyed to California. He worked his passage across the plains, driving a four yoke team of oxen. The party of which he was a member left Mount Pleasant in the spring of 1853 and arrived in Hangtown, California, on the 7th of September, 1853, among the early pioneers. There he joined an uncle who was interested in several mining claims in the vicinity and who gave his nephew a position in one of his mines. Ransom Beers arrived in California on Saturday and on the following Monday was hard at work in the mines in the vicinity of Hangtown. For eleven years he followed this occupation becoming eventually very successful. In the spring of 1864 he started for the Boise basin mines but upon reaching Umatilla Landing on the Columbia river in March of the same year he met so many people returning unsuccessful from this vicinity that he abandoned his project. At Umatilla Landing he met L. W. Getchell, who had several mining claims in Mormon Basin, Baker county, Oregon, of which he gave glowing accounts. Mr. Beers accompanied his friend to Durkee, Oregon, but which was then called Express Ranch. The journey was made in the saddle train belonging to Bob Stanfield for whom the town of Stanfield on the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company's line was named. They paid for their passage twenty-four dollars and had then the privilege of riding a cayuse horse worth about fifteen dollars from Umatilla Landing to Express Ranch. Here Mr. Getchell purchased a horse of his own. When the partners reached the Mormon basin Mr. Beers at once recognized that the mines were rich and the camp convenient although there was very little water. The country was rich in gold dust and the mining was all placer mining. Our subject was immediately offered a position to work at four dollars a day or to receive regular wages of five dollars. He chose the four dollars a day and had soon afterward advanced to five and later received six dollars a day, working for the Colt brothers. He, however, spent only a short time as an employe for as soon as he was able to buy suitable claims he did so. His first purchase was located on Glengarry Flat and the claim was acquired by Mr. Beers for three thousand dollars. He employed two old-time California miners and in twenty-one days and a half they had taken from the land enough gold to pay for the purchase money and all the wages due for the entire time.

This was Mr. Beers' first venture in independent mining and it was very successful. Since that time he has spent forty-eight years in the Mormon basin engaged in various representative enterprises. He has mined, has operated a general merchandise store and is now one of the prominent farmers and stockraisers on Willow creek. He owns two hundred and forty acres of highly improved land planted in hay. The property is worth at the present time one hundred dollars per acre and its price is rapidly advancing. Mr. Beers runs yearly about four hundred head of cattle and counts upon selling for beef from eighty to one hundred head. He has tried two or three different breeds but in the course of years has found that Herefords give the best satisfaction as a beef producer, fattening easily and being among the best rustlers on the ranch.

Our subject has been prominent in democratic politics all during the period of his residence in Oregon. He has always remained with his party and for many years served as delegate to the state and other conventions.

He was elected in June, 1867, to the Oregon legislature and served one term with ability and efficiency. During his service the question of making a land grant to Ben Holliday for railroad purposes came up and was passed in Mr. Holliday's favor. Mr. Beers was also called upon to vote upon the question as to what company was to have a land grant from The Dalles to the Boise Military road. The resolution was passed upon by the legislature but the companies had previously settled the question themselves.

In fraternal circles Mr. Beers is also widely and favorably known. He is the only living charter member of Baker Lodge No. 25, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has served in that organization up to and in the chair. He has now a badge from the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows which was presented to him after twenty-five years continuous service in the chair.

The most forceful years of Mr. Beers' life have been passed in Mormon basin and on his Willow creek farm. During this time he has won success for himself and has aided thousands of less fortunate fellow citizens, "staking" men in the mines and on the railroads, spending in this charitable way thousands of dollars. He is now in the eighty-first year of his age, still active, energetic and intelligently public-spirited, loyal to the state where he has lived so many years and ready to cooperate in the promotion of its growth. He has gained wealth, honestly earned by earnest labor, and can look forward without fear to the time when he shall lay down his burdens and pass over the great divide.

J. T. KING, who passed away on May 5, 1912, was the owner of one hundred and thirty-five acres of well cultivated land six miles east of Salem. He was born in St. Francis county, Arkansas, on the 13th of September, 1836. His parents were William and Mary (Marshall) King, both of whom were natives of North Carolina, where the father was born in 1796. William King followed agricultural pursuits throughout the greater part of his active career. He served in the War of 1812 under General Jackson and took part in the battle of New Orleans in 1815. After his enlistment as a volunteer in Montgomery county, Tennessee, he served continuously until the close of the war. After he was mustered out he settled in Arkansas, and in that state spent the remainder of his life. His death occurred in 1850 and his wife had passed away five years previous. To them five children were born: J. W., whose death occurred in Grant county, Oregon; F. J., deceased, who was a resident of Washington; George W., deceased, who passed away in the house where his twin brother, J. T., lived until his demise; J. T., deceased, the subject of this sketch; and Mary Jane, deceased, who was the wife of L. M. Barnett of Portland.

J. T. King received his education in Arkansas, but after his father's death when he was but fourteen years of age, he removed to the home of his elder brother and resided there until he reached maturity. During this time he gave his whole attention and energy to assisting his brother in his daily duties on the farm, and there gained his first experience in agricultural pursuits. At the age of eighteen years he accepted employment on the Mississippi river and was engaged in rafting until the winter of 1858 when he went down to New Orleans and there met a steamer which had just arrived from California. Meeting several of the crew and passengers and entering into conversation with them, he was finally induced to return with them to California and seek his fortune in the mining districts of that state. He started west on the 9th of April, 1859, and on the 13th of September, reached Honey Lake Valley, California. Almost immediately he continued his trip to Humboldt county and spent the winter in that region. In the spring of the following year he went to the gold mines in Siskiyou county and for three years remained there before coming to Canyon City, Oregon. Although his mining operations in California had not been very successful he was again lured to the gold fields, this time setting out for the Canyon creek mines where he hoped fortune would be kinder to him. Again he was rather disappointed, and in 1865 he came to Marion county and purchased one hundred and thirty-five acres of land six miles east of Salem where he resided until his death. This property is situated on the south end of Howell Prairie, and is now one of the best improved and most conveniently equipped farms in that section. For forty-five years he kept this property intact, and during that time gave his whole time and attention to its cultivation and improvement. Its neat appearance and highly developed state today are due to his industry and perseverance and speak admirably for his industrial ability.

Mr. King was married, in 1868, to Miss Amanda Sappingfield, whose birth occurred in Oregon and who is a daughter of John and Mary (Hagy) Sappingfield, who came to this county in 1847 and took up a donation land claim. To Mr. and Mrs. King eleven children were born, namely: Arthur, who has a highly productive fruit farm in Grant county, Oregon; Minnie, who is married to F. J. Humphry, of Marion county; Emma, residing at home; John J., engaged in mining operations in Butte, Montana; Charles W., a merchant of Wheeler county, Oregon; Albert, who is engaged in the mercantile business at Mitchell, Oregon; Jay I., a resident of Butte, Montana; Harley G., who has charge of the home farm; Flora, who is the wife of J. H. McCort of Albany, Oregon; Chester, who died at the age of six years; and Mary Augusta, whose death occurred in infancy.

In politics Mr. King gave his support to the democratic party, and although he was an enthusiastic advocate of the principles and policies of democracy he has never sought or desired the honors or emoluments of office. He was a regular attendant of the Christian church of Salem, of which his widow is now a member. Mr. King's success in life was due to his own efforts and may serve as a good example of what can be accomplished where industry, labor intelligently directed and perseverance are exerted in this rich agricultural county. His death, which took place on May 5, 1912, thrust not only his family into the deepest mourning but was greatly regretted by his many friends and in him Marion county lost one of its worthy pioneers and a citizen of sterling qualities.

MR. AND MRS. J. T. KING

DR. MARION F. SHAW, who stands as one of the prominent representatives of the medical profession in Hood River, was born in Noble county, Indiana, on August 26, 1859, his parents being Thomas and Susan (Stump) Shaw, both of whom were natives of New York state. Their marriage occurred in Ohio where they had removed with their parents at an early date. Soon after their marriage they removed to Indiana, locating in Noble county, where they spent the remainder of their lives, the father's death occurring in 1902 when he was sixty-nine years of age, the mother having passed away when she was twenty-seven years of age. After her death the father was again married, his second union being to Miss Rachael Grissamer, a native of Noble county, who died in 1880. Thomas Shaw was a member of the Baptist church and Mrs. Shaw was affiliated with the Dunkard faith. In politics he was a republican but never sought office as a reward for party fealty.

In the public schools near his home Dr. Shaw pursued his early education after which he entered the Fort Wayne College and took a three years' course, graduating in the class of 1875 with the degree of B. A. Subsequently he taught school for three years, this occupation offering the best chance for earning money. After having acquired sufficient capital to warrant his making the start, he entered the medical college. In 1879 he took up the reading of medicine under Dr. E. W. Knepper of Ligonier, Indiana, under whose preceptorship he remained three years, thus when he entered Bellevue Hospital Medical College in 1882 he had a good working basis upon which to start. He was graduated from that institution in the class of 1884, following which he located in Angola, Indiana, where he practiced until 1891 in which year he came to Oregon. After arriving in this state he settled first in Enterprise but after remaining there for three years came to Hood River where, with the exception of one year spent in Ashland, Oregon, he has since been in active practice. He keeps in touch with the onward march of the profession through his membership in the Eastern Oregon District Medical Society, the Oregon State Medical Society and the American Medical Society. He is at present enjoying one of the largest and most successful practices in Hood River.

In 1886 Dr. Shaw was married to Miss Lizzie L. Wood, a daughter of Dr. Alphonso Wood of Angola, Indiana. Mrs. Shaw's death occurred on the 9th of February, 1910. Dr. Shaw has been county health officer since 1908 and is at present serving as a member of the city council. He holds membership in The Dalles Lodge, No. 303, B. P. O. E., the Hood River Commercial Club and the University Club of Hood River whose membership number is about one hundred and thirty. Since residing in Oregon he has become interested in the agricultural possibilities of Hood River and at the present time owns an orchard of twelve acres which is situated two miles south of town. His attention is principally given to his professional duties which are onerous and important, and his ability and close adherence to a high standard of professional ethics have gained for him the unqualified regard of all.

JOHN SHAW is the president of the North Powder Milling & Mercantile Company, manager of the Farmers Union Warehouse and owns a fine body of thirteen hundred acres of land, six hundred and forty-one acres being under irrigation. He is engaged in raising thoroughbred Percheron horses and Durham cattle on his farm, upon which he resided until 1911, when he removed to North Powder and is now devoting his time to looking after his varied interests. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, March 6, 1858, the son of William and Hannah (Frew) Shaw, both natives of that country. The parents emigrated to the new world in 1870, leaving Glasgow on June 18. They came immediately following their arrival in this country to the Grande Ronde valley, where the father had two brothers, Robert and Thomas Shaw, and took up a homestead on the La Grande road, six and one half miles northwest of North Powder. He resided upon that farm for many years but spent his last days in Baker City, dying in 1898, at the age of sixty-eight years. In his family were four sons and two daughters, John Shaw, the subject of this review, being the eldest.

John Shaw passed his boyhood in Glasgow and in the Grande Ronde valley, Oregon, receiving a good common school education. He remained under the parental roof until he attained the age of twenty four years and then started in business on his own account, taking up a homestead in the vicinity and afterward purchasing other land until he now owns thirteen hundred acres in all. He has two hundred acres in timber and beside six hundred and forty one acres under irrigation, has a large tract of pasture land. Besides doing general farming raising wheat, oats barley and other grains and marketing hay, he is breeding thoroughbred Percheron horses and raises usually about fifty head of Durham cattle yearly. He resided on his farm until 1911 when he leased that property and removed to North Powder, where he has since lived. He is president of the North Powder Milling & Mercantile Company and devotes a portion of his time to that business. He is also manager of the Farmers Union Warehouse situated on the line of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company with dimensions of one hundred by two hundred feet. Large quantities of marketable produce raised by the farmers of the North Powder valley are shipped from this warehouse each year.

Mr. Shaw was married in 1884 to Miss Mary Nicholson, a daughter of William Nicholson, and to this union one child was born: Lelah, now residing in Astoria. On the first day of January, 1901, Mr. Shaw was again married, the lady of his choice this time being Miss Lida F. Fugit of Indiana and to this union were born two children: Ruth and Alexander. Fraternally Mr. Shaw belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and in 1913 will obtain the veteran jewel presented by that order to all its members who have spent twenty-five consecutive years in good standing. He is also a member of the Farmers Union, being president of the local organization and a member of the county organization. He resides in a fine modern residence in North Powder and has an extensive acquaintance. He has been a very successful man, conservative in all his business dealings and is one of the substantial citizens of eastern Oregon.

FREDERICK L. MACE is one of the many sturdy and forceful pioneers of Oregon and has witnessed the remarkable growth and development which the state has made in the last quarter of a century, has been identified with representative industries and has borne his part in the gradual upbuilding. He was the first man to raise grain in Harney county, thus opening up an important source of wealth to the country. He is today one of the important stock-breeders and feeders in this section, owning one thousand acres on section 20, township 23, range 31, upon which he raises high-grade cattle. Mr. Mace has lived his entire life in the western part of America. He was born at Dewitt Ferry, Siskiyou county, California, on April 13, 1855, and is a son of George W. and Samantha P. (Henderson) Mace. His father was born in Maine in 1828 and is a descendant of old New England stock. He followed the carpenter's trade in his native state until 1846, when he came west, locating in the Sacramento valley when he was eighteen years of age. He was engaged in the mercantile business for a number of years and afterward followed mining on Cache creek. Later, however, he left California and went to The Dalles, settling on Nine Mile creek, where he carried on general farming for three years. At the end of that time he moved to Jackson county, where he took up a donation claim, which he operated and improved for some time. Then, in association with a partner, he returned to California and built the Dewitt Ferry in Siskiyou county, which he conducted with much success for a number of years, returning to his donation claim in Jackson county eventually. In 1865 he enlisted in Company I, First Oregon Volunteer Infantry, and served until the end of the war. After his discharge he returned to Oregon and farmed upon his property until 1884, when he disposed of his donation claim and has since made his home with his son. His wife was a native of Illinois. She died in Oregon in 1900, at the age of seventy-one.

Frederick L. Mace attended the public schools of Jackson county and completed his studies in the Ashland Academy, where he spent two years. He fitted himself for teaching and spent his summers engaged in this occupation. He was also assistant postmaster at Jacksonville, under President Grant's administration and fulfilled his duties ably and efficiently, although he was only fifteen years of age. When he left Jackson county he followed placer mining in Josephine county for two seasons and then worked in the Sterling mine for one season. He saved his money and had accumulated a comfortable sum at the time he abandoned mining. He then formed a partnership with John Hanley, invested his money in stock and began his operations in the cattle business. On June 20, 1880, accompanied by William Hanley, he went to eastern Oregon, driving a herd of cattle. He arrived in Harney county on July 4 of the same year and entered the employ of Todhunter & Devine, who were important stock-raisers of that district. He sold the animals which he owned to his partner and for a short time gave up independent operations. He taught in the fall in the local public schools and alternated his occupations in this manner until the 4th of May, 1884. Some time afterward, about July of the same year, he took a two year contract to carry mail from Burns to Lakeview in Lake county, a distance of one hundred and seventy-five miles. His route was over an unbroken trail through the sagebrush and it was necessary for Mr. Mace to cut his own pathway, build his cabins for shelter at night, shoe his own horses and pack his grain. He carried on this line of occupation successfully for two years, encountering many hardships and even perils and becoming intimately acquainted with the Oregon country. In the meantime, however, he had taken up a preemption claim, proved his title and received a quit-claim deed from the government. Upon the expiration of his mail contract he began operations upon this land and soon had it highly improved and developed. He planted his acres in grain, which was the first raised in Harney county, which was then called Grant county. He has added to his holdings from time to time until he now owns one thousand acres of land. Three hundred and twenty of these he has under cultivation and has left the remainder in its uncultivated state, as it furnishes fine hay for his cattle. It was about the year 1888 when Mr. Mace started in raising his first cattle. In this, however, he was unsuccessful and he abandoned it in favor of breeding and raising sheep. Later he extended his activities along this line to include buying and selling, trailing his animals from Oregon to Wyoming, where he sold them in the markets of that state. In recent years he has given up sheep-raising and is now known as a successful beef feeder. He buys three and four year old steers in the fall, fattens them during the winter and then ships them to the Portland markets. This feature of his business occupies most of his time and attention and is an important source of income to him.

In 1883 Mr. Mace was united in marriage to Miss Adeline Isabel Parker, a native of

FREDERICK L. MACE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
X AND AT ONS.

California, her parents being pioneers in that state and in eastern Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Mace became the parents of four children: Myrtle I., who is deceased; Clarence, a rancher of Harney county, who married Miss Amanda Fine, by whom he has two children; Hazel L., who is now attending the public schools of Burns; and Muriel U., who is at home.

In politics Mr. Mace gives his allegiance to the republican party on national issues but reserves his independence of judgment in local affairs. He is intelligently interested in the welfare of the community but has never sought public office. He was a pioneer in Oregon and is a splendid example of the self-made man. He combines in his character all that is forceful, independent and energetic in the meaning of the words and has built up a successful career by seizing favorable opportunities and by making his hard work effective by intelligent direction. His success has been due entirely to his own efforts and he has made his name honored and respected as a representative citizen of a community to which he came in pioneer times without money or friends.

ALFRED J. SMITH. The able management of Alfred J. Smith, treasurer of the J. E. Smith Live-Stock Company, of Pilot Rock, Umatilla county, Oregon, is largely responsible for the high character of the marketable product—Merino sheep—raised on the forty-three thousand acre ranch, as he is the foreman and overseer of the work done there. Mr. Smith was born in Umatilla county, September 15, 1876, a son of J. E. Smith, whose name the big ranch bears. He was reared in Umatilla county and there attended the public schools. From the time when he was a baby he was trained to the sheep-raising business, with which he is now prominently identified. More sheep are raised by the Smiths than by any other firm or individual in Oregon and they make a specialty of the Merino breed the product of the farm being always of the very highest quality. Alfred J. Smith gives his entire attention to overlooking the stock and seeing after the work on the farm and his ability is so marked that the business has been extremely successful. He was one of the organizers of the Independent Telephone Company of Pilot Rock and is at present in addition to looking after the interests of his ranch, serving as president of that company.

On November 15, 1899, Alfred J. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Lily B. Piersol, a daughter of Sylvester S. Piersol, a well known ranchman of Athena, Umatilla county. In his political views Mr. Smith is republican, and fraternally he holds membership in Pendleton Lodge, No. 288, B. P. O. E.; Alta Lodge, No. 165, I. O. O. F. of Pilot Rock; and the auxiliary lodges, the Encampment and the Patriarchs Militant, of Pendleton. He is one of the well known and popular men of Umatilla county and is highly respected. Although still a young man he has long exhibited marked executive ability in the handling of his business affairs and his success in the management of employes and his careful supervision of the many details of the great business which he is conducting indicates his fitness for the work in which he is engaged.

H. S. MURRAY is one of the progressive young business men of eastern Oregon. At present he is holding the responsible position of general business manager of the Eagle Flouring Mills of Freewater, in Umatilla county. He was born in Tennessee, September 9, 1885, and is a son of Shelley T. and Martha (Maden) Murray. His parents are both natives of Tennessee and were married in their native state. The father of Mr. Murray has been an enthusiastic member of the republican party during all his years but has never had any aspirations for political preferment. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and have their residence in Washington county, Tennessee, where the father is engaged in farming.

H. S. Murray was reared at home, acquiring his early education in the public schools of Washington county, Tennessee. After having completed his elementary studies he became a student at the Iowa State University of Iowa City, Iowa. After completing his university course he further added to his educational store by study in the Minneapolis Business College of Minneapolis, Minnesota, being graduated from this institution with the class of 1903 upon the completion of the prescribed course. Immediately after his graduation he removed to the west, locating in the state of Washington, and was there employed in the general freight and passenger offices of the Washington & Columbia River Railway Company. He remained with this company for a period of one year only and at the expiration of that time he accepted the assistant cashiership in the J. L. Elaine bank at Walla Walla. This position he maintained for one and one-half years, after which he severed his connection with this banking house and removed to Freewater to assume the management of the Eagle Mills, in which capacity he has since served.

Mr. Murray was married, November 11, 1909, to Miss Grace Steen, a native of Umatilla county, but at the time of her marriage a resident of Walla Walla, Washington. To Mr. and Mrs. Murray one child has been born, Mildred Steen. Mr. Murray is in politics a republican and at present is one of the members of the city council of Freewater. He is affiliated with the Freewater Lodge, No. 202, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is also a member of the Freewater Commercial Club. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and Mrs. Murray is a member of the Christian church of this city.

Mr. Murray enjoys the reputation of being numbered among the young and successful business men of Umatilla county. Since starting in business for himself his efforts have met with most unusual success and notwithstanding his rapid advance in business affairs, he has by no means neglected the social duties of life. His political affiliations and enthusiastic interest in civic affairs have been recognized by his fellow citizens and by them he has been honored with a seat in their city common council. In every respect Mr. Murray is a representative of all that is best in the development of the business, social and religious life of his county and state.

J. J. ENDICOTT has now retired from active agricultural life and is living in Myrtle Point, Oregon, where he occupies a prominent and well deserved position among his fellow citizens. He has justly earned the respect he enjoys by identifying himself with progressive movements along agricultural lines in Coos county. He is a native of Kentucky in which state his birth occurred July 30, 1826. His parents, James H. and Jane Endicott were also natives of that state where they maintained their residence until 1828. In that year they moved to Indiana where the father followed farming with much success until his death at the age of eighty-seven years. Mr. Endicott's mother is also deceased, having passed her ninetieth year before her death. James H. and Jane Endicott were the parents of ten children, five of whom are still living: William, who resides in Indiana and is now in the eighty-eighth year of his age; J. J., the subject of this review; Nancy J. Smith, who resides in Indiana; Sarah, the wife of David Smith, who is a resident of the same state; and Aaron, who is operating his father's old Indiana homestead. Those deceased are: Moses, who passed away in the eighty-ninth year of his age; Maria, who died when she was ninety years old; Abraham, who passed away at the age of thirty years; Samuel, who served with great distinction in the Mexican war and who died when he was returning home; and one child who passed away in infancy.

J. J. Endicott was educated in the public schools of Indiana and pursued his studies until 1847. In that year he began the active life which was to be such a constructive and developing force in the progress of the state of Oregon. He married and took up farming in Indiana where he resided for almost ten years. He then followed agricultural pursuits in Illinois for two years and at the end of that time he moved to Missouri where he bought a farm and engaged in its operation. With the exception of his military service in the Federal army during the Civil war Mr. Endicott maintained a continuous residence in the state of Missouri and was actively engaged in agriculture for thirty-five years and gained during that time a thorough knowledge of the details of farming which was a valuable asset to him all during his life. In 1861 he enlisted in Company G, First Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and served for three years and six months in the Federal army. He was in the thick of the conflict and was present at most of the important engagements of the war. He had three horses killed under him but was himself fortunate enough to escape being wounded. He was injured, however, by a fall from his horse. The animal became frightened by the din of battle and grew uncontrollable. Mr. Endicott was seriously disabled by this accident but did not allow it to interrupt his military service. He received his honorable discharge at the end of the war and returned immediately to Missouri where he resumed his occupation of farming. He was one of the representative and prosperous agriculturists of this state for thirty-five years and when he removed from his farm in Missouri at the time of Cleveland's second election that section of the country lost a valued and prominent citizen. In 1896 Mr. Endicott determined to sell out his holdings in Missouri and try his agricultural fortune in the newly developing state of Oregon. He settled in Myrtle Point, Coos county, in that year but soon afterward bought land on the Middle fork of the Coquille river. The period of residence which he began in Oregon in that year has continued since that time and has been productive of good results in a financial way to Mr. Endicott and has given to Coos county a respected and honored citizen. He continued his active agricultural life on his farm near the Coquille river and gained such a degree of success in this line of activity that he was enabled to retire in 1908. He removed to the town of Myrtle Point and has since made his residence in the beautiful and commodious home which he owns. He sold his holdings on the Coquille river but still retains the ownership of agricultural land just outside the city limits of Myrtle Point.

Mr. Endicott has been twice married. In 1847 he wedded Miss Cassa A. Mikels, a native of Ireland and a daughter of Thomas H. and Deborah Mikels. Her parents were residents of Indiana for a number of years and the father followed farming in that state until his death, at the age of eighty-three years. His wife passed away in the eighty-eighth year of her age. Mrs. Endicott was one of seven children born to her parents: Joel W., who now resides in Indiana; Mrs. Nancy Sparks, who makes her home in Iowa; Mrs. Clara Godman and Solomon, both of whom reside in Indiana; and a son and daughter who are also residents of that state; and Cassa, the first wife of our subject. Mrs. Cassa Endicott died on January 26, 1905. She was the mother of fourteen children: S. S., born in 1848, who is a resident of Myrtle Point, Oregon; R. P., whose birth occurred in 1850 and who lives in Eugene, Oregon; James T., born in 1852, who maintains his home in Davis county, Missouri; Nancy, born in 1854, the deceased wife of William T. Leheherr; John C., born in 1856, who has passed away; W. W., whose birth occurred in 1858, and who is a resident of Myrtle Point; Moses, born in 1860, who also resides in Myrtle Point; J. M., whose birth occurred in 1861 and who lives in Roseburg, Oregon; Jacob M., born in 1864 and also a resident of Roseburg; Clara E., whose birth occurred in 1866 and who married Martin Scott of Davis county, Missouri; Emily D., born in 1868, who is the wife of Albert Miller of Myrtle Point; Laura A., who was born in 1870 and who married George Johnson of Washington; Walter, whose birth occurred in 1872, and who is residing in Myrtle Point; and Jennie, whose birth occurred in 1874, and who married Mr. Hampton of Missouri.

JACOB J. ENDICOTT AND FAMILY

Mr. Endicott's second marriage occurred in 1907 when he wedded Mrs. Fannie Warner, the widow of C. M. Warner, by whom she had eleven children, ten of whom are still living: Margaret E., the wife of Jacob Strong of Myrtle Point, Oregon; Sheldon W., also a resident of Myrtle Point; Vernon E., who makes his home in Oakland, Oregon; William T., a resident of Myrtle Point; John, whose death occurred in Prescott, Washington, when he was forty-two years of age; Mary J., the wife of Tom Hagerty, of Lamar, Washington; Ernest, who resides in Loudon, Washington; Henry, a resident of Myrtle Point; Mrs. Jessie Johnson, who also resides in Myrtle Point; Horace, who makes his home in Snake River, Washington; and Charley, who resides in Coos county, Oregon. The second Mrs. Endicott received her education in the public schools near Baltimore, Maryland, and was educated in the faith of the Christian church of which she and her husband are members.

Politically Mr. Endicott is a firm democrat and a consistent believer in the policies of this party. He has never sought public office although he is public-spirited and takes a laudable interest in all matters pertaining to the public welfare. He is now in the eighty-seventh year of his age and each year of his long life has reflected credit upon him. He has lived honorably and worthily through the years, doing the work which he found to do to the best of his ability and never leaving the call of duty unanswered.

ELIAS WEED STEEL. The business development of Elias Weed Steel has assured his close application and sound judgment in his connection with mercantile efforts, and he is now secretary and treasurer of the R. S. & Z. Company, one of the leading mercantile establishments of Wallowa county. He was born November 3, 1870, in Brookfield, Linn county, Missouri, his parents being William and Elva V. (Proud) Steel the father a native of Scotland. William Steel was brought to the United States by his parents when he was a boy of six or seven years. They located in Craftsbury, Vermont, where the grandfather, William Steel, was a miller, operating a gristmill. The mother's birth occurred in Maryland but at an early age she removed to Xenia, Ohio, and subsequently to Brookfield, Missouri. In Brookfield the father, William Steel, and a brother R. M. Steel, had a contract to rebuild the culverts and road of the Hannibal & St. Joe Railroad which had been torn up during the war. While engaged on construction work throughout Missouri they resided in Brookfield, but in 1873 removed to Brainard, Minnesota, where Mr. Steel engaged in the real-estate business and land speculation. During this time he acquired extensive property interests, and in 1884 came to Oregon and assisted his brother who had the contract to build the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's Road from Huntington to Portland. He was thus associated until the completion of the road in 1889, when he returned to Minnesota and brought his family to Oregon, locating at Hilgard. They resided there until the father's death in 1902. The mother is at present living in Vancouver, Washington. Mr. Steel was a member of the Masonic fraternity and a prominent man throughout his community.

Elias W. Steel acquired his education in the schools of Brainard, being graduated in 1888 as a member of the first graduation class of the Brainard high school. Two years later he came to Oregon and secured a position as bookkeeper in the leading milling company of Wallowa county. He remained with that company until 1896 when he went to Hilgard and was employed in the office of R. M. Steel, who had the contract to furnish all ties for the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, the Oregon Short Line and the Union Pacific Railroad. Mr. Steel remained in the employ of his uncle for five years before returning to Enterprise in 1901, where he reentered the milling with which he had been formerly connected. He held this position until the spring of 1903. The previous autumn, however, he was one of the organizers and incorporators of the R. S. & Z. Company, and after severing his connections with his employers he became secretary and treasurer of the R. S. & Z. Company at the time it opened its doors for business. He is still serving in that capacity. Being a thorough businessman, and having made a careful study of the trend and growth of the mercantile business, he is recognized as one of the leading exponents in the success of the company with which he is connected.

On the 24th of August, 1892, Elias W. Steel was married to Miss Mary E. Sammis, of Enterprise. To this union seven children have been born: Grace M., who is in her senior year in high school; Harold A., who is living with his grandmother Steel at Vancouver, Washington, and is in his second year in high school; Portia E., who has just entered the high school; Robert M. and Gilbert S., who are in the seventh and sixth grades of the public schools respectively; Margaret E., who is in the third grade; and William W.

Mr. Steel gives his political support to the republican party and has served as city treasurer but has never been an office seeker. He holds membership in Wallowa Lodge, No. 82, F. & A. M., and for years has served as its secretary. He is also a member of Enterprise Lodge, No. 94, Knights of Pythias. He justly deserves the prefix of a self made man, for as a result of close application and energy intelligently applied he is today one of the leading merchants of Enterprise. Moreover, his name has become a synonym for honesty by all who know him, his word being as good as any bond ever solemnized by signature or seal.

CHARLES W. ELLIS is one of the younger generation of professional men in Harney county, Oregon, being engaged in the general practice of law in the city of Burns. He comes from a long line of cultured and educated men who have been prominent in professional circles of America for many years. He is a son of Orville Nash and Elizabeth (Whittemore) Ellis, who were married at Kankakee, Illinois, January 22, 1877. They were the parents of two children: George E., born November 26, 1877, who is a graduate of the University of Michigan in the class of 1908 and is now engaged in teaching school; and Charles W., whose birth occurred in Kankakee, Illinois, September 18, 1880. The family on the paternal side is of Welsh extraction. Orville Nash Ellis was born in Muskingum county, Ohio, September 22, 1834. His father, Elias Ellis, had located in that section with his parents, who had emigrated from Maryland to Pennsylvania and Kentucky before finally settling in Ohio. On his mother's side Charles W. Ellis is of good New England stock. Elizabeth Whittemore was born in Babcock's Grove, Illinois, February 20, 1847. Her parents removed to that state from Pembroke, New Hampshire, in 1839. Both the father and mother of our subject were regular physicians who practiced the profession in Kankakee, Illinois, where the father died October 7, 1891. The mother has not been active as a physician since coming to Oregon. She is still living with her son at Burns.

Charles W. Ellis received his early education in the public schools of Kankakee, and was graduated from the high school there in 1898. He entered the Kent College of Law, at Chicago, and was graduated with the degree of LL. B. in 1903, and in the same year was admitted to the bar of Illinois. In 1907 he removed to Oregon and located in Burns, and in that year was admitted to the bar and entitled to practice his profession in the Oregon courts. He has remained in Burns since that time and has gained a reputation for ability and intelligence along legal lines. He is an able, progressive and public-spirited young man, who takes a lively interest in democratic politics.

JOHN PALMER was one of the early pioneers of Union county, Oregon having established his home where the city of La Grande now stands. He was born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, December, 31, 1839, a son of Robert H. and Hannah (Palmer) Palmer. The parents were both natives of the Keystone state and the father followed farming for a livelihood. In 1856 he removed with his family to Iowa, but later came to Oregon. He died at La Grande in 1898. His wife passed away in March, 1910, at the age of ninety-six years. They were the parents of the following children. Beulah and Mary were twins. The former is the widow of F. Newlin and resides at La Grande, while the latter passed away at the age of fourteen years. Joseph is a resident of La Grande. John is the subject of this review. Elizabeth is the widow of Abraham Jones and resides at La Grande. Lydia is the wife of Benjamin Grandy, of La Grande. Charles resides in Baker. Emma is the widow of Charles Harding, of La Grande. Frank, deceased, married Kate Bowman, who is now a resident of Baker City.

John Palmer was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools. As a young man he removed with his parents to Iowa in 1856 and worked on his father's farm for a time. He also clerked for three years in a confectionery store at Glenwood. He celebrated his marriage in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and immediately thereafter emigrated to Oregon with mule teams, starting from Council Bluffs, April 23, 1866, and after a continuous journey made without accident reached Union county, Oregon, July 3d, that year. The farm which he and his brother Joseph owned later became the site of the city of La Grande. The journey across the plains was the honeymoon trip of Mr. and Mrs. Palmer and one of their associate travelers was Andrew Charlton, now a resident of Portland. They resided four years upon the land on which they first settled and there two of their children were born. In 1876 Mr. Palmer removed with his family to Baker City and there engaged in the grocery business with his brother Charles, who is now the mayor of the city. He later engaged in the mining business and after some time established himself in the retail harness business, which proved to be a successful venture. He afterward built a well appointed brick store, in which he installed his harness business, and to which he devoted his attention during the remaining years of his life, his death occurring August 28, 1895. He was, however, for four years previous to his death engaged in buying and selling horses. Since the death of Mr. Palmer his son has continued the business with a success equal to that attained under the management of his father.

April 3, 1866, Mr. Palmer was married to Miss Almira E. States, of Council Bluffs, Iowa. Mrs. Palmer was born in Richland county, Ohio, April 27, 1843 the only child of Joshua and Araminta (Taft) States, the former a native of Ohio, and the latter of Massachusetts. The father was a blacksmith. His death occurred in 1844, and the mother later gave her hand in marriage to Poynts O. Galleher. She passed away December 21, 1911. Mrs. Palmer removed with her parents to Iowa when she was twelve years of age and continued under the parental roof until the time of her marriage. Unto Mr. and Mrs. States as above stated, was born one child, Almira E., now Mrs. Palmer. By the mother's marriage to Mr. Galleher there were born four children: Henrietta, deceased; Henry Dubois; Deransel, who at the age of fifteen enlisted as a soldier in the Civil war, was wounded at the battle of Shiloh and died 1865; and Helen, who has also passed away.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer became the parents of eight children. Lora, born February 3, 1867, is the wife of Cyrus Good, of Baker City. Robert R., born October 9, 1868, married Maude Starbird, of La Grande, who died, leaving a daughter, Ruth. He later married Ethel Russell, of Maine, and they have one child, Fern. Walter, who is engaged in the jewelry business in Baker City, married Jennie Gallatly and they have four children, John, Lyle, Myra Belle and Billy Andrew. Charles Clarke, born November 18, 1875, is now engaged in the jewelry business with his brother Walter. He married Minnie Woods of Baker City, and they have one child, Harold. The next in order of birth were twins born February 6, 1878, one of whom died unnamed while John S. died September 6, 1898. He was preparing himself for the practice of law, his studies being for a time under the supervision of Frank Moore, of Baker City. Myrtle Adele was born July 10, 1881, and died December 16, 1883. Clarence Edward, born May 3, 1885, is interested with his brothers Walter and Charles Clarke in the jewelry business, being engaged in watch-making. He married Alice Little, of Baker City, and they have one child, Joseph.

Mr. Palmer was for many years an Odd Fellow. He was a life-long member of the republican party and in religious belief was a Quaker. He was one of the early pioneers of Baker county and during his active life was one of the enterprising and public-spirited men of his section of the state. His death removed from his county one of its most successful and respected citizens. Mrs. Palmer is a member of the Methodist church and maintains her residence in Baker City.

WILLIAM W. LLOYD, interested in farming, stock-raising and banking at Halfway, was born in Adair county, Wisconsin, April 5, 1866, a son of Granville and Rebecca (West) Lloyd, who were farming people and natives of Virginia. For many years they were residents of Wisconsin, where the father died in 1872. The mother occupied the old home in that state until 1876, and then started for Oregon, traveling by rail to Kelton on the Union Pacific Railroad and thence by horse team to Salubria valley, on the Weiser river, in Idaho, whence she proceeded by pack trains to Brownlees Ferry, on the Snake river, arriving there July 2, 1876. After two months spent there with her brother she went to Pine valley, in Baker county, Oregon, and located a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres on which half of the town of Halfway now stands. For about twenty years she there resided and then sold her property to her son William, who still owns the greater part of it. Mrs. Lloyd next removed to Richland, in Eagle valley, where she made her home until her death, which occurred January 18, 1910, in Boise, Idaho, whither she had gone to spend the winter with her niece, Mrs. Ollie Packenham. Mr. and Mrs. Granville Lloyd were the parents of four sons and three daughters. Alban, the eldest, died about 1876. Luther M., born about 1860, was married in 1885 to May Rose Tartar, of Eagle valley and is engaged in stock-raising on the Imnaha river. He and his wife have a son and two daughters. Augusta Virginia, born in 1862, was married in 1896 to O. F. Steen, a mining man of Cornucopia, Oregon. Isaac M., born in March, 1865, and now farming at Halfway, was married in 1885 to Minnie E. Mills and they have two daughters. William W., is the fifth of the family. Bessie M., born in 1868, was married in 1887 to Henry Clark, a farmer. Susie E., born in 1870, was married in 1889 to A. W. Parker, of Eagle valley, a school teacher, and they now live at Pine, Oregon, with their family of three sons and one daughter. The mother was left a widow with six small children and practically had no financial resources when she reached the northwest in 1876, settling in a country which was the hunting grounds of the Umatilla and Nez Perce Indians. She bravely faced the conditions and dangers of frontier life, however, and at length located upon a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres which she improved and upon which she reared her family. At the time she took up her abode there, not more than twenty settlers resided in Pine valley. She passed away at the age of seventy-four years, but the memory of her good deeds will long be cherished by her descendants and all who knew her throughout the region in which she lived.

William W. Lloyd was educated in the pay schools of Pine Valley and of Sparta, but he did not attend school altogether for more than twelve months in his life. It was necessary that he remain at home and assist his mother during his youthful days and when he attained his majority he began farming and stock-raising in Pine Valley, where he has met with good success. He is now engaged in general farming and in raising hogs and he has platted a part of his land as lots in Halfway. He followed freighting from Baker to the Cornucopia mines from six to seven years prior to 1906 and was very successful in that business. Moreover, he is one of the incorporators of the American State Bank of Halfway, which was opened on the 1st of March, 1910, with Mr Lloyd as a stockholder and its first vice president, in which position he has since continued, thus proving a prominent factor in financial circles in this part of the county. He has recently built and put in operation a feed mill which fills a long felt want in Pine Valley. This is the first roller feed mill in the panhandle of Baker county.

On the 20th of June, 1880, Mr Lloyd was married to Miss Esther M. Mills, the daughter of James Mills, a farmer who belonged to one of the pioneer families of Colorado. He came to Oregon about 1880 and to Pine Valley about 1887. He then engaged in farming, mining and stock raising. Unto him and his wife were born four sons and four daughters. William F., living at North Powder, Oregon, has lost his wife and has one daughter. J. E. married Ella Reed and lives at Cornucopia. Minnie E. is the wife of I. M. Lloyd, a brother of William W. Lloyd and they reside at Halfway with their two daughters. Esther M. was the fourth of the family. Alice is the wife of Colby Knapp, of Ogden, Utah, and they have one son and one daughter. Nora, the wife of E. P.

Houston, resides at Boise, Idaho, and has one son. Pat Henry is a miner in the Cornucopia district of Baker county. Andrew W. married, has one son and two daughters, and follows farming in the Pine River Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd became the parents of three daughters. Maud, born August 16, 1890, was graduated from the Sisters' school in Baker, Oregon, and is the wife of Frank Cornwell, of that place. Nora, born January 29, 1893, was also educated in the Sisters' school and likewise in the Baker City Business College, both of which she is a graduate. She is the wife of E. G. Hallay, a farmer living at Halfway, and they have one son. Cecil Sylvia, born August 24, 1895, is a student in the Baker high school.

Mr. Lloyd has figured prominently in public affairs. He was the first mayor of Halfway after its incorporation, holding the office for three years, and he belongs to the Pine Valley Commercial Club of Halfway, to Pine Valley Lodge, No. 208, I. O. O. F., and to Halfway Encampment, No. 75. He recalls many interesting incidents of the early days and reviews with gratitude what his mother did in establishing her home for her children upon the frontier. In those days the family had to go from Pine Valley to Sparta, a mining camp, a distance of fifteen miles by mountain trail or twenty-five miles by poorly constructed roads to get their mail, to secure groceries and for blacksmithing attention, for there were not enough settlers in the valley to justify the establishment of a nearer postoffice. The first grocery store in the valley was opened by Rufus W. Perkins and Ed Parker about July 1, 1883, or seven years after Mrs. Lloyd settled in the valley, and the first blacksmith shop was established the same year by John A. Thaysen. William W. Lloyd now has in his possession the first mailbox used in the first postoffice. This was on A. P. Greener's ranch and mail was brought thereto twice each week. Mr. Lloyd also has in his possession a single-barrel muzzle-loading shotgun which he bought at auction for twenty-five cents and which was brought into Pine Valley by Charles L. Fee, the first permanent settler of the valley. He prizes this fire arm highly as a work of pioneer times. The Lloyd family deserve great credit for what they have accomplished in the development of their part of the state, bearing at all times their share in the work of growth and progress as the district has been converted from a wilderness into a populous and prosperous section.

ANDREW JOHNSON LEVINS, a retired agriculturist of Elkton, is numbered among the worthy native sons of Oregon, his birth having occurred at Oak Hill, six miles from Oakland, Douglas county, on the 7th of March, 1866. His parents were James F. and Sarah (Sutherlin) Levins, the former born in Randolph county, Illinois, on the 8th of January, 1823, and the latter in Parke county, Indiana, on the 17th of May, 1830. They were married in Douglas county, this state, on the 25th of October, 1851, having crossed the plains with ox teams about 1850. James F. Levins came to Oregon as a young man, and Sarah Sutherlin made the journey to this state in company with her parents. Mr. Levins took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres where the town of Elkton now stands and continued to reside thereon throughout the remainder of his life, passing away on the 2d of July, 1898. The period of his residence in Douglas county covered almost a half century and he gained a wide and favorable acquaintance within its borders. He was a stanch republican in politics but never sought nor desired office as a reward for his party fealty. His wife was called to her final rest on the 18th of December, 1880.

Andrew Johnson Levins was reared under the parental roof and attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education. When about seventeen years of age he began providing for his own support and for several years worked principally at logging. At the time of his father's demise he succeeded to the homestead property but has since disposed of all except the residence and a small plot of ground.

On the 18th of May, 1886, Mr. Levins was united in marriage to Miss Viola Means, who came to Oregon from Nebraska in 1885. To them have been born four children, as follows: Gussie, who is the wife of Samuel Nolan and resides in Sedro Woolley, Washington; and Hazel, Erwin and Floyd, all yet at home. Mr. Levins gives his political allegiance to the republican party, while fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, belonging to Elkton Lodge, No. 46. He is one of the well known and substantial citizens of Elkton and has an extensive circle of friends in the community where his entire life has been spent.

REV. JOSEPH M. CATALDO, S. J., of Pendleton, was born in Sicily, March 17, 1837, was there reared and in 1852, at the age of fifteen years, joined the Society of Jesus. He was educated at the Jesuit College, Palermo, Italy. In 1860 he was sent to Belguim and entered the Jesuit College in Louvain, where he pursued his theological studies, being ordained to the priesthood on the 8th of September, 1862, in Liege, Belgium, by Bishop Argeanteau, who had been a captain under Napoleon I.

Following his ordination Rev. Cataldo was sent to Boston, Massachusetts, where he continued his theological studies and a year later, in 1863, was sent to Santa Clara, California, where he further prepared for his chosen life work. In 1864 he was appointed professor of philosophy for the younger Jesuits, this being the alternative of an appointment as a missionary among the Indians. He was given the former position because of a predisposition for tuberculosis. He held this professorship for eighteen months and was then sent to the Indian mission at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and in 1866 went to Spokane, Washington, to establish the first Catholic mission at that place, founding St.

JAMES F. DAVIS

[illegible]
LIBRARY

Michael's Mission, now known as Peon Prairie. After six or seven months passed there he went to St. Ignatius' Mission near Missoula, Montana, where he remained for six months, and in the fall of 1867 he was sent to Lewiston, Idaho, to establish a mission among the Nez Perce Indians. When he was transferred from Spokane to St. Ignatius' Mission it required seventeen days to make the journey, which is now accomplished in about seven hours. He built several small chapels in the settlements of the Nez Perce Indians and established the present mission at Lapawai, now called Slickpoo. For three and one-half years he remained in charge there, after which he was sent back to the Coeur d'Alene Mission, where he continued for six years. In 1877, at the time of the Indian war, he was obliged to go to the Nez Perce Mission to try and pacify the Indians and make peace between them and the white people. In August, 1877, the military forces wished to have a general Indian council near Spokane Falls and asked some of the missionaries to be present and persuade the chiefs of the different tribes not to join the Nez Perce warriors. Father Giorda, Father Joset and Father Cataldo attended the meeting and were camped in their tents on the gravel where the main street of Spokane is now located. Following the Indian war a few straggling settlers made their way to the present site of Spokane and a few houses were there built. Father Cataldo purchased some property near Spokane Falls to build a central school for all the Indian missions, which school was the inception of Gonzaga College, which now has an attendance of five hundred.

From 1877 to 1893 Father Cataldo had charge of all the missions in Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Wyoming and Alaska. In 1893 he was sent to the Crow Indian Mission, near Billings, Montana, and in 1896 was sent to Alaska to visit all of the missions throughout the territory and spent fourteen months in that work. In 1897 he was appointed to the Umatilla Indian Mission near Pendleton, remaining there for four years, after which he returned to Alaska, where he spent two years more. He then again went to Spokane, and found a city where on his former visit he had seen nothing but gravel and rocks. He spent a year there, after which he was sent back to his old mission at Lapawai, Idaho, where he continued for three years. His next service was at San Jose, California, and in November, 1908, he was returned to Pendleton to take charge of St. Mary's parish. He is the pastor here and makes two trips a month to the Indian mission. In April, 1911, he broke ground for a handsome stone edifice to replace the present church. He speaks about ten Indian languages and is affectionately regarded by the Indians, who call him Kau Shin, meaning broken leg. Father Cataldo is assisted by Father John Durgan in compiling an Indian dictionary for use among the Catholic priesthood and young teachers. His labors have been an active element for moral progress among the red men as well as among the white people in the localities where he has labored, and he has done much to spread the teachings of Catholicism in the northwest.

J. S. VINSON. Various lines of business have occupied the attention and energies of J. S. Vinson since he started out in life on his own account. At all times he has been actuated by laudable ambition which has carried him forward to success. He is now engaged in the real-estate business in Freewater and is one of the progressive citizens of his town. He was born in Des Moines county, Iowa, December 25, 1848, a son of Joseph S. and Katherine (Sacket) Vinson, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Iowa. The father went to Iowa in early manhood, was there married, and crossed the plains in 1852, settling in Clackamas county, Oregon. He took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, and erected thereon a log cabin, which he and his wife occupied until 1861. While living in that county, the father also engaged in merchandising and was the first postmaster of the town of Neida. After the death of his wife, he removed to Florence, Idaho, where he remained for two years but on the expiration of that period returned to Clackamas county. Once more, in 1864, he went to Idaho where he remained through the summer, but the succeeding fall again found him in Clackamas county. In the spring of 1865 he removed his family to Umatilla county, settling on Butter creek where he took up another claim of one hundred and sixty acres. This he improved continuing its cultivation and development until his death which occurred in 1896. Unto him and his wife were born seven children, all of whom are yet living. George M., who is living in Umatilla county; J. S., of this review; L. H., who makes his home at Starbuck, Washington, Martha C., the wife of E. Swarthard, of Salem, Oregon; Rebecca J., the wife of A. B. Niles of Wallowa; James A., of Seattle, and Charles who is living at Holdman, Oregon.

J. S. Vinson remained with his parents until he attained his majority and during that period acquired his education in the public schools. He then engaged in the stock business for six years, devoting his time in the winter months during that period to teaching school. He afterward secured a claim on Butter creek, in a location which is now known as the town of Vinson. There he established a store and the postoffice, conducting business at that place for sixteen years, while his appointment as postmaster came to him in 1874. He afterward sold out and went to Nolan where he opened a store and also engaged in buying and shipping grain for seven years. After selling his interests there he lived for two years in Pendleton and in 1895 he removed to Wallowa county where he purchased fifty acres of land. At that time he took up fruit raising in which occupation he continued for three years when he sold out and removed to Milton where he carried on merchandising for two years. He next sold his interests at that place and came to Freewater where for three years he conducted a general mercantile store. Since that time he has been engaged in the real-estate business and has handled many important realty interests, negotiating a large number of sales. He is fully informed concerning realty values and this, combined with his honorable dealings, is the source of his success.

Mr. Vinson is a republican in politics and takes an active interest in the work of the party, doing all in his power to insure its success, yet he does not seek nor desire public office preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs which are bringing him substantial financial returns.

MAX M. DITTEBRANDT, M. D. European countries have sent many of their strongest and most enterprising sons to this country where each citizen can find an opportunity to achieve success more quickly than in the older and more densely populated countries. Germany has furnished us many of this class and they have usually become substantial citizens, energetic, skilled and progressive. Among this number is the Dittebrandt family, of which Dr. Max M. Dittebrandt, residing in Cascade Locks, who is surgeon for the Wind River Lumber Company, is a member. His birth occurred in Berlin in 1862, his parents being Charles and Caroline (Kuntz) Dittebrandt, the former a native of Luxemberg and the latter of Berlin. The parents came to America in 1864 and lived in Chicago for one year. At the end of that time they returned to their native land, but after three years again came to the United States, this time settling in St. Louis, Missouri, but a few months later they removed to Nebraska City, where they resided until 1907. In that year they came to Oregon and have since made their home in Portland, where the father is now residing at the age of eighty years and the mother at seventy-nine. To them ten children were born, nine of whom survive.

The early education of Dr. Dittebrandt was acquired in the German schools of St. Louis. After graduating from the high school of that city he began studying medicine at the age of seventeen years with Dr. E. M. Whittem of Nebraska City. For fourteen months he read medicine in his office, and in 1888 was graduated from the medical college at Keokuk, Iowa. After practicing for a few years he realized the advantages to be gained by further study and entered the post-graduate school of the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1893. He completed the full post-graduate course at that institution, and after his graduation again began the active practice of medicine, this time at Elgin, Oregon. For two years he remained in that city and then removed to Union, where he practiced for four years before settling in La Grande, where he spent an equal length of time. He then removed to Milton, where he remained for seven years, and at the end of that time settled in Portland. Shortly afterward he located permanently in Cascade Locks, where he has built up a large practice. In the private hospital erected by him he treats the patients of the Wind River Lumber Company, receiving for his services one dollar per month from each employe of the Lumber Company. For this sum, which altogether amounts to about eight hundred dollars per month, he is under contract to give them the priviliges of his hospital.

In 1890 Dr. Dittebrandt was married to Miss Hettie Stevenson, a daughter of Robert E. and Elizabeth (White) Stevenson, of Elgin, Oregon, who came to this state in 1863. They have become the parents of one child, Hazel K., who is now the wife of G. H. Bawlag, of Baker City, Oregon.

Politically Dr. Dittebrandt is a democrat and is an active supporter of that party. He holds membership in Lodge No. 96, A. F. & A. M., of Milton, and has filled all its chairs. Mrs. Dittebrandt is a member of the Christian church. The Doctor's profession is to him a subject human as well as scientific interest, and his patients are 'fellowmen in need of his services rather than business propositions. He keeps abreast with the trend of medical thought through medical journals and publications which he regularly reads, and he is recognized as a most able and progressive practitioner.

ARTHUR V. SWIFT. One of the natives of Baker county, Oregon, is Arthur V. Swift, who was born in 1874 and remained at home until 1899. His youth was spent in that county, where he received a good common-school education. When he had attained the age of twenty-five years he removed to Washington, where he took up a homestead and after remaining on his land for some years he sold it to the Big Bend Land Company of Washington. After selling his land he worked for that company for six years. He then became engaged in the newspaper business in Wilson Creek, Washington, and after successfully operating his paper for some time, returned to Baker City, Oregon, to look after his interest in the estate of his father. He began farming his portion of his father's land and by careful cultivation has brought it to a high state of fertility. He placed the necessary improvements on it and is still living there.

In 1904 Mr. Swift was married to Miss Viola Blanchard, whose parents were natives of the eastern part of the United States but emigrated to Washington some years ago. It was in that state that Arthur V. Swift and Viola Blanchard became acquainted and were married. Mr. Swift has been successful as a business man and has acquired in all four hundred and twenty acres of land, all of which lies in Baker county, and is under a high state of cultivation.

Arthur V. Swift is a republican and on April 19, 1912, was elected a delegate, from Oregon, to the national republican convention held at Chicago the same year. His work has mostly been along agricultural lines and he is now making a specialty of dry farming, a system which has added tremendously to the resources of the country.

Mr. Swift is one of the substantial men of Baker county, where he is greatly respected. He is well known, having a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who have been attracted to him by his winning personality and that sterling integrity which is characteristic of his business dealings.

SAMUEL E. NOTSON is a member of the bar of Heppner, this state, where he has been engaged in the practice of law for a number of years. In addition to his private practice he is at present serving his county as superintendent of public schools. He was born in Decatur county, Iowa, on the 27th of March, 1867, and is a son of R. P. S. and Nancy L. (Edmiston) Notson. His parents reside in the state of Iowa, where his father for many years has lived retired.

Samuel E. Notson was reared at home and received his early education in the public schools of Iowa. After completing the elementary studies he became a student of the Western Normal College Shenandoah, Iowa, which institution he attended continuously for three years. He then removed to the Pacific coast and was a student at the Oregon State Normal School for one year, after which he returned to Shenandoah, Iowa, and there completed his course at the Western Normal College. He subsequently entered the Fremont College of Nebraska as a student and from that institution was graduated with the degrees of B. A. and B. S. In 1912 he was given the degree of A. M. by the same college. Following his graduation he removed to Casper, Wyoming, where he was engaged as principal of the public schools for four years. In the year 1900 he established his residence in Morrow county, this state, and for two years was engaged in educational work there. During his student years, in addition to the other branches of study to which he devoted his attention, he acquired a thorough knowledge of law and in 1902 was admitted to the bar of Oregon. He entered the practice of general law in copartnership with Judge C. W. Phelps and continued in this business relation until 1905, at which time he was elected county superintendent of public schools and in that capacity he is now serving the interests of the people of his county.

On the 28th of August 1895, at Dunlap, Iowa, Mr. Notson was united in marriage to Mary A. Nelson, a daughter of Kerwan H. and Elizabeth Nelson. To Mr. and Mrs. Notson have been born six children, namely: Lee W., Mary E., Edward A. and Robert C., all of whom are pupils of the public schools at Heppner; and Charles and Margaret L. Samuel E. Notson gives his support to the republican party and served as deputy district attorney in 1905. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the United Artisans and is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1912 he was a delegate from the Columbia river conference to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church held at Minneapolis, Minnesota. This conference was a notable one. Samuel E. Notson is known throughout his portion of the state of Oregon as a man of exceptional educational acquirements and is in every respect a worthy and efficient superintendent of public schools. His experience in educational work has served to qualify him as an eligible and efficient educator. He is, however, equally capable and successful in the practice of his chosen profession and is recognized as a man who is always ready to give the benefit of his knowledge and influence to the advancement of any measure of public interest seeking ever the betterment of the people of his state.

GEORGE C. RUSSELL is the owner of an attractive and valuable ranch in the vicinity of Joseph, where he has been engaged in agricultural pursuits and stock raising for more than thirty years. He was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, on the 9th of May, 1858, and is the son of Ralph C. and Matilda S. (Smith) Russell. The father, who was one of the pioneer settlers of Minneapolis, removed with his family to San Diego, California, in 1872, and there he passed away in 1896. The mother is living and makes her home in the latter city.

George C. Russell, who was a youth of only fourteen years when he accompanied his people on their removal to California, completed the education begun in the schools of his native city in the San Diego high school, which he attended for two years. At the expiration of that time he laid aside his text books and learned the carpenter's trade, subsequently engaging in contracting and building. After following this business for a few years he came to Oregon, and filing on a homestead in the vicinity of Joseph, turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. Owing to his diligence, perseverance and the concentration of his energies on the accomplishment of a definite purpose, his efforts in this direction were substantially rewarded. As time passed he extended the boundaries of his original tract of one hundred and sixty acres until his ranch now embraces eight hundred acres of excellent land. During the intervening years he has made valuable improvements on his place, including the erection of fine barns and outbuildings and a pleasant residence. As the result of progressive methods and practical ideas he has installed on his ranch of extensive dairy machinery and appliances and has established a herd of high-grade cattle that has become one of the best equipped farms in that section of Wallowa county. In connection with general agriculture Mr. Russell engages in stock raising, obtaining excellent returns from both. He is considered among the leading and substantial ranchmen of the Wallowa valley, owing to the capable and highly efficient manner in which he has directed his operations.

Joseph, Oregon, was the scene of Mr. Russell's marriage in November, 1884, to Miss Lucy Saunders, a daughter of F. H. and Eliza Saunders, and to them have been born five children: Ralph, Ella, Glen, Guy and Vera.

Fraternally, Mr. Russell is a member of the Masonic order, having taken the degrees of the blue lodge. He accords his political support to the republican party. He is a man of high standards of citizenship and manifests the same characteristics in the discharge of his public duties as he does in his business transactions and he has acquired an enviable reputation for promptness, absolute trustworthiness and reliability.

JOHN HENDERER, a successful farmer residing on the Umpqua river three miles west of Elkton, was born on the property where he now resides on October 11, 1865. He is a son of Charles G. and Emeline (Meador) Henderer, the former a native of Bavaria, Germany, and the latter of Tennessee. Mr. Henderer's father was reared in his native country and learned the trade of carpentering in which line of activity he became a skilled craftsman. He came to the United States in 1847, landing in New Orleans practically penniless. He worked for a time on the southern levees and engaged in any line of work which would bring him money. He subsequently worked his way to Independence, Missouri, where he engaged in carpentering until 1849 when he crossed the plains to the California gold fields which were opening up in that year. He engaged for some time in mining on the Salmon river and while he had plenty of gold dust, he could not buy food and at times nearly starved. His dominating ambition and perseverance aided him along the way and he acquired enough money to come to northern Oregon in the fall of 1850. He located in Scottsburg and here worked at carpentering and building for seven years. He was engaged upon the construction of several houses in that city and built up a gratifying local reputation. The success which he attained at this time was a fitting reward for his early struggles and the hardships which he endured patiently and uncomplainingly. He bought the old Griffin ranch of three hundred and twenty acres on the Umpqua river and was successful in agriculture until 1857. In that year he returned to Independence, Missouri, where he was united in marriage to Miss Emeline Meador, on November 28, 1858, and on May 4 of the following year started across the plains with his bride, driving a four-horse team. They arrived in Douglas county on September 9, 1859, and camped for the first night after their arrival on the ranch belonging to Cyrus Hedden. The following day they reached their own property near Elkton. Here the elder Mr. Henderer was successful as a progressive and enterprising agriculturist until his death on January 18, 1898. During his life he was one of the prominent and substantial citizens of Douglas county, the hard and often crude conditions of his early life having molded his character along practical and useful lines. He was so skilled a mechanic that it has often been said in Douglas county that his agricultural activities should have been made secondary to his craftsmanship. Everything he found to do he did well. His farming was scientific and progressive and his mechanical labors were skillful and masterly. He was a republican in his political views and while never an office seeker served for one term as county commissioner. Beyond this he never held public positions, always being persistent in his refusal to accept them. He was a member of the Masonic lodge, having joined the order in Missouri before he crossed the plains to California. His death marked the passing of one of the most prominent and influential men of the Umpqua valley. His wife died on January 19, 1897, and both are buried on the home ranch where they spent so many years of their lives and to the cultivation and development of which they gave their labors and energies.

John Henderer was reared at home and acquired his education in the public schools. He early became acquainted with every detail connected with scientific agriculture and from his boyhood assisted his father with the work of the farm. When he reached manhood he continued his residence at home and united with his father in the management of his property. After the latter's death Mr. Henderer purchased the interests of the other heirs to the estate and succeeded to the sole ownership. He still resides upon his father's farm and under his management it has expanded and developed rapidly. Mr. Henderer has made important improvements upon his holdings. He has installed the most modern farm machinery and has in every way endeavored to live up to the high standards set by his father.

On July 2, 1890, Mr. Henderer was united in marriage to Miss Nettie Traylor, a native of southern Oregon and a daughter of James Traylor, who was among the early pioneers in this state, who came from Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Henderer have seven children: Fannie M.; Eliza E., the wife of William Hargan, who operates a productive ranch in the Umpqua valley; Charles G.; Carrie; Mabel; James Newton; and Una. All the children are living at home with the exception of Eliza.

In his political views Mr. Henderer is an independent republican and follows in his father's footsteps by never seeking and always refusing public office. He is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry and with his family affiliates with the Christian church. He regards his ranch on the Umpqua river as being invested with some of the aspects of a paternal estate and in all things he endeavors to conform to the high personal standards of his father and to carry on his agricultural attainment. Such men are forces for good in a community and Mr. Henderer well deserves the high place which he holds in the respect and esteem of his many friends.

ORIS E. GORSLINE owns and operates a valuable ranch of three hundred and twenty acres in the vicinity of Joseph, where he engages in general farming and cattle-raising. He was born in Cortland county, New York, on the 3d of March, 1859, and is a son of William and Catherine Gorsline, who are living in Salem, this state. In

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES C. HENDERER

1874 they removed to Oregon, locating on a ranch in the Willamette valley. The father energetically applied himself to the further cultivation and improvement of that property for many years and met with lucrative returns.

Oris E. Gorsline was a youth of fifteen years when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Oregon, in whose public schools he completed the education begun in his native state. At the end of two years he laid aside his text books and devoted his entire time to assisting his father with the work of the ranch, thus acquiring a thorough and practical knowledge of the best methods of tilling the soil and caring for the stock. He subsequently left home and began ranching for himself as a renter, in the Willamette valley. Two years later he came to Wallowa county and rented land in the vicinity of Joseph, which he cultivated for ten years. At the expiration of that time he invested in a hundred and sixty acres of fertile land that formed the nucleus of his present ranch. As soon as his circumstances warranted he extended the boundaries of his place until he now owns three hundred and twenty acres, all of which he has under cultivation. He is a man of progressive methods and practical ideas, and has met with good success in both his farming and stock-raising. During his ownership he has made extensive improvements in the place and now has one of the valuable properties of the valley. He has large, commodious barns and a comfortable residence on his ranch, all in excellent condition, and a fine herd of cattle of a good grade. His place is thoroughly equipped with all modern appliances for minimizing the labor and expediting the work, and everything evidences the systematic supervision and competent management that invariably brings prosperity.

At Salem, this state, in December, 1880 Mr. Gorsline was married to Miss Ethie Watson, a daughter of Perry and Mary Watson, and to them have been born five children, as follows: Nellie, who married J. W. Simmons; Zola, the wife of O. E. Newman; Fred, who is living on a homestead; and Guy and Delsie, who are still attending school. Mr. Gorsline votes the republican ticket and takes an active and helpful interest in all matters effecting the welfare of the community.

ARCHIBALD R. COX, general manager and vice president of the Nunamaker Sheep Company of Heppner, was born in Morrow county, January 19, 1883, and is a son of William and Margaret Cox, who were early pioneers of that county, in which they continued to reside until their deaths.

Archibald R. Cox was reared at home and educated in the district schools of Morrow county. At the age of sixteen he started in the sheep business for himself in this state and in 1909, at the time of the organization of the Nunamaker Sheep Company, he was elected vice president and general manager and since that time has continued to discharge the duties of those positions. This large stock corporation specializes in the breeding and raising of thoroughbred sheep.

In the month of December, 1905, at Heppner, Mr. Cox was united in marriage to Miss Olive Robinson, a daughter of R. W. and Martha Robinson. He is a republican in politics. He maintains his residence at Heppner and is recognized as one of the most capable and successful sheep ranchmen in that portion of the state. To this enterprise he has given all of the working years of his life thus far and his ability and integrity in the affairs of business have been well proven.

JESSE ORVILLE KIDDLE, manager of the Lostine Milling Company, was born in Iowa, on the 17th of September, 1878, a son of John and Ida (Dewar) Kiddle. The father's birth occurred in England, while the mother was born in Ohio. John Kiddle came to the United States when he was about eighteen years of age. In his native country he had learned the miller's trade and after his arrival in America he worked at the same in Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa, purchasing a mill in the last named state. Subsequently he went to Triplett, Missouri, where he rented and operated a gristmill, purchasing it later. He still owns that mill and he and his wife continue to make their home in Triplett.

Jesse O. Kiddle was reared under the parental roof and early became familiar with the milling business, working with his father until he became of age, when he went to Callender, Webster county, Iowa, where he was employed as head miller. A year later he went to Fairview, South Dakota, and accepted a similar position in the mills of that city. After remaining there for less than a year he removed to Lobrville, Iowa, and established himself in the wholesale flour and feed business in partnership with his brother, George H. Subsequently they erected a mill in Lobrville. A few months later Mr. Kiddle and his brother disposed of that business and the former came to Oregon, accepting employment with the Pioneer Milling Company at Island City, where he remained until he resigned to go to Wallowa as head miller in the Wallowa Roller Mills. He served in that capacity for about five years and in August, 1907, came to Lostine for the Lostine Milling Company, with which he has since served as manager.

In 1906 Mr. Kiddle was married to Miss Cora O. Tulley, a daughter of Levi Tulley, a retired rancher living in Wallowa. To Mr. and Mrs. Kiddle one child, Leland Tulley, has been born. In politics Mr. Kiddle is a republican and is thoroughly alive to the issues of the day. He holds membership in Stanley Lodge, No. 117, A. F. & A. M. of Wallowa, and he and his wife are members of Artemesy Chapter, No. 88, O. E. S. He also belongs to Kinsmen Lodge, No. 87, K. P., and to Ira Grande Lodge, No. 146, B. P. O. E. He deserves all the praise that the term "self made man" implies, for from his youthful days he has made his own way in the world unaided, and, while he has at times been confronted by difficulties and obstacles, he has nevertheless made gradual advancement and has secured a substantial competence.

AARON WADE is one of the substantial citizens and representative stock men of Wallowa county, where he has acquired extensive property interests, being the owner of two thousand acres of valuable land. He was born in West Virginia on the 2d of December, 1849, and is a son of George and Mary Ann (Aiken) Wade, who were also natives of West Virginia and there they were reared and married. In 1854, together with his wife and family George Wade crossed the prairies to Iowa, settling in Wayne county, which at that time was but sparsely settled. There he filed on some government land and began the life of a pioneer, devoting his entire time and attention to the further improvement and cultivation of his property until the death of his wife in 1880. He disposed of his interests there the following year and came to Oregon, thereafter making his home alternately with his four sons, who are all residents of this state. His death occurred at Island City in 1896, at the residence of his son Thomas. Mr. Wade had always been a stanch adherent of the democratic party and took a prominent part in local political activities and while living in Iowa served as judge of Wayne county. In his early manhood he joined the Masonic fraternity and was always a worthy exemplar of that order and was well known in lodge circles in Iowa and Oregon.

Having been reared on a Iowa farm during the period of pioneer conditions, Aaron Wade was given the advantages of but limited schooling, his education being almost entirely self-acquired. Despite this fact, however, Mr. Wade is a very interesting conversationalist, as he is a close observer and has read broadly, thus becoming widely informed on a variety of subjects while he keeps well posted on all current topics. When still little more than a child he was assigned regular duties about the farm and during the summer months almost his entire time was devoted to the work of the fields and care of the stock. Upon attaining his majority he left the parental home and went out to make his own way. He had been thrifty and enterprising so had accumulated sufficient capital to enable him to begin as a renter and, therefore, leased some land that he cultivated for a year. At the expiration of that period he gave this up and together with his brother Justus, prepared to come to Oregon. They kept their teams, which they shipped over the Northern Pacific to Kelton, Utah, driving through from there to Union county, this state. They arrived there in the month of July and the remainder of that summer and the following winter Mr. Wade spent in that vicinity. In the spring he bought a broncho for fifteen dollars and a saddle for twelve and started across the mountains for the mines at Silver City, Idaho. It was still very early in the season and the snow had not yet melted in the mountains, but became deeper as he advanced, being as much as ten feet in some places. As it was practically impossible to go through this on horseback he turned his pony loose and walked the remainder of the distance. Upon reaching Silver City he had but fifty cents left and this he immediately invested in a good, substantial meal and then sought employment. Fortune favored him, as he succeeded in locating the superintendent of the New York mine, who told him that they could put him to work that night. This was most welcome news, but it was necessary for him to have a pair of rubber boots and some overalls as well as other miner's clothes before he went to work that night, and he was without money. It was impossible for him to borrow as he was not acquainted with any one in the town and he must have employment, so he decided to go across the street to a general mercantile store and see if he could obtain credit. Requests such as his were quite often made at that period and when he explained the circumstances to the proprietor, he readily agreed to give him a full outfit. Mr. Wade remained there during the summer, working in the quartz mill, but later gave this up and went to work for a freighting company. For three years thereafter he freighted with ten and twelve horse teams between Kelton, Boise City, Idaho City, Rocky Bar and other points. At the end of that time he joined his brother Samuel in Oregon and together they came to Wallowa county, settling here in 1876. The greater portion of the money they had managed to save they invested in one hundred Cayuse mares and two or three hundred head of cattle, both being very cheap at that time, and turned them out to range. This was before they began registering brands, and as they were unfamiliar with conditions when they brought in their cattle and ponies at the end of four years they had less than when they turned them out, their mavericks and colts having been seized during the roundup season by the cattle rustlers. Various activities engaged the attention of Mr. Wade until 1886 or 1887, when he engaged in the sheep business in the Wallowa valley. He had profited by his experience with the cattle and was now able to protect his rights, his undertaking proving very successful. He continued to follow this until 1905, in connection with which he subsequently began raising mules in which he still engages. Although he has met with the usual misfortunes and obstacles that are to be encountered in the stock business, his efforts have been well rewarded. For many years he applied himself closely and worked incessantly, but prosperity eventually attended his endeavors and he ultimately acquired two thousand acres of land, that is well improved and fully equipped with everything essential to his occupation.

In 1884, Mr. Wade was united in marriage to Miss Mollie Revis, a daughter of Judge D. B. Revis, who migrated to Wallowa county from Missouri during the pioneer days, and they have become the parents of eight children; Louise, who was educated at Whitman College, Walla Walla, Washington, now the wife of Dr. Hackett, of Enterprise; Clifford, who is at home; Fay and Annis who completed their educations in the State Agricultural College, now living at home; and Harold, Bartin, Roy and Russell, who are also at home. The family home is located two miles south of Enterprise, where they have a very attractive and pleasant place.

The political indorsement of Mr. Wade is given to the democratic party, but he has never aspired to public honors or the emoluments of office. More than thirty five years have elapsed since he first came to this county during which time he has witnessed some marvelous changes. The great expanse of unbroken prairie have been divided into ranches that are equipped with all modern conveniences and comforts, while thriving towns and villages have sprung up where twenty-five years ago there was not even a settlement.

WILLIAM THOMAS MILLER is one of the recent acquisitions of the legal profession of Wallowa, where he has been engaged in practice for less than a year. He was born in Raleigh county, West Virginia, on the 24th of January, 1880, and is a son of Thomas Chester and Candace (Combs) Miller. Thomas Chester Miller was for many years engaged in agricultural pursuits both in his native state and in Wallowa county, where the family resided for a time, but he has now retired from active life.

William Thomas Miller was initiated in the elements of English learning in the common schools of his native state, and while pursuing his studies he also assisted his father with the work of the fields and care of the stock. He accompanied his parents on their removal to Wallowa county, completing his education in the high school of Wallowa. After his graduation he engaged for some years in the operation of a sawmill, but deciding that he preferred a professional to a business career, he subsequently went to Chattanooga, Tennessee, and in the university there took up the study of law. He was awarded the degree of LL. B. by this institution two years later, being a member of the class of 1910. Returning to this state he continued his professional studies for a time in the State University and was admitted to the bar on the 2d of June, 1911. On the tenth day of the same month he went to Wallowa and established an office there. Although he has not long been identified with the legal fraternity of that town, Mr. Miller has manifested qualities, which have won him the confidence and esteem of all with whom he has had dealings, and his friends feel assured that he will make a success of his profession. He has a fine mind and is a deep student and to the support of these qualities he brings tireless energy and the determination of spirit which invariably attain their purpose. He has high principles and is absolutely fair in all his relations, while his integrity is above question. His political support he has always accorded to the democratic party because he feels that the supremacy of that body would promote the welfare of the American people at large. Mr. Miller enjoys a wide and favorable acquaintance in this community and has many stanch friends.

ALBERT G. CONKLIN. One of the successful fruit growers of Union county, residing near Cove, is Albert G. Conklin, owning a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. He is raising large quantities of prunes and apples and has a fine young pear orchard. He is also carrying on general farming and raises about two carloads of hogs a year as well as some other stock. He was born in Oneida county, New York, in November, 1848, a son of Nathaniel and Clarinda (Hunt) Conklin, both of whom were born near Albany, New York. Mr. Conklin is a cousin of the illustrious statesman, Roscoe Conkling, and had the pleasure of being intimately acquainted with him. The father removed to Oneida county, New York, in 1830, where he followed general farming, fruit-raising and canning, and was a producer of garden seeds, becoming very prosperous. In his family were twelve children. Among his brothers and sisters under the parental roof Albert G. Conklin grew to manhood. He received a good common school education, remaining with his parents until 1875, when he removed to Iowa and settled in O'Brien county, where he purchased a farm of three hundred and twenty acres. His farm, which was situated in one of the best sections of that state produced liberally and after remaining upon it for twelve years he sold out and came to Oregon. He stopped at Cove, arriving there in the evening, and on the following morning bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres lying adjacent to the mountains, and which on that account was comparatively free from frost. He has been raising fruit for a long time and has thus far only lost one crop. He has fifteen acres in prune trees and their product is bringing him over fourteen thousand dollars annually. He also as well as having a five young pear orchard has a fifteen acre apple orchard which yields over one hundred dollars per acre. He is raising considerable stock and uses his prune orchard as a hog pasture, raising about two carloads of hogs for the market each year.

Mr. Conklin has been twice married, his first union being with Miss Quackenbush, who died in Iowa. To that union one daughter, Bessie, was born who is the wife of Ben Lay of Cove. For his second wife Mr. Conklin chose Miss Fannie Conley a daughter of B. F. Conley of Brighton, Michigan. Mrs. Fannie Conklin before her marriage came to Cove as preceptress of the Methodist church school being a woman of good education and strong individuality. To this union three children were born, Albert, Philip and Thomas, all attending school. Mr. Conklin who is a highly honored man in his community has been a member of the school board for twenty years. He belongs to the Grange, taking an active interest in that organization. He is a successful farmer and keeps abreast of the times on all matters pertaining to his business affairs, to which he gives his closest attention. He is greatly respected in the community and has long been regarded as one of its leading citizens.

I. S. GEER is well known in Burns by reason of his connection with mercantile interests, while a wide reputation has come to him through his identification with "dry farming." As a representative of the latter line of activity he has done much to further the interests of the state, his labors demonstrating what may be accomplished in this direction. Mr. Geer is one of Oregon's native sons, his birth having occurred at Silverton, February 28, 1864. His parents were Calvin and Ellen (Leonard) Geer, the former a native of Illinois and the latter of Missouri. The family is of old English stock, the ancestry being traced back to George Geer, who left England in 1630 and established his home in Connecticut. For many years the family has been represented in Oregon. Carey Geer, great-uncle of I. S. Geer, settled in this state in 1845 and was followed by four of his brothers with their families. One of the number, R. C. Geer, grandfather of I. S. Geer, went to Silverton. He became prominent as a local political leader, serving for some time as county clerk and also as a member of the state legislature. His son, Calvin Geer, remained at Silverton until 1889, engaged in farming, and is now living at Riddles, Oregon, in the seventy-third year of his age. He was the father of five children: I. S., the subject of this review; R. C., now a resident of California; Ida, who married H. V. Climber, of Yuma, Arizona; P. W., who now resides in New York; and Mary, the wife of Benjamin Brown, of Burns, Oregon. The family has been a prominent one in Oregon for more than half a century. The late Homer Davenport, the well known cartoonist, was a first cousin of I. S. Geer, and Governor T. T. Geer is a second cousin.

I. S. Geer was educated in the public schools of Silverton and assisted his father on the home farm until twenty-six years of age, when he came to Burns and entered the hardware business in connection with his brother, who had previously located here. After an association continuing two years H. E. Thompson purchased the brother's interest and continued in the business until 1900, when he sold out to a Mr. Cummins. Under the firm style of Geer & Cummins the business has now been conducted for twelve years. Theirs is one of the largest general hardware stores in the city, for they carry a full line of farm implements, stoves and shelf hardware. Their trade has grown with wonderful rapidity and is not confined to Harney county or even to the state of Oregon.

As an enterprising merchant Mr. Geer has contributed to the welfare and upbuilding of Burns but his labors in other directions have been of equal value and worth. He was the first man to introduce dry farming in this part of the state and his success has caused much of the later development of the dry, arid lands and has led the Oregon Agricultural College to extend its experimental stations to this region. Thus the labors of Mr. Geer have had direct bearing on the future of all arid states. About two miles from Burns he has as fine a sixteen-acre orchard as can be found anywhere and the tract is totally without irrigation. It was planted in the spring of 1907 and the trees in the year 1912 have borne all the fruit they can carry. He makes a specialty of cultivating four varieties of apples—the Wealthy, the Duchess, the Gano and the Yellow Transparent. The pear and cherry trees are also in excellent condition, the trees having had a healthy growth and produced good returns. Mr. Geer has made a close study of the soil and there is not a weed to be found in his orchard, where the ground has been so intelligently worked that the moisture has all been conserved. His work stands as an able exponent of dry farming and his example is being followed by many others.

On the 4th of August, 1889, Mr. Geer was married to Miss Belle Erb, a native of Indiana, and they have four children: Juanita, the wife of Irving Miller, of Burns; I. W., associated with his father in the hardware business; H. C., attending the public schools; and Ellen.

Mr. Geer has long been a recognized factor in political circles and in 1892 was elected county treasurer, serving until 1896. In 1901 he was chosen to represent his district in the state legislature. He is a blue lodge Mason and has occupied various chairs in the local organization of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In all that he does along political lines and otherwise he is actuated by a spirit of devotion to the general welfare and his labors in the field of business as well as in the county and state offices have been directly beneficial to the community and to the commonwealth.

JAMES C. CONLEY, who is the able county superintendent of schools of Wallowa county, was born in Johnson county, Missouri, August 6, 1859. He is the son of George W. and Rebecca S. (Hooper) Conley, the father a native of Indiana and the mother of Maryland. The parents were married in Indiana, where the mother removed as a young girl with her foster parents, her own having died when she was a small child. Shortly after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Conley removed to Johnson county, Missouri, and in about 1874 they went to Linn county, Kansas, where they resided up to 1888. At that date they came to Oregon, locating on a farm in Wallowa county, three miles west of Joseph, but resided on that place only a short time when they repaired to the town of Joseph, where the father died in February, 1908, and where the mother yet lives. The father was a republican in politics and was a Civil war veteran, having served in the Thirty-third Missouri Regiment. He was a member of

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

the United Brethren church and his wife an earnest follower of the Methodist Episcopal faith.

James C. Conley was reared at home and acquired his education in the public and high schools of Linn county, Kansas, graduating from the La Cygne high school in the class of 1880. In the fall of the following year he took up the profession of teaching and has given the greater portion of his time since, a period of over thirty-one years to educational work. During this time he has occupied himself during the summer months with his profession and in winter has engaged in farm work. He is active and energetic and all his life has been a great reader and student, so that he is now a widely informed man. In 1888 he came to Oregon, settling on a homestead, and while improving the same he engaged in teaching school. He continued in the profession until his election to his present place, in 1898. He first served a term of two years and then was reelected for four years and after a lapse of four years was again elected to the office, and up to the present time has given nine years of efficient service.

In Linn county, Kansas, in 1881, Mr. Conley wedded Miss Sarah E. Hall, who passed away in 1893. In 1896 he was again married, his second union being with Miss Grace Wilson, who is the daughter of William C. Wilson, a retired farmer living in Joseph. To the second union have been born three children: Winifred R., deceased, Marvin W., and Malcolm K., deceased. Politically Mr. Conley is a republican and has always been actively interested in local party work. Fraternally he is a member of Joseph Lodge, No. 81, A. F. & A. M.; and both he and his wife belong to Wallowa Chapter, No. 50, O. E. S., at Enterprise, being charter members of the same. Mrs. Conley is now worthy matron of the lodge. Both he and Mrs. Conley are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and she is a teacher and also assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. Conley has been identified with school work in Wallowa county longer than any other citizen, is one of its best known educators and during his service as superintendent of schools has enacted many measures of reform and progress in the interests of education.

ARTEMUS P. WARNER, who is one of the extensive landowners of Umatilla county, resides on his farm, which is located on Birch creek, ten miles south of Pilot Rock. He was born in Pittsford, Vermont, March 17, 1847, a son of Nathan S. and Sarah (Powers) Warner. The parents were both natives of Pittsford, as were their ancestors for three or four generations back. The mother died in Pittsford, Vermont, in 1882 and in 1885 the father came to Oregon, where he made his home with his children until his death in 1901.

Artemus P. Warner was reared in Vermont and acquired his education in the common schools of that state. On reaching manhood he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed until about 1884, when he came to Oregon, where he settled on his present ranch on Birch creek, in Umatilla county. He now owns something over thirteen hundred acres of land in this tract and also has two other ranches, one of one hundred and sixty acres, which is located in Grant county, and another of two hundred acres, which is just east of Pilot Rock. He engages very extensively in raising sheep and has been prominent in that industry for the past twenty-five years. He has as high as three thousand sheep on his ranch at the present time.

Mr. Warner has been three times married. He first wedded Miss Caroline Ferris, of De Page county, Illinois, and to them were born three children, only one of whom survives, Edmund, who is postmaster at Pine Grove. Mrs. Warner died in 1877 and Mr. Warner later married Miss Mary Bristol, of Adams Center, New York. To this union was born one child who is now deceased, Mary (Bristol) Warner passed away in 1885 and later Mr. Warner was united in marriage with Miss Martha Palmer, who passed away in 1911, leaving five children, Edna, Archie, Rosa, Robert and Hazel, all of whom are at home.

In politics Mr. Warner is a republican, and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order. He is well known as a progressive and successful man, being one of the most prominent sheep raisers and extensive landowners of the county, and he is a man who holds to the highest principles in all his business and social relations.

C. C. HENDRICKS is one of the oldest inhabitants of the city of Pendleton in years of continuous residence. He was born in Lane county, Oregon, April 8, 1851, a son of J. M. and Elizabeth (Bristow) Hendricks, who were natives of Kentucky and removed in childhood with their parents to Illinois, in which state they were married. In the fall of 1845 they crossed the plains with ox and mule teams, locating in the Willamette valley, near Cloverdale, where they took up a donation land claim of six hundred and forty acres. They resided during the remainder of their lives on that claim and prospered. At their death the homestead was left to their eleven children, and four of them, C. C., of this review, M. F., A. M. and Olive E., resided on the same and improved and cultivated it, but during the panic of 1893 lost it all. In the family of J. M. and Elizabeth (Bristow) Hendricks were the following children, of whom the eldest, George Washington, died in Illinois at the age of eight years; Benjamin F., of Springfield, Oregon; T. G., who is president of the First National Bank at Eugene, Oregon; Mrs. Susan Jane Winters, deceased; Sarah Ann, who is the widow of J. F. Skaggs, of Medford; Harriet Emmeline, deceased; Frank H., of Olympia, Washington; J. M. J., deceased; [illegible] of this review; M. F., of Weston; A. M., of Eugene; and Olive E., who is the wife of Frank Cline, of Eugene. C. C. Hendricks, being the first child born to his parents after they came to Oregon, was named by them Christopher Columbus. He remained on his father's farm until he was twenty-two years of age. He then drove a herd of cattle which belonged to himself and his father, to Lake county and herded them there for two years, but during an unusually hard winter he lost two hundred and five head. Returning to his home place in the Willamette valley he was employed during five years in work on the home farm and on an adjoining farm. He then sold out his interests to his younger brother and came to Pendleton in the fall of 1880 and here he has since resided. During the first three years of his residence in Pendleton he was engaged in the restaurant business. Subsequently he bought town property here and also sold from his reservation an addition to the city. Later he engaged in the grocery business together with his brother A. M., under the firm name of Hendricks Brothers & Company, but after one year they closed out the store but kept the property. Since then Mr. Hendricks has remained in the city, being engaged for a number of years in the real-estate, loan and insurance business. He is today one of the largest property holders in the city, owning nine residences, a large brick building on Main street and many vacant lots.

In his political views Mr. Hendricks is a democrat, having supported this party ever since he reached his majority, and he has been active in local party work. He is a member of the United Artisans and the Fraternal Brotherhood and at one time belonged to nine different orders. He built and owns a hall in which most of the lodge meetings were held, but which is now occupied by a business college. Mr. Hendricks has spent all his life in Oregon and in the city of Pendleton there are only two who can boast of a longer residence. He went through all the early conditions of pioneer life and he recalls many experiences of those days. He well remembers the time when as a boy he wore buckskin trousers which, when one boy of the family outgrew them, were handed down to the next smaller one. He also remembers his first pair of red top boots and his first hickory shirt, which was bought from money that was earned by picking apples. In that early time work on the farm was carried on by ox teams and he passed many a day driving sometimes the yoke of oxen, Jack and Jolly, sometimes Nig and Broad, and at other times Pike and Bald, and often he used to ride one of these to the mill with a sack of wheat. In those days it was the custom of the children to go barefoot, and there was no extra attire for Sunday, when Jack and Jolly used to take the barefoot children to church. Mr. Hendricks has witnessed the development of this section of Oregon from those primitive conditions to its present state of advancement and he has ever taken an active part in its progress. His life is exemplary in all respects and he has ever supported those interests which are calculated to uplift and benefit humanity, while his own moral worth is deserving of the highest commendation.

STEVE F. RICHARDSON, who is living retired in La Grande, was the pioneer in the export lumber trade in his district, having been connected with that business in Oregon since 1883. He served his native state, Maine, as a member of its legislature in 1873, and his adopted state, Oregon, in the same capacity in 1907. By his active and successful business career in the La Grande district he did valuable service in developing its resources and has long been regarded as one of its most influential citizens. He was born in Somerset county, Maine, February 23, 1842, the son of Bryant and Rachel (Goodwin) Richardson, both natives of the same place. The grandfather, Joel Richardson, was a native of England and emigrated to the new world, establishing his home in America. The Goodwins were of Scotch ancestry and were successful and respected in Maine, where the family settled on coming to this country. The Richardson family in Maine were engaged in the lumber industry and the subject of this review received a thorough training in that line of business.

He pursued his education in the schools of his native state and after laying aside his text-books embarked in lumbering. After remaining in his native state for some time he removed to Wisconsin and was there engaged in lumbering for a period of seven years. In the fall of 1883 he came to Oregon and settled in the Grande Ronde valley, entering that section on the back of an Indian pony. He spent some time looking over the land in that neighborhood for opportunities in his business, having associated with him some eastern capitalists. Finding what he readily perceived was an excellent chance to launch a good business, he made a favorable report to his principals and with sufficient capital at his disposition the river was cleaned so that logs might be floated on its waters. Wing and flood dams were built and everything placed in readiness for logging operations. A sawmill was also built under Mr. Richardson's supervision at Stumptown, now known as Perry, and the business which was successfully launched was continued by Mr. Richardson until 1900, when he partially retired, although still retaining an interest in some of the mills. He has valuable real-estate holdings in addition to his lumber interests, owning a farm of two hundred and eighty-five acres four miles east of Island City and ten acres of orchard land one mile from La Grande. He also has lumber interests in the state of Idaho.

On May 21, 1870, Mr. Richardson was united in marriage to Miss Lilla Burrell, of Somerset county, Maine, a daughter of George and Olive (Tupper) Burrell, natives of the same locality. The father was a successful agriculturist, following that occupation during his lifetime. To Mr. and Mrs. Richardson were born twelve children: Josie M., who died August 20, 1881; Frank O., a resident of Idaho; Belle L., who died June 2, 1881; Olive B., who died June 24, 1881; Eugene B., also deceased; Joel H., a graduate of Harvard University; a child, who died May 9, 1885; Arthur B., who died January 30, 1888; Roy A., who died January 8, 1889; George B. and Helen B., the former of whom resides on his father's farm, while the latter is at home; and Edna A., who passed away on the 1st of January, 1899.

Mr. Richardson has always taken an active interest in politics and, being an influential and representative citizen, was elected a member of the state legislature of his native state, Maine, in 1873, making an excellent record. He was also elected to the state legislature of Oregon in 1907 and rendered excellent service while a member of that body. He is widely known in the state of Oregon, being well acquainted in the La Grande district in Union county, where he is respected by all who know him and held in high esteem by a large number of business, political and social friends. He is possessed of much more than ordinary business ability and his long career in the logging industry and lumber trade has been a very successful one.

E. T. ROUP, a retired ranchman of Joseph, who owns a thousand acres of land on Prairie creek, which he is renting to his sons, was born in Johnson county, Iowa, on the 13th of December, 1854, and is a son of Thomas and Nancy (Henry) Roup. The father was a native of Pennsylvania and the mother of Ohio, but they were married in Iowa in December, 1851, having removed to that state with their parents who settled on government land in Johnson county. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roup settled in Johnson county, continuing to reside there until 1864, when they crossed the plains to Montana. For three years thereafter the father engaged in prospecting and mining in that state, meeting with but indifferent success. At the expiration of that time he returned to the east, locating in Harrison county, Missouri, but seven years later in 1874, he decided to come to the northwest. Oregon was his destination and upon his arrival in this state with his family they settled in the Wallowa valley, then a portion of Union, but now in Wallowa county. They took up their residence here on the 11th of November, 1874, being among the very first settlers in this location. The father and our subject, who was then a youth of twenty years, each took up a squatter's right on Prairie creek, the land there being as yet unsurveyed. Both of these claims are still owned by the son, E. T. Roup, and the valuable holdings, the land being very productive. The father resided on his homestead for thirty years, bringing it under high cultivation and making it an attractive ranch. In 1904, he withdrew from active work and went to Boise City, where he has a son living. After remaining there a year he returned to Wallowa county, settling in Joseph and here his death occurred on the 12th of October, 1911, at the age of eighty-four years. The mother is living at seventy-nine years and continues to reside in Joseph, making her home with her son, E. T. The political support of Thomas Roup was always given to the republican party, and while living in Montana in the early days he served as justice of the peace and later held the same office in Wallowa county.

E. T. Roup was reared at home, securing a limited education in the common schools. His boyhood and youth having been passed on a farm he was early trained in the work of the fields and care of the stock, and at such times as his services were not required at home he attended the district schools. He was twenty years of age when he came to Wallowa county and he immediately began cultivating and improving his claim, which he proved up in 1881, the year after he was married. His energies were here devoted to general farming and stock raising, his efforts in this direction meeting with a goodly measure of success. As his circumstances warranted he extended the boundaries of his ranch, until he has today one thousand acres of land. This is all under cultivation and well improved, and is in every way a credit to his energies and determination of purpose. He resided upon his ranch until 1909, when he removed to Joseph to give his children better educational advantages, and here he has ever since lived retired. For many years he devoted himself tirelessly to the work of his ranch and is now enjoying the ease and comfort purchased through the intelligent direction of his early activities.

Mr. Roup was married in 1880 to Miss Alvira Warden, a daughter of David Warden, who came to the Wallowa valley from Missouri in 1878. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Roup, five of whom are living as follows: Elmer, who is engaged in the operation of a part of his father's ranch; Frank, who is also on a part of his father's ranch; Emma, who is living at home; Maggie, who is attending the conservatory of music of Whitman College, Walla Walla, Washington; and Belva, living at home.

The mother and daughters are members of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Roup is a republican, is one of the foremost citizens of Joseph and was one of the organizers of the First Bank of Joseph, which has the distinction of being the first financial institution established in the county. At the time of its organization he was appointed vice president and also one of the directors and has ever since been serving in this capacity. He is a very practical man of sound judgment and progressive viewpoints, whose opinion on matters of business is often sought. His residence in the county covers a period of thirty-seven years and he has established the enviable reputation during that time of being a man of sterling worth and commendable characteristics.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN WILSON is one of the highly respected citizens of Union, this state, where he is engaged in the general practice of law. He was born February 19, 1861, in Lafayette, Oregon. His paternal grandfather was John A. Wilson, who was a native of Alabama and in an early day removed from that state to Mississippi, where he established himself as one of the successful planters. In 1852 he removed with his family to California, crossing the plains with ox teams and on reaching the Golden state he settled at Marysville, in the Sacramento valley, where he at first engaged in mining and later gave his attention to farming and stock-raising.

Benjamin F. Wilson is a son of James A. and Susannah (Owen) Wilson, the former a native of Carroll county, Mississippi, and the latter of Missouri. James A. Wilson emigrated to Oregon in 1859, reaching this state at the time of the Pit river Indian wars, and at one place on his journey he ferried over a stream where a few days previously the Indians had made a raid and killed a number of people. He encountered much trouble in getting his horses and cattle which consisted of a band of fifty head, across the river. This, however, was eventually successfully accomplished with the assistance of the two employes whom he had engaged to accompany him on his journey. Farther along on their way they accidently fell in company with Boone Helm, who accompanied them. Mr. Wilson was the owner of a very fine saddle horse. This animal attracted the fancy of Boone Helm and at a time when Mr. Wilson had relaxed somewhat his vigilance he allowed Boone the privilege of driving his horse and at the first opportunity he managed to escape from their camp and company, taking with him the much-prized and highly valuable animal. Upon the discovery that Boone had escaped with his horse he took one of his men and at once started in pursuit of the fugitive, whom they encountered some distance from their outfit, and upon claiming the animal Boone refused to surrender the horse. In the midst of the dispute which followed, Mr. Wilson's man succeeded in getting the drop on Boone and Mr. Wilson promptly relieved the desperado of his guns and, taking his stolen property, he started back to rejoin his camp and continue his journey. Boone insisted upon returning with them keeping, however, at a safe distance and spending his time in giving vent to unpronounceable expletives in which he announced vengeance upon Mr. Wilson and his party. He continued in the vicinity of their camp during the remaining portion of the day and some time during the night he made his escape and nothing further was heard of this man until 1863, when he and four of his companions, including Jack Gallagher and Clubfoot George, were hanged to a beam in Virginia City, Montana, by the vigilance committee. Gallagher was the first of this company of desperadoes to drop to his death and Boone, who was the leader of the band, on seeing his feet move cried to his copartner in crime with his last words: "Kick away, Jack, I'll be in hell with you in five minutes." The above recited narrative, dealing with the close of the lives of these outlaws points to an important episode in the history of Mr. Wilson's entrance into this state. He ever afterward considered himself and associates most fortunate in not having been murdered by this well known and universally dreaded mountain desperado chief. He arrived in this state in the early fall and established his home in Lafayette, where he continued to reside until 1864, during which time he was engaged in the business of farming and stock-raising. In 1864 he returned with his family to the Grande Ronde valley, making the journey by boat and team, traveling as far as Celilo by boat, from there making the portage and then continuing by boat to The Dalles and from that place by team. On reaching his destination he established his home in Cove, where he engaged in farming and stock-raising. Here he spent the remaining years of his life, passing away in April, 1908, at the age of sixty-nine years. To himself and wife nine children were born.

Benjamin Franklin Wilson was the eldest member of the family. His early boyhood days were passed at Cove in his father's home, where he received his elementary education in the public schools, and later became a student at the State University at Portland. For some time following his school life at the university he was engaged in educational work, teaching in the public schools, and at the same time he operated a ranch. In 1884 he was elected county clerk and in that office continued to serve the people of his county for two years. While engaged in the discharge of his duties he devoted his spare time to the study of law and after having qualified himself for the practice of the legal profession he was admitted to the bar in 1889 and at once engaged in the general practice of law in Union, in which he continued until 1893, when he was appointed register of the land office. In that capacity he continued to be engaged for four and one-half years and in 1898 he was elected county judge, a position of great trust, which he held in the interest of the people for four years. On retiring from the bench he resumed the practice of his profession, in which he has since been engaged. Mr. Wilson is the owner of a very fine farm, located one and one-half miles north of Union, and during several years past he has given it a considerable portion of his time. In his farming enterprise he specializes in alfalfa, hogs and dairying.

Mr. Wilson was united in wedlock to Miss Mary B. Kennedy, of the Willamette valley, on the 17th of July, 1887. Mrs. Wilson is a daughter of J. W. Kennedy, of whom a more extended review is published in another part of this work. To Mr. and Mrs. Wilson three children have been born: Rowena, now Mrs. John Dobbin; Hazel, teaching in the public schools; and Frank K. Mr. Wilson fraternally is associated with the Knights of Pythias, having been one of the charter members of Blue Mountain Lodge, No. 28. He is one of the enterprising and highly respected citizens of the city and county in which he resides and is always to be relied upon to give the benefit of his influence to any measure of public interest effecting the welfare of the people among whom he has established his home.

JOHN N. HEDDEN is proprietor of the oldest mercantile establishment under one ownership in central Oregon and the record which he has made as a business man is a most enviable one. It is true that he entered upon a business already established, but in enlarging and controlling this many a man of less resolute spirit would have failed. On the contrary his interests and activities have grown and developed, and have constituted an element in the modern progress of the community. Mr. Hedden was born in Scottsburg, Douglas county, Oregon, May 1, 1856, a son of Cyrus and Margaret (Sawyer) Hedden. The father was a pioneer of Douglas county and one of the most prominent men of that early period, aiding in laying the foundations upon which has been built the later progress and prosperity of the county. He was born near Newark, New Jersey, on the 4th of March, 1820, and there spent his youthful days. When sixteen years of age he was apprenticed to the blacksmith's trade and for four years worked for his board and clothing. In the meantime he thoroughly mastered the trade in every detail and in 1848 went to Terre Haute, Indiana, where for two years he worked as a journeyman blacksmith. In 1850, in company with several companions, he made the long trip across the stretches of hot sand and through the mountain passes to the coast, traveling with a six horse team as far as Salt Lake City, where the horses were exchanged for oxen. From that point the party continued on their way to the coast, arriving in Sacramento on the 6th of August, 1850. The fall and winter were spent by Mr. Hedden in prospecting and mining on the American river and, in April, 1851, he purchased three acres of land in the vicinity of Market street, San Francisco. Shortly afterward he was persuaded by Captain Tichnor to go on the captain's vessel, the Sea Gull, to Portland. At that time the city had but one or two streets along the river front, while the remainder was sand. Mr. Hedden built a shop and began work at his trade. In the following June, however, he was persuaded by Captain Tichnor to go with him and help found a town at Port Orford. Mr. Hedden and eight others then sailed for that place, where soon after their arrival the famous battle of Battle Rock occurred. Mr. Hedden was one of the nine men who defeated the attacking party of one hundred and fifty Indians, killing twenty three of them while all of the white men escaped with their lives. He did not relish such encounters nor life in such an undeveloped district and soon after this determined to return to Portland. He made the journey on foot by way of Gardiner and Elkton, and on his arrival in the Rose City began working at his trade at a salary of ten dollars per day. He had not long been established in that way, however, until Captain Tichnor again sought his cooperation and persuaded him to return to Port Orford, where he was placed in charge of twelve men who were sent to survey a road from that point to the California trail which they expected to strike near the present site of Roseburg. They became lost after several days, however, and endeavored to retrace their steps, proceeding down a stream that proved to be the Coquille river. On the 14th of September they were attacked by the Indians at a bend in the river a little below the present townsite of Prosper, and after a desperate hand-to-hand fight, in which six of the party of twelve were massacred, Mr. Hedden succeeded in making his escape. Soon afterward he came across L. L. Williams, who had been badly wounded and was unable to travel. Although Mr. Hedden was a small man, weighing about one hundred and thirty or one hundred and thirty five pounds, and Mr. Williams weighed one hundred and seventy five or one hundred and eighty pounds, he refused to leave him and practically carried him on his back the entire distance from the Coquille river to the mouth of the Umpqua. They were forced to travel all night and hide in the brush during the day. It was a terrible journey for they had no food but snails, salmon berries and such things as they could find in the forest. They arrived at the mouth of the Umpqua almost exhausted. Death, indeed, was very near to them through the hardships of the travel and from lack of food. Their clothing, too, was almost gone, Mr. Hedden having on only a pair of buckskin trousers, while Mr. Williams possessed a shirt and no trousers. Arriving at the river they were discovered by a party and taken aboard Captain Elliott's boat where their wants were attended to. Thence they proceeded up the river to Scottsburg. This is but one instance showing the many hardships endured by the pioneer settlers who have laid the foundations for the great state of Oregon.

CYRUS HEDDEN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

After his recuperation Mr. Hedden worked at whatever he could get to do and the following spring went to San Francisco, where he purchased a full outfit of blacksmith tools and opened a shop in Scottsburg. From that time forward he prospered and gave his entire attention to his trade until 1870 when he established himself in the mercantile business in Scottsburg. The enterprise was founded for the benefit of his son John and upon the latter's return from business college the store was given over to him, who however as a compliment to his father conducted the business under the name of C. Hedden until his father's death. Cyrus Hedden was a very successful man, owing to his unfaltering diligence and capable management. He acquired five hundred acres of valuable land which he owned at the time of his death. He was a lifelong republican and served as county commissioner of Douglas county. He passed away March 29, 1911, and the county lost one of its most honored and valued citizens. His had been a well spent life, successful in the extreme, bringing to him not only success but also contributing to the welfare and upbuilding of the community.

John N. Hedden was reared at home and supplemented his public school education by a commercial course in the National Business College of Portland. From his seventh to his twentieth year he followed the river being engaged in steamboating on the Umpqua from Scottsburg to Gardiner. He was graduated from the business college when twenty-one years of age, and, returning home, he took over the business which his father had established with the intention of giving it to his son. He assumed formal possession on the 1st of March, 1877, and for the past thirty-five years has successfully conducted his store, making it one of the leading mercantile enterprises of this part of the state. His trade has grown year by year as the district has become more thickly settled, his enterprising spirit prompting him ever to carry an attractive line of goods while his sense of justice has been manifest in reasonable prices and straightforward dealing. In addition to mercantile interests Mr. Hedden, together with his family, owns two thousand acres of valuable farm land in Douglas county. He also conducts a general brokerage business, loans money, buys and sells farm lands and for years past has been identified not only with individual activities but with many important public projects. He is justly accounted one of the foremost business men of Douglas county.

It was on the 14th of March, 1886, that Mr. Hedden was united in marriage to Miss Fannie Henderer, a daughter of Charles G. and Emaline (Meador) Henderer, more extensive mention of whom is made in the sketch of their son, J. J. Henderer, on another page of this work. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hedden have been born five children, of whom four survive, Cyrus, Emma, Charles G. and June, all residing at home.

Mr. Hedden votes with the republican party but has never been an office seeker, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs. He is today one of the best known men of Douglas county and is held in the highest esteem by all with whom he has come in contact. His business policy is one which never requires disguise but on the contrary commends him to the confidence and good-will of all. While he has held many mortgages he has never foreclosed one, and has ever been willing to help those in need by extending time and giving them opportunity to redeem their property. His own sense of justice, fairness and consideration has brought him in large measure treatment of a similar character. He has recognized the possibilities of life and improved his opportunities, and, holding to high ideals of manhood, has ever received and merited the warm regard of his fellow townsmen.

BENJAMIN CLAYTON RICHARDSON is a son of a fine old Oregon pioneer and he himself has been a prominent force in the development of Baker and Malheur counties. He was for many years identified with mining in Idaho and Oregon and for almost a quarter of a century was one of the most progressive and scientific general farmers and stockraisers in this section of the state. He is now serving his second term as county judge, having been elected first in 1904 and reelected in 1908. During the course of his life in Oregon he has been an influential factor in the development of the state along various lines and is numbered today among the most substantial and enterprising citizens. He was born in Jefferson county, Missouri, on the 15th of January, 1843, and is a son of John and Brittina (Hutton) Richardson, the former a native of Missouri, of Scotch descent, and the latter a native of Alabama. They were married in Missouri in the '30s and made that state their home until 1843. On the 1st of March of that year the father crossed the state line, bound for Oregon, journeying across the plains as a member of the Jesse Applegate train. When he reached The Dalles his ox teams were unfit for further labor and he was obliged to leave them in that vicinity and make the rest of the journey by canoe, traveling down the Columbia river and up the Willamette to Oregon City, where he remained during the winter of 1843-44. In the spring he went up into Yamhill county and established a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres on the west side of the Willamette river, about seven miles from the present site of Dayton. This he improved and developed for many years, erecting upon his property a comfortable home. He resided upon his farm until 1860, in which year he moved to California. During the period of his first residence in Oregon he left that state only once. He was one of the pioneers to the California gold fields, making the journey in 1848. He there met C. M. Carter, a son of Thomas Carter, one of the founders of Portland, and formed a friendship which lasted for many years. C. M. Carter was one of the men who escaped from the massacre on American Bar. In 1860 John Richardson moved his family to California, where he purchased land and conducted a stage station, called Willow Springs, on the road from Yreka to Oregon. Here he was active for about five years, coming at the end of that time to eastern Oregon and later to Idaho. He engaged in mining for some time in the Boise basin, when that section was at the height of its prosperity. The estimated population at that time was from ten to fifteen thousand people. In the spring of 1868 he moved to the Eldorado mines in Baker county and there worked at the carpenter's trade, which he had learned in his youth. He later added mining to his activities and about the year 1885 went to Arizona, where he resided until his death, which occurred about 1886, when he was eighty-five years of age. His wife came to Vale about 1879 and resided there until her death, which occurred in 1883, when she was seventy-five years of age. She is buried in the cemetery of that city. The father of our subject was a very prominent and influential democrat and was active in the affairs of his community while Oregon was a territory. He was a member of the territorial legislature for several terms and took an active and leading part in the passage of many progressive measures. When he moved to California he gave up his political position in Oregon to some extent and never afterward was equally prominent. He and his wife became the parents of six children, three of whom have passed away, John C., Thomas and Margaret. The following are the surviving members of the family. Benjamin Clayton is the subject of this sketch. Madison, who was born in the Willamette valley, Oregon, in 1845, was married in Idaho, about 1866, to Savanah Cox, and to them were born several children but only three now survive, one son and two daughters, the latter both being married, while Henry, who is the eldest, is active in politics in Harney county and has served as county clerk for two terms. James, the youngest member in the family of Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson, was born in the Willamette valley in 1847. He married Helen Miller in Baker county, Oregon, in 1868, and they have two sons living, Edward and Robert. Nicholas Shrum, the grandfather of Mrs. James Richardson, was a member of the constitutional convention of the state of Oregon.

Benjamin C. Richardson attended the public schools of southern Oregon, near Ashland. In early manhood he went to the Cariboo mines in British Columbia where he spent one year and went from there to California, arriving in that state in the spring of 1864. He next located in the Boise basin, where he mined until the spring of 1868, when he returned to Oregon and worked at the same occupation in Baker county and near Eldorado until 1880. He spent some time in the Wood River quartz mines in Idaho, returning to Eldorado about 1883. In that year he established his residence in Vale and carried on general farming and stock-raising upon a fine and intelligently operated tract of land until 1901, when he abandoned agricultural pursuits in order to give his entire time to his political career. He was elected county judge of Malheur county and after serving efficiently and ably for a four year term was again elected in 1908 and is now serving in that capacity. He is a democrat in his political beliefs and the importance and weight of his influence are evidenced by the fact that he was elected by a large majority in a republican county. In his second campaign he had two opponents but received a larger vote than both of them combined. He has the distinction of being the only man ever reelected to the office of county judge. During the eight years of his service he has been identified with the construction of many of the roads in the county and in the school districts. The section in which Mr. Richardson is active is a large district, one hundred and eighty miles long by eighty miles wide, and very sparsely settled. This makes it more difficult to build the roads and bridges, which are becoming more necessary every day. Mr. Richardson has been instrumental in the erection of eighteen steel bridges, costing altogether about two hundred thousand dollars. He planned the erection of a fine stone courthouse at an expense of twenty-five thousand dollars. He has been guided in his investments of the public funds in his charge by keen business ability and discrimination along financial lines and his honesty and integrity have never been questioned during the entire period of his public service. He has always given his influence to movements of a constructive and expansive kind and has been identified with much important and progressive work. His career has been marked by high conscientiousness and a constant attention to his public obligations and has been guided by honesty, intelligence, integrity and industry—qualities which have made him not only a well known and successful politician but an ideal servant of the people.

On the 10th of April, 1869, Mr. Richardson was united in marriage, in Idaho, to Miss Mary Davis, a daughter of C. D. Davis, a prominent attorney of Eldorado. They became the parents of four sons, two of whom survive. James M., who was born in the spring of 1870, married May Garrison and lives in Vale. They became the parents of six children, five of whom are now living, two sons and three daughters. Benjamin M., whose birth occurred at Malheur City, Oregon, in 1875, wedded Eva Goodrich and is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Boise county, Idaho. They have two sons and two daughters.

Mr. Richardson has been prominent in agricultural and political circles of Malheur county for almost a quarter of a century and his name has been a synonym during the time for successful and comprehensive business methods and energy, honesty and straightforward dealing in the more public aspects of his life. During the course of his career, which has been marked by continuous labor in honorable causes and by well directed energy along lines of advancement, he has gained the true success which is embodied in the title which he has earned of an honest man.

C. W. CONGER. The state of Oregon today, prosperous in its rich and productive farms and in the uncounted number of sheep which range its pastures, owes its greatness to the sturdy men of pioneer times who wrested its productiveness out of the wilderness and battled for supremacy against marauding Indians. One of the greatest individual factors in this upbuilding is C. W. Conger who gave many years of his life to general farming and stock raising in Grant county and who is now identified with one of the leading mercantile establishments in Long Creek. Mr. Conger is a native of Jefferson county, Iowa, where his birth occurred in December, 1851. He is a son of Enoch and Amelia (Hall) Conger, natives of Indiana. His father left the state in which he was born and went to Iowa where he married and resided for one year. In 1852 he came across the plains to Oregon, making the long journey with ox teams. The party with which he traveled had no trouble with the Indians but met with other hardships and perils incident to the undeveloped state of the roads and the crude conditions of pioneer travel. They lost their stock at the Des Chutes river through poisoning from weeds and from that point were compelled to make the journey with their blankets and provisions packed upon their backs. The members of the caravan located at Wapato Lake where they remained only a short time and later located at Pleasant Hill, twelve miles from Eugene, Oregon, and here Mr. Conger's father was successful as a farmer until 1881. In that year he came to Long Creek, Grant county, and remained until his death in 1885 at the age of seventy-five years.

C. W. Conger is one of a family of thirteen children born to his parents. He came to Oregon with his father and mother in 1852 and thus is numbered among the earliest pioneers of the state. He spent his boyhood at Pleasant Hill and received his education in the district schools. After a number of changes of residence he came with his father to Long Creek and remained in that vicinity until 1869 when he went to Pilot Rock near Pendleton where he remained for five years. At the end of that time he returned to Long Creek, took up a homestead and preemption claim five miles from the city on Pass creek and was successful and prosperous as a rancher and stock-raiser for a number of years. He improved his holdings along scientifically progressive lines and was constantly adding to his property. At the time he disposed of his property, in 1906, he was the owner of two thousand acres of the finest and most productive land in Oregon, most of which was acquired by purchase. He ran stock, sheep, horses and cattle and added at various times as many as five hundred head to his herd. He kept constantly from six to eight thousand sheep and was one of the most extensive dealers in high-grade stock in the state of Oregon. His agricultural career in its early days was identified with some of the most stirring and thrilling events in the history of the section in which he located. During the Indian war in 1878 Mr. Conger and all the other settlers in the vicinity, numbering about fifty in all, joined in the building of a fort to protect their lives and what property they could move. They spent most of their time in the fort and the Indians ran off all Mr. Conger's stock and those portions of his property which they could not take with them they burned, leaving him only his real estate with which to begin his new life. The Indians kept up a constant fusillade during the nights but never really attacked the fort. Mr. Conger recovered from this financial blow and when he definitely abandoned agriculture and stock-raising had become an influential factor in the development of the district in which he lives. In 1906 he disposed of his entire property and came to Long Creek where he engaged in the mercantile business with which he had been identified a short time in California. He conducted a flourishing establishment until 1910 when his entire property was destroyed by fire and he was obliged to move to his present location where he is carrying on a business of the same kind, specializing in the handling of farm implements. His business career is distinguished by the same energy and far-sightedness which marked his ranching activities and has brought him a gratifying degree of success. Mr. Conger has, besides his business property in the city, a five hundred acre ranch adjoining the town limits which he has devoted mostly to pasture land. He is a successful and energetic man, highly esteemed and respected in the community in which he resides and a leader in all projects for municipal improvement. He is noted for a rare and unusual quality of public spirit and is loyally and actively interested in public affairs. In 1910 an organization was formed for the purpose of dividing Grant county into two sections and instituting a new county seat. Mr. Conger was the leader and president of the body of men who formed this project and was an individual force in promoting the issue. Their struggle however, was unsuccessful, although it paved the way for future efforts along this line. The people of Grant county are now obliged to go fifty miles over three mountain divides in order to reach Canyon City, which is the county seat. The organization of which Mr. Conger was the president and promoter had for its object the division of this large section of land into two counties of convenient size.

In 1876 Mr. Conger married Miss Scroggins, who came to Oregon in 1875 from Arkansas, and who died in 1889 leaving five children: Mrs. D. Kidd of Portland, Oregon; J. M., a successful rancher of Long Creek; Thomas L., also a resident of that section of Oregon; and Grover and Rosetta. Mr. Conger's second marriage was with Miss Alice Barr, a native of Kansas who passed away in 1899, leaving one child, Alma. In the following year Mr. Conger was again wedded. His present wife was in her maidenhood Miss Sarah E. Kemper of California.

Mr. Conger is always loyally interested in local affairs. He is a blue lodge Mason and past master of that organization, having been through all the chairs. He is also affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and an active worker in that organization. He has that talent for organization and management which is a necessary factor where constructive work is to be done. He has set himself a high standard of personal honor and during the many years of his life in Oregon has never deviated from his code.

BINDER BROTHERS. The farm of nearly fourteen hundred acres belonging to Charles and Frank W. Binder is known throughout Douglas county as one of the most efficiently operated and productive properties in the Umpqua valley. It constitutes their father's original tract of land which he purchased on his first settlement in Oregon and under the capable direction of his two sons it is rapidly evolving into one of the model properties of the valley. The elder of the two brothers is Charles Binder, who was born in Montgomery county, Iowa, on the 29th of April, 1863. He is a son of Anthony and Hannah (Grabers) Binder, the former a native of France and the latter of Germany. The father came to the United States when he was a young man and the mother crossed the Atlantic when she was fifteen or sixteen years of age. She was accompanied by her brother and settled in Lee county, Iowa, where her marriage occurred. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Binder located in Montgomery county, Iowa, where the former followed his occupation of a stone mason. He eventually bought a small farm in the district and established his wife upon this property while he worked for some years at his trade. In 1882 he came west to Oregon, locating in the Umpqua valley, Douglas county, two miles west of Elkton. Here he bought the Daniel Stearns ranch, comprising twelve hundred and forty-two acres of fertile and productive land, and on this he lived and cultivated the soil until his death, on January 17, 1911, when he was eighty-three years of age. His wife died in December, 1904, when she was sixty-one years old. The elder Mr. Binder was a democrat in the early days of his American residence but later affiliated with the republican party. He owned at the time of his death thirteen hundred and eighty-seven acres. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Binder were the parents of seven children, all of whom are married with the exception of Frank. They are: John, who married Bessie Culy and lives in Elkton, Oregon, where he owns a farm, and they have three children; Charles; Mary, who is the wife of W. R. Hart, who is interested in silver mining claims in Canada, and they have two sons; George, deceased; Joseph, deceased; Amelia, who married W. J. Brown, a restaurant man of North Bend; and Frank.

MR. AND MRS. ANTHONY FINDLE

NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Charles Binder was reared at home and was educated in the public schools of Montgomery county, Iowa. He early became acquainted with the details of agriculture by assisting his father in the operation of his large ranch and attending to the various duties incident to this line of activity. On reaching manhood he remained at home and in conjunction with his father carried on general farming and stock-raising for a number of years. When Anthony Binder passed away his son Charles joined with his brother Frank and purchased the home ranch. Their copartnership has existed since that time and has been productive of excellent results. They work in harmony and have during the years of their association brought the land to the highest possible state of cultivation. They have improved the quality of the soil by scientific fertilization, built fences, barns and outbuildings and have now one of the most attractive farming properties in Douglas county.

On the 8th of June, 1899, Charles Binder was united in marriage to Miss Mabel Haines, a daughter of Alfred Benton Haines, one of the pioneer settlers of Douglas county. Upon his arrival in Oregon Mr. Haines located one mile up the Umpqua river from Elkton and was prominent for many years in agricultural pursuits. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Binder have been born four children, Lena H., George A., Carl B. and Mary E. Mr. Binder is a republican in political affiliations but does not take an active part in public affairs and has never sought office. His wife affiliates with the Methodist Episcopal church.

Charles Binder is aided in his agriculture by the expert knowledge and scientific attainment along this line of his brother, Frank W. Binder, who is a native son of Oregon. He was born in Douglas county, on November 15, 1882, and was reared upon the home farm. He acquired his education in the public schools and supplemented this by a course in business college. His entire life has been devoted to agriculture. His boyhood was spent in the minor duties upon his father's ranch and on reaching manhood he remained at home in order to assist in the development and improvement of the extensive enterprise. When his father died he joined with his brother Charles in the purchase of the home farm and is now interested in this project and is carrying on agricultural pursuits along modern and scientific lines. He is one of the progressive men of the Umpqua valley and has contributed to a great extent to its progress and development. He and his brother are recognized as factors in the growth of this section. Individually each is enterprising and public-spirited, interested in the development of Douglas county and eager to promote it. Their united efforts have resulted in a productive, fertile and efficiently managed farm where each acre is productive to its highest extent, a fact which forms the basis of their agricultural economies.

ROBERT GEORGE, a farmer of Baker county and one of its oldest settlers, was born in Linn county, Missouri about 1864. His father, Augustus S. George, born in Kentucky, about 1820, is of Irish descent and is ninety two years of age, being probably the oldest man in Baker county, with the exception of William C. Hindman. From his old home in Missouri he crossed the plains to Oregon with his family in 1865, traveling with a train of more than sixty wagons. His was the only family to locate and remain in Baker county, where he secured a farm, and has continuously made his home since, being numbered among its highly respected, honored and upright citizens. He never cared for nor sought public office, devoting his time to business interests and his family. When crossing the plains the party had to ford the Platte river and in deep water the family Bible containing all genealogical records became so soaked with water as to destroy it. Soon after coming to Baker county Mrs. George procured another Bible and from memory entered the records of the family but later the book was destroyed by fire. Mrs. George passed away in March, 1909. After going to the Powder river valley Mr. George met the Perkins's, Osborns, Olivers, Isons and Chandlers who were missionaries and came to his camp to see him. He too had come for missionary purposes and these people prevailed upon him to locate in the Powder river valley, where he has since remained. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Alice Griffin, was a native of Virginia. They were married in Columbia, Missouri about 1840 or 1847. Both came of prominent farming families who were slave owners and lost all of their slaves at the time of the Civil war.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus S. George had six sons and three daughters. The eldest, William, passed away some years ago and James, the second son, is also deceased. Mary A., in 1866, when about sixteen years of age, became the wife of Hiram A. Kinnisson, one of the prominent farmers and stock-raisers of Baker county, who prided himself upon owning and raising the finest horses in the district. He also handled high-grade cattle and was one of the wealthiest stock-raisers of his section. He was born in Missouri and at his death, on the 17th of November, 1908, left a good estate to his family, including his wife, son and daughter. The daughter Anna E. is the wife of George H. Foster, one of the prominent real-estate and insurance men of Baker county, and lives in the city of Baker. The son, Henry Kinnisson, connected with the White Pine Lumber Company of Baker, married Miss Galbraith and they have a son and two daughters. The fourth member of the George family, Roland, is deceased. Sarah E. George became the wife of Fred Cole, of Haines, Oregon, and after his death married Mr. Richmond, her home now being in the vicinity of Haines. She has three sons and two daughters. Robert George is our subject. David is engaged in farming near Haines, Oregon. Roxie is the deceased wife of Michael McCormack and had three sons and a daughter. Charles, the youngest of the family, is married and has a son and daughter. He lives above Haines on the Richmond ranch and his father, Augustus S. George, resides with him.

Robert George was but two years of age when the family crossed the plains to the northwest and in the intervening years to the present time has remained a resident of Baker county. He was reared to the occupation of farming and has made it his life work. He has also carried on stock-raising and teaming and has led a busy and useful life. He married Miss Ella Ingram and they are the parents of three daughters, the eldest of whom is married, and the others are attending school in Haines. Some years ago Robert George joined the Methodist Episcopal church. He has followed in the political footsteps of his father, giving his support to the democratic party. He belongs to a family who though quiet and unassuming are of that class which contribute to the real stability and upbuilding of a community.

WILLIAM M. CARTER. The occupation of farming numbers among its followers some of the most intelligent, straightforward and prosperous men of Grant county, Oregon. One of the best known among these is William M. Carter, a man whose scientific cultivation of one thousand acres of land in this district amounts almost to a distinct gift to the advancement of the commonwealth. Mr. Carter was born in Polk county, Tennessee, on the 1st of October, 1844, and is a son of William and Barthinia (Wright) Carter, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of Tennessee. The father moved into the state where his son was born and married there. In 1851 he took up his residence in Arkansas where he followed farming with much success.

William Carter is the eldest of four children born to his parents. He remained at home until he was twenty years of age and received his education in the public schools of Arkansas. On February 2, 1864, he enlisted in Company G, Fourth Arkansas Volunteer Infantry under Captain Edson S. Bastius. He remained in the state from which he enlisted and in Missouri and was present at many of the important skirmishes of the Civil war and witnessed the capture of Fagan's Brigade of Price's army. All during his term of service Mr. Carter's company was never compelled to retreat. During the first few months of his enlistment he served under General Steel and his last commander was General Reynolds. On June 30, 1865, he was honorably discharged at Little Rock, Arkansas. He remained in that state until 1875 in which year he established his residence in Oregon. He was among the earliest pioneers in this section of the country and his agricultural career here dates from the time of government preemption claims. He made the journey from Arkansas to Canyon City with a large pioneer caravan of wagons drawn by mule teams. He remained on his original settlement until 1878 in which year he took up a homestead claim three miles above Long Creek city and began its improvement and cultivation. During the years he has been connected with agricultural pursuits in Oregon Mr. Carter has made a continual advance in progressive and scientific methods of farming. He has constantly added to his holdings until he now owns over one thousand acres which he devotes principally to pasture land in order to accommodate his large herd of high-grade cattle, his thoroughbred horses, and his many mules. He has made the raising of these last named animals an important branch of his enterprise and is numbered throughout the county as an expert in this line of activity.

In 1867 Mr. Carter was united in marriage to Miss Eliza Hudson, a daughter of Andrew Hudson of Arkansas. To this union were born three children: Benjamin, who now resides in Oklahoma; Sarah; and James. Mrs. Carter passed away in 1871 and two years later Mr. Carter was again married. His second wife was in her maidenhood Miss Pernica Blackwell, whose father was a prominent resident of Texas and of whom more extended mention is made on another page in this work. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have ten children: Mary, who married C. R. Davis of Ritter, Oregon; M. Sloan, of Pendleton, Oregon; S. B., who follows ranching; Charles C., of Idaho; Carrie, now Mrs. M. Scroggins; John L., who is assisting his father with the work of the home farm; William M.; Della, now Mrs. Penniar of Heppner, Oregon; Mrs. Nellie Woodson; and Esther.

Mr. Carter, although he never seeks public office, has served for a number of years as a member of the school board. He takes an active part in public affairs and is known as a man who can be relied upon to aid earnest and well directed movements looking to the public welfare. Scientific and intelligent understanding of the details of agriculture as it is influenced by the conditions peculiar to the state of Oregon has been an important factor in his success. He devotes a large portion of his time to his farming activities and has attained that prosperity inseparable from intelligent industry.

WILLIAM CHAMBERLAIN. Farming interests in the vicinity of Unity, Oregon, find a practical and progressive representative in William Chamberlain, whose holdings are extensive, comprising nine hundred and sixty acres. Upon some of his land excellent improvements have been made and he has contributed largely to the agricultural development and improvement of his part of the state. He was born in Scotland county, Missouri, February 25, 1865, his parents being Joseph and Susan (Ettleman) Chamberlain. The father was born in Leicestershire, England and traces his ancestry back to the Castle Doniton family which claims to have been established in England about the time of William the Conquerer. Joseph Chamberlain crossed the Atlantic to the United States and was married in Illinois. There were two sons and five daughters born of that union. Jane, the eldest, became the wife of John Solard, and they had two sons and a daughter. After the death of Mr. Solard, his widow married Mr. Cantrell and now lives at Lime in Baker county, Oregon. Emily is the widow of M. L. Huff, formerly of Montrose, Iowa, who served for three years as a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war. They had seven daughters and one son. Mr. Huff removed with his family from Iowa to Memphis, Missouri, and a number of years later came to Baker county, Oregon, where he died about 1911, leaving a good farm now owned and occupied by his widow. George married Miss Black and lives in Nebraska. Amanda married Mr. Carpenter of Marysville, Missouri, and they have several children. Hattie is the wife of Mr. Whalen of Memphis, Missouri, and lives in Colorado. She has one son and one daughter. Mattie is married and lives in Marysville, Missouri. William Chamberlain is the youngest of the family. The father was a farmer by occupation and about 1882 journeyed westward by rail to San Francisco and thence came up the Pacific coast and the Columbia river to Lyle, a town situated on the Columbia in Washington. He afterward located a homestead on the Klickitat river, improving that place and there reared his family, living thereon until about 1900 when death claimed him at the age of eighty years. His widow survives him and is a resident of Lee county, Iowa.

William Chamberlain was educated in Scotland county, Missouri, and Klickitat county, Washington, attending both public and pay schools. He took up farming and cultivated rented land for about five years in his native county. He worked as a farm hand in Washington for about a year after which he came to Baker county and was employed on Burnt river for three years. During that period he carefully saved his earnings and at length purchased what is known as the Lancaster farm in the Unity district, comprising one hundred and sixty acres of land worth seventy-five dollars per acre. There are first-class waterways on this property and the land is highly improved. He now has other land including one hundred and sixty acres adjoining the Lancaster farm one hundred and sixty acres of what is known as the Peyton place, one hundred and sixty acres of the Ollie Baisley farm and one hundred and sixty acres of the Hardman farm, one half mile from Unity. Recent purchase made him the possessor of one hundred and sixty acres of the Jim Elms place. He has thus eight hundred acres of land in one tract and altogether possesses nine hundred and sixty acres of which there are not more than from forty to sixty acres which are not adapted to farming purposes. He raises hay and grain and all his land is enclosed by fencing excepting about forty acres. He has some buildings upon each place, and his property is worth for grazing and farming, with its water privileges, from twenty-five to thirty dollars per acre. The Lancaster place, valued at seventy five dollars per acre, is splendidly improved.

Mr. Chamberlain was married on Christmas eve of 1891, at Bridgeport, Oregon, to Miss Elma Laura Lancaster, a daughter of Harvey and Barbara Ann (Stout) Lancaster. Her parents were married in Iowa, removed to Nevada, and after living there for several years came to Baker county, Oregon, where the father engaged in farming and stock-raising. They had one son and three daughters, Homer, Elma Laura, Ida and Lilly. Ida married twice, being now the wife of Boyd Elliott of Audrey, Baker county. Lilly is the wife of Henry Yeager and has one son and four daughters. Mr. Chamberlain was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife in October 1910.

Politically William Chamberlain is a democrat but without desire for the honors or emoluments of public office. He has worked hard, his labors have brought him results, his energy has overcome difficulties and obstacles and he is reaping the benefits of unfaltering industry.

L. J. LEWIS, who owns a half interest in the Baker City Fuel Company of which he is the manager, has been identified with the commercial interests of Baker City for more than twenty years. His birth occurred in Wales on the 14th of October 1871, and he is a son of John Lewis who passed his entire life in the old country. After the father's death the mother decided to come to America so in 1891 she took passage for the United States, locating in Utah where she was living at the time of her death.

L. J. Lewis remained at home with his mother until he was eighteen years of age and was given the advantages of a common school education, after which he pursued a commercial course thus qualifying himself for a business career. His first position was in a sawmill in this city, but he subsequently withdrew from this connection and became identified with the Baker City Fuel Company, of which he now owns one-half the stock and is manager. This is one of the well established and thriving enterprises of the city and its business is constantly growing in volume, its annual receipts showing a marked increase from year to year.

Mr. Lewis was married in 1903 to Miss Jessie Mays, a daughter of Charles and Sarah Mays, and a native of Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have been born four children, as follows: one who died in infancy; Constance E.; Virgil R.; and Maxine M. They have adopted two children, Troy E. and Nola E. King.

In religious faith Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are Latter Day Saints and fraternally the former is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, Woodmen of the World and the Improved Order of Red Men. The political views of Mr. Lewis coincide with the principles of the republican party, for whose candidates he casts his ballot, but he has never been an aspirant to public honors or the emoluments of office.

ANDREW J. SWEARINGEN. There is living in Drain, Douglas county, Oregon, a hale, active and kindly old man nearing the eightieth year of his eventful life who has seen the state develop from a frontier wilderness to its present prosperous condition and whose energies have been a constructive feature in the remarkable evolution. Andrew J. Swearingen was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, on September 26, 1833, and is a son of Henry and Mary (Johnson) Swearingen, both natives of Holland. The parents came to the United States at different periods and settled in Jefferson county, Ohio, where their marriage occurred. In 1845 they moved to Nodaway county, Missouri, where the father followed farming for a number of years. He was subsequently one of a band of gold seekers who crossed the plains to the California fields in 1849. In 1850 on his return trip he died while crossing the plains. His wife passed away in Nodaway county, Missouri.

Andrew J. Swearingen was reared at home and acquired his education in a log schoolhouse in Missouri. In 1852 he crossed the plains in a wagon train commanded by Captain Benjamin Holt, and settled in Oregon in the same year among its earliest settlers. He took part in the Rogue River Indian war which continued from 1855 until 1856 and did able and competent service in the defense of his state. He settled in the Rogue river valley after a short period spent in Marysville, which is now Corvallis, and worked for a short time in the mines at Althouse creek. He took up sawmilling and worked at this trade until the fall of 1853, when he returned to the Willamette valley and worked at the same line of occupation in a mill nine miles south of Corvallis. In March, 1854, he went to Coos bay but remained only a month, after which he came to Douglas county where he took up a donation claim in the Tin Pot valley, where he located and lived for fifty-five years, being continuously engaged in agriculture during that time. During this period his activities were constructive features in the development of the section. He brought his farm to a high state of cultivation and operated his interests along the most progressive lines. He gave practically his entire life in Oregon to making an extensive section of this territory more fertile and productive and won his reward in success for himself and the general good he did in the development of agricultural interests.

In 1859 Mr. Swearingen was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Poland, of Tin Pot valley, a daughter of Marion and Elizabeth (Butts) Poland. Her father died in Indiana and her mother later married Solomon Ensley, with whom she came to Oregon in 1853, locating in the Tin Pot valley. To Mr. and Mrs. Swearingen were born thirteen children, seven of whom are still living: Henry, who is a farmer residing near Drain, Oregon; William, who engages in agriculture in the same section; Perry, who is cultivating the soil near Elkton, Oregon; John, who is the owner of a fine farm in the Tin Pot valley; Ora, engaged in farming near Drain; Bertram, who is a stage driver with headquarters at Elkton; and Rosa Belle, the wife of Jack Goutcher, of Portland, Oregon. Mrs. Andrew J. Swearingen passed away in 1883. His political affiliations are with the democratic party but he has never sought public office. He is one of the well known pioneers of this state and his life has been connected closely with a period of evolution which carried with it the natural rough and crude conditions that are always present in the early stages of a developing community. The early frontier life with its hardships, perils and elemental standards, has added to his virility and manliness without detracting from his constant gentleness and courtesy.

WILLIAM CALDWELL has passed the greater part of his life in Baker City, where he is successfully engaged in the hardware and implement business. He is one of Oregon's native sons, his birth having occurred in Eugene on the 8th of April, 1856. His father, S. A. Caldwell, was born in New Hampshire on the 30th of October, 1826, and there he was reared and educated and learned the tinsmith's trade. When a young man of twenty-three years, together with thirty others he purchased a sailing vessel and they embarked for California. Several months were consumed in making the trip around the Horn, and they finally reached their destination in 1849. He remained in California for five years, when he went to Eugene, Oregon, and engaged in the hardware business. His entire time and attention was devoted to the development of this enterprise for four or five years, and during that period he became very much interested in mining, influencing him to sell his store. He then went to Auburn and there engaged in placer mining with very good success for ten years. Disposing of his claims he returned to Eugene and engaged in the sheep business, continuing to follow this occupation until he withdrew from active life when he removed to Baker City and lived retired until his death in 1910. Mr. Caldwell was married twice. His first union was with Mary Hampton, the mother of our subject, who was born and reared in Missouri and passed away many years ago in the vicinity of Eugene. The father subsequently married again and to him and his second wife there was born one daughter, Maude. There was another son born to Mr. Caldwell and his first wife, but he died in early infancy.

A. L. SWEARINGEN

William Caldwell was still in his early boyhood when he accompanied his father on his removal to Baker City. Here he attended public school and when his student days were terminated at the age of fifteen years he learned the tinner's trade, which he followed in Baker City for thirty years. In 1901, he engaged in business for himself and opened a hardware and implement store in this city, in connection with which he maintained a tinsmith and plumbing department. Later he disposed of the latter and now gives his entire attention to the development of his hardware and implement business, his efforts in this connection meeting with a good degree of success. He is enterprising and industrious and conducts his business in strict accordance with modern commercial methods, following a policy that entitles him to the confidence of all who accord him their patronage. He keeps a carefully selected and well assorted stock of shelf and heavy hardware, and carries a full line of farming implements and machines, all of which he offers at reasonable prices.

In this city on the 4th of July, 1876, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Caldwell and Miss Kate M. Carter, a native of Missouri and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Carter, both of whom are deceased. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell, all of whom have passed away.

Mr. Caldwell belongs to the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World. He is also an enthusiastic member of the Commercial Club. His political indorsement is given to the candidates of the republican party, whose policy he deems best adapted to subserve the highest interests of the public. Through his unremitting diligence and activity, Mr. Caldwell has met with success in the development of his interests, in the conduct of which he has followed a policy that has won him the esteem and respect of his fellow townsmen.

FREDERICK W. CUPPER. Business interests of Grant county find a worthy representative in Frederick W. Cupper who is conducting a general store in Monument and by his upright and honorable career has given evidence of his high commercial qualifications. Mr. Cupper is of English origin and was born in Essex, September, 1871. His grandfather, Adam Cupper, came from a well educated line of English landed gentry. The family was founded in America by the parents of our subject, Harry and Cordelia (Capen) Cupper, who came to the United States in 1857 and went immediately to California. Then they came northward and settled in the Rogue River valley where they spent the first winter and subsequently spent one year in Morrow county, later taking up their residence in the John Day valley. They were compelled almost immediately to return to Heppner, Oregon, on account of the Indian troubles but when these had subsided they returned to the north fork of the John Day river, six miles below Monument, where the father took up a preemption claim which he has operated and improved since that time. He does a large stock-raising business, owning at present from six to eight thousand sheep which he pastures on his three thousand acres of land. Another branch of his enterprise is breeding and raising thoroughbred horses. He has imported some high-class stock from England and numbers among his herd one dam named Chaff and two sires of the Suffolk Punch breed named Contract and Commander. They are heavy draft horses of a sorrel color and form a valuable addition to his high-grade herd. The elder Mr. Cupper has now practically retired but is giving a general supervision to his extensive interests. He and his wife became the parents of seven children: Harry, deceased; Frederick W., the subject of this sketch; Ethel, who is Mrs. Oscar Schaffer, of Wall Creek, Grant county, Oregon; one child who died in infancy; Nora, who has passed away; Percy, who is a graduate of the Oregon State University and who has been admitted to the bar but is now assistant state engineer with headquarters at Salem; and Morton, who is in active management of the home ranch and who owns three or four hundred head of stock.

Frederick W. Cupper came to America with his parents when he was still a child and was educated in the district schools of John Day valley. He spent his boyhood in this section and at an early age became acquainted with the details of general agriculture and stock-raising as it is carried on under Oregon conditions. He remained with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age and was employed upon the ranch as assistant to his father. After two years he went to Monument where he operated a general store for eighteen months and then activity gave a definite bent to his ambition. He subsequently sold out his holdings and removed upon a ranch six miles below Monument, later trading this property to his father for a productive tract on Wall creek sixteen miles from Monument, which he operated and developed with much success, adding four hundred acres to his holdings. He remained upon this property for five years when he sold out and bought a store belonging to F. H. Anderson at Monument and this enterprise he has since conducted with constantly increasing success. It is one of the largest mercantile enterprises in Grant county and owes its flourishing condition to the expert business management and progressive commercial ideas of Mr. Cupper. The store has a floor space of forty by one hundred and ten feet and its stock is large and varied. Mr. Cupper deals in all kinds of general merchandise and makes a specialty of handling agricultural implements. He never allows any of his lines to become out-of-date and keeps his goods attractively arranged. His patronage has steadily increased and doubled the first year after his identification with the mercantile business. Mr. Cupper is progressive and modern in all his ideas and his enterprise has all of the aspect of a modern and efficiently managed store.

On January 1, 1901, Mr. Cupper was united in marriage to Miss Laura May Gardner of Douglas county, Oregon, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gardner. Mrs. Cupper's father was one of the earliest pioneers in the settlement of Douglas county. His wife had been engaged in teaching before her marriage and had made a great success of this line of work. Mr. and Mrs. Cupper have three children, Vera, Vernon and Wayne, all of whom are attending school.

Mr. Cupper has for many years been active in public affairs. He is an upright and honorable business man, keenly alive to the interests of his patrons. He has attained a reputation throughout the city and county for thorough efficiency along mercantile lines and for perfect honesty and fair dealing. His attractive and flourishing store is fair evidence of his prosperity.

ARTHUR S. JANES. For over thirty-five years Arthur S. Janes has been prominently connected with cattle-raising in Umatilla county and has become one of the important men in this line of business in the district. His fine ranch of four hundred and eighty acres is located five miles up the main road from Stanley creek and its excellent condition is sufficient proof of the prosperity of its owner and the careful and progressive methods by which he attained it. Mr. Janes was born in Du Page county, Illinois, December 16, 1868, and is a son of Albert S. and Charlotte B. (Powers) Janes. For a number of years his father was prominent in the political life of Du Page county, having served for twenty years as county surveyor. He also did able and effective work as judge of the county court and was serving in this capacity at the time of his death in 1882.

Arthur S. Janes was reared at home and acquired his education in the public schools of Du Page county. He remained in Illinois until 1886 and then, accompanied by his brother, Albert B. Janes, he came to Oregon and located on Stanley creek, in Umatilla county, where he engaged in the cattle business, in which he has been active and successful since that time. He owns four hundred and eighty acres of land, devoted almost entirely to cattle-raising. His success came swiftly, because he was quick to recognize the opportunities which Oregon offered to him and to use his advantages in a practical way. The story of his career has in it nothing unusual or spectacular. It is a record of steady, concentrated and practically efficient work in one of the important industries of the state and of final attainment of prosperity and success. However, cattle-raising has made a distinct advance in methods because of his years of study and activity along this line, and his own position has become more substantial and prominent, so that the total of results of his work is by no means inconspicuous.

WYATT A. POOLE, who for a long period was identified with farming interests on the Pacific coast, his last years being spent in Clatsop county, Oregon, was born in Indiana in 1832, his parents being Micajah and Rebecca (Ralston) Poole, the former a native of Virginia, and the latter of English parentage. The parents were married in Indiana, where they lived for six years, after which they removed to Iowa, where the father secured a tract of land and carried on general farming until his death. In early manhood he had learned blacksmithing and had followed that trade for some time but gave it up as he regarded agricultural pursuits as a better means of gaining a livelihood. He passed away in 1869 and for six years was survived by his wife, who died in 1875. They had the following children: Wyatt A., of this review; William, who lives in Muscatine county, Iowa; Milburn, who married Elizabeth Poole of West Liberty, Iowa, and is deceased; Ewalt, who has also passed away; Joseph, a resident of Primrose, Iowa; McDonald M., who is living in the state of Washington; Benton, a resident of Primrose; Adeline, the wife of Thomas Walker, of Oklahoma; and Susan J., deceased.

Wyatt A. Poole spent his youthful days upon his father's farm, dividing his time between the work of the fields and the acquirement of an education in the public schools. Following his marriage he took up farming as a life work.

It was on the 8th of May, 1867, that he wedded Miss Elizabeth Hays, who was born in Indiana, June 23, 1844, and is a daughter of Michael and Matilda Hays, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ohio. Her father was a farmer and after his marriage removed with his family to Indiana, where he lived for eight years before going to Iowa in 1851. They were residents of that state until the mother's death, which occurred in 1855. Twenty years later the father took up his abode in California, where he made his home until called to his final rest in 1895. He entered business circles as a millwright, learned the trade in early manhood and followed it for a long period of time, although later his attention was given to the cultivation of the soil. He had eight children: Mahlon T., Michael and Martin, all deceased; Mrs. Poole; Malinda J., the wife of John Blakemore, of California; Marion, who died in childhood; Mary, the wife of John Galaher, of Reno, Nevada; and one who died in infancy.

Following his marriage Wyatt A. Poole purchased a farm near Loyalton, Sierra county, California, where he engaged in cultivating the soil until 1882. He then sold out and removed to Humboldt county, where he operated a dairy farm and in 1907 he arrived in Clatsop county, Oregon, where he resided until his death, which occurred in June of that year. His industry and well directed enterprise during an active business life enabled him to leave his family in comfortable circumstances.

To Mr. and Mrs. Poole were born six children: Helen A., the wife of Frank Hurlbutt, a resident of Clatsop, Oregon; Frank W. and Fred B., who have attended the high school and are now at home; Ralston M., who was a high school student and is now married and lives in California; Robert, who is married and makes his home in Clatsop county; and Mary A., who is with her mother. Mr. Poole voted with the republican party but was never an office seeker. He did not, however, neglect the duties of citizenship but exercised his influence for all measures and movements which he deemed of public benefit. He held membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in Loyalton, California, and his religious faith was that of the Methodist Episcopal church. He lived an upright life and his many good qualities caused him to gain a firm hold upon the regard of his fellow townsmen. Thus his loss was a matter of deep regret not only to his immediate family but also to many friends. Mrs. Poole and the family are all members of the Baptist church and they are widely and favorably known in this community, which has now been their home for more than five years.

JASON PORTER FRIZZELL, who is treasurer and general manager of the City View Cemetery Association, was born near Springfield, Missouri, August 6, 1848, his parents being Reese Porter and Lilly (Porter) Frizzell. The parents crossed the plains in 1852 and the father passed away on the way to Willamette valley. The mother settled at McCoy, Polk county, where she took up one hundred and sixty acres of land, and her death occurred there in 1882. To their union six children were born.

Jason P. Frizzell acquired his early education in the district schools near his mother's farm. He resided at home until 1869, when he purchased three hundred and twenty acres near Perrydale, Polk county, where he entered upon agricultural pursuits independently. He made this property his home for twenty years. At the end of that time he removed to Salem and two years later disposed of his property. The following year he organized the City View Cemetery Association, he and his two daughters holding the entire stock. He was made treasurer and general manager and has since served in that capacity. In whatever line of work he engages he exhibits a determination to succeed which is in a large degree responsible for the prosperity he is now enjoying.

In 1873 Mr. Frizzell was married to Miss Louisa Baskett, a daughter of J. G. Baskett of Rickreall, Polk county. To their union two daughters were born. Edith the elder, is the wife of Lloyd Reynolds, an orchardist of Marion county. She is president of the City View Cemetery Association. Ethel, the younger, who is married to Otto Hedrick, is secretary of the cemetery association. Mr. Hedrick is engaged in the truck and dray business in Salem. Mrs. Frizzell's death occurred in 1882, and in 1892 Mr. Frizzell was married to Miss Alice McFadden, of Salem. They are rearing an adopted son, Ronald Jefferson.

Mr. Frizzell holds membership in Salem Lodge, No. 4, A. F. & A. M.; Multnomah Chapter, No. 1, R. A. M.; De Molay Commandery, No. 5, K. T.; and Al Kader Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Portland. He is one of the well known and respected citizens of Salem and during his residence in this city has made many friends who regard him as a man who is governed by lofty principles and who never neglects his opportunities nor fails to recognize his obligations, and those with whom he comes in contact entertain for him warm regard.

PATRICK MURPHY is numbered among the progressive and enterprising general farmers in Coles valley, where he is operating a fine tract of two hundred and forty acres of land and gaining substantial success as the result of his industry and well directed activity. He has been thus engaged since 1869, having taken up general agricultural pursuits after many eventful years spent on the seas and in extended traveling through many foreign countries. He was born in County Waterford, Ireland, March 21, 1846, and is a son of Michael and Margaret (Brown) Murphy, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of Scotland. They came to the United States in 1856, settling near Dedham, Massachusetts, where the father followed the trade of a stone mason and speculated in real estate and farm lands. He died in that city and there his wife's death also occurred.

Patrick Murphy was ten years of age when he came to America. He lived with his parents in Dedham, Massachusetts, for two years and at the end of that time ran away from home and shipped aboard a man of war sailing to Buenos Ayres and then to Chili and thence to Australia upon a merchant vessel. He returned to Buenos Ayres where he went aboard another American man of war bound for New York. When he reached home he enlisted for three years in the United States navy, serving under Admiral Dahlgreen in the Southern Atlantic Blockading Squadron. He was mustered out at the close of the war and after his discharge returned to his native country, spending nine months in travel through Ireland, England and Scotland. When he came back to America he traveled extensively for two years, covering in his journey thirty-three states. In 1869 he came to Oregon, locating in Coles valley where he purchased a farm of two hundred and forty acres wherein he has since resided. Over forty years devoted to agricultural pursuits have gained him a well deserved success and made his residence one of the finest in the district.

In 1881 Mr. Murphy was united in marriage to Mrs. Malinda Churchill, who was in her maidenhood Miss Malinda Hibbard. They became the parents of seven children, four of whom are still living: Henry, of Coles valley, and Mary E., twins; Margaret, the wife of Ferdinand Fortin, of Coles valley; and Emmett, who is a ranchman in the same section.

In his political views Mr. Murphy is independent and keeps his convictions unbiased and his judgment clear. He is one of the substantial men of Douglas county and his early life, which broadened his point of view and gave him truer standards and more tolerant principles, has had its effect upon his success.

WILLIAM N. WILLSON dates his residence in Oregon from 1883 and at Klamath Falls from 1889. During most of the time through the intervening period he has been engaged in the cultivation of a ranch and the improvement of his property but is now living retired, enjoying a well earned and well merited rest. He was born in Belfast, Allegany county, New York, December 6, 1836, his parents being Daniel and Mary (Atherton) Willson, who were also natives of the Empire state, the former born in Cattaraugus county and the latter in Allegany county, where they were married. In 1838 they removed westward to Iowa, which was then under territorial rule and with its pioneer development became closely identified. They spent many years in Iowa and then removed to Houston county, Minnesota, when that state was also under territorial rule. Following its admission to the Union Daniel Willson was elected a member of the first state legislature. From Houston county he removed to Rock Elm, Pierce county, where he died when eighty-five years of age. He was known as Dr. Willson because he long practiced medicine and he was also prominent in the Baptist church as a representative of its ministry. His wife passed away at the age of eighty years. They were the parents of four sons and six daughters and of the family six are yet living.

William N. Willson, the eldest son, resided with his parents until he attained his majority and his experiences were such as usually fall to the lot of the farmer lad upon the frontier. He engaged in breaking prairie with five yoke of oxen, almost his entire time being given to that work during the period of his boyhood and youth. He has driven mule teams from Albany and Rockford, Illinois, when it was a difficult thing to get from one house to the next because of the fact that the prairie was covered with high grasses and there were no roads. Following his marriage in 1858 he went to the Des Moines river and thence to western Minnesota. He took a claim there but abandoned it because of his fear of the Indians at the time of the New Ulm massacre. Journeying southward, he located in Clinton county, Iowa, where he lived for seven or eight years. He also spent six years in Missouri at farming and stock-raising and to a considerable extent worked at the carpenter's trade. At length he sold his ranch in that state and came to Oregon in 1883, driving across the country and settling sixteen miles below Portland. There he lived for about six years and in 1889 came to Klamath Falls, where he has remained most of the time since. He took a homestead, proved up the property, sold it, then purchased another tract, sold that and bought land on Link river. This is a fine garden spot and his place is splendidly improved. In addition he owns Main street property but is living practically retired, enjoying in well earned rest the fruits of his former toil.

In 1858 Mr. Willson was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Tupper, who was born in Michigan in 1842 and died in Oregon in 1887. Their children were: Mary, who became the wife of Edward Stout but both are now deceased; Charles D., living at Klamath Falls; Marie, the wife of Kent Ballard, of Klamath Falls; Emma, the deceased wife of James Staub; Della, who died when sixteen years of age; and William, who died when twenty-two years of age. Mr. Willson's wife, his mother-in-law and four of his children passed away within a few years.

Sickness and death caused him such heavy expenses that he lost practically all of his property but he is now in very comfortable circumstances. He gained a start in trapping and began to make money on everything which he attempted. He is now the possessor of a handsome competence and it is well known that his prosperity is the merited reward of his earnest labor. In politics he has been a republican since the time of Abraham Lincoln, whom he supported in the presidential election of 1860 and again in 1864. Fraternally he is connected with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. In all business affairs he displays keen judgment and unfaltering enterprise and his sagacity is evidenced in his ability to realize the possible outcome of any situation from the start.

JACOB STUBENBORDT, one of the early pioneers of Oregon, was born in Alsace-Lorraine, on the 22d of April, 1839, and received his early education in the schools of Germany and France, being later graduated from polytechnic colleges. In Paris he followed engineering and for his services received several medals from the French government.

Becoming dissatisfied with the old world, he left for America in 1871 and for a time followed his former vocation in the eastern states but finally settled in St. Louis, Missouri, where he embarked in the furniture business. Not being satisfied with that location, he subsequently started for the golden west and became a resident of Pendleton, Oregon, when this territory embraced what is now known as the state of Oregon, a part of Washington and all of Idaho. This was in the year 1882, when the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company was laying the first rail into Pendleton. From that time on he continued to make his home there and established one of the finest grocery stores in the northwest under the name of the White House, which he conducted until his death, on the 23d of February, 1896.

Jacob D. Tuberville

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Mr. Stubenbordt was a high Mason and an Episcopalian by faith. He was survived by his widow, Mrs. Catherine Stubenbordt, who soon followed him to that great beyond, and a daughter, Gertrude, who is now the wife of Frank O'Gara, of Pendleton.

BAKER COMMERCIAL CLUB. On the evening of January 7, 1903, there was formed in Baker City, state of Oregon, an organization to be known as the Citizens League, and for the purpose as outlined in the articles of association of encouraging and fostering all legitimate enterprises tending toward the development of Baker City and Baker county, the approvement of roads, beautifying public properties, and in general to further in all practical ways, the business and community interests of Baker City and Baker county.

The charter members of the association were: William Pollman, J. T. Donnelley, N. C. Haskell, Beh Kadish, P. Basche, F. S. Lack, George Chandler, C. A. Johns, W. J. Patterson, C. M. Sage, F. R. Mellis, C. H. Breck, R. B. Carter, A. Geiser, A. S. Shockley, J. Muller, L. Levinger, Carl Adler, S. L. Baer, Dr. E. B. McDaniel, and W. F. Butcher. At this meeting William Pollman was elected president; S. L. Baer, vice president, N. C. Haskell, secretary; J. T. Donnelley, treasurer.

This organization grew in membership from year to year until the year of 1910. On February 2, 1910, the first move toward reorganization and changing the name of the association was made, and at this time it was decided to reorganize under the name of Baker Commercial Club, and endeavor in every possible way to enlarge the membership as well as broaden the scope of work of the organization. At this time a committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws for the new organization and on February 16, 1910, the Citizens League met again and adopted the constitution and by-laws as submitted by the committee.

In a general way the constitution provided for the formation of an organization for the purpose of furthering in all practical ways the business and community interests of Baker City and Baker county, the protection of industries already established here and the conservative location of new ones to guard the enjoyment by the city and county of the best obtainable railroad facilities and rates, to act as a medium for regulating and securing of public celebrations, and outdoor amusements calculated to bring enjoyment to the public, to promote better acquaintance and appreciation among the immediate surrounding people of the community, to make a name of the city and county over the entire country by advertising the beauties and advantages of Baker City and Baker county, and in general way to look after and promote everything of public interest and benefit.

The constitution further provided for a board of fifteen to act as managing directors, and at the time the constitution and by-laws were adopted, the following members were elected to the board, five for five years, five for two years, and five for three years: F. P. Bodinson, F. H. Dean, A. S. Shockley, N. C. Haskell, Grant Geddes, F. A. Harmon, J. W. Stuchell, F. W. Eppinger, Charles L. Palmer, E. F. Cranston, C. A. Johns, C. B. Stout, E. E. Dobbins, Robert Wallbrunn and J. A. Smith.

The first regular meeting of this board, held on March 20, 1910, the following officers were elected from their number, for the terms of one year each: President, F. P. Bodinson; vice president, F. A. Harmon; secretary, N. C. Haskell; treasurer, Charles L. Palmer. Active steps were at once taken to increase the membership which met with great success. It was then decided by the board that an active manager should be hired, and on May 9, 1910, resolutions were passed providing that a publicity manager should be hired at once to devote his entire time to the club's business. Mr. Ashley was then hired, and immediately took up his duties. Steps were then taken to issue some literature bearing upon the general topics of interest in and around the city, and subsequently several descriptive and illustrated pamphlets were issued under the community publicity plan of the Oregon Washington Railroad & Navigation Company, which were distributed over the entire country through the agency of the club and the railroad. Great and good results were obtained from the distribution of literature and many a one in the east has turned toward this section and located here through the medium of the literature issued by the Baker Commercial Club.

During the year a great many things of public interest and benefit were handled by the club with, as a rule, satisfactory results.

The membership of the organization steadily increased as people who were at first skeptical began to realize that an organization of this kind in any community was not only a benefit, but a necessary thing to successfully handle the ever arising questions of public interest and welfare.

The progress of the club during the year 1910 was satisfying not only to those who were instrumental in the organization, but to every public spirited citizen in the community. In May, 1911 the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: F. A. Harmon president, E. F. Cranston vice president, C. C. McCulloch, secretary, Robert Wallbrunn, treasurer.

In June following H. C. O'Gorman was hired as publicity manager, Mr. Ashley having left. During the ensuing year the active work of the club was greatly increased, as was also the membership. Many matters of civic importance were taken up and successfully handled through the channels of the organization, and the citizens generally were high in their praise of the work done by the club.

So great was the general satisfaction with the work of the club during the year 1911 that at the annual election held in May 1912 all of the officers of the club were unanimously reelected, it being the general opinion that these officers had conducted the work of the club in a manner that proved conclusively they were the right men in the right places.

During this year some of the most important things being handled by the club, were the securing of a favorable log rate over the Sumpter Valley Railroad, so as to enable the manufacturers of logs to locate at this point, and enter into competition on a more equal basis than they had heretofore been able to operate on with other log manufacturing centers.

The Baker County Fair & Speed Association, a stock corporation of this city, who had been conducting the Baker county fair for the past eight years, had, by reason of poor success of the fair, determined to abandon it. The Baker Commercial Club stepped into the breech, leased the grounds and conducted the most successful fair from every point of view that has ever been conducted in Baker county, and from the expressions on every hand there is no doubt but as the years go on greater success will crown their efforts in this project.

The matter of adjusting freight rates to a more equitable basis has been pursued by this organization for several years, and in many cases they have brought before the railroad commission and the courts results attained have been very satisfying to the community in general.

Activity in the matter of railroad rate adjustments will be continued to the time when Baker will enjoy equitable and nondescriminatory rates as compared with other cities of the northwest, when that time does come, Baker by virtue of her location will unquestionably become a jobbing and manufacturing center of prominence.

Active work is now being done by the organization to collect and prepare exhibits of the produce of this county for display at the land shows throughout the country, that the people of other sections might not only hear of what can be grown in Baker county but may see it, and in seeing believe what we who are here know, that Baker county is second to none in the northwest in the variety and quality of its products.

The present membership of the Baker Commercial Club is, in round numbers, one hundred and fifty, and is comprised of the leading citizens of the city. The memberships are issued on the basis of one dollar per share, per month, and any member may hold as many shares as he or they may desire. The minimum being one share to each member. Many of the larger corporations and business houses of the city hold all the way from one to ten shares.

The club has spacious and well appointed club rooms on the corner of Main and Center streets in the heart of the business district, underneath the Baker Loan & Trust Bank, where the active manager of the club's affairs has his office.

F. A. Harmon, president, and E. F. Cranston, vice president, are subscribers to Centennial History of Oregon and represented therein. F. A. Harmon is general manager of the Eastern Oregon Light & Power Company, and E. F. Cranston is a leading real estate dealer. C. C. McColloch is a young attorney and politician, and is now state senator for Baker county, Oregon.

Robert Wallbrunn, treasurer, was born in Youngstown, Ohio, August 16, 1870. He is vice president of the Alexander Clothing Company that operate six large wholesale and retail clothing stores in Idaho and Oregon. His home has been in Baker for about fifteen years past. He is married and has one daughter.

H. J. O'Gorman, who has been the active manager of the Baker Commercial Club since June, 1911, and who is at present acting in that capacity, was born in the city of St Paul, state of Minnesota, June 24, 1883. He is married and has one son. In 1908 his first trip was made to the western country. During that year and 1909 he was engaged as a commercial traveler through the states of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho. In 1910 he settled in Baker and engaged in the real-estate business. In June, 1911, through the personal solicitation of some of the officers of the Commercial Club he took up the work of that organization.

LESLIE OSCAR ISON was born April 10, 1848, in Bryantsville, Kentucky, a son of Strother and Judith Ann (Gaines) Ison. The father in his younger days was a stone mason. He took the contract and supervised the building of the first turnpike road and bridge in Kentucky and his success in that undertaking was sufficient to enable him to engage in merchandising in Louisville. He carried on business as a merchant for many years in Kentucky, but as Missouri was being settled, he thought he could better his financial condition by removing to that state and securing good land. Accordingly in 1849 he became a resident of Grundy county, then a thinly populated district, securing four hundred and twenty acres of good land on Grand river. Through his close economy and frugality he made a start and after a few years he again decided to engage in the dry goods business, opening a store in the recently established town of Trenton. So successful was he that about 1858 he burned brick on his own farm and therewith built a two-story building to accommodate his growing mercantile interests. He conducted his store there until 1862, but the fact that his son, Judge Luther B. Ison, had joined the southern army rendered conditions unpleasant for the family in that neighborhood and the father resolved to again move to the frontier, starting in May, 1862, with ox teams toward the Pacific coast. He had himself been a volunteer in the war with Mexico but was not called into service. On the 6th of September, 1862, he arrived in Baker county, Oregon, where he remained until his death in August, 1889. His wife represented one of the old Revolutionary war families and was a great-grandniece of General Miram Gaines of Revolutionary war fame and a distant relative of Governor Gaines of Oregon.

Leslie O. Ison crossed the plains with his parents in 1862, when a youth of fourteen years, and, settling in the Powder river valley, assisted his father until twenty one years of age. He then entered the State Agricultural College at Corvallis, Oregon, and was graduated in 1873 with the Bachelor of Science degree. He was a classmate of William F. Herrin, chief counsel and vice president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, now of San Francisco, and of Miss Clara Thayer, daughter of A. J. Thayer, at one time judge of the Oregon supreme court. He took up the profession of teaching, which he followed for three or four years in Baker county and the state of Idaho. In 1876 he began the study of law at Portland, Oregon, under the United States Senator J. N. Kelley. There he remained for a year and a half working a part of the time in order to meet his expenses. Later he again followed teaching in Baker county and soon afterward became interested in placer mining and farming, which he followed with some success. His growing business interests caused him never to return to the study of law. He finally secured a home of two hundred and eighty acres of farm land in the vicinity of the settlement known as Wingville, upon which he now lives, enjoying the peace of a well spent life. When Malheur county was separated from Baker county he was appointed by the legislature as one of the commissioners in connection with M. D. Wisdom and Ed Yest. Their work, owing to their vigilance and ability, was accomplished in thirty days with credit to themselves and satisfaction to the general public.

In politics Mr. Ison has always been affiliated with the democratic party and uses his influence to support capable and reliable men for office. Since 1891 he has held membership with the Woodmen of the World.

In Portland, on the 31st of October, 1877, Mr. Ison was married to Amanda Fuller, a daughter of Price and Mollie Amanda Fuller. Her mother came to her death when the daughter was but four years of age, after which she was largely reared by an uncle in Portland, Oregon, until sixteen years of age. This uncle was Amos N. King, who at one time was one of the wealthiest men in Portland, owning King's Heights and Malinda Heights. He died leaving a vast fortune, including extensive property holdings, much of which is yet unsold. Mr. and Mrs. Ison have a son, Grover Cleveland, who is twenty-six years of age. Being possessed of true Kentucky blood, Mr. Ison's word is his bond and he possesses many sterling characteristics and admirable traits. Like the true Kentuckian, he would give his life to defend a friend and, like the pioneers of the west, he considers truthfulness and strict adherence to honesty as indispensable principles of intelligent manhood.

HARRISON E. KOZER. In Harrison E. Kozer one finds a splendid example of the self-made man, for he started out in life for himself when but ten years of age, owing to the stress of circumstances that made it necessary for him to begin providing for his support. In the intervening years he has made good use of his time and opportunities. Since 1890 he has lived in Oregon and throughout the intervening period has been a typical and representative citizen of the northwest, imbued with the progressive spirit which has wrought the wonderful development of this section of the country. He has for a number of years been a representative of Bradstreet's agency in Portland. He was born October 23, 1840, in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, his parents being John and Susanna (George) Kozer. For several years his forefathers have resided in the Keystone state. His parents had a family of eight children, the eldest being Fares, who was born in 1830 and is still living in Pennsylvania. Benjamin Franklin, the second child, born November 4, 1832, was a mining prospector, possessing an adventurous and roving disposition, and his whereabouts at the present time are unknown. He enlisted in the First Colorado Regiment during the period of the Civil war and served until the close of hostilities. Elsetta was born July 20, 1834, and died January 15, 1856. Henry J., born July 28, 1836, is deceased. George M., born in 1838, is a resident of Portland. Harrison E. is the next of the family. William A., born in 1842 died in 1910. Ira D., born May 5, 1844, died on the 4th of January, 1845.

The life history of Harrison E. Kozer, strong of purpose and diligent in business, is one well worthy of contemplation and consideration. He was but ten years of age when his father died, after which he went to live with an uncle, and during that period learned the trade of a sheet metal worker, completing his apprenticeship at the age of twenty years. He afterward followed the trade in Pennsylvania for a few years and then sought business opportunities elsewhere, going to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1865. He did not however, at once engage in business in that city, for on the 20th of June of that year he enlisted for service in the navy, becoming a member of the Mississippi squadron in General Porter's fleet. He served for a year and was then honorably discharged, after which he returned to Pittsburg. In that city he engaged in the hardware business in which he continued until 1876, when he sold out his stock and removed to West Newton, Pennsylvania. For two years he was numbered among the business men of that city, after which he went to Waynesburg, where he resided until 1885. He then returned to Pittsburg and was employed in the sheet metal department of the works of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company until 1890.

However, his attention was attracted to the west with its broadening opportunities and possibilities and in the year mentioned Mr. Kozer crossed the country to Oregon. At different times he was employed in Spokane and Vancouver after which he removed to East Portland, where he lived for a year. On the expiration of that period he went to Dallas, Oregon, where he engaged in the hardware business with William Faull under the firm name of William Faull & Company. This place of business he conducted for three years, after which he disposed of his interest and he and his wife returned to Pittsburg, remaining in the east for five years. He engaged in business in Butler, Pennsylvania, for a period of five years but in 1901 again arrived in Oregon, making his way to Dallas. Soon afterward he came to Portland and for some years past has been connected with Bradstreet's commercial agency. He enjoys the confidence and regard of the company which he represents, for his business has been carefully conducted and has brought satisfactory results.

On the 24th of January, 1867, in Pittsburg, Mr. Kozer was united in marriage to Miss Alice E. Crawford, a daughter of Samuel and Susanna (Harris) Crawford. She was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, November 15, 1846, and is one of a family of seven children, the others being: Harris, who was born October 23, 1848, and resides in Pittsburg; Ann E., the wife of Captain David Ayres, who won his title in command of a company of the Fifty-seventh Ohio Infantry during the Civil war and received a medal from congress in recognition of his bravery; Laura L., who is the widow of John Ransom, of Cleveland, Ohio; Sarah Frances, the widow of A. W. Greene, a descendant of Nathaniel Greene; Ida E., the wife of Harry G. Eakins, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and Samuel H., who resided in New York city, but is now deceased. Mrs. Kozer traces her ancestry back two hundred and fifty years and is of Scotch lineage. She is a writer of considerable note and ability and when away from Portland on trips has written some interesting descriptions for the Observer. She has the happy faculty of being able to tell what she sees in her travels and while she uses few words, her contributions are never prosy. She wrote for the Observer a letter telling of the wonders of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition and although the story was less than three columns in length a prominent St. Louis editor unhesitatingly pronounced it the best description of the big fair that had come under his observation. Mr. and Mrs. Kozer reside at No. 921 East Salmon street, at the corner of Thirty-first street, and theirs is a hospitable home, its good cheer being greatly enjoyed by their many friends.

Mr. Kozer votes with the republican party and is content thus to express his preference without attempting to use the influence of office. He has been a faithful member of the Masonic fraternity since 1872 and his wife is a past matron of the Eastern Star. He belongs also to the Grand Army of the Republic and both he and Mrs. Kozer are members of the Presbyterian church. Their circle of friends is continually growing as the circle of their acquaintance broadens and Portland numbers them among her worthy residents.

JAMES THOMAS BARRON, president and general manager of the Thlinket Packing Company, has been actively associated with Portland's commercial interests continuously since 1887. He was born at Cleveland, Ohio, July 8, 1858. His father, James Barron, born in 1828, was a native of Clonmel, County Tipperary, Ireland, and came to America when six years of age. After entering business life he owned and operated for a time boats on the Erie canal and also engaged in the ship chandler business at Cleveland, Ohio. In the early '60s he came to the Pacific coast, locating in San Francisco, where he was identified with the steamship and warehouse business for many years as owner of steamships and an extensive system of warehouses, and was prominent in transportation interests. He was married in Detroit, Michigan, in 1852, to Agnes Myler, a daughter of Andrew Myler. She was a native of County Wexford, Ireland, where she was born in 1834, coming to America when but three years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Barron became the parents of eight children, two sons and six daughters, seven of whom survive. The father died in San Francisco, November 28, 1890, while the mother survived him twenty years, her death occurring February, 1910.

James Thomas Barron was educated in the public schools of San Francisco, and St. Mary's and Santa Clara Colleges. After leaving school he began as an accountant with a San Francisco mercantile establishment, where he remained for a short time, when he went to Santa Barbara to engage on his own account in the apiary business and later became largely interested in real estate.

In 1887, on coming to Portland, he accepted a position as accountant with Park & Lacy, dealers in machinery and continued in that connection for two years. He was next appointed chief clerk of the thirteenth lighthouse district, serving in that capacity until his resignation in 1893, to accept the dual office of cashier and secretary of the newly organized Hibernia Savings Bank, and he was largely instrumental in bringing it safely through the financial panic of that time. The following seven years were devoted to the interests of this institution, which was developed during the period into one of Portland's soundest financial organizations.

In 1899 Mr. Barron began in the salmon packing business, organizing the Thlinket Packing Company, of which he became president and general manager and of which he is the chief owner. The company operates in Alaska and has become the largest independent operator in Alaskan waters, the annual pack aggregating about one hundred and twenty thousand cases, representing a total value of over one-half million of dollars. Mr. Barron spends a large part of each season in Alaska, giving the business his personal supervision, and the company's splendid success is due largely to his executive ability and energetic management. Portland receives the direct benefit of over two hundred thousand dollars worth of business annually, largely for labor, supplies, etc.

Mr. Barron is still largely interested as a stockholder in the Hibernia Savings Bank. Politically, he is a democrat where national issues are involved but locally gives his support to the individual he deems best equipped to conserve the city's interests. He is a member of Dominion Catholic church, is a member of the Knights of Columbus, the United Artisans, the Arlington Club and the Commercial Club, taking an especially active interest in the projects of the latter organization for the development of Portland's commercial interests.

In July, 1890, Mr. Barron was united in marriage to Elizabeth Nixon, and they have two children, Anna Maria and Robert J. The family residence is at 634 Wasco street. Mrs. Barron is the daughter of Robert and Anna (Hogan) Nixon, both natives of Ireland, who came to America in childhood and were married in Massachusetts. Robert Nixon was killed while serving with a New Hampshire Volunteer Regiment in the Civil war. Mrs. Nixon still survives and resides with Mr. Barron in Portland.

Genial, generous, prosperous, Mr. Barron has through sheer ability achieved a most gratifying success and has earned a most enviable place in both the business and social circles of the metropolis of the northwest.

FRANK A. VOGE, D. D. S., who is practicing dentistry in Portland, was born May 29, 1883, in Jerauld county, South Dakota, the son of Frank A. and Hannah (Nemtz) Voge, both of whom were natives of Germany. They were the parents of nine children, namely: Fred W., a farmer of Minnesota, who is married and has two children; Charles H., a farmer of Deer Creek, Minnesota, who is married and has three children; Martha, who is the wife of Ernest Schinder, of Duluth, Minnesota, and the mother of one child, Rosine; Sarah, of Deer Creek, Minnesota, who is the widow of George Widmann, and the mother of one child, Harold; Frank A.; Clara, who married Walter L. Hoeft, of Milliken, Colorado, by whom she has two children; Ernest, who resides in Rosalia, Washington; Harold of Deer Creek, Minnesota; and Elvin, who resides at home and assists his father in cultivating the farm.

Dr. Voge pursued his education in the public schools of Oregon and in 1901 entered Willamette University. In the autumn of the following year he entered the North Pacific Dental College in Portland, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1908, in the department of dentistry. He immediately took up the active practice of his profession and located in Montavilla, a suburb of Portland. The large and representative patronage accorded him attests his success and at the present time he has a larger clientele than he is able to care for conscientiously. His practice has been as lucrative as it has been satisfactory and during the four years in which he has been actively engaged in this city he has been able to repay all of his college expenses, equipping an attractive office and purchasing a twenty-five hundred dollar home. In addition to this he also owns other residence property.

On the 19th of August, 1905, Dr. Voge was married at Salem to Miss Emma Osterman, whose birth occurred on the 27th of June, 1886, and who is a daughter of Fred and Sophie (Beldman) Osterman. The father was a native of Germany and the mother, who was of German descent, was born in Missouri. To Mr. and Mrs. Osterman four children were born: Wesley, a farmer of Salem, Oregon, who is married and has three children, Clarence, Pearl and Ivy; Emma, now Mrs. Frank A. Voge; Alfred, of Salem, Oregon, who is taking the dental course in the North Pacific College; and Robert, also of Salem, who is attending high school and equipping himself for a course in mechanical engineering.

In politics Dr. Voge is an independent and has never desired nor sought office. He holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally is connected with the United Artisans, the Knights and Ladies of Security, and the Delta Sigma Delta fraternity, which is the oldest dental order in the United States. He is also a member of the city and state dental societies and through their activities keeps in touch with the progress of the dental fraternity. He resides at No. 4, East Seventy-ninth street, and his offices are at No. 2002 East Stark street. He is a very broad-minded man, imbued at all times with the laudable ambition for progress, and this is manifest in his professional career, his fraternal relations and his cooperation in any movements instituted for the public good.

FRITZ WOLFF. It is a well known fact that it is under the pressure of adversity and the stimulus of opposition that the best and strongest in men is brought out and developed. An illustration of this fact is found in the life record of Fritz Wolff, now part owner of the largest plant for the manufacture of heavy machinery and castings on the east side of Portland. Success has ultimately rewarded his labors, yet not all days in his career have been equally bright but his has been a character that has turned threatened disasters into opportunities and through indefatigable effort and persistency of purpose he has reached a place of prominence as a representative of industrial activity in the Rose City. His birth occurred in Germany November 6, 1847, his parents being John and Henrietta Wolff, who spent their entire lives in that country where the father followed the shoemaker's trade.

Fritz Wolff came to America in 1867, being a young man of twenty-five years, settling first in New York city where he worked at the iron worker's trade which he had previously learned in his native land. He continued a resident of the eastern metropolis until 1870, when he sought the metropolis of the Pacific coast, spending two years as an iron worker in San Francisco. He came to Portland in May, 1871, and secured employment in the Oregon Iron Works. He was also for a time in the Southern Pacific shops and in 1874 he started in business on his own account in connection with Herman Trenkman, opening a small machine shop. They conducted business together for a number of years after which Mr. Trenkman sold his interest to Arthur Zwicker. They [illegible] a foundry and machine shop on Flander and Third streets for four years, during which period Mr. Wolff built four and a half miles of twenty-four-inch pipe, which was constructed for the City Water Company. In 1889 the firm removed their business to the east side, there erecting an immense plant, engaging in the manufacture of engines, ice machinery and compressed air machinery beside doing the work of a general machine shop and foundry. They also built thirty-four miles of pipe line to be used in connection with the City Water Works; also five miles of pipe for Spokane, Washington; and twenty-six miles for Butte, Montana. The business was conducted under the firm style of Wolff & Zwicker until 1892, during which time the company took contracts for building ships. They constructed two light ships, also one torpedo destroyer, two torpedo boats, a large tug boat and a large freight boat, but financial reverses overtook them and they failed with a total loss.

It was at this point that the real strength of Mr. Wolff's nature showed forth. He met the exigencies of the case in a way that indicated his resourcefulness and capability. Borrowing money on his twenty thousand dollar life insurance policies, he again started in business, organizing what was known as the Phoenix Iron Works and formed under a corporation organization. They operated the first six months in the old shop, which they leased, and at the end of that time the shop was entirely destroyed by fire. At that time they were carrying about five thousand dollars insurance, which sum aided them in starting in business anew. The company purchased new machinery on the installment plan and also bought a half block between Hawthorne and Clay streets, where the plant is still located. Since that time another block near their shop has been purchased, whereon they have established a large foundry that is operated in connection with the machine shop. They manufacture all kinds of heavy machinery and castings and now have the largest plant of its kind on the east side. The company is in excellent financial condition, their property alone being valued at two hundred thousand dollars. Their business is very extensive and has grown year by year until it has reached very profitable proportions. Mr. Wolff proved that difficulties and obstacles could not long bar his path, for they called forth his latent energies and his ability has carried him steadily forward until he is now one of the prominent representatives of industrial life in Portland.

Mr. Wolff has been married twice. He lost his first wife October 28, 1881. Four children of that marriage are still living: John, who is connected with the Phoenix Iron Company and is also the builder and owner of the fastest gasoline boat in the world; Mrs. Emma Fox, living in Portland; Sophia, the widow of F. L. Zimmerman, also a resident of Portland; and Helen, the wife of Charles Urfer, of this city. In 1883 Mr. Wolff married Miss Meta Rasmussen, who was born in Denmark, and unto them have been born two children: Frederica, who is a stenographer and lives at home; and Carl, also at home, a graduate of the Mechanical Engineering School at Corvallis. The family are of the Methodist Episcopal faith and take an active interest in the moral development of the community. While he has led a very busy life, Mr. Wolff has always been a progressive citizen, cooperating as far as his time would permit in works of public improvement. He has justly won the proud American title of a "self-made man," for through his own labors, persistency of purpose and strength of character he has gradually advanced to his present position as a successful machinery manufacturer and his record, honorable in every relation, commends him to the confidence and respect of his fellowmen.

INDEX

Abbott, R. A
Adams, A. O.
Adams, J. W.
Aitchison, C. B.
Akers, L. B.
Akers, M. L.
Alden, W. H.
Alexander, H. L.
Alexander, Robert
Alford, Albert
Alfred, F. M.
Algesheimer, Conrad
Allan, W. S.
Allen, R. D.
Allen, R. E.
Allen, P. G.
Allen, W. W.
Anderson, Andrew
Anderson, May B.
Antrim, E. E.
Aral, Oliver
Armstrong, J. C.
Arnold, A. M.
Ash, Lewis
Atlee, W. S.
Atwood, J. P.
Ault, C. A.
Ayre, George
Ayre, W. G.

Babl, Nicholas
Bailey, H. F.
Baillie, F. S.
Baird, George
Baisley, J. C.
Baker Commercial Club
Baker, G. W.
Banks, George
Barker, John
Barnes, J. B.
Barrett, C. A.
Barringer, G. F.
Barron, H. F.
Barron, J. T.
Barry, J. N.
Bartholomew, C. H.
Bartle, P. J.
Basye, C. H.
Basye, L. C.
Bater, J. F.
Baughman, D. C.
Baughman, H. C.
Baughman, L. F.
Bauman, Stephen
Baxter, C. F.
Baxter, C. O.
Beck, J. C.
Becker, Casper
Beers, E. T.
Beers, Ransom
Bellmer, J. M.
Belknap, V. C.
Belt, J. D.
Bennington, K. A.
Bertsamer, G. H.
Bennett, F. A.
Bennett, J. H.
Benson, Chas.
Bentley, L. S.
Berger, John, Jr.
Bergman, John
Bergman, J. W.
Bessey, H. E.
Bevitt, F. D.
Bevis, Jake
Bayne, F. W.
Bidwell, F. A.
Biggs, Dalton
Biggs, G. M.
Biggs, J. W.
Bilyeu, Lark
Binder Brothers
Bishop, C. P.
Black, A. L.
Black, Henry
Blackhurst, Alexander
Blackwell, J. L.
Blakely, W. M.
Blanket, James
Bleak, E. E.
Bodmer, W. J.
Bodley, A. E.
Boettcher, O. J.
Bonnewell, W. F.
Boone, A. D.
Boone, A. L.
Borton, Joseph
Boudinot, Jacob
Bouwkamp, W. T.
Bowell, W. H.
Bowles, A. M.
Bowers, B. C.
Bowman, C. J.
Boyer, W. H.
Boyd, W. S.
Brainard, W. E.
Brandon, Peyton
Brayfield, T. A.

Bray, Ira 680
Breyman, E. A. 144
Brigham, F. H. 1014
Bristow, Darwin 360
Britt, Emil 530
Brock, W. E. 1025
Brollier, J. E. 261
Bronson, Malcolm 389
Brooks, E. M. 205
Brown, C. W. 596
Brown, F. E. 1012
Brown, J. H. 295
Brown, R. T. 68
Brown, W. A. 837
Brown, W. B. 55
Brown, W. L. 667
Brown, William 900
Brownell, D. C. 821
Brownell, Russell 874
Brownell, W. E. 786
Browning, J. J. 269
Buchanan, Grant 849
Buchtel, Joseph 971
Buckley, D. P. 243
Buckley, Maggie 468
Bump, M. B. 601
Burden, C. A. 620
Burgess, M. E. 173
Burke, T. C. 771
Burnett, N. I. 856
Busick, A. N. 447
Butcher, W. F. 326
Butler, Casimir 868
Butler, D. W. 945
Butler, G. S. 144
Butts, Charles 88
Butts, Festus 602
Bybee, J. W. 176
Byrd, F. T. 887
Byrne, Katie N. 527

Cacharelis, Othon 94
Caldwell, John 546
Caldwell, John 180
Caldwell, William 1074
Campbell, Otis 815
Canaday, H. A. 232
Cantrall, Miles 206
Cardwell, E. R. 915
Carpenter, Edward 635
Carsner, W. S. 565
Carstens, J. F. 830
Carter, Ransom 308
Carter, W. M. 1072
Cary, J. J. 483
Case, A. E. 97
Casteel, H. G. 346
Casteel, R. L. 296
Cataldo, J. M. 1044
Catching, J. C. 309
Chadwick, J. J. 71
Chamberlain, William 1073
Chapman, L. M. 486
Charley, L. C. 347
Childers, F. P. 817
Chinn, U. G. 93
Christensen, Harry 194
Christenson, G. G. 67
Churchill, J. S. 492
Circle, O. I. 456
Claflin, W. P. 677
Clark, C. C. 912
Clark, Paul 473
Cleaver, G. L. 811
Clemens, Peter 964
Clemons, B. D. 827
Clevenger, G. W. 982
Clinkinbeard, J. J. 742
Clinton, J. D. 566
Coburn, W. M. 313
Coffey, V. H. 187
Coffman, I. F. 372
Coffman, W. C. 347
Coke, J. S. 345
Cole, Columbus 200
Cole, Leonard 651
Collier, C. M. 816
Collins, B. M. 217
Collins, Clara 60
Collis, Alfred 898
Colver, L. O. 300
Conger, C. W. 1067
Conklin, A. G. 1055
Conley, J. C. 1056
Conrad, T. J. 930
Conyers, C. L. 573
Cooley, A. B. 941
Corl, L. J. 207
Cornutt, Archelaus 336
Cosgrove, Hugh 584
Cottel, W. I. 697
Coughtry, James 100
Cox, A. R. 1053
Cox, W. A. 542
Crandall, C. M. 647
Cranston, H. B. 952
Crews, W. E. 269
Crichton, E. W. 921
Croeni, J. T. 218
Crow, C. A. 289
Crow, W. U. 471
Cruickshank, James 80
Cunningham, J. A. 81
Cupper, F. W. 1077
Currin, Felix 838
Currin, G. J. 809
Cutlip, S. B. 794
Cutsforth, I. E. 634

Danby, Richard 739
Daniel, I. L. 199
Danielson, August 491
Daugherty, C. E. 378
Davey, Frank 928
Davidson, T. L. 966
Davidson, W. F. 639
Davies, A. N. 30
Davis, C. E. 792
Davis, G. E. 412
Davis, M. C. 417
Davis, M. F. 416
De Lamter, May 157
De Lashmutt, Butler 442
Dellinger, J. S. 213
Dennis, W. O. 987
Denvir, W. J. 53
Dersham, David 354
De Veny, William 806
Dierickx, Trephon 695
Diss, Frank 72
Dittebrandt, M. M. 1048
Diven, I. F. S. 721
Dobbin, John 627
Dodge, Edgar 242

Dodge, U. S. 741
Doering, A. H. 340
Doering, Edmund 683
Doolittle, L. E. 585
Donegan, J. J. 399
Dora, Charles 736
Douthit, J. A. 916
Duggan, H. A. 589
Duncan, J. P. 704
Du Rette, F. R. 517
Durham, R. L. 162
Dutli, Fridolin 716

Eakin, Robert 1008
Easter, J. P. 621
Eckhoff, C. C. 686
Edgerton, E. L. 585
Edington, W. W. 281
Edlefsen, J. N. 702
Edwards, J. S. 1023
Eggers, H. G. F. 660
Ehler, E. E. 935
Ehle, W. T. 903
Elam, A. M. 1029
Eldridge, Levi 703
Ellerson, J. H. 302
Ellis, C. W. 1041
Ellis, G. T. 316
Elms, H. C. 836
Emmett, E. G. 684
Endicott, J. J. 1048
Enegren, John 386
Ensminger, J. H. 917
Erickson, Charles 34
Ernst, C. H. 909
Erwin, R. M. 1012
Etter, J. W. 841
Evans, S. D. 522

Fanning, A. M. 11
Farrar, Squire 927
Farre, William 739
Faulconer, O. M. 21
Fellman, W. H. 19
Ferguson, C. C. 615
Ferguson, L. B. 641
Ferschweiler, J. A. 54
Fetter, L. B. 489
Fields, Kelly 220
Fischer, C. E. 636
Fisher, H. F. 523
Fisk, D. B. 922
Fitzpatrick, C. S. 42
Fletcher, H. L. 190
Flett, E. B. 171
Flint, A. B. 629
Flint, R. T. 250
Floyd, T. F. 702
Folsom, Ralph 916
Ford, C. E. 552
Forsstrom, Toivo 218
Foster, C. E. 441
Franciscovich, Martin 108
Franklin, C. R. 69
Frawley, John 88
Frazer, G. N. 702
French, A. P. 621
French, R. S. 68
Frey, F. C. 648
Frey, Fred 250
Friedrich, Bernhard 1379
Frizzell, J. P. 1023
Frizzell, William 1023
Fry, G. M. 954
Fullbright, L. A. 689
Funk, A. C. 82
Furrow, M. E. 275
Furry, F. E. 352

Galaway, W. O. 640
Galbraith, W. J. 515
Galloway, William 180
Gantenbein, C. U. 848
Garn, E. D. 810
Gassner, Alois, Jr. 864
Gassner, X. A. 179
Gault, D. M. C. 288
Gault, J. L. 999
Gaylord, E. B. 595
Geary, J. W. 622
Geddes, F. A. 86
Geer, H. J. 727
Geer, I. S. 1056
Geer, Judd 728
Geiss, John 923
Gentner, C. F. 123
George, Robert 1071
Gerber, John 609
Gibbs, W. S. 98
Giesy, Martin 207
Gilkison, M. M. 803
Gilliam, Frank 791
Gilman, M. M. 483
Glasson, William 759
Glenn, G. J. 114
Glenn, T. T. 114
Glover, C. H. 503
Glover, Philip 754
Godsey, Ora 17
Godwin, C. T. 909
Goldsby, Joe 231
Goodbrod, A. J. 121
Gooding, C. I. 661
Gordon, M. H. 256
Gorshne, O. E. 1050
Gossler, F. W. 150
Gowdy, I. W. 271
Graham, D. M. 648
Grant, James 710
Grassman, J. W. 6
Gravalle, James 271
Gray, F. L. 45
Gray, H. D. 829
Gray, Mrs. W. H. 579
Gray, W. H. 574
Greer, Joseph 93
Gregory, J. B. 726
Griffith, W. N. 126
Groff, I. L. 545
Gross, G. W. 828
Gudd, H. G. 709
Gulliford, C. I. 838
Gulliford, W. H. 940

Hagenauer, John 45
Haines, F. E. 515
Hair, I. B. 82
Hall, C. M. 601
Hall, E. O. 722
Hall, G. F. 697
Hall, John 781
Hall, J. H. 743
Halley, J. P. 836
Hamelton, W. B. 919

Hammack, J. W. 108
Hammersly, L. A. 295
Hamstreet, O. D. 47
Hanks, Louis, Jr. 342
Hanna, William 268
Hannan, W. E. 685
Hanson, W. E. 774
Harmon, C. E. 313
Harmon, F. A. 875
Harmon, J. W. 423
Harnish, S. H. 326
Harrison, M. A. 963
Hartwig, E. H. 449
Harvey, Aaron 374
Hatch, S. H. 74
Haun, J. F. 380
Hauschildt, T. F. 339
Hawley, G. M. 422
Hayes, J. C. 725
Hayes, J. W. 65
Haynes, H. H. 361
Hazeltine, G. I. 168
Hebard, H. F. 703
Hedden, J. N. 1062
Hemenway, James 18
Henderer, John 1050
Hendricks, C. C. 1059
Hendrickson, John 327
Hermens, P. M. 256
Herriott, J. B. 480
Herriott, T. W. 480
Hesse, L. M. 592
Hibbard, G. L. 940
Higgins, C. R. 502
Higgins, J. E. 545
Hill, Almoran 430
Hill, W. T. 835
Hillstrom, C. J. 174
Hindman, Albert 628
Hindman, J. M. 838
Hindman, W. W. 33
Hinkle, W. B. 885
Hobson, W. H. 224
Hockett, C. T. 62
Hodges, S. T. 352
Hoffmann, P. G. 533
Hollingsworth, W. W. 659
Holman, D. W. 583
Holmes, Frank 193
Holmes, G. H. 988
Holmes, W. R. 641
Holt, J. O. 6
Holte, R. A. 797
Honan, Annie 409
Hongell, Andrew 390
Hope, I. W. 779
Hope, M. G. 780
Hopfield, L. S. 255
Hopkins, D. P. 660
Hopkins, L. P. 99
Horner, C. H. 680
Hoskins, H. M. 12
Hoskins, J. L. 553
Hosmer, Nelson 250
Howard, William 970
Howlett, A. C. 307
Hoxie, C. H. 138
Hoyt, R. W. 843
Hubbard, W. C. 418
Hudemann, F. H. 939
Huff, J. W. 321
Hulin, L. G. 223
Humphreys, H. W., Jr. 185
Hunsaker, F. M. 911
Huntington, A. C. 847
Hurlburt, T. M. 994
Hurst, W. V. 720
Huston, J. T. 345
Hutcheroft, R. J. 119
Hutchison, J. H. 137
Hutchinson, William 139
Hyatt, G. W. 134

Ingle, G. B. 811
Ingle, J. C. 810
Ingram, F. L. 242
Ireland, E. C. 283
Ireland, J. P. 683
Isaminger, O. D. 270
Ison, L. O. 1084
Ison, O. P. 40

Jackson, G. W. 262
Jackson, John 389
Jacobs, J. W. 565
Jacobs, W. E. 282
Janes, A. S. 1078
Jaques, Thomas 849
Jensen, M. C. 437
Jette, Adolphe 646
Johnson, C. A. 249
Johnson, C. T. 392
Johnson, F. S. 824
Johnson, G. B. 465
Johnson, J. E. 590
Johnson, L. G. 490
Johnson, Samuel 510
Johnson, T. F. 767
Johnson, T. W. 876
Johnson, W. H. 107
Johnston, B. A. 133
Johnston, Frank 186
Jones, B. L. 598
Jones, H. D., Sr. 296
Jones, J. D. 479
Jory, H. S. 406
Jory, William 91
Joy, J. L. 815
Junker, Caspar 972

Kaino, Henry 391
Kallunki, Walter 492
Kamm, Jacob 554
Keady, W. F. 459
Kelly, Eliza E. 897
Kelly, Frank 450
Kelly, J. G. 117
Kelly, Plympton 373
Kelsey, R. C. 290
Kemp, I. M. 827
Kenedy, G. W. 891
Kent, S. B. 325
Kerley, V. V. 939
Kerr, G. W. 518
Kiddle, Ed. 666
Kiddle, J. O. 1053
Kilburg, J. H. 672
Kime, A. W. 85
Kindred, J. B. 517
Kindred, J. F. 47
King, Charles 774
King, J. T. 1032
King, L. D. 975
King, W. A. 106

Kintzley, Z. T. .. 366
Kirby, E. G. .. 1007
Kirk, J. W. .. 573
Kirkwood, John .. 35
Kleinhammer, A. S. .. 194
Knobloch, Karl .. 478
Knowles, Frank .. 429
Koljonen, Heikki .. 462
Kooch, J. B. .. 428
Kozer, H. E. .. 1085
Kruse, John .. 339
Kruse, J. W. .. 335
Kubli, Maud .. 342
Kuhn, Elias .. 654
Kuntz, Philip .. 534
Kupers, August .. 960
Kupers, Carl .. 904
Kurtz, Edward .. 927
Kuschnick, John .. 35
Kutch, W. T. .. 80
Kuykendall, C. V. .. 454

Lackstrom, William .. 393
Laird, J. D. .. 735
Lally, Ellen M. .. 978
Lamar, J. S. .. 264
Lamb, E. W. .. 316
Lambright, Isaac .. 192
Lang, F. E. .. 728
Larsen, Lars .. 503
Larson, Julius .. 710
Lashapelle, Amedy .. 498
Lassen, C. W. .. 685
Lathrop, T. F. .. 480
Laughlin, William .. 151
Laurance, L. R. .. 405
Law, C. H. .. 258
Laycock, J. A. .. 284
Lea, John .. 497
Leavitt, C. J. .. 715
Lebeck, Leander .. 477
Lee, W. C. .. 572
Lehman, I. J. .. 268
Lent, F. L. .. 27
Lent, O. E. .. 27
Lester, W. T. .. 812
Levins, V. J. .. 1044
Levy, Adolph .. 485
Levy, Leon .. 485
Levy, M. S. .. 485
Lewis, A. G. .. 284
Lewis, J. H. .. 109
Lewis, J. M. .. 873
Lewis, L. J. .. 1074
Lewis, Simeon .. 1064
Lewis, W. J. .. 111
Liengallen, E. A. .. 537
Linn, David .. 885
Linn, Fletcher .. 886
Littig, T. B. .. 951
Littlefield, D. S. .. 14
Livermore, F. W. .. 120
Lloyd, Luther .. 1069
Lloyd, W. W. .. 1064
Loban, J. F. .. 951
Lockhart, W. D. .. 87
Long, Moses .. 178
Longfellow, N. .. 989
Loose, J. F. .. 988
Love, O. W. .. 548
Lovelace, C. F. .. 178
Loverige, Albert .. 674
Low, C. L. .. 984
Lowe, J. K. .. 800
Lowell, S. A. .. 619
Luce, E. E. .. 696
Lun, Andrew .. 800
Luttrell, H. C. .. 1020

McClendon, C. C. .. 100
McCormick, E. L. .. 197
McCormack, W. R. .. 436
McCubbin, J. H. .. 461
McCulloch, J. M. .. 957
McCullough, A. M. .. 915
McCully, F. D. .. 1014
McCully, W. H. .. 1018
McDill, J. B. .. 333
McFarland, G. A. .. 54
McGaughey, George .. 853
McGoldrick, Henry .. 963
McGowan, George .. 353
McGraw, G. W. .. 651
McHaley, J. H. .. 735
McHaley, R. R. .. 318
McHaley, R. T. .. 976
McKee, A. M. .. 238
McKee, Adelbert .. 185
McKenna, Alexander .. 934
McKenzie, F. C. .. 777
McKenzie, K. W. .. 727
McKenzie, S. L. .. 491
McKern, J. C. .. 167
McKern, L. D. .. 686
McKerman, S. H. .. 41
McKinney, C. F. .. 379
McKinney, W. H. .. 905
McKinnon, A. C. .. 172
McLeod, W. T. .. 867
McMahon, Richard .. 151
McPhee, P. A. .. 805
McQueen, G. W. .. 198
McQuowen, William .. 785
Mace, E. L. .. 1026
Mackin, F. J. .. 748
Maki, John .. 168
Mall, W. H. .. 854
Mamone, F. A. .. 516
Manville, H. M. .. 255
Mariner, W. J. .. 956
Marolin, W. J. .. 1065
Marsh, F. W. .. 597
Martindale, John .. 920
Martin, E. W. .. 97
Martin, K. J. .. 75
Mark, [illegible] .. 817
Maxwell, W. B. .. 645
Masterson, J. A. .. 1000
Masterson, R. A. .. 786
Matheny, Margaret .. 887
Matson, C. H. .. 990
Mayes, W. A. J. .. 412
Mayfield, Ferman .. 79
Maya, [illegible] .. 633
Mead, A. P. .. 140
Means, J. H. .. 797
Means, H. C. .. 882
Meek, A. A. D. .. 686
Meier, [illegible] .. 406
Melderman, A. M. .. 799
Menefee, Frank .. 882
Mercantile, [illegible] .. 789
Messenger, Martha .. 681
Meyer, [illegible] .. 791

Micelli, F. G. 948
Miles, J. S. 981
Miles, T. W. 223
Miller, D. H. 360
Miller, J. M. 665
Miller, K. A. 436
Miller, S. E. 636
Miller, W. J. 741
Miller, W. T. 1055
Milne, J. W. 533
Mimnaugh, C. H. 211
Mingus, Conrad 768
Minnick, J. W. 495
Mishler, Al. 691
Mitchell, F. B. 99
Mitchell, J. M. 394
Mitchell, J. W. 229
Mitchell, M. W. 793
Monk, T. R. 442
Montague, G. E. 804
Monterastelli, Lorenzo 875
Montgomery, J. A. 59
Moody, G. W. 462
Moomaw, J. P. 249
Moore, Jesse 400
Moore, T. B. 953
Moorhouse, Mark 836
Morelock, E. B. 761
Morrison, A. D. 540
Morss, S. S. 300
Mosier, A. O. 511
Mossie, Henry 336
Mothershead, S. T. 397
Mott, J. A. 208
Moullen, F. C. 984
Mulkey, F. W. 868
Mulkey, Monroe 397
Murphy, Patrick 1079
Murray, Alexander 586
Murray, H. S. 1037
Myers, C. T. 42
Myers, J. P. 898

Natter, J. B. 746
Neal, John 501
Neal, J. A. 552
Nelson, D. H. 854
Newcomb, C. L. 849
Newman, W. R., Jr. 333
Newport, H. G. 566
Newsom, G. S. 824
Nichol, W. S. 751
Nicholls, A. A. 410
Nichols, B. F. 392
Nichols, J. H. 551
Nichols, W. L. 308
Noah, S. W. 404
Noble, E. G. 823
Norblad, A. W. 466
Normandin, L. S. 131
Nosler, A. L. 511
Nosler, C. H. 597
Nosler, Fred 608
Notson, S. E. 1049
Nusom, A. W. 591
Nye, A. W. 238

O'Connell, Eugene 175
Odell, W. J. 473
Oden, A. V. 257
Oden, J. T. 366
Officer, F. L. 598
Oglesby, W. W. 235
O'Kelly, Fred 188
Oliver, J. C. 450
Oman, John 528
Osborn, Adelbert 696
Osborn, D. A. 868
Osburn, W. T. 835
Overholt, D. G. 226
Owings, G. W. 341

Packwood, W. H. 157
Palmer, John 1042
Palmer, Joseph 882
Palmer, R. R. 112
Parker, E. A. 247
Parker, Elza 21
Parker, E. O. 107
Parker, G. F. 466
Parker, J. B. 118
Parker, W. R. 977
Parks, Hollis 217
Parmley, J. E. 315
Parvin, James 68
Patterson, C. G. 672
Patterson, Joshua 257
Patterson, Richard 590
Patty, G. M. 105
Paul, J. H. 1024
Pedro, Frank 671
Pedro, Manuel 947
Peebler, J. J. 893
Pelland, C. A. 560
Perkins, F. P. 12
Perkins, H. A. 182
Perry, T. W. 114
Peterson, John 899
Phelan, P. L. 767
Phelps, D. D. 140
Phelps, F. A. 843
Phillips, C. R. 263
Pierce, Ash 891
Pillett, Edward 918
Piper, W. B. 616
Plamondon, J. D. 747
Poley, A. F. 754
Poole, W. A. 1078
Porter, G. W. 725
Porter, J. R. 854
Powell, C. W. 1002
Pranger, H. E. 534
Prantl, Frank 46
Pratt, H. W. 411
Price, H. M. 5
Prout, O. T. 435
Purdin, I. E. 20
Pursel, S. A. 905
Purves, R. B. 309

Quackenbush, Edward 863
Quant, A. S. 879
Queener, W. H. 241
Querner, G. V. 263

Rader, J. M. 293
Raley, Aura M. 42
Rankin, J. S. 5
Rasor, H. A. 393
Raymond, Raphael 881
Reeder, W. H. 777
Rees, G. E. 945
Rees, H. B. 887
Rees, S. G. 707

Reinhardt, C. C 701
Reisacher, L. F. 744
Rembold, G. A 534
Renshaw, W. M 454
Rexford, F. V. 152
Rice, F. W 624
Rhodes, R. F 186
Rhoten, Enos 264
Rice, J. D 512
Richards, B. B 772
Richardson, A. K 214
Richardson, B. C 1096
Richardson, S. F 1000
Richmond, A. J 922
Rickkola, E. A 436
Riddle, Abner 480
Rindell, Ernst 34
Ring, E. W. 772
Ringmeyer, Henry 85
Roberts, W. L. 960
Robinette, J. F 754
Robinson, R. L. 620
Robinson, R. M 628
Robinson, R. S 528
Robinson, P. S. 773
Robison, S. M 642
Rocklk, Herman 842
Roed, F. B 841
Rooke, E. G. 930
Rosenberger, H. J 10.
Ross, Alonzo 24
Ross, R. F. 730
Roth, F. F 132
Rose, J. W. 134
Rothrock, George 701
Rowland, C. C 697
Royce, E. T. 1001
Powell, E. L. 48
Ray, A. 512
Rudolph, O. W 741
Russell, J. A 562
Russell, C. L. 747
Russell, J. T. 1049
Russell, H. S. 500
Russell, R. N. 443
Russell, S. G. 542
Russell, W. W 1017
Rushton, Alex
Sabin, A. A 17
Sampson, F. O 434
Salmon, Robert 708
Sandman, S. O 721
Sanford, George 500
Sansom, W. C. 708
Schaeffer, Charles 11
Schargel, L. 8
Schindler, Adam 577
Schmeltzer, C. M 741
Schneider, Augustus 708
Schoch, Edwin 819
Schoch, Isaac, Jr. 902
Schoettler, Nelson 900
Schroeder, J. F. 801
Schroeder, J. H 971
Schroeder, W. H 977
Schuhart, F. E. 441
Schuhart, N. 542
Scott, C. O 477
Scott, T. C. 901
Scott, W. M 1007
Scott, S. H 214
Scrafford, P. D 952

Sharp, G. W 460
Sharp, S. F. 822
Shattuck, Lewis 334
Shaw, D. H 965
Shaw, John 1035
Shaw, M. F 1035
Shearn, Miles 799
Sheldon, O. C 497
Shepherd, I. F 340
Sherbondy, Charles 427
Sheridan, Peter 918
Shortridge, J. H 299
Sievers, G. H 855
Sigurdson, Avalhr .906
Simpson, R. I 677
Sivers, L. C 546
Sizemore, G. S 994
Skinner, W. H 521
Slater, F. S 572
Slater, J. D 609
Small, D. W 56
Smalley, Andrew 567
Smedberg, C. A. I 698
Smith, A. I 1047
Smith, C. L. 551
Smith, G. O 267
Smith, J. A 244
Smith, J. M 698
Smith, Lorenzo D 477
Smith, L. D 964
Smith, M. B 270
Smith, P. L. 804
Smith, R. E. 698
Smith, W. N. 191
Smith, I. F 820
Snyder, A. P 424
Sommer, Daniel 765
Spaulding, H. M 900
Spencer, William 906
Spencer, H. D 749
Spencer, S. L. 828
Spreadbrough, William 456
Stanfield, H. L. 879
Stanfield, P. N 502
Stanton, Nancy 497
Starrel, O. A 568
Steel, E. W 1041
Stewart, F 947
Stewart, F. D 311
Stewart, J. B 287
Stilwell, C. B 112
Stogsdill, Andrew 447
Stone, Lewis 287
Strange, J. W 242
Strange, L. B 242
Strange, L. D 749
Strawn, B. L 70
Strickfaden, R. E 901
Studebaker, Jacob 1000
Studebaker, Brothers 748
Sturtevant, J. M. 842
Swaggart, J. C 720
Swaggart, J. I 901
Swan, Hudson 899
Swanson, B. D 477
Swanson, Peter 720
Swanstrom, J. C 899
Swarts, A. L. 449
Swayne, F. T. 1000
Swearingen, A. J 1014
Swearingen, F. E 827
Swain, Lawrence 970

Swift, A. V. ... 1048
Swiger, William ... 459
Switzler, W. H ... 827

Taylor, Solomon ... 548
Taylor, S. W ... 293
Taylor, T. D ... 935
Taylor, T. H. B ... 365
Taylor, W. E ... 113
Terrell, G. P ... 60
Terrill, C. E ... 314
Tetherow, G. W ... 716
Tetherow, J. M ... 818
Tetrean, G. M ... 970
Thatcher, Franklin ... 504
Thiessen, H. A ... 1011
Thomasen, J. T ... 87
Thompson, L. C ... 66
Thompson, T. F ... 977
Tillson, T. S ... 855
Timmermann, Fred ... 812
Townley, W. J ... 934
Trestrail, R. M ... 213
Trill, W. G ... 1008
Trimble, John ... 924
Trippeer, J. E ... 797
Troutman, D. B ... 124
Trowbridge, B. C ... 146
Trowbridge, Marjorie ... 741
True, C. F ... 562
Truesdall, Joseph ... 713
Trullinger, D. P ... 92
Tulley, E. H ... 162
Turner, B. T ... 212
Turner, Montgomery ... 646

Ulam, Peter ... 405
Upthegrove, G. H ... 788

Vandecoevering, George ... 539
Van Orsdall, P. H ... 665
Van Wassenhove, Frank ... 653
Veatch, Marion ... 150
Veatch, R. W ... 71
Veatch, S. E ... 668
Via, Guy Forrest ... 679
Vinson, J. S ... 1047
Voegtly, C. H ... 474
Voge, F. A ... 1087

Wade, Aaron ... 1054
Wade, B. F ... 93
Wade, M. A ... 61
Wagner, J. H ... 679
Walden, J. W ... 829
Walker, A. W ... 236
Walker, D. A ... 72
Walker, G. O ... 143
Walker, H. G ... 921
Walker, J. W ... 453
Wallace, E. P ... 125
Walter, R. H ... 219
Walters, Fred ... 704
Ward, E. J ... 276
Wardle, R. M ... 73
Warner, A. P ... 1059
Warren, P. C ... 960
Washburn, J. H ... 951
Waters, E. B ... 403
Watson, Edson ... 995
Watson, R. W ... 467
Watson, W. F ... 817
Watts, Elizabeth ... 662
Watts, H. I ... 778
Watts, M. L ... 751
Weatherspoon, H. H ... 489
Weaver, C. V ... 79
Weaver, J. W ... 300
Weed, Abner ... 746
Wehrum, J. F ... 667
Welch, C. H ... 56
Wertz, S. M ... 788
Wheeler, R. G ... 124
White, Alexander ... 87
White, W. A ... 61
White, W. C ... 861
Whiting, Thomas ... 719
Wickham, J ... 766
Wickland, O. B ... 510
Wicks, J. E ... 200
Wilcox, F. S ... 374
Wilcox, G. H ... 351
Wilcox, G. J ... 870
Wilcox, R. J ... 374
Wilhelm, J. V ... 740
Wilkinson, Thomas ... 778
Willet, S. H ... 198
Williams, H. N ... 516
Williams, J. C ... 120
Williams, Sherwood ... 806
Williamson, J. T ... 799
Wilson, B. F ... 1061
Wilson, E. E ... 361
Wilson, F. C ... 197
Willson, W. N ... 1080
Wisdom, J. T ... 941
Wise, W. H ... 708
Wolff, Fritz ... 1087
Womack, C. W ... 411
Wood, Edward ... 152
Wood, R. L ... 229
Woodcock, A. C ... 604
Woods, E. A ... 580
Woods, G. W ... 11
Woods, W. J ... 733
Woodward, E. H ... 528
Woodward, G. B ... 787
Worthington, H. O ... 498
Wright, L. A ... 691
Wright, W. T ... 1026
Wyant, H. S ... 225
Wyss, Gottlieb ... 273

Yantis, J. L ... 911
Yerxa, R. L ... 867
York, W. B ... 275
Young, F. L ... 983
Young, Henry ... 939